Miss Agnes MacCann, physical director at the Seminary, who has been ill, returned to begin her "gym" classes on Monday, January 18.

The Y. W. C. A. Cabinet is glad to welcome back its treasurer, Polly Ware, '26, who was forced to go home before the Christmas vacation because of illness.

"Gene" Horsman, "Ran" Davis, and Frank Wagner journeyed to Smoketown Hill, west of Lewisburg one day last week and spent the entire afternoon skiing.

Professor C. A. Lindemann attended the meeting of the American Mathematical Society (Eastern Section) which was held at the home of Mr. George Plimpton, in New York City during vacation. Mr. Plimpton is president of Ginn & Company, publishers, and possesses the largest library of educational books in the world. It includes many rare copies.

William Gerlach, '28, seems to have acquired some bad habits during the Christmas holidays. On his return to college he hired a taxi to take him up to the Hill.

Jane Beakley, '28, spent New Year's Day aboard the U. S. S. Mahan, a mine-layer stationed at League Island, as the guest of her brother, a member of the staff of junior officers.

Warren G. Knieriem, '27, had a slight attack of appendicitis at the beginning of last week, but by careful dieting is again regaining his normal health.

Mary Foust, '27, Jane Foust, '29, and Eloise Bailey, '29, were seen riding about Lewisburg in a good, old-fashioned sleigh, one afternoon last week.

Harton Dakin, '27, and Mary Harnar, '26, will teach courses in religious education next semester, in connection with Professor Bond's work in this subject.

Miss Margaret Heldt, a teacher in the commercial department of the Sunbury High School, visited her sister, Kitty Heldt, '29, here during the past week-end.

"Hen" Reese, '29, fancied that skiing was the ideal sport, but after one trip and much spitting of snow, he decided to stick to football or some other gentle exercise.

Professor James P. Whyte took charge of the devotional exercises in chapel on Thursday, January 14. He chose as a topic for discussion "Christ and His Disciples."

Ross Ormsby, '27, was confined to the Sigma Chi house part of the last week with the grippe. He says that never again will he go skiing.

After being ejected twice from freshman chapel the other day, "Dixie," the pet dog of the Lambda Chis, stood outside and howled mournfully. The pup has a good ear for music.

"Johnny" Gilmour, '27, sang a solo in chapel exercises on January 14. As usual all the students were glad to hear Gilmour sing. "Lew" Kesler, '28, accompanied him at the piano.

If any freshman cannot remember the phone number of the "Semi," it may be an aid to his memory to know that "I ate nothing" (180) is an appropriate slogan to refresh his mind.

Speaking of skiing, it has just been learned that "Cap" Sargent, '28, holds the amateur skiing championship for the state of New Hampshire. "Cap's" record stands at a hundred and nine feet.

Harold Hand, '26, enjoyed some unusual fishing during the holidays when a very low tide in the harbor at Cape May, New Jersey, his home city, left thousands of good-sized fish stranded on the beach.

Professor C. R. Johnson was present at a convention of sociology teachers at Columbia University during the Christmas vacation. There he met Professor L. Foster Wood, who taught last year at Bucknell.

Harold McCleary, '27, is a three-letter man in Bucknell. "Mac" captured the coveted "B" for baseball and basketball during his freshman year, and this year he annexed his third one as a result of his football endeavor.

Mary Laning, '28, did not return to college after the holidays. She had to undergo special treatment for eye-trouble, —and it is very unlikely that her condition will enable her to resume her studies this semester.

Nancy L. Kennedy, '28, had the misfortune to be in an auto accident during the holidays. She luckily escaped serious injury, but suffered a sprained ankle. As a result she was compelled to return to college three days late.

From the number of conventions he attended, we might conclude that Professor H. S. Everett spent considerable of his vacation riding the rails.

He attended two conventions of the American Mathematical Society, one in Kansas City and the other in New York City, each representing different sections. While in Kansas City Professor Everett also attended conventions of the American Association on advancement of Science, Mathematical Association of America, the honor societies of Pi Mu Epsilon, and Sigma Xi. Upon his return he attended the convention of the Modern Language Association.

H. Rae Young, '28, "third assistant ocean," has thus far successfully resisted the collective efforts of East Wing's inmates to put him on skiis. Notice will be posted on the bulletin board when the event is finally scheduled.

"Whitey" Ward, '29, donned skis for the first time on Monday and "fell hard" for the art. Before the afternoon was over, however, he was astounding the old-timers by his grace and skill in manipulating the zaheir strips.

Caryl Dutton, '27, and "Abe" Sheckells, '27, repost a very good conference at Evanston, Ill., during the holidays, but a cold trip. They attended the interdenominational Student Conference composed of students from all the colleges of United States.

Professor N. H. Stewart spoke to the Presbyterian C. E. on the question, "How Can We Make God Real in our Lives?" at the Sunday evening meeting on January 10. He said we could make God real to ourselves by study, thought, observation, and prayer.

Miss Sara M. Black, '00, spent the latter part of the recent holiday season with Miss Eliza J. Martin, our librarian. Miss Black is secretary to the president at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., a position that she has held for several years.

There were many disappointments and financial embarrassments awaiting the boys from the land and regions when they journeyed back home for the Christmas vacation. College men often are able to pick up cash during this vacation, but the strike had its effect.

Dean Amelia E. Clark, Mrs. Clara G. Sale, and Mrs. Homer D. Pease spoke in the Presbyterian Church on Wednesday evening, January 6, in the annual Week of Prayer services. Wednesday evening was women's night.

Miss Marion Ziegler, of Allentown, Pa., visited her sister "Flop" here during a recent week-end. Miss Ziegler came all the way from Allentown by machine, and reported that the roads were in very good condition, despite the heavy snows then covering the country.

Prof. C. M. Bond took advantage of his vacation and moved into his new home at 120 S. Fourth street, Lewisburg. This thoroughfare begins to look like Faculty Row. Registrar Bolter is at 132, Mr. Lowry at 134, and Prof. C. M. Bond at 130.

William B. Brown Jr., '28, and Albert F. Buffington, '28, gave the freshmen pledges of the Beta Kappa fraternity a demonstration in shoveling the snow off the sidewalks, when they shoveled all of the snow before any of the freshmen arrived at the house the morning after the first big fall of snow.

"Judge" Gilbert L. Bennett, '27, and Harold Sloan, '26, motored to Harrisburg the day after the first heavy snowstorm of the year. They had some doubts as to arriving at their destination, as evidenced by the fact that they armed themselves with snow shovels before leaving.

The Bucknell Y. M. C. A. cabinet is making a study of other educational institutions' "point system" of filling elective offices on the campus. Ohio University operates a very efficient system, and special attention will be given to their plan, with the intent in mind of fostering such a system at Bucknell.

Dwight Bahr, '28, was the guest of Guy Payne at last week's meeting of the Lions Club of Lewisburg, to get some "dope" on the League of Nations, which he hopes to use in the next debate. Congressman Watson was the speaker of the evening. Mr. Watson is chairman of the Ways and Means committee.

William B. Brown, Jr., '28, and Richard Beatty, '29, journeyed along with the Beta Kappa fraternity basketball team to Danville a week ago Saturday evening. Although the boys did all they could to cheer the team to victory, the players were defeated by the Danville High School team, with the score 54-17.

The recent heavy snowfall has provided unlimited sport for the campus ski devotees. Rolland Dutton, '26, Kenneth Slifer, '26, and Johnny Horter, '29, were among the first to appear on Saturday morning. Merc consting down hill proved tame and they essayed jumping, wherein "Dut" and "Jawn" each broke one ski while "Ken" couldn't jump far enough to break his. However the remaining skis, though not mates proved quite successful in combination.

On Wednesday, January 13 the official thermometer back of Professor William G. Owens' home registered 8 degrees below zero at 12:30 A. M. At 7:00 o'clock the next morning it had fallen to 11 degrees below zero. Professor Owens has for many years been the official weather observer in this district for the U. S. Government.

The pageant, "Behold the Star," written by Mary Harrar, '26, and presented by the members of the Baptist C. E. last year, has been published in the Young Peoples' Leader, a church paper, and several churches have signified their intention of presenting it, among them the Calvary Baptist Church, of Norristown, of which Mildred Fox, '27, is a member.

Among the guests who attended the Christmas dance given by Miss Gertrude Downs, '28, at her home, 115 Linwood Avenue, Ardmore, were Constance Ziegler, '28, Doris Siner, '29, Rhoda Herr, '29, Miriam Kline, '29, Betty James, '28, Ann Zerby, '26, Margaret Zerby, '29, Mary Fritz, '28, Paul Humphreys, '28, Earl Bach, '26, Albert Purks, '26, Richard Peiser, '28, George Strand, '29, Philip Stanton, '28, and Wayne Battin, '27.

Bucknell University has a menagerie. At least that is what the casual observer would have said if he had walked over the Bucknell campus one recent Saturday. Upon close observation, however, one would have noticed that the beautiful birds and the large black bear peeping from behind a tree, were not alive, but stuffed and mounted. Professor Norman H. Stewart, was the man responsible for this menagrie. He took photographs of the animals in the snow and this made the work fascinating for prospective teachers taking this course in Zoology.

SLIFER FOUND A MEDAL IN HIS SOCK AT XMAS

Kenneth W. Slifer, '26, of Woodbury, N. J., found a surprise package in his Christmas stocking, because he was awarded a silver medal for the best essay in the New Jersey state division of the American Legion National Essay Contest of 1924. The title of the winning essay was "Restriction of Immigration." This essay was entered in the same contest in which Sara Heysham, '28, won the national prize of $750, which she was given in June, 1925. "Ken's" late award is due to the long delay resulting from the large number of manuscripts that were sent to the judges. Almost 400,000 essays were entered in the national contest.

"Ken" had apparently forgotten that he had written such an essay, for he was much surprised to see in the Camden Courier at Christmas time that he had been the winning writer. "Ken" is a third generation Bucknellian for his paternal grandfather, William H. Slifer, ex-'76, his father, Robert Green Slifer, '98, and his mother, Edna Shires, 1900, have attended this institution.

Yale Opposes Compulsory Chapel

The Yale News took a ballot to determine what percentage of the students and faculty at Yale favored compulsory chapel. Results showed that 1,681 under-graduates opposed it and 241 favored. The faculty voted three to one against it. However, no change in the chapel regulation has yet been reported.

Reticence requires the greatest art; inactivity requires the greatest courage; silence requires the greatest ability.

"Shall I brain him?" cried the sophomore,
And the victim's courage fled.
"You can't! It's a freshman—
Just hit it on the head."

JUDGE WANTED B. U. TO GET TOURNEY PRIZE

Bucknell's representatives in the recent dramatic tournament at State College came nearer to winning first place than was supposed when they brought home the silver cup trophy awarded for second honors. Leon Edward Joseph, dramatic critic, writing in the New York Herald-Tribune for December 13, tells the story. Mr. Joseph was not able to go to State College himself, but received a letter from Roland Holt, one of the judges, who was eager to award the first prize to Bucknell. Mr. Joseph quotes Mr. Holt as follows:

"The two judges, Barrett H. Clark, and myself, almost locked horns over whether 'The Pot Boiler' or 'The Mayor and the Manicure' should have the first cup, but finally put them in the above order by an exceedingly small margin and put 'Suppressed Desires' third."

Penn State Prof. Outsteps Orchestra In Storm At Sea

Prof. P. H. Schweitzer, of the Penn State Engineering School, established what is believed to be a record for dancing at sea, when he danced for one hour and thirty-eight minutes without a stop while returning from Europe on board the liner Minnekahda recently. This feat was accomplished while the ship was at the mercy of a storm of hurricane force that made the performance all the more remarkable.

It is reported that Professor Schweitzer was still far from a state of exhaustion and could have made the record more imposing had not the orchestra given out, fatigued from the effort of holding to their chairs. Professor Schweitzer, a man of above middle age, and his various partners, were the only dancers holding sway on the floor at the time.

Walter W. Harris Marries

A beautiful holiday wedding took place December 24 when Miss Dorothy Vaughan Payne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Payne, of 1127 West Fourth Street, Williamsport, became the bride of Walter William Harris, son of the late Dr. John Howard Harris, a former president of Bucknell University. The house was beautifully decorated, the color scheme being red and green. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. David DeForest Burrell. Helen Arthur Munzinger played the wedding march. Following the ceremony a reception was given for the families and a few friends. The newly married couple will be at home after February 1, at 803 Mulberry Street, Scranton, Pa. Miss Payne is a graduate of Williamsport High School and of Smith College. Mr. Harris is a graduate of Bucknell University and of the law school of the University of Michigan. He is now practising law with the firm of O'Malley, Hill and Harris, of Scranton.

"Nita Nee," Indian Song, Written By Mrs. Henderson

"Nita Nee," with words and music by Celeste Shaffer Henderson, was one of the group of Indian songs sung by Mrs. H. J. Sheppard at the Bucknell alumni dinner, given Saturday evening, December 19, in the Town Hall, New York City.

Mrs. Henderson, who attended Bucknell,—then the University at Lewisburg—from 1880 to 1883, and who was a member of the class of '84, has been doing considerable research work in American Indian music. Her song, "Nita Nee," has twice been sung over the radio.

Her poem, entitled "The Spirit Violin," was included in Col. Lloyd's "History of Ole Bull in Pennsylvania." Another, "At the Top of the World," opened the last number of the Pennsylvania Mountaineer.

She is a frequent contributor to the "Poem a Day" column of the Altoona Tribune.

Edna Hilty, ex-'17

Miss Edna Hilty, ex-'17, was recently presented with a scholarship at the University of California and will take up her work there next June.

The scholarship is a prize given by the Henry C. Frick estate and is presented annually. Miss Hilty won it through writing and aiding in the presentation of a three act children's play, "Broadcasting X-M-A-S." The play was presented in the Watt School, Pittsburgh, where Miss Hilty is a teacher, on December 18, and was repeated by special request in the Episcopal Holy Cross Church Sunday, December 20. Miss Hilty's home is in Vandergrift.

H. V. Lesher, '05; R. P. Bliss

At the dedication exercises held during the formal opening of the Priestley-Forsythe Memorial Library, Northumberland, on New Year's Day, Harold V. Lesher, '05, of Northumberland, spoke on "The Library and the Rural Community."

"What is a Public Library?" was the subject of a talk by Robert P. Bliss, who attended Bucknell Academy in the old days. He is a brother of General Tasker H. Bliss, and a son of the late Professor George R. Bliss, who taught at Bucknell from 1849 to 1874.

Judge Johnson, '96; Judge Davis, '96

Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96, was sworn in as U. S. District Judge for the middle district of Pennsylvania by the Hon. J. Warren Davis, '96, U. S. Circuit Court Judge, in the local court house on December 31. It is a life appointment.

Judge Davis and Judge Johnson are friends of long standing and were classmates at Bucknell, graduating in 1896. They are both members of the Board of Trustees.

G. M. Davis, '98; R. F. Trainer, ex-'96

Dr. George M. Davis, '98, and Dr. Robert F. Trainer, ex-'96, of Williamsport, were nominated for president and trustee, respectively, of the Lycoming County Medical Society at its December meeting. As there were no contestants for these two offices, the nominees will be elected at the January meeting.

Harry W. Johnson, ex-'22

Harry W. Johnson, ex-'22, who was appointed to the United States Military Academy at West Point from the local National Guard troop and is now in his fourth year at that institution has been made captain of the Army polo team and is credited with being one of the best defensive backs ever developed at the Army school. He has played in four games recently starring defensively in every one of them and making more than his share of the goals.

In addition to his playing on the polo team he is credited with having been appointed cadet corporal on June 12, 1924, and cadet lieutenant on August 28, 1925. He has qualified as a rifle marksman, was a member of the cadet chapel choir in the year 1922-23, and a member of the lacrosse squad in 1924. Johnson is a Lewisburg boy and attended Bucknell for three years. He is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity.

Mary Graham, Mus. '25

Under the direction of Miss Mary Graham, a graduate of the Bucknell University School of Music, the pupils of the Northumberland High School gave the Christmas cantata, "On to Bethlehem," in the high school building at Northumberland on Friday evening, December 18. This was the same cantata given by the girls' glee club here shortly before Christmas, in which Miss Graham took part.

Baptist "Kids" Play, Teacher Gets Nervous

Fairies Remove and Restore Her. Then Come Apples, Lollypops. Party Ends With Song

Dressed up as "kids", the young people of the Baptist church went back to the days of their childhood at the "kid" party held in the Sunday school room of the church on Friday evening, January 15. Mrs. C. H. Johnson, Professor C. M. Bond and the Rev. Dr. R. M. West were guests.

The general plan of the party was to picture a day in school. Caryl Dutton very ably presided as the old-fashioned "school marm." Lessons were recited in the form of solos: history by "Ted" Lavers, geography by "Bob" Dilworth, hygiene by "Kitty" Bosler and Polly Ware, music by Inez Robinson, philosophy by Lewis Davis, Dwight Bahr, and Barton Dakin, zoology by Inez Robinson, spelling and English by the whole school.

As "directress of calisthenics", Rolland Dutton put the class through their gym lesson. Kenneth Slifer, representing Peck's bad boy, entertained the class with his blackboard drawings while he was seated on the dunce's stool.

During recess everyone joined in playing Farmer in the Dell.

Suffering from a nervous breakdown by the time school was over, the teacher was carried away by a fairy to Fairyland. Then "Midge" Fox, as the Flower Fairy, sang a fairy song. Sally Foster gave several readings, and Barton Dakin entertained.

By this time the teacher was brought back, transformed into a youngster like the rest of them. Refreshments, consisting of apples, animal crackers, candy toys, and lolly pops were served. With the singing of "Seeing Nellie Home" and "Jingle Bells", the party dispersed.

Y. W. C. A. Japanese Bazaar Raises $110 For Expenses

The annual Y. W. C. A. Japanese bazaar held in the store room next to the University book store on Market street, was a distinct success, bringing in approximately $110.00.

Bucknell students contributed many of the articles which were on sale. Tea and cakes were served by costumed students.

The proceeds are to be used to help meet the expense of sending delegates to Eagles Mere, and to help finance the parties held for the orphans of the Evangelical Home.

Oxford First Forbade Motors

The latest menace to American college life is the insidious auto. The movement to prohibit student owned and operated cars originated in Oxford and Cambridge and has spread all over the United States. Lafayette and Brown are among the few colleges that still tolerate the pesky things. The women's colleges such as Vassar and Wellesey are strongly against them.

B. U. Loses Another Notable Alumnus

Dr. Lewis Ziegler, Eye Surgeon of International Reputation, Dies; Was Trustee

Dr. S. Lewis Ziegler, '80, noted eye specialist, died on Monday, January 4, at his home, 1625 Walnut street, Philadelphia, after a week's illness. Death was due to pneumonia, which developed from an attack of influenza.

Dr. Ziegler was both an alumnus and a trustee of Bucknell, and through his death the University loses one of her stanchest supporters. He supported the University generously with both time and money, and had only recently established a number of prizes for scholarship at Bucknell, which will be listed in the forthcoming catalogue.

Dr. Ziegler was one of the foremost eye specialists in America. In this field he had won international fame, and was regarded as a foremost authority. For years past Dr. Ziegler, in speaking of the latter's interest in these books, "He told me," said Professor Owens, "that he estimated the books would cost him at least ten thousand dollars more than he could ever possibly get out of them. But he felt that he wanted the world to have whatever knowledge he had been able to assemble along the line of his work during his life time." The books were not complete at the time of Dr. Ziegler's death. But they were so well along that they will undoubtedly stand for years as the highest authority in the field of optical surgery.

Dr. Ziegler was only sixty-four years old, having been born in Lewisburg February 5, 1861. He was a member of the class of 1880, but did not receive his degree until a year later. Professor Owens describes him as being meticulously exact and careful in many respects. He was particular about the appearance of his room and his person. Possibly this ability for exactness has played its part in the delicate and extremely exact work he has had to do as an eye surgeon.

Dr. Ziegler's first work in medicine was done at the University of Pennsylvania, where he obtained his M. D. He also did graduate work at universities in London, Paris, Vienna, and Berlin. He practiced in Philadelphia for thirty-five years.

During the administration of Mayor Blankenburg, Philadelphia's beloved reform mayor, Dr. Ziegler was director of public health and charities. He was interested in all movements making for better citizenship. He was a member of the Union League Club, the University Club, and the Merion Cricket Club. He served as president of the Medical Club of Philadelphia.

Anna Stephens

"Well, you see it's like this,—" you will hear upon entering New Building, first floor, at any time of day or night; —deep, assertive tones, engaged in profound argumentation. You need not ask if Anna Stephens is in; walk right in; she is. A call for help in solving some intricate or hazy problem, in anything from life-work decisions, considerations on matrimony, to theological questions, will find "Ann" willing to abandon even her never-ending and beloved Osteology Reports.

"Well, you see it's like this,—" will prefix conclusive and well-thought-out reasons on both sides, impartially discussed. Her remarkable reasoning ability, coupled with salutary frankness and a supreme willingness to help others think a thing through, are among the characteristics most cherished by her friends.

She is one of those rare mortals that repay careful study, because her character does not become monotonous through too close association, but rather she increases ever in favor. She has that dark and mysterious thing which we psychology students call an inferiority complex; and the best remedy we have found to date for a too favorable conception of ourselves is to listen to Ann when she is in the mood for a thorough-going auto-analysis of her own faults and shortcomings.

Ann is now president of the L. L. Club, having been one of the most ardent founders and most interested organizers of this club. She is employment secretary of the Y. W. C. A Cabinet, and was largely instrumental in the establishment of this new activity of the Y. W. On account of her interest in missionary work, she changed to the Pre-Medical course in the middle of her freshman year. The Pre-Meds have been humbly grateful to the Student Volunteer Movement ever since. Last year she represented the local Student Volunteer group at a convention in Washington, and didn't get lost even once. She has always felt that this was a great triumph for the country. By the way, if you ever have plenty of time, get Ann started riding her hobby horse, the consolidation of country schools.

The Pre-Med course has shown another of Ann's best qualities, an infinite capacity for hard work, a bulldog stick-to-it-iveness. She certainly demonstrated this when she kept up her 20 hours a week, besides correcting papers and keeping up sundry religious and social activities.

The Pre-Meds insist in not allowing another characteristic to be forgotten, one which they feel they have discovered and developed; her eminent tensibility! It greatly distresses Ann not to be able to discover just why people delight in teasing her. We think that's easily enough explained, Ann; we tease you because we like you, and we would not have you different for anything in the world.

Visitor: "What is that grating noise, Professor?"

Prof.: "Oh, that is just the students filing in."

9 COMETS BEING STUDIED AT YERKES OBSERVATORY

Another Astral Body, Tuttle's, May Yet Be Seen This Year

This year is an open season for comets. Nine of them are now visible and are being observed through telescopes at the Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago. Professor Edwin B. Frost, director, says another astral marauder, Tuttle's comet, may be located.

Among the comets under observation are a new one discovered by Professor G. Van Biesbroeck, of the university staff, and a comet located by an amateur astronomer, Peltier, of Delphos, O. The latter is said to be moving across the sky four degrees a day and would be visible to the naked eye if it would brighten up in a moonless sky.

"We cannot state whether it will come nearer and get brighter, for a comet is already close to the earth as we may judge from its rapid motion," says Professor Frost. "This one might be as close as thirty million miles. The Peltier comet is now visible in a small telescope from about 5:30 to 7 P. M. It is in the constellation of Hercules and is soon to enter the constellation of Aquilla."

been reprinted over the name of Snell's Olmstead, but there was no revision.

A pertinent question right here would be, Why this conservatism? In contrast with the permanency of courses and textbooks during the incumbency of Professor James, the practice in the mathematical department today is to introduce important modern courses as frequently as the need of doing so appears. And the textbooks in any subject is seldom retained for a period longer than four years.

I do not believe that this conservatism under Professor James in any way reflects upon the professor. It lies outside of his service, and we will look for the reason or cause a little later.

Dr. George Morris Phillips, successor to Dr. James in the chair of mathematics, came to the university in 1878. He came at a critical time in her history. Her finances were at lowest ebb. Her endowment was at minimum stage. Her student membership was the least ever enrolled in the annual catalogue—only forty-four names being on the list. Her faculty, however, under the leadership of Dr. David Jayne Hill, was regarded as a very able one. And Dr. Phillips was a real acquisition.

Dr. Phillips was born at Atglen, Chester County, on October 28th, 1851. He entered the University at Lewisburg as a freshman in 1867,—before he was sixteen years of age. He was graduated in 1871.

He received from his Alma Mater the degree of A. M., in 1874 and that of Ph. D. in 1884. Temple University gave him the degree of LL. D., in 1906, and the University of Pennsylvania gave him the same degree in 1913.

He died in 1920 and for a number of years had been the senior normal school principal in service in the United States.

His ranks became a noted one in the annals of Bucknell. Three of its members served their Alma Mater as professors: William E. Martin, William T. Grier, and Professor Phillips. Three of its members were chosen presidents of colleges: William T. Grie was for a year acting president of Monongahela College. Dr. Phillips and Dr. John Humpstone were, in turn, elected to the presidency of Bucknell University but did not accept.

It was a noted class, too, in athletics. During college days five members of the class were members of the Varsity baseball team from their freshman year. And the team was the star team of all Bucknell teams. Its percentage of victories was the highest in Varsity history. It lost but one game in four years—playing a full schedule.

Just after graduation young Phillips was made professor of mathematics in Monongahela College. His friends claimed at the time that he was the youngest college professor of mathematics in the United States. However that may be, we know that he was elected to the professorship before he had reached the age of twenty-one. He resigned at Monongahela in 1873, to accept the professorship of mathematics in the State Normal School at West Chester. He came from the Normal to Lewisburg in 1878, as already stated.

Dr. G. Chrystal once expressed himself as follows: "Education cannot be more than a wordy rehearsal of dead text-books unless we have living contact with the working minds of living men. The great mind is created by the Divine hand, but contact with a great mind will make a little mind greater. The most important thing in art or science is to sit at the feet of a master, and the next best thing is to have contact of another who has himself been so instructed."

Is there any one who has been in college class with George Morris Phillips who will deny that contact with him in class room study and discussion, has not given him new impulse to do better, to achieve?

Is there a pupil who has listened to Professor Phillips as he taught his classes at Bucknell, who does not believe with Dr. Chrystal that the most important instruction in art or science is not found in the rehearsal of dead text-books, but rather is found when one sits at the feet of a master like Philips?

As a teacher of mathematics, Professor Philips was an inspiration. He had the rare gift of inducing a slow student to do his best. His methods were strictly his own. It appears to me that teachers of today are now learning to use methods practiced by Professor Philips forty years ago.

Dr. Philips was always the students' generous friend. He was loved by those who came under his instruction. All understood him and believed in him. Dr. Philips is one of the historic figures of our Alma Mater. His passing was to her a great misfortune.

His mind was not of the single-track type. In matters of education, of religion, of politics, and business, he was open minded. He was a promoter in every enterprise that promised to benefit others.

He was president of Chester County Historical Society, and a member of the Sons of the American Revolution. He was also a member of the Board of Managers of the Chester County Hospital.

His services as an educator were widely recognized and frequently sought. Governor Beaver appointed him State Superintendent of Public Instruction in 1890. He was president of the Pennsylvania State Teachers Association in 1891. He was vice-president of the National Educational Associations in 1894. He was a member and secretary of the state committee to revise and codify the public school laws 1907-1911. He was a member of the College and University Council of Pennsylvania, and a member of the Board of Managers of the Pennsylvania Baptist Educational Society.

He was the author of a number of good textbooks. He was author, in collaboration with President Sharples of Haverford College, of "Astronomy," in 1882, and of "Natural Philosophy," in 1883. He was author of "Civil Government of Pennsylvania," in 1893, and of "Geography of Pennsylvania," in 1895.

The regard in which Dr. Philips was held both by the alumni and by the Board of Trustees of Bucknell was officially declared by their vote.

The Board of Trustees had granted the alumni the privilege of nominating a graduate to membership on the board. Post cards were sent out to every graduate of Bucknell, soliciting a vote for this purpose.

The first ballot proved to be only a scattering vote, for a number of favorite sons of the university. A second ballot was cast in which the vote was confined to the several graduates who stood high on the first ballot. Dr. Philips finally was officially declared to have received the highest vote. The trustees, acting on this nomination, made him a trustee in 1894. He was the only trustee, up to that date, whose membership on the board was officially sanctioned by the graduates of the university. And I note that since that date only three other graduates have been made trustees by similar action.

Dr. Philips was professor of mathematics at Bucknell for three years. He made just a little change in the curriculum. He dropped plane geometry from the college course of study to the preparatory course, and added one term in the differential calculus as an elective in the sophomore year.

He also made just a little change in textbooks. He took out the algebra text of Davies' Bourdon, which had stood for thirty years, and in its place put Olney's University—a more modern textbooks.

These minor changes were the only ones in subject or in textbook that were made, in the history of the University up to 1881, in the mathematical department.

I come back to the pertinent question. Why this conservatism? Shall we conclude that Bucknell was strictly non-progressive under her pioneer professors? Yes; Bucknell for more than thirty years after her foundings was strictly non-progressive in her courses of study and in the textbooks pertaining thereto. However, in that respect she was much like her contemporary sister colleges.

Dr. Thwing in his "History of Education" says: "For almost two hundred years after the founding of Harvard College her courses of study remained in essential elements unchanged." Harvard graduated her first class in 1642. Two hundred years after, carries down to the date when Bucknell was founded.

Dr. Cajory in his history says of Yale College in 1720: "Her courses in mathematics were identical with the Harvard courses." Like Harvard's they remained unchanged from year to year.

The most persistent course ever put into a college curriculum was that of Ptolemy's Astronomy. Written in the first century after Christ, its doctrines were believed and taught in all the universities of Europe for fifteen hundred years. We find it still on the list of textbooks for astronomy in the early days at Harvard.

We are to remember that from ancient days down to the pioneer days of Bucknell the growth of knowledge was slow and slight as compared with its growth today. Necessarily there could be little expansion or even change in college courses and college textbooks.

When Dr. Taylor came to Lewisburg in 1845, he brought with him the Madison University courses in mathematics, and started Bucknell off with essentially the courses and textbooks had at Madison.

Further study of conservatism in colleges brings clearly in view the surprising fact that all colleges in the pioneer days of Bucknell were conservative, nearly to the point of stagnation.

Another condition preventing expansion was the lack of growth in student membership. The attendance at college under Dr. Taylor in 1851 was sixty-one. The attendance thirty years after was sixty-three—a gain of two students in thirty years. There could be no expansion or development of courses of study with a gain of two students in thirty years.

In pioneer days there was little beneficent stimulus to the study of mathematics. There were no departments of engineering to exert their good influence. Mathematics was studied for the most part for its own sake. Its disciplinary value alone, made its study worth while.

I hold that engineering is a great aid both in producing good student mathematicians, and in expanding and developing the college curriculum along scientific lines.

I helped to found these engineering departments. I have watched them grow up from their babyhood. I have followed the careers of their graduates in the fields of their choice.

And I bear witness that from their very first year they have been most important factors in the unusual expansion and superior development of Bucknell University.

They, in conjunction with the department of biology, have done more than any thing else in departmental lines to build up the college and to give it a name in rank with the best of them.

Without these departments Bucknell remained stagnant for half her lifetime. With them she has grown from the college of sixty-three students to which I came in 1881 to the college of one thousand students in 1926, where I still am teaching mathematics.

It is a significant fact that the growth of Bucknell has been coincident year by year with the growth of these departments.

I became professor of mathematics in 1881. I immediately began to receive occasional letters from prospective students. A common inquiry was, what courses of study have you at Bucknell that lead directly to engineering? I could reply only that Bucknell had no such courses. I saw the demand and responded by paving the way for engineering.

I introduced mechanical drawing in 1886, and astronomy for engineers in 1887. Real progress in the direction of engineering was made in 1890. That year our mathematics curriculum was further extended so as to include a full course in city surveying and a similar one in standard civil engineering.

Albert B. Stewart was made instructor in mathematics to teach these subjects and we seemed now to have a real start in engineering.

Biology was introduced as a college subject in 1887 by Dr. Groff. Soon afterwards it was rapidly pushed forward by Professor Nelson F. Davis. The University now began to develop along scientific lines.

Moreover, with engineering and biology in the curriculum, Bucknell began to outrun in membership all ranking colleges of the state.

Let us examine statistically Bucknell's growth in its relation to these newly introduced courses. Bucknell had a membership of 61 students when in 1851 she graduated her first class.

Thirty-six years afterwards in 1887, or when these scientific courses began to find entrance, she had a membership of 64—a gain of three students in thirty-six years. Bucknell stood still in membership absolutely for thirty-six years.

Beginning with the year 1895, by which time the engineering and biology courses began to function, statistics run as follows:

In 1895 the attendance was 171, five years afterwards or in 1900 the attendance was 315; in 1905 the attendance was 475; in 1910 the attendance was 527; in 1915 the attendance was 598; in 1920 the attendance was 757; in 1925 the attendance was 1038.

Beginning with the full introduction of engineering and biology, we observe that the gain for the first five years was 84% of the named attendance. We noted before, that for a previous thirty-six years when the college had been running along with its purely arts and scientific courses, there had been a gain of three students in the whole period, or, better, say, absolutely no gain at all.

We repeat, that it is a significant fact that the growth of Bucknell has been coincident, year by year, with the growth of the departments of engineering and biology.

Nor indeed is Bucknell exceptional in this particular.

Everywhere there are prosperous colleges that have grown up through the stimulus of prosperous scientific and engineering departments.

geous mosques in which to worship. One of these, which was originally built as a Christian church, the mosque of Saint Sophia, is considered by many to be the most beautiful building of worship in the world. Its interior is richly decorated and the mosque is so large that five thousand worshippers can be accomodated at one time. Outside of the mosques are fountains where the Mohammedans wash their ears, arms, and feet before entering.

The priest, or muezzin, gives the call to prayer five times a day. The Mohammedan kneels, puts his hands and face to the ground and resting on his knees repeats the motion while crying aloud his praises to God. The Mohammedan carries his religion into private life, too, and since the use of strong drink is forbidden by the Koran the Turk is never seen drunk.

The fury of the Turk in war is feared, but during the past war the Turks refused to use poison gas saying that it was not fair to the enemy. Their cruelty is not so real as their bravery in fighting for a cause in which they believe.

PROFESSOR LAWSON URGES STUDENTS TO INDUSTRY

Professor George B. Lawson, addressing the students in upperclass chapel on Tuesday, January 19, spoke on the significance of the words in the verse "I must work the work of Him that sent me while it is day; for the night cometh when no man can work."

He described Kipling's bungalow near Dartmouth, Massachusetts. It stands on the crest of a hill—a house built for light. In the south room is a great stone fireplace, and over it the words, "For the night cometh."

It was in this room that Kipling wrote "The Day's Work," "Tales of the Seven Seas," and "Captains Courageous." The words over the fireplace were a constant challenge to his spirit to grasp opportunity.

"Jesus wasted no time," said Dr. Lawson. "He spent none of his time investigating the causes of conditions in the world. He saw the world as it was, with its good and its bad, and set out to help it." Kipling had some of the spirit of Jesus. Everywhere he went, he spread encouragement, consolation, and happiness.

"We, too, should remember that 'the night cometh.' The time for us to grasp opportunity is during the day of life; then we shall be ready to enjoy the night."

FINDEX BIG HELP TOWARD ARRANGING "EXAM" SCHEDULE

Card Device Simplifies Many Classifications and Other Selective Operations

REGISTRAR H. W. HOLTER ORIGINATES A NEW USE

Punch Slots for Courses; Slip Rod Through File; Turn: Presto! Count is Made

Beginning last year, Bucknell University has been using the "Findex" method in drawing up examination schedules, class schedules, and other classifications. Bucknell University is the only college or university that uses this system for examinations.

The Findex system is a sorter and selector of information. It combines in one master index all the facts usually recorded in numerous files and cross files. Those facts are recorded in such a manner that any classification may be mechanically selected.

Some of the other colleges use the Findex system for the selection of teachers or for general information only.

With the aid of this system it is possible to draw up an examination schedule with a minimum of conflicts. Most conflicts occur in cases where the students have flunked certain subjects which they are compelled to repeat. If the regular course is pursued very few conflicts occur.

The schedules are so arranged that the examinations in elementary and advanced courses occur at the same time. This does much to avoid conflicts. For example, it would hardly be possible that any one taking Chemistry 101 would also be taking Chemistry 201 at the same time. Therefore, it would be advisable to run these two examinations together.

The apparatus necessary for the operation of the Findex system consists of the Findex card, a slotting punch, the container, a lifting board, and the Findex rods.

Each individual record to be filed is represented by a Findex card. On this card every course is recorded and is given a Findex "position," i. e., a space between two round holes. The top of the Findex card is designed to carry the student's name, address, and the course which he is taking.

These courses are then slotted, where they appear between the two holes on the card, by the use of the slotting punch. This is an instrument which punches the space between the two holes on the card.

The cards are filed alphabetically in a container, which holds 600 cards. In front of the container is a metal plate, which is numbered and has the shape and appearance of the Findex card.

If a long rod, which is called the Findex rod, is inserted in one of the slots above a certain number, and if the container is turned over, the cards of those taking a certain examination will drop down. In this manner rods are inserted in all the holes and with this information the examination schedules are drawn up.

The Findex cards are used not only for examinations, but also for other

DR. WOOD WAS ORDAINED AT NORRISTOWN, PENNA.

Dr. Joseph R. Wood, who has just left Bucknell to become pastor of the First Baptist Church of Reading, Pa., has asked the Bucknellian to correct a misstatement in last week's issue, in a story concerning himself. Dr. Wood was not, as stated, pastor of the Norristown Baptist Church. He was only ordained in Norristown. The Bucknellian is glad to make this correction. The incorrect statement was taken from a newspaper which the editors examined in gathering the data for their story.

Professor and Mrs. L. L. Rockwell were recently called out of town on account of the death of Professor Rockwell's grandmother. Mrs. Rockwell was ninety years old at the time of her death.

Everett Gets Place On Editorial Board

American Mathematical Monthly Honors Bucknell Professor For Good Work Done

Professor Harry S. Everett, of the mathematical department, was appointed to the board of editors of The American Mathematical Monthly, at the winter meeting of the Mathematical Association of America, held at Kansas City during the Christmas holidays. Professor Everett attended this convention.

The American Mathematical Monthly is the only outstanding mathematical journal of this country. The Mathematical Association of America, which publishes it, is the greatest mathematical society in America, its influence reaching far beyond the confines of our own land. Every member of the Bucknell mathematics faculty belongs to this organization.

Dr. Everett's connection with the Monthly is not altogether new. For the past two years he has been arranging a very complete index to this periodical. His election to the editorial board comes as recognition for his thorough work with the index. He will continue the indexing and in addition will have supervision, at the outset, of the page proofs, and will probably do some editing in the field of his specialty, algebra.

The editorial board of the Monthly consists of eight to twelve mathematicians from different sections of the country. The publication was started by Professor B. F. Finkel, of Drury College, Springfield, Mo. Another mathematician who has been an outstanding figure in the development of the periodical is Professor H. E. Slaught, of the University of Chicago. The editor-in-chief is Professor W. B. Ford, of the University of Michigan.

Professor Everett, in addition to being a member of the Mathematical Association of America, is also a member of the American Mathematical Society, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, the American Institute

100 SCHOLARSHIPS OPEN TO STUDENTS

Scholarships of $50 and $100 Offered on Application To Those Having 80 Grade

Bucknell is in a position to offer more than a hundred scholarships to students in financial need. A scholarship yields $50 or $100 a year. Credit for half the amount of the scholarship is given at the beginning of each semester.

Scholarships are subject to semi-annual renewal, the conditions being that the student maintains an average of at least 80, conducts himself well, and is in continued financial need.

Application for scholarships for any college year should be made before the first of June of the preceding year. A permanent committee on scholarships, consisting of the President, the Dean, and the Registrar, has charge of all awards.

The William Bucknell scholarships, twenty in number, were established by a gift of $20,000, for the purpose of aiding worthy young men in securing an education with which to increase their usefulness in life.

The Longan scholarship was established by a legacy of O. W. Longan, Esq., and is available for a student for the ministry from Lycoming County, Pennsylvania.

The Lewis E. Jones scholarship was established by a legacy of Lewis E. Jones and is available for a student of Welsh descent.

The Reverend Calvin Aurand Hare, A. M., B. D., '77, established the John Howard Hare scholarship in memory of his son. The scholarship is available for a student for the ministry upon the recommendation of the Pennsyvania Baptist Education Society and of the president of the University.

The Velola E. Hall scholarship was established by the Reverend Henry Chandler Hall, T. M., '82, in honor of his daughter, Velola E. Hall, A. B., '04, and is available for a student in the Women's College.

Mrs. Katherine Brown Larison Dies In Eighty-Seventh Year

WAS PRINCIPAL OF INSTITUTE FIFTEEN YEARS; FIRST WOMAN WITH B. U. HONORARY DEGREE

Mrs. Katherine B. Larison is dead. The first woman to whom Bucknell University ever gave an honorary degree, the woman who served as principal of the Institute longer than any other person, the big-hearted teacher who did so much to help struggling girls toward an education, has passed away. She died on Monday night, January 25, about midnight, at the residence of Professor William Gundy Owens, with whom she had made her home in recent years. She was 86 years old.

Mrs. Larison was Katharine Bloomfield Brown. She was the eldest of three children, all girls. Her mother was a Bloomfield, and came from an old family of Dutch extraction. Her father was a farmer. The family home was at Cochecton Centre, Sullivan County, N. Y.

From her early girlhood Mrs. Larison had a passion for learning, just as, in later life, she had a passion for helping others to get learning. Her girlhood was passed on the family homestead in Sullivan County, where she attended the district school. Her father died while she was still a young girl, and she experienced all the hardships that naturally fall to the lot of the widows and orphans of none-too-prosperous farmers. She worked early and late, always with an eye single to the accomplishment of her purpose.

While still quite young she secured some training in a private school on the Hudson. At the age of fifteen she began work as a teacher in the district schools of her own county. Here she taught until she was nineteen years old. In September, 1850, when she was twenty, she went to Georgia to study and teach.

She had hardly more than gotten well settled in her new environment before war started between North and South. When the young teacher from the North heard of the result of the battle of Bull Run, she decided it would be wise for her to get away from the South. Accompanied by a cousin, who was also a teacher, she made her way homeward by a circuitous route, that led through Macon, Atlanta, Chattanooga, Louisville, Marietta, Cleveland, and Dunkirk. The Confederate lines were passed near Chattanooga. The fugitives caught their first glimpse of the Union flag at Louisville, in July, 1861.

In September of that year the young teacher went to Monticello, N. Y., where she taught in a public school for one year and served as vice-president of an academy for two years. She had now sufficient funds in hand to enable her to go on with her own schooling, and accordingly she entered the University Female Institute of Lewisburg in September, 1865, and at once took rank at the head of her class. In 1867 she was graduated, and immediately thereafter was appointed an instructor in the Institute.

During the time that this young instructor was teaching at the Institute, Dr. Andrew B. Larison, of the class of 1969, was attending the University. He had served through the war as a surgeon, and after the struggle ended had come to Bucknell to secure theological training. He married Miss Brown October 6, 1869, and her connection with the Institute was apparently ended. The newly-married couple went to Ringoes, N. J., his home town, where he had been called to the pastorate of a newly-organized Baptist church.

Here, in January, 1870, Dr. Larison and his brother established a boarding and day school, known as the Seminary at Ringoes. In this institution Mrs. Larison taught English literature and French.

On September 25, 1872, her husband died. His death was caused by tuberculosis, which came as the result of exposure during the war. Following a desperate battle, he had spent an entire night carrying wounded Union soldiers from a swamp back to the Union line and safety. The terrible exposure and strain of that night resulted in a severe cold, which eventually ended in tuberculosis and cost Dr. Larison his life, just at the time when he was getting well started on the road to success.

Once more left dependent upon her own efforts, Mrs. Larison courageously took up the work of the new school, and in 1874 assumed sole charge of it. As a pastor's wife she had won great success. Her friendly interest in people made hosts of friends for her. This fine quality of heart, together with the real scholastic and executive ability she now showed, made her successful in the conduct of the Ringoes Seminary. Her work attracted attention, and when Principal Jones, of the Lewisburg Institute, died, in January, 1882, David Jayne Hill, then president of Bucknell, secured Mrs. Larison to be the head of the Institute. For fifteen years, with unusual success, Mrs. Larison continued as principal of this institution. In that time she won the affectionate regard of scores of students who were under her care.

In Commenting upon Mrs. Larison's work at Bucknell, at time of her resignation from the principalship of the Institute, the Bucknell Mirror for June, 1897, has this to say: "The organization of three important societies: the Students' Loan Association, the Lewisburg Alumnae Club, and the Young Women's Christian Association, the many changes and improvements of the last seventeen years in the domestic arrangements, the curriculum, and the government of the school have been almost wholly due to her influence and will endure as her lasting memorial. In 1889 the University, in recognition of her scholarly attainments, conferred upon her the honorary degree of master of arts.

"Mrs. Larison has given the best part of her life to the cause of education, and is bound by indissoluble ties to the school she has served so admirably and unselfishly. She has scores of friends in the school and in the town, who gratefully remember her cheery, encouraging words and many kindly acts, and who sincerely hope that in the future she will return to Lewisburg to make this her home for at least a part of each year."

Mrs. Larison did return to Lewisburg. The Bible tells us that where our treasure is, there is our heart also. Mrs. Larison's treasure was in the friendships she had made during her seventeen years of service here. Lewisburg became her home. While her sisters lived, she spent parts of each year with them. She lived to be the last of her family, and her final years were passed wholly in Lewisburg, in the homes of friends. For some years before her death Professor and Mrs. Owens had taken her into their home and cared for her.

Mrs. Larison was the recipient of a federal pension, granted on account of the death of her husband. Her careful, frugal nature enabled her to save some money. With her savings she was more than generous. She gave liberally to the Students' Loan Association, of which, in addition to being its founder, she served as president to the day of her death. This plan to help poor girls obtain education was very dear to her. She was a liberal giver to the Baptist Church. When the church building was remodeled a few years ago, she provided practically all the money to buy the pews. Some years ago she gave $6,000 to the University, on condition that she receive an annuity from this sum during her lifetime. The money now becomes the University's outright, and the interest from this sum will be added to the yearly revenues of the institution.

Memorial services were held in the Baptist church on the afternoon of Wednesday, January 27. The Rev. Dr. E. M. West, Mrs. Larison's pastor, and her former pastor, the Rev. Dr. J. T. Judd, both spoke feelingly of Mrs. Larison's years of service. A quartet sang some of Mrs. Larison's favorite old hymns.

The burial is scheduled for Thursday, January 28, and the body will be interred at Sandy Ridge Cemetery, near Stockton, N. J. Here lies the body of Dr. Larison, and it was Mrs. Larison's wish that she might be buried beside him. Dr. Judd and Professor Owens will accompany the body to the grave and there hold a very brief ceremony.

Many Bucknell Stars Were Williamsporters

E. R. Bartholomew, School Coach, Hopler, and Liebensberger Among These Notables

"Old Loomis athletic field at the foot of Bucknell University's "College Hill" is dear to every loyal son and daughter of the Orange and Blue," says the Williamsport Sun, in its "expansion issue." "It was there during the past years that the athletes of Bucknell represented Alma Mater in glorious feats of the gridiron, diamond, and track. It was the scene of classic football games, thrilling diamond contests, and heart breaking grinds of the cinder path.

"To a great many Williamsporters Loomis Field is familiar; by a number it is loved. Of the latter are those of Williamsport who claim Bucknell University as their Alma Mater and some who have worn the Orange and Blue in varsity athletic contests, or who have contributed their bit toward raising to pre-eminence their class teams. Bucknell claims many Williamsporters as many Williamsporters claim Bucknell. Many entered Bucknell from Williamsport and many choose to reside in the Lycoming county seat upon their graduation from the Lewisburg school.

"The list of Williamsport's Bucknell athletes is not extensive but the athletic world of several, each in its own sphere, is great. Naturally there were many more who attained distinction on class teams than those who achieved varsity positions and the coveted "B." In the three major sports of baseball, basketball, and track, their athletic ability was about evenly distributed. One or two gained recognition in all three sports.

"Perhaps the best known of these Williamsport-Bucknell athletes is Earle R. Bartholomew, present physical director of the Williamsport schools, Williamsport High School baseball coach and former football mentor. "Hart" as he was familiarly known to his fellow athletes, classmates, and to his friends today, was a member of the class of 1912 at Bucknell University. Although he did not

SUN'S SPECIAL ISSUE TELLS OF BUCKNELL

Paper Once Owned By Alumnus; Has Had Several Bucknell Students On Its Staff

Printing an edition of 128 pages, one of the largest editions ever issued by any paper in a town the size of Williamsport, the Williamsport Sun on Saturday, January 23, celebrated its daily "expansion edition" its acquisition of a huge new press and the completion of the new wing of its building, which practically doubles the facilities of this enterprising newspaper. There are ten sections to this issue. These include two news sections, and sections devoted to local history, industries, and accounts of old times who made Williamsport what it is.

This issue is of interest to Bucknellians both on account of its contents and because of the connection of Bucknell alumni with this paper. The Sun is in its fifty-sixth year. It was started in 1870 by Colonel Levi L. Tate, under the title "The Williamsport Sun and Lycoming Democrat." Within a few years the paper passed into possession of Henry Mifes Wolf, Jr., who graduated from Bucknell with the class of 1880. Other Bucknell men have been associated with the paper from time to time. Mr. G. Grant Painter, now president of the Williamsport Printing and Binding Company, which prints the Bucknell catalogs, bulletins, etc., began his work as a printer with the Sun. Soon after his graduation from the University in 1917 he became associated with the job printing department then conducted by the Sun. R. D. Rhone, '29, was on the staff of this paper before coming to Bucknell, and is now the Lewisburg corresponsent of the Sun.

The Sun has always been friendly to Bucknell. It carries much Bucknell news and has been helpful to the University in various ways. In this present issue it runs a story almost a column and three quarters long about the Williamsport boys who have been

JUNIATA QUINTET DEFEATED 33--23 BY BUCKNELL FIVE

Livengood, Opponent's Captain, Penetrates Bison Defense Scoring 4 Field Goals

MURPHY BACK IN GAME AFTER RECENT INJURY

Scores 10 Points; Fritzinger 6; McCaskey and Rigg each 6; Bach Gets 2 Goals

Keeping their home slate clean for the season, the Bucknell varsity cagers trimmed the Juniata College quintet in Tustin gym last Saturday evening. The final score was 33-23.

The Juniata team had several young giants on its squad. Should these men appear on the Juniata grid team next autumn, an interesting argument will be the result when the Bisons and the Juniata elevens meet. The Orange and Blue cagers were little troubled by the size of the visitors, however, and caged two-pointers from all parts of the court.

Tom Murphy was back in the Bucknell lineup again after being taken out of the Navy game because of an arm injury. The big guard made his presence felt and scored the first field goal on a follow-up play after a long shot from mid-court.

Livengood, the opposing captain and forward, was the visitors' best bet. He possessed a neat dribbling ability, which carried him past the Bison defense several times. The diminutive forward scored two field goals the first half and repeated his performance in the second half. A. Snyder and Weller also played well for Juniata.

Murphy was high Bucknell scorer with three field goals and four out of six fouls, for a total of ten points. Fritzinger was a little off in basket shooting, but had a good eye for fouls, netting four out of five attempts. McCaskey and Rigg each had two-pointers and Bach had a brace of baskets.

The entire Bucknell second team went in for the regulars late in the second period and repeated in the final quarter.

COUNCIL RULES EXPULSION PENALTY FOR FIRE PRANKS

The Student Council in its meeting held Monday evening, January 11, passed a ruling to the effect that any person found guilty of making fires in the University buildings will be requested to leave the University and the President will be notified of the request.

This action was taken in order to prevent the endangering of life and property by the foolishness of private pranks. Shortly before vacation two fires occurred that were accidental. Three others that were not accidental have been known to occur during the year. It is hoped that the students will appreciate the seriousness of this matter and that no further action will be made necessary.

Ever See Job's Coffin?

It is visible about ten o'clock at night, directly in the south, north of east from Altair. The constellation called Job's Coffin is a little group of stars rather close together, looking somewhat like a fish with a drooping tail.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI KAPPA PSI

Penna. Gamma of Phi Kappa Psi announces with pleasure the pledging of Walter "Red" Holmes, '28, of Coraopolis, Pa.

Brother Stephens is entering the soft coal business. Pace your orders early!

Several of the boys pulled the mountaineer act, and spent the night up in the hills last Saturday. Bears and wild men were foremost in their thoughts, but all came back—hungry!

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Brother Tom Wood, '05, and George S. Metzger, '10, an S. A. E., both of Muncy, were guests at dinner Monday, January 18.

Brother Max Reed, ex-'26, was a dinner guest Tuesday, January 19.

Graves and Snyder of the Juniata College basketball team were the guests of Phi Gamma Delta, Saturday and Sunday.

DELTA SIGMA

Founders' day will be commemorated February 6. Many of the alumni are expected to return to the house to make this a successful occasion.

Plans are being made for a formal "Sem" dance to be held Saturday, February 20.

The fraternity basketball team has played two out-of-town games and won both. Watsontown suffered a 47-18 defeat, and Picture Rocks submitted with the score 37-19. Other games have been scheduled for February and March.

Practice for the play has been progressing rapidly although examinations put a crimp in the arrangements.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

"Al" Abbot, '29, brought a pair of boxing gloves with him when he returned from Christmas vacation. Ever since then somebody has been nursing an injury to some part of his body. (Look around the cawpus for black eyes.) A tournament is planned, and although there are no odds on anyone for the winner, "Bucky" Harris, '29, looks like the king leather pusher.

Mr. Strong of Yonkers, N. Y., father of Brother "Bill" Strong, '28, was a guest at the house during the last week-end.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Iota of Kappa Delta Rho takes great pleasure in announcing the pledging of Paul S. Beaver, '28, of Port Royal.

The plans for the "Sem" dance, to be held at the house on the evening of January 30, have been completed and the "gang" is anticipating a very enjoyable evening.

Professor and Mrs. L. L. Rockwell were guests at dinner Thursday evening.

Harry Dykins, ex-'27, now a student at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, is spending his inter-session vacation at the house.

"Stew" Bean and "Les" George gave the boys a treat Wednesday evening in the form of ice cream, cake, and cigars. There are two women in the case.

Monk" Wisehupt passed the cigars around, too. He's twenty-one and claims to be a man.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Lowry were guests at dinner Friday evening.

ALPHA CHI SIGMA

Acting Dean Clark and Mrs. J. D. Phillips were guests of the fraternity at dinner January 24.

The fraternity basketball team won its first league game when it defeated the Phi Lambda Theta team in Tustin gymnasium January 20. The team was greatly advantaged by the game with the Lewisburg High School team the week before as that encounter gave coach Sloan, '26, an opportunity to find and correct the team's weak spots.

BETA KAPPA

The members of the girls' basketball team from Tamaqua High School were entertained at the Beta Kappa house on the evening of January 23 after their game with the Milton High School team. The new Orthophonic furnished music for dancing, and Albert F. Buffington, '28, entertained by singing a number of old German folk songs.

Eta chapter of the Beta Kappa fraternity announces with pleasure the pledging of John Weber, '28.

EXAMS!

This old exam. bug has caused a great change in the lives of many of us—It has in mine, anyway.

* * * *

It took away all my versification powers and left me in a state of plain, unadulterated prose—not the best of that, either.

* * * *

So now you won't get the verses I used to give—blame it on the exams!

* * * *

If it's a relief—you may thank the exams, too, if you wish—I know not; neither do I care.

* * * *

But back to the subject—I find I am digressing as the ministers usually do.

* * * *

Exams are indeed a pest—we all know that. We all swear—only some of us do it inside instead of aloud.

* * * *

But what do we swear? That's the question!

* * * *

The education students—emphasis on the last word—resolve—that's a better word than swear, isn't it—that they will be very lenient when they are the ones to give the exams to poor little boys and girls.

* * * *

Will they forget that when they teach—we wonder!

* * * *

The law students do not take time to think of future days—they swear at the "Prof" who gives the exam!

* * * *

The "pre-meds" swear that they'll study more the next time—except those who swear they'll never have a chance to get through!

* * * *

What do the engineers swear? Well, some we heard seemed to be swearing at everything in general and several people in particular. What vociferations they do have—some of them!

* * * *

The ministerials and the Student Volunteers swear not at all—we're sure of that! They know they had better not! It wouldn't sound so fitting!

* * * *

But, they're human really, for they probably have as hard a time thinking of good words to put on their papers and bad words to keep out of their minds as the rest of us!

* * * *

The "Profs" however, should have the best "vocabularies" of all.

* * * *

They have to listen to all these things year after year—how learned they must be by now!

* * * *

Then, too, they have the hardest part—they have to read all those fool things we wrote during that hectic week.—Can you imagine anything worse?

* * * *

They might dump the whole lot of papers in the waste-basket—and give us the benefit of the doubt—then they would be saved one provocation to swear.

* * * *

It might give us a chance to do less swearing on our own account. I swear I'd make a better mark if they did that, wouldn't you?

* * * *

But there—I started to swear myself—and I swore I wouldn't swear over these—EXAMS!

* * * *

Now isn't that just like these exams—let's not swear about 'em—

* * * *

DARN EXAMS!

A FOOL ADMITS IT

The wise man from the village had just been described, to his face, as being a certain kind of a fool. "I know it," said he, "and you don't." In this special matter you say, I myself am a —— fool. I found it out rather early in my life. I found it out before others did. I found there were weak spots in my make-up. When I got out with the boys I gave out I had to the fun of the occasion and prolonged it beyond reasonable limits. I could completely turn myself from a man interested in work to a man who was interested in anything but work. People might have said that I was going to the dogs, only there is a time when that sort of foolishness begets amusement rather than censure.

"However, one day a man called me that kind of fool you have just described, and I hotly resented it. Then it came to me: 'I was a —— fool.' There was no getting away from the fact. But what was there to do about it? That thirst for boon companionship was in me; that capacity for throwing responsibilities overboard was in my nature; it was simply there; that in itself is enough to make a man a —— fool.

"Well, I just accepted the fact. I sized myself up like a man who has a bad heart. The doctor tells him he has a bad heart. No use raging against it; there is the fact. What to do? Recognize the fact of a bad heart, and live accordingly. Maybe you know that people with bad hearts usually live longer than other people—if they know they have bad hearts AND if they live accordingly. They take care of themselves on their weak side.

"Now, I know I was a fool. I knew the weak places in my armor. And I say that kind of a fool still. Nothing can change me. I am made that way. But, the point is, I know it, and live accordingly. I pass for a very wise and steady man, and I am one, but it is because I recognize my weaknesses and consistently take care of myself on that side.

"The world is full of —— fools. I don't blame them. Let them accept the fact, as they would weak eyes, or a game leg, or a bad heart, or tricky digestion, and they will win out.

"As I say to young fellows: 'You're a —— fool all right.' Swallow the fact and build up defenses accordingly.. There is always an inside something that is not a fool and that can steer the outside fool around his pitfalls. If you're a —— fool, admit it to yourself; take it into consideration whenever you have to make a decision, whenever your path lies over in the direction of your weakness. Then the fool will be saved from his folly."

Says Future Colleges Will Stress Quality

Less standardization, and quality rather than size, will be emphasized by the college of the future, Frank Aydelotte, president of Swarthmore College, told the Association of American Colleges at the opening session of the twelfth annual meeting in New York on January 14. Dr. Aydelotte is president of the association.

"The race for members and the worship of size for its own sake are rapidly giving place to a much saner attitude," said President Aydelotte. "Many colleges are limiting the numbers of their students, and almost all are undertaking by one means or another to select students who are genuinely eager for an education and intellectually capable of profiting by it.

"It is beginning to be realized that students who are above the average deserve special attention, just as those who are below the average, and will better repay the attention which they receive.

"The distrust of intellectual excellence, which is often associated with the pioneer spirit and which has prevailed in the United States for a century, is slowly disappearing. The credit for this is probably due in large part to the value of scientific research to industry. This slowly increasing respect for intellectual work of the highest grade bids fair to be a tremendous asset to the colleges.

Quality Rather Than Size

"The college of the future will profit by this change in public feeling. It will emphasize quality rather than size. It will compute endowment needs as so much per student and will limit its enrollment.

"The college of the future will modify the elective system in important respects. Students will have choices to make, but they will be fewer and more important choices.

"The college of the future will not have so much the character of a secondary school. It will allow its students more freedom, will insist upon more serious work, will make larger demands upon the intellectual independence and initiative and will demand relatively less docility. The signs of the times indicate that American colleges of the future will be more highly differentiated and less standardized than they are at present. There will be more interesting variations in the curriculum and fewer conventional attempts to teach every aspect of epery subject."

Colleges "Worship" Degrees, Says Dean

Most of the students in the graduate schools lack adequate preparation, according to Frederick J. E. Woodbridge, dean of the Graduate Faculties of Columbia University. In his annual report to President Nicholas Murray Butler, Dean Woodbridge says that many students would not be in the university at all were it not for the fact that they find university study and degrees "to their social or professional advantage." Dean Woodbridge said, in part:

"The worship of academic degrees has unfortunately become a form of educational idolatry. The character of the academic body comprising the Columbia Faculties of Political Science, Philosophy and Pure Science, and the students registered under them, is a matter calling for deliberate attention.

"The admission requirements to what we have come to call the 'graduate school' in our universities give us a student body made up of college graduates, but the scholarly equipment of these students does not, as a rule, represent an adequate preparation for thoroughly advanced work and research.

"The worship of academic degrees has unfortunately become a form of educational idolatry. I once received a request from a college president for two 'Ph. D. professors,' and on inquiring what they were expected to do, was informed that that was a matter of indifference.

"In too many places in our educational system the possession of a degree is too often regarded with higher favor than the possession of ability."

The teacher wanted to know why Jim had absented himself from school for a whole week.

"But he's past his fourteenth year, ain't he?" said Jim's mother. "And me and his father think he's had schoolin' enough."

"Nonsense," said the teacher. "I didn't finish my education till I was eighteen."

"Oh," said Jim's mother, "but Jim's got brains."

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

Dr. MacCracken Urges New Plan To Make College Creative

"If the college of tomorrow is to be as different from the preparatory school of today as the college of today is from the preparatory school of yesterday, the college must develop new roles, new interests, and a new atmosphere. It must become a man and put away childish things," Dr. John H. MacCracken, president of Lafayette College, said in a recent report.

He explains how these changes may be made, and tells of the proposal made at Johns Hopkins University, which may be followed by other institutions throughout the country, of eliminating the freshman and sophomore years and making it an institution simply for students working for the higher degrees, similar to the German universities. Apparently President MacCracken does not fully agree with this plan, for he says that he "is inclined to believe that we have in the American college an institution peculiarly well designed to effect the transition from youth to manhood and it is too valuable to be thrown overboard in favor of the German system.

"If the college is to maintain its claim to a position superior to the preparatory school, it must intensify its life particularly on the creative side in literature, art, science, politics, and religion," he said. "The only way in which this can be done is by making the profe-sor's chair more attractive by larger salaries and greater freedom from routine and from the drudgery of elementary instruction so as to satisfy the ablest minds."

Dean Gildersleeve Urges Women Out of Colleges to Unite

Dean Virginia Gildersleeve of Barnard College urged Barnard Alumnae at a recent luncheon at the Pennsylvania to unite with other university women in a single organization that "can voice the united sentiment of college women in world affairs." She suggested that graduate clubs of all women's colleges combine to erect a great building in New York for their headquarters.

"It is highly important that we should unite," said Dean Gildersleeve. "As an instance of what, united, we could accomplish, consider that it is quite likely that Congress will pass a law to do for the nation what the evolution law did for Tennessee. United we could present ourselves as a strong barrier of intelligent opinion opposed to any such law. We could keep our professors of biology out of Jail."

The most important thing for the advancement of women today, she said, was that "we should have at least a few really first-class woman scholars." She praised the work of the American Association of University Women, which has 23,000 members, and its cooperation with other such organizations abroad.

High Degrees No Bar to Wedlock, Says Economics Professor

"Highbrow" education does not hamper American women so far as marriage is concerned, it was announced during the recent annual conference of the North Atlantic section of the American Association of University Women at Atlantic City.

The statement was made by Miss Emilie Hutchinson, professor of economics at Barnard College, who is now conducting a survey among the 1,500 women in the United States who have Ph. D. degrees. Over 80 per cent. of the number coming under the survey thus far, said Miss Hutchinson, are teaching, while 21 per cent. are married and have families.

It was declared that there is a pressing need for more women with higher education.

Practical knowledge relative to modern educational and physical welfare training of children will be diffused among the women of the country by the 25,000 members of the association, according to plans outlined by delegates.

Columbia's Extension Enrolment Now Numbers Fully 19,000

James C. Egbert, Director of University Extension at Columbia University, in his annual report to President Nicholas Murray Butler, made public recently, said that 19,163 students, including 3,000 women, were enrolled in the extension courses.

The largest enrolment was in English, which registered 8,747 persons. About 1,000 were in the chemistry courses. In home study there were more than 2,000 students, as against 196 in 1919-1920.

"We have continued to experiment with radio broadcasting,' reported Mr. Egbert, "which is no longer regarded as a fad. Through experience of the past two winters we are satisfied that there is a large radio audience awaiting educational offerings and opportunities. We shall continue this work, so that Columbia may have its part in the development of the educational side of broadcasting."

The report recorded steady growth in the training school for teachers of religious education. Three clinics in oral hygiene were maintained in the Presbyterian Hospital, the students treating about 12,000 patients. More than 200 meetings were held through the Institute of Arts and Sciences, the report added.

More Women on Yale Faculty; One An Associate Professor

The first woman to hold an associate professorship at Yale University in a subject other than nursing is Bessie Lee Gambrill, Ph. D., who was recently promoted from assistant professor to associate professor of elementary education with assignment to the Yale Graduate School. Professor Gambrill is a graduate of Western Maryland College and received the degrees of M. A. and Ph. D. from Columbia University.

The appointment of Helena Stewart M. A., R. N., as assistant professor of nursing is also announced. Miss Stewart is a graduate of Brown and Columbia Universities and received her professional training at the New York Training School for Nurses.

Many College Publications Springing Up Everywhere

Intercollegiate publications of all kinds seem to have become the going thing in collegiate circles during the past few years. The New Student, The American Campus, College Humor, College Comics, and similar publications that have a nation-wide circulation are among these.

One that is opening a field hitherto almost untouched, that of the intercollegiate literary magazine, is The Intercollegiate World, published by the Thompson-Williams Publishing Company, of Baltimore, Maryland. The first issue presents a pleasing assortment of student short stories and feature articles on subjects of college interest, by eminent writers and authorities. Bits of interesting news from colleges all over the country are also included in the magazine. The subscription rate is three dollars a year or thirty-five cents a copy. From the appearance of the first issue it seems to be a good investment.

Students Need Regular Exercise Experience at Oxford Shows

Dr. J. George Adams, vice chancellor of Liverpool University, speaking at the annual meeting of the University Court, commented on the poor physical state of many of the students in "civic" universities, as compared with those of Oxford and Cambridge, according to the London correspondent of The Journal of the American Medical Association. He suggested that compulsory medical and physical examination be instituted and advice given as to the special form of exercise to be taken. An inquiry in the summer term brought to light the fact that only some 300 students, at the most, indulged in sports and games.

At Oxford and Cambridge there was a well-established tradition that in most of the schools no lectures were given in the afternoon, so that at least an hour, if not the whole afternoon, was spent in the open air, in games and country walks and on the river. To the bulk of the undergraduates coming from public school, open-air exercise became second nature.

In Liverpool and other "civic" universities most of the students came from municipal secondary schools in densely populated districts where opportunity for open-air-play was seriously restricted. The students were on an average in a distinctly poorer physical state, and at the university the freedom for exercise was limited to Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

IF YOU PUT NOTHING IN, YOU'LL GET NOTHING OUT

"Young authors often make the mistake of trying to unload cargo all the time without taking any on," was the warning Sir Arthur Conan Doyle recently gave young writers in an address before the Savage Club in London.

"Writers have to read, and study, and travel, and keep in touch with all that is going on if they want to make their work interesting," the creator of Sherlock Holmes said. "And above all, nobody should try to write unless he simply can't help it. Real writers can't prevent themselves from writing."

"Uncle Sam" Wants More C.S. Examiners

If You Want a Job, Apply Before February 27. You'll Have To Mark Examinations

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination for JUNIOR CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINER.

Receipt of applications for junior civil service examiner will close February 27. The date for assembling of competitors will be stated on the admission cards sent applicants after the close of receipt of applications.

The examination is to fill vacancies under the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., at an entrance salary of $1,500 a year. After the probational period of six months required by the civil service act and rules, advancement in pay may be made without change in assignment up to $1,860 a year. Promotion to higher grades may be made in accordance with the civil service rules as vacancies occur.

The duties consist of the preparation and rating of the various technical, scientific, professional, and clerical examinations announced by the Civil Service Commission for filling vacancies in the field or departmental services of the United States government, and conferring with the heads of departments or governmental agencies concerning vacancies and the requirements for satisfactorily filling the same.

Applicants may be examined in not more than two of the following optional subjects: chemistry, economics, French, geology, German, Italian, physics, sociology, and Spanish.

Competitors will be rated on general information and a discussion of at least 300 words on one of three topics, to be written in the examination room.

Full information and application blanks may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Canby Says the Best Novelists The World Over are Women

Henry Seidel Canby, editor of The Saturday Review, in speaking to Barnard Alumnae at a recent luncheon in New York, asserted that women had "run away with the writing of fiction."

A list of the best novelists in England or the United States would have to include a greater number of women than men, he said.

"The story-telling functions of the race has been taken over by women," he continued, "and their predominance will probably increase. They are still behind men as poets and dramatists."

Men, as fiction writers, always gave their best to their women characters, and so did women writers, he declared, so that the male characters in fiction no longer got a square deal. One had to go back to Fielding, Dickens, and Thackeray to find men fairly portrayed.

This, he said, was because women could depict well only the male characters they hated, the others being insipid; and because men today satirized all except the characters they loved, which were invariably those of women.

Women who wrote of men were really interested in them only as lovers, he said, so that they saw only one side.

"You women must do more for man," he said. "You must tell him what he doesn't know about himself."

Definition of a Co-ed.

A co-ed is a person.

Who says she has to study when she means she has a steady.

Who claims she likes Art when she really loves him.

Who says she is fond of a painting when she really is fond of painting.

Who has lots of scents, looks like she has lots of cents, but really has no sense.

Who isn't so fond of love as she is of its participle.

Who often thinks she looks pretty when she really looks pretty fast.

Who thinks Little Red Riding Hood is Robin Hood's wife.

Who thinks the fourth month of the year is named April because the first day of that month is April Fool's Day.

Who rushes in where angels fear to tread.

DEAFENING

Mrs. Newly-Rich was recounting to an acquaintance the thrilling events of the evening before, when the house had been burgled.

"As a matter of fact," she said, "we were eating our soup—"

"Then, of course," interrupted the candid friend, "none of you heard anything."—Tit-Bits.

Tact Is Essential

"Tact," said the lecturer, "is essential to good entertaining. I once dined at a house where the hostess had no tact. Opposite me sat a modest, quiet man.

"Suddenly he turned as red as a lobster on hearing his hostess say to her husband, 'How inattentive you are, Charlie! You must look after Mr. Brown better. He's helping himself to everything.'

His Size Saved Him

The girl was interested in the yarn the fat old sailor was telling. He had just finished relating his experiences with cannibals, and she said:

"And so the natives didn't harm you after all?"

"Bless you, no," was the reply. "They didn't have a saucepan my size."

Dad—Why—er—son, I really can't tell you—they certainly didn't have automobiles that far back.

And said, "I wonder who will win

TO THOSE WHO LEAVE

A number of students will be leaving Bucknell at the end of this semester; some to return after their fortunes are sufficiently replenished, others to go to other colleges, still others to go into the serious business of carving for themselves places in the world. To all of these we would give our good wishes and an assurance of our continued interest in them.

Naturally it is to those who will not return that we give the greatest measures of our attention. Those who go to other colleges will soon have new interests and new associations. Memories of Bucknell will, for them, be only a part of the memories of school days—we hope that they will be a pleasant part. Those who are going out to work so that they may return later will naturally keep awake the feeling of loyalty that characterizes the student body that is in attendance.

But those who will not return will have neither college associations nor the prospect of college associations. They will change their habitat abruptly, having all of the pain that goes with the college commencement and none of the glamour.

For whatever reason these people leave college, we regret their loss. If they leave at the completion of a course that prepares them for their work, we are sorry that they do not have a farewell that is fitting to the attainment that is theirs. If they leave because they have found that it is impossible for them to complete their work we feel with them the sense of loss in work that is not completed. Finally, for those who are requested to leave we feel the greatest loss of all. Failure must be taken from two sides: one, the failure of the student to meet the requirements of the college, the other the failure of the college to meet the educational demands of the student thus dismissed. God-speed to you all.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HEALTH.

Nothing can be truer than the oft noted fact that "we never miss the water 'till the well runs dry." That is true of all the common things of life. Because they are common, all too often we accept them and treat them as commonplaces—as though they had little real value. But let us be deprived of these common things, even for a few minutes, and we realize keenly how great our dependence upon them is. We snap on the electric switch with never a thought about the marvelousness and the indispensability of the light it gives us. But let that light fail and we are troubled indeed. In the same way we leave our health, and we play with it, and frequently abuse it, with never a thought of what it means to us or what we should do without it.

What ill health may mean to a business house—that is, the ill health of its employees—is well shown by an investigation conducted by an industrial concern and reported in Ex Libris, the house publication of the A. W. Shaw Company. In a limited period, sickness cost this concern and its employees more than half a million dollars. The cost of illness due to sickness was rated at $67,500; the cost of absence due to sickness, $150,000; the production loss through "sickness on the job," $20,000; the loss to workers in wages, $162,000; the loss through reduced earning capacity, $40,000; the medical expense to workers, $45,000; public expense and charitable relief, $56,000. The total estimated loss was $577,000.

These figures are suggestive and ought to be helpful to every thoughtful student. They show that sickness is costly in various ways: first of all, it often means loss of wages during part or all of one's illness; it may mean permanent decrease in earning ability, through permanent injury to the body; it always means added expense for medicines and doctors. The actual cash loss caused by sickness is enormous.

There are additional losses. Permanent impairment of the body is perhaps one of the heaviest losses in this respect. This may be in the form of lowered vitality or actual disability. Many workers after an illness, are never thereafter able to work six days a week continuously, month in and month out. Yet such continuous labor is necessary if one is to succeed. Without such uninterrupted toil, one succeeds neither for oneself nor for an employer. A broken down employee is like a horse with the heaves. Employers don't want him. It is difficult for such people either to get jobs or to hold them. If one is working for oneself, a greatly lessened income is the result of such disability.

In the matter of health, as in many other matters, we are prone to scorn little things. A cold in the head—what is that? A mere trifle. Yet colds often harm us sadly for life. If they do not actually impair our nasal processes or affect our ears, they often perpetually impair our mental brilliancy, who would have dispose us to illness. A man of unusual brilliancy, who would have made a great success as a lawyer, had to abandon his efforts to become a lawyer because he grew very deaf, following a succession of colds. He has a salaried job, at a mere fraction of what he could have earned at law. But it is the best he can do under the circumstances. His case is by no means exceptional.

In times of epidemics we think with alarm of our health. We are afraid the water is about to run out. At other times we pay small heed to the matter. Yet in an institution the size of Bucknell there is usually considerable illness. Every professor knows that his classes are constantly affected by the absence of students who are ill. In the aggregate these cases bulk large.

The deaths of Charles BaThein and of Edward DeRonde, and the occasional removal of a student to a hospital show us that even now, while we are still young and vigorous, there is much really serious illness among students. Practically all of this is due to exposure, lack of proper precautions, and so on. In this respect young women are notably reckless at dances. They become heated and then sit in cold drafts.

Most of us are in college in order to make something of ourselves in life. It is poor judgement to try to equip ourselves for a great work, and at the same time let the engine that does the work get into bad repair. College men and women ought to be too intelligent to be guilty of such folly. If they keep the water that is already in the well of health, they will never need to experience the discomfort and suffering that comes when the well goes dry.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

Why will people write anonymous letters?

They are a waste of time and paper. Influence is a personal thing, and the strength of reasoning depends on the soundness of the reasoner. He who withholds his personality from a reasonable document, intended to have a definite influence, defeats his own purpose.

We have just received a letter, which, written by any student of our acquaintance, would be considered as a friendly, constructive, critical statement, but which, coming from no one, we must consider as a meddlesome, unsympathetic, capcious expression of aloof superiority by one who assumes an attitude of omniscience that is wholly unjustified.

The Bucknellian is mighty glad to get criticism and has been begging for it for years, but the criticism to be valuable must be reasonable, and as we have said above, to be reasonable it must be personal.

The particular letter in question pointed to three errors of fact in a recent issue of the paper. That part of the letter was the only part that did have any value. We are making the corrections pointed out in this issue. Facts are facts, no matter by whom they are stated, but opinions have weight as their givers are qualified to give opinions.

There is a very narrow dividing line between the virtue called modesty and the lesser quality known as cowardice. The writer of a letter who fails to sign his own name to that letter is standing straddle of the line. He either values his own opinion so little that he does not care whether or not it be accepted, or he is afraid that he will be ridiculed for having such an opinion.

Modesty that extends thus far is not a true virtue and is false modesty. Cowardice or fear is not a feeling that is worthy of one student in his dealings with another. The writer of an anonymous letter insults him to whom it is addressed.

We like to credit Bucknell men with virtues. We want to see them developing into men of moral courage, men who will be leaders, men who will accomplish worthwhile tasks in life. Worthwhile things are not done in the anonymous fashion. Leadership is a personal quality. Moral courage demands that a man recognize that which is his own.

The writer of the letter designated himself "An Interested Junior." We will designate him as an "interesting junior." If he is sufficiently interested to want to know what consideration his suggestions have received, if he desires to learn (The attitude of the anonymous is that fo the closed mind.) he will claim his handiwork.

To our interesting junior or to any other person who has criticism to make concerning any phase of our work, the editor wishes to say that he has no desire to maintain a stand of self righteousness. We feel that our o ce is one of democratic representation, and therefore any Bucknellian has the right to offer criticism and suggestion. Our task would be made much more congenial if every student would say what he or she likes and dislikes about our paper. But, being intimately connected with the work, we feel that we are qualified to discuss matters of cause and effect in the publishing of the paper, and of the editorial policy that we should assume with some show of intelligence and open-mindedness. When you have criticisms to offer please take us into your confidence and make your criticism worth-while. Have the courage and confidence to be yourself, not merely one of a class.

New Courses Offered For Next Semester

Salesmanship, Investments, and Elementary Accounting To Be Practical Studies

The economics department offers new courses for the next semester in addition to those listed in the catalog for 1924-25, according to an announcement recently made by the department.

"One of these courses will cover the field of salesmanship and sales management. This will be a practical course and should appeal to many students. The principles of salesmanship are not only helpful to the seller of merchandise, but to the teacher who must sell himself to his pupils and community; to the preacher who must sell himself to his congregation; to everybody that must or wishes to influence his fellow man.

"The course in investments will aim to explain the elementary principles that govern sound investments. This course will not deal with the mathematics of investments but will be concerned with practical methods of detecting fraudulent securities; methods of selling and buying securities; the work of the stock exchanges and brokerage houses. This is a timely subject and one that the public knows very little about. The American public is imposed upon and defrauded to the extent of hundreds of millions of dollars each year. It is said that the most numerous victims are teachers, doctors, and clergymen.

"The course in elementary accounting is a frank attempt to make accounting more elementary. It is an introductory course and will hereafter be a prerequisite for other accounting courses. The advantages of the fundamentals of accounting are so apparent that a large enrolment is looked for in this class.

"The numbers assigned to these courses are as follows: Salesmanship and Sales Management—Economics 206; Investments—Economics 208; Elementary Accounting—Economics 106."

Baptist Endeavorers Enjoy Fine Program

The Baptist Christian Endeavor service of Sunday, January 24, was a special feature service devoted entirely to music and poetry. Miss Dorothy Gilbert led the meeting. After the group had sung several vigorous songs led by Barton Dakin, Miss Gilbert read the scripture which was one of the Bible poems, the ninety-sixth Psalm. Alton Roth, 29, played a violin selection which was followed by a few remarks by the leader.

Mrs. Wilcox and Melvin Shuttleworth each contributed to the program. Their solos were greatly enjoyed. In addition to the musical part of the program, several girls read favorite selections of poetry. Vera Herrick, Pauline Shepson, Helen Steinhilper, Jessie Fielding, and Elizabeth Sele took part in this division of the program. The poems selected and the interpretation given to each by the reader afforded the listeners pleasure in hearing the poems which are universally loved.

The committees for the coming semester were appointed and the announcement of an executive committee meeting this Wednesday evening at seven o'clock at the church was made.

ERRATA

The following corrections must be made concerning statements occurring in The Bucknellian issued January 20:

Miss MacCann, who was reported to have returned to the Women's College to take up her work as director of physical training, did not return and is now at her home.

Mrs. Clara G. Sale, who was reported to have been one of the speakers at the Presbyterian lunch during the services of the Week of Prayer, did not speak at the service mentioned.

In the report of Professor Lawson's talk, Rudyard Kipling's bungalow was placed near Dartmouth, Massachusetts. Dartmouth College is at Hanover, in the state of New Hampshire. Kipling's bungalow is in Vermont, near the Massachusetts line and somewhat south of Hanover. The town of Dartmouth, Massachusetts, was confused with the college.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY HOLDS MERRY SLEIGH RIDE

To the merry jingle of sleigh-bells, twenty-seven members of the Presbyterian C. E. last Saturday held an old-fashioned sleigh-ride to Buffalo Cross Roads. The weather was fine, the snow was deep and white, as the caroling crowd piled off the sleighs at the Roads and "fell to" on a luscious lunch which was awaiting them. Before their sharpened appetites the wieners disappeared first, followed by the baked spuds and beans, topped by the hot cocoa and home-made cookies.

The party then thought of trying its skill at skiing, and repaired to a nearby hill. Loud was the laughter as one after another tumbled headlong into the snow, only to smile and try it again without better luck. Many a koilak recorded the unhappy ending of an amateur skier as he "got better acquainted with nature." All too soon was it time to start home again, back to books and other bothers. After the chaperones, Miss Coe and Mrs. Wilson, had gathered their wards, the party started homeward.

Liberal Mr. Total

The missionary meeting was over, and the various amounts contributed by the members of the church had been, as usual, one of the most popular features. On the way home little Jane said to her mother: "What is Mind man Mr. Total must be. He gave over so much more than anybody else."

ASSISTANT EDITORSHIPS NOW OPEN TO COMPETITION

Calls for assistant editors were issued in the regular meeting of the Bucknellian staff held last Thursday afternoon. As a result of this call Milton C. Endres, '27, Albert M. Cooley, '28, and E. A. Thomas, '28, have volunteered to take up the work of the managing editorship, and Albert E. Brenner, '28, Clyde L. Roller, '27, and Vincent W. McHall, '28, have decided to take up the gathering and editing of news. Understudies for the feature department are yet lacking however.

These assistants will begin their work immediately in preparation for the change of staff that takes place in May.

Big Prices for Horses

When the racing and blooded stable owned by Sir Edward Hulton, wealthy English publisher, was recently sold at Newmarket, 74 horses, including brood animals as well as racers, brought $1,400,000. One animal alone brought $85,000, this being Straitlace, one-time winner of the Oaks Derby. Sir Edward's stock constituted one of the show stables of England, and the sale attracted many sportsmen.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Sigma Alpha Epsilon Defeats Delta Sigma

The opening games of the Bucknell interfraternity league were played Monday evening, January 18, with Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Delta Sigma meeting in the opening contest at 7 P. M., and Sigma Chi and Lambda Chi Alpha following in the next game at 8 o'clock. The opener was a division A contest, and the second was the first of the division B games.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, with a quintet composed mainly of Bucknell varsity squad players and freshmen cage luminaries, struck a tartar in the Delta Sigma five, the S. A. Es. winning only after a bitter struggle. The final score was 31-19. The first half of the game was close throughout. "Johnny" Howard, of the "Demies," scored the first point of the new season by caging a foul. Coates and Frable counted from the court for the same team, which went into the lead 5 to 0. The S. A. Es. soon retaliated and the half continued nip and tuck, ending 14-11 in their favor.

A barrage of field goals in the final period decided the contest for the S. A. Es., their superior condition enabling them to come out on top. Frable shone for the "Demies," with five field goals, while "Slim" Bach had a quartet of two-pointers for the winners.

Alpha Chi Mu Beats Phi Lambda Theta

The Phi Lambda Theta and Alpha Chi Mu quintet worked out against each other on Thursday evening, in the first contest of the evening, the Alpha Chi Mu team winning 16-7.

Neither team showed good basketball, both attempting impossible long shots. Ragged teamwork on the part of both frees resulted in few close shots at the basket. Several members of each team played well individually. Gettens scored seven points for the winners and Gamble three. Elbrey and Bernhaut counted for six of their team's seven points. The summaries:

Lambda Chis Lose To Sigma Chi Five

The Lambda Chi Alpha—Sigma Chi game was the upset of the evening. The Lambda Chis entered the game heavy favorites, but the attack of the "Sigs" could not be weathered and they succumbed 31-12.

The contest early resolved itself into a football game, and members of both teams were on the floor most of the time. McCleary, McCormick, Kazmilowicz, Bill Blaisdell, and "Tony" Kostos apparently thought they were in the gridiron again instead of the basketball court. Neal Blaisdell, with eight field goals, was the star of the evening. Colestock and McCleary played well for the Lambda Chi team. The summaries:

Kappa Gamma Men Outscore Beta Kappa

The Kappa Gamma midgets had a shooting forward in Timm, and defeated mainly by his excellent eye the rangier Beta Kappa team last Saturday afternoon 18 to 15. Both teams scored an equal number of field goals, but Kappa Gamma made more of its numerous opportunities from the fifteen-foot mark.

The attack of the Kappa Gammas centered solely about Timm, but every member of the Beta Kappa quintet shared in its field goal scoring.

Kappa Delta Rhos Win Non-Frat Game

The Non-Fraternity basketball quintet, with Peiffer their shooting guard, threw an unexpected scare when they held the K. D. R. basketeers 20 to 14. The final score does not indicate the character of the game. Neither does the half score of 8 to 12 in favor of K. D. R.

It was only in the last three minutes that the K. D. R. team drew ahead of the Non-Frats, on three pretty field goals. Up until this time only one or two points separated the contestants with the advantage first in favor of one team, then the other. Peiffer, of the losers, shot five double deckers, while Marley caged the same number for the Kappa Delta Rho team.

PRESIDENT HUNT MOVIE STAR; SURE SWINGS A WICKED AXE

The scenic photoplay "In Camp At The Gap" starring Dr. Emory W. Hunt was shown at the Orpheum Theatre Wednesday night, Jan. 6, 1926. The scenes of this screen production were laid in the wilds of the Canadian woods. The films were taken when Professor Nelson Davis visited Dr. Hunt at the latter's camp, a few years ago.

The several hundred feet of film of this picture were discovered recently by several seniors, who, sensing the value of such a novelty, thought it worth showing. The management of the Orpheum consented to show the films.

The picture, although lasting but less than five minutes, showed about a half-dozen scenes of "Prexy" slinging the old axe, pulling the end of a cross-cut saw, carrying a water pail, shouldering a shot gun, and other activities. "Prexy" was the centering figure in each scene. He wore a distinguishable white sweater.

This picture of lumber camp scenes shows "Prexy" Hunt in a new role, and it forced many a chuckle from the audience.

Phi Gamma Deltas Beat Kappa Sigmas

In the second game played Tuesday night Phi Gamma Delta won over the Kappa Sigma cagers by a 27 to 11 score. The game like that earlier in the evening was slow and did not produce much in the way of interesting basketball, although both teams flashed brilliantly at times. The "Fijis" were fortunate in having Rigg, Seiler, and Davies in their lineup and this trio, because of their previous workouts with the Bison varsity and freshman teams, were most troublesome to the Kappa Sigs.

The Kappa Sigma team played its best basketball in the first half, which ended 8-7 in its favor. The Phi Gamma Deltas came back strong in the second and third periods, however, and counted two pointers from all over the court. Davies and Seiler shared scoring honors with four field goals apiece. "Gus" Shorts played best for the losers. The lineup and summary:

"Where is the car?" demanded Mrs. Diggs.

"Dear me!" ejaculated Professor Diggs. "Did I take the car out?"

"You certainly did. You drove it to town."

"How odd! I remember now that after I got out I turned around to thank the gentleman who gave me the lift and wondered where he had gone."

PAN-HELLENIC DANCE HELD AT THE "SEM"

New this year was the Pan-Hellenic ten dance given to all freshmen girls and all other new girls in the Women's College on Friday afternoon, January 15, from 3:30 to 5:30. No men were invited, because it is hoped to introduce a similar dance during Silence Week, in the rushing season, so that all new girls may come in contact with the organization before rushing starts.

Irene Bell, '26, supplied the jazz for the afternoon. Mrs. R. H. Rivenburg, and Acting Dean Amelia E. Clark were hostesses, pouring tea when refreshments were served. Louise Matthews, '26, president of Pan-Hellenic, had charge of the dance.

PLAN REJUVENATION OF DECREPIT LIZZIES

Dilapidated cars are expected to disappear from the campus at Washington State College as the result of that institution's offering special courses in rehabilitation for a fee to all student owners of cars. The wrecks so popular lately with students not particular whether they get there or not were the motive for the new course, it is said.—Automobile Daily News.

Decorate yourself with the degree of P. A.

THAT means "Pipa Amoroso" in the Latin, or "pipe-lover" in plain campus English. P. A. has certainly endeared a pipe to more men than any other letters in the smoke-alphabet. Because Prince Albert lets a fellow smoke all he wants to!—and makes him want to!

Cool as the stare of a marble Venus. Sweet as the approach of vacation. Fragrant as spring blossoms. Think up your own similes, Fellows. You will when you pick P. A. and a jimmy-pipe for permanent roommates. Prince Albert is great tobacco, and that's not blah.

Get yourself a tidy red tin of Prince Albert today. Fill the bowl of that old jimmy-pipe to the brim and borrow a match. Then you're set for some great smoke-sessions, as sure as you're a foot high.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

BUCKNELL "ON THE AIR" WITH CAMPUS SERENADERS

Station WJBQ, Bucknell University, was on the air Friday evening, January 14, for the first time. The experiment proved a successful one and much is expected of the school as a radio broadcasting station. Jack Gardner's "Campus Serenaders" did well in opening the station, and received many compliments on their efforts from those who tuned in on the station.

Thomas Lewis, '28, was attacked by bronchitis last week. Although not compelled to go to bed, he had to remain indoors for several days. He made good use of his time by studying for the examinations.

* * * *

Herbert R. Smith, '29, of Attleboro, Massachusetts, left Tuesday for his home. "Herb" will continue his studies next semester at Brown University which is only a short distance from his home.

* * * *

Donald Diehl, '29, went to his home in Danville last week to recuperate from the effects of the first two days of examinations. Don claims that most examinations are a nuisance and ought to be done away with as quickly as possible.

* * * *

"Jack" McLure, '29, came down to the Beta Kappa house the other evening, attired in a full dress suit, saying that he was ready to take out the ashes. "Jack" told us later that he expected to go along with the Glee Club to Mifflinburg.

* * * *

No more studying will be done by Kenneth Moyle, '27. Last week he installed a radio receiving set in his room, and is now listening in on every station in the country. He is greatly pleased with the program broadcast by our own station, WJBQ.

* * * *

Charles Farrow, '26, has decided to enter the teaching profession upon his graduation in June. He has applied for a position on the teaching staff at Robert College, Constantinople. If he does not secure this position, he will probably enter some phase of Y. M. C. A. work either in this country or in the foreign field.

Bucknell is making some rapid strides forward in the field of advertising itself. The radio broadcasting station is already a reality. Posters advertising both the regular session and the Summer School are in circulation in the mails. The Registrar has also placed an order for Bucknell calendars, which will be used for the same purpose.

Ecuador Closes All Universities; Too Many Professional Men

All universities in Ecuador were closed by Governmental decree on August 11 last. The universities are located at Quito, Guayaquil, Cuenca and Loja. R. H. de Lambert, secretary of the United States Legation at Quito, in a communication to the United States Bureau of Education, says that for many years there has been discontent with the so-called superior education in Ecuador.

"It has been most respectable," he says, "to study for the degree of Doctor of Law or Doctor of Medicine, and although many efforts have been made by Congress and otherwise to make the courses more difficult and have the candidates for degrees more thoroughly prepared, the degrees still have remained too easy of attainment. The result is that the country is flooded with doctors, the majority of whom are unable to earn a living at their profession and many of whom do actual harm by attempting to practice a profession for which they are not fully prepared.

"One of the items on a program for the present regime was elimination of superior education and the spread of primary education. Therefore it was no great surprise when the decree closing the universities was published. The decree states that the universities of the country are to be closed temporarily. There is no explanation of the term 'temporary,' but it is the general belief that the Ecuadorian universities will remain closed at least several years if the present intentions of the Administration are carried out."

GERMAN STUDENTS GRATEFUL FOR HELP

Consider Money Given a Loan; Repaying It by Making Fund To Help Other Students

A note from the director of the German Students Co-operative Association concerning the work of the association and the help that was given to German students by the students of other countries immediately after the close of the war contains some very interesting information on conditions in that country.

In opening his message Dr. Schairer says that during the period from 1921 to 1923 students of many nations contributed $400,000 for the relief of German students and that without this gift it is probable that many of the German universities would have been compelled to close. He says that the students of Germany have decided to consider this gift as a loan and that the return of the money will be made by means of annual student contributions to the International Student Trust Fund to be used to meet emergencies in all parts of the world.

Dr. Schairer then takes up an account of what has happened in the German educational institutions since the war:

"As a measure of self-protection after the war, the students of Germany had organized a federation, the Deutsche Studentenschaft, representing all the 90,000 undergraduates of the 48 universities. The financial aid from other lands made it possible for the federation to establish the German Students Co-Operative Association to provide the ways and means whereby a student with scanty financial resources could earn an education.

"The main function of the German Students Co-Operative Association has, therefore, been its employment service. During the last four years it has provided jobs for more than 100,000 students for an average period of from 6 to 12 months. These are not part time jobs, done on the side; they are full time jobs, undertaken during the summer or at night, or during a year's interval in the college career; they include jobs in the mines, in factories, in manual labor of all kinds.

"Now, that may not seem so unusual to the American, accustomed to student employment. But it is a very extraordinary development in Germany, under the old traditions of German student life, manual labor was never even considered. Now most of the students are working to support themselves for at least part of their educational career.

"But that is only one item in the work of the German Students Co-Operative Association. By means of student cafeterias and co-operative shops, it has reduced the cost of living for the undergraduate nearly 50 per cent. Each student is given a medical examination, and a doctor's supervision is provided where necessary. Fellowships have been provided for 250. Mutual loan societies grant annually to deserving students loans amounting to $475,000. The association has made it possible for 26,000 students every year to secure an education, who otherwise would be denied it.

"So you can see that an important development has grown out of that act of generosity on the part of the students of the world. The association is now a permanent concern with yearly receipts of nearly $1,000,000. The whole German Republic contributes to it's work. In comparison with American conditions the German student needs are still very great; there are, for example, about 25,000 students who receive only $25 a month. But at least it has been made possible for the work of education to continue."

Staten Island Planning College For Students of Small Means

Staten Island will have in Wagner College a full-fledged college with authority from the State to award degrees, if a campaign to start on Jan. 29 is successful. The Board of Regents refuse this permission to institutions which have an endowment fund of less than $50,000.

Wagner, founded at Rochester in 1883, and located for the last seven years on a fifty-seven-acre tract on Serpentine Road, Grymes Hill, S. I., has at present a property and invested fund of $880,000. Between Jan. 29 and Feb. 8, it will attempt to raise $500,000.

Non-sectarian, though founded by Lutherans, Wagner was induced to come to Staten Island by the Chamber of Commerce there. Besides the college grades it includes a preparatory course.

Says Standard Is High

According to its President, Dr. A. H. Holthusen, its academic standards rank with those of colleges of arts and sciences in many universities. Its course is at present confined to "liberal" studies, and includes no instruction in engineering, law or medicine.

The location of the campus, one of the finest, its officers assert, is on a high hill looking out across the lower bay to the skyline of Manhattan on one side and the open Atlantic beyond the Narrows on the other.

The present student body numbers eighty. There are eleven full-time teachers and three part-time.

Its tuition rate is $400, which, according to the college authorities, includes board, lodging, light and heat. Other colleges say in their bulletins that prospective students should be prepared to spend from $800 to $1,200 a year beside their tuition.

The name Wagner was given the college in appreciation of a gift from John C. Wagner, a Rochester business man, in memory of his deceased son.

Three Generations Of Bells Attend B.U.

Forty Members of This Family Have Been Here as Trustees, Teachers, and Students

Though there are many colleges in America that are older than Bucknell, it is doubtful if there are many families in America that have furnished more officials, teachers, and students to one college than the Bell family has given to Bucknell. For three generations the sons and daughters of this sturdy family have been prominently associated with the affairs of this University. Nearly forty members of the family have in some way had a Bucknell connection.

Edward Bell was the founder of this family. He was a man of considerable means and came to America some time prior to the Revolution, settling in what later became Huntingdon County, Pa. He married Mary Ann Martin, daughter of a notable early Presbyterian minister, the Rev. James Martin, who founded the Presbytery in Huntingdon. This couple had nine children.

Two of these became associated with Bucknell (then the University at Lewisburg) very early in its history. Martin Bell became a curator in 1846 and served in that capacity until 1872. The curators were a body of men that might be called a suppementary board of trustees. The body was composed of men of influence and standing, but had no control of the University. The function of this body was advisory rather than executive.

Martin Bell is interesting because he was the first man in this country to bank an iron furnace on Sunday. He was an iron master, with furnaces for melting ores. It was then commonly believed that it was impossible to manufacture iron except by continuous operation of the furnace, seven days a week. But Martin Bell was keen for the observance of the Sabbath. He banked his fires, and was a successful iron master in spite of it. His furnace in Blair County got the name of Sabbath Rest. Another of his furnaces he called the Mary Ann furnace in memory of his mother.

The second son of Edward Bell to interest himself in the affairs of the little university was the notable Adie Ryle Bell, D. D. He became a trustee in 1849 and served as one until 1882. From 1877 to 1882 he was treasurer of the Board of Trustees. He was president of that body from 1874 to 1879.

Although only two of the nine children of Edward Bell were connected with Bucknell, six of these nine children had children who in some way became associated with Bucknell, these children totaling nineteen. Among them were Edward Bell, ex-'55, who in 1847 helped to "move" the college from the old Baptist church up the Hill to the Academy. Others were John Pierce Bell, ex-'58; and Richard McKnight Bell, ex-'00, who was killed in the Civil War. They were brothers, sons of David Bell and Margaret Pierce McKnight Bell. They were all the children in that family.

The four children of Martin Bell, of Sabbath Rest, all went to Bucknell. They were Annie Bell-Stubbs, Inst., who was a nurse in the Civil War; Clara Bell, Inst., '65; Margaret Bell-Dean, Inst., '66; and Elizabeth Bell-Christy, Inst., '72.

Dr. Adie K. Bell's entire family also attended Bucknell. There were three children. They were Mary Bell-Wilson, Inst., '00; Ellen Bell-Roller, Inst., '06; and Judge Martin Bell, '60.

Elizabeth Bell and her husband William Dysart sent seven children to Bucknell. They were Alexander Dysart, ex-'57; Sarah E. Dysart, Inst., '57, who was a Civil War nurse; Florence Dysart, Inst., '65; Eliza Dysart-Taylor, Inst., ex-'59, whose husband was Dewitt C. Taylor, ex-'57; Margaret Dysart, Inst., ex-'59; Kate Dysart-Stewart, Inst., ex-'70; Wm. P. Dysart, Acad. '72.

John M. Bell sent his daughter, Ellen Bell-Stewart, Inst., ex-'57; and Samuel Bell sent his son Robert A., ex-'62, and his daughter, Bertha A. Bell, Inst., '83.

Sixteen children of the Bells of this generation came to Bucknell. Six of them were children of Edward Bell. They were Adie Kyle Bell, Acad. '03; Richard McKnight Bell, ex-'02; Edward Bell Jr., '00; Mary Bell, Inst., '04; Eliza Bell- Wood, '94, who married Dr. Joseph R. Wood, former assistant to the president of Bucknell; and Margaret Bell-Bentley, ex-'87. Martin Bell Christy, ex-'00, was another child of this generation. So were Eliza Bell-Hutchinson and Elizabeth Bell-Chandler. Both were daughters of Judge Martin Bell. The former was graduated from the College in 1900. The latter attended the Institute. Two sisters, Mary Bell Wilson-Mellor and Clara Wilson-Brown, of this same generation, attended the Institute. The latter belonged to the class of 1899. W. Calvin Roller, M. D., ex-'02, was the son of Ellen Bell Roller. Other Bell descendants at Bucknell were William Dysart Holliday, and his son Fleming Holliday; Mary Holliday, Inst., ex-'74; Elizabeth Bell Holliday, Inst., ex-'79; and Sarah Dysart Stewart, Inst., ex-'93.

Attending college at the present time is Richard Graham Wood, familiary known as "Cherry" Wood, of the class of 1928. His mother, Mrs. Joseph Wood, taught in the Institute for seven years. His uncle, Edward Bell, Jr., taught in the Academy for some time. His mother's cousin, now the widow of Judge John Dean, also taught in the Institute.

Col. Milton Opp, '58, Soldier and Lawyer

Though Admitted to Practice, He Was Killed E'er He Had Chance to Plead in Court

Among the names on the memorial tablet on the west wall of Commencement Hall is that of Colonel Milton Opp, who was graduated with the class of 1858, and killed six years later during the battle of the Wilderness. There were nine men in his forestring to note that these two roommate, Jesse Dean Cooper. It is interesting to note that these two roommates fought on opposite sides in the Civil War, and that Cooper is believed to be the only Bucknell man who fought on the Confederate side in that struggle.

Opp was a young man of unusual ability, as is shown by his rapid rise from a lieutenancy to a colonelcy. He had intended to become a lawyer. His roommate Cooper became one. In fact, young Opp did become a lawyer, though he never had an opportunity to practice law. He was killed before ever he had a chance.

Concerning Opp's admission to the bar, the Williamsport Sun's expansion lesse tells the following interesting story.

"In the annals of the Lycoming county bar there is no more beautiful incident than the story of how Milton Opp, a young law student, was admitted to practice on the eve of his departure for service in the Union army a few weeks after the opening of the Civil War, in which he was to win successive promotions to the rank of colonel, and finally fall mortally wounded at the battle of the Wilderness.

"Although he evidently never practiced the profession for which he had prepared himself, Colonel Opp, by his patriotic service and his heroic death, won for himself a place of honor in his profession.

"The story of how the young man became a member of the bar through the most unusual "admission" ceremony in the history of the county court, was given years ago by the late Henry Johnson, of this city, in a contribution to "Now and Then," which was published at Muncy by J. M. M. Gemerd.

Had Open Examination

"It was on Monday, April 22, 1861, that a committee, of which Mr. Johnson was a member, was called upon to examine Mr. Opp for admission to the bar. The committee was aware that he had volunteered for service and desired to qualify as an attorney before leaving for the front.

"Court was in session, but due to the war excitement and recruiting fervor few people were in the court room, and the committee decided on the unusual course of conducting the examination in open court.

"Mr. Opp was asked the customary question, 'What is law?' and gave a suitable answer.

"'He was then asked,' Mr. Johnson wrote, 'if his regard for the highest of all obligations of citizenship was so great that in obedience to its behest he had enlisted and intended an immediate departure for the army.'

"Upon an affirmative reply, the examining committee formally moved that the young man be admitted to the bar, the necessary papers were signed and the oath administered.

"Milton Opp then left for the war. He was commissioned a lieutenant of Company F, Eighty-Fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers, in October, 1861 and his manifest ability as a leader brought successive elevation to the ranks of captain, major, lieutenant-colonel and colonel.

Less Than 29 Years

"He was leading his men in a charge at the Wilderness, May 6, 1864 when he was wounded. Three days later he died. He was then not quite twenty-nine years of age.

"Colonel Opp was born in Moreland township, a son of Phillip and Hannah Opp. As a youth he gave indications of interest in an education.

His father discussed the boy's future with Henry Johnson, who was then practicing law at Muncy. Mr. Johnson advised that he be given a classical education and "permitted to follow the bent of his own mind."

"He studied at Muncy, at Bucknell University, where he organized and led a glee club, and at the Poughkeepsie Law School, where he graduated in 1860."

Earl R. Bartholomew, '12

Williamsport High School basketball teams have made enviable records during the six years Earl R. Bartholomew has been coaching. Bartholomew came to Williamsport in 1919. Three years Williamsport has sent teams to the state cage finals at State College, finishing as runner-up twice. Last spring, with the state championship in its grasp, the team lost out when Uniontown staged a great second half rally.

Williamsport has held the District Four championship for two consecutive years.

In 1922, Williamsport defeated Roman Catholic High in the University of Pennsylvania tournament, Philadelphia newspapers proclaiming the team the best high school team which had ever entered the tournament. High had to drop out of the tournament on account of its league schedule, or it would have won the championship easily.

Williamsport's great defensive playing has een an important factor in the long string of victories chalked up. Only three opponents in six years have scored more than thirty points. Bartholomew is credited with developing the defense used so largely by high school teams in this section of the country, being one of the first users of a five man defense in Pennsylvania.

Since Bartholomew became coach, high school teams have played 151 games, winning 118 and losing only thirty-three.

Here is a summary of season results since Bartholomew commenced to coach:

Year	Captain	G.	W.	L.
1919-20	Trayaer	21	18	3
1920-21	Emick	22	20	2
1921-22	Mahaffey	27	21	6

Mrs. T. J. Cross, Inst. '86, Passes Away

Mrs. Thos. J. Cross, wife of the Rev. T. J. Cross, D. D., ex-'91, passed away last Thursday evening, January 7th at 10 o'clock at her home in the parsonage of the Chelsea Baptist church, Atlantic City, N. J.

Mrs. Cross had been seriously ill for the past five weeks, heart trouble being the direct cause of her death. The faithful service of attending physicians and three nurses helped to make her last days comfortable. She was unconscious for the last several days and when the end came, the members of the immediate family were with her. She suffered no pain and the end was beautifully peaceful.

Surviving are her husband, Dr. T. J. Cross, her daughter, Mrs. V. B. Smith, and one son, Spurgeon, both of whom live in Ventnor, N. J.

Mrs. Cross (nee Katherman) was the daughter of Emanuel and Josephine Katherman and was born in Lewisburg, Oct. 19, 1869. She received her early education in the public schools and was graduated from Bucknell Institute in 1886.

In June, 1892, she was married to the Rev. Mr. Cross and immediately went to Atlantic City to reside. She was always interested in christian work, and she taught a large Bible class of women. Her cheery manner, her keen sense of humor and her direct influence for good, all combined to make a personality that will live long in the memory of those who knew her.

he deceased is the fourth and last member of her family to die within the past four years. They were her father, her sister, Mrs. Wm. P. Dieffenderfer, Inst, '59, and her brother, Dr. Frank Katherman, '18.

The final service was held in the Chelsea Baptist church, where she lay surrounded by nearly one hundred floral tributes, and where hundreds gathered to pay their final note of love and respect. The interment was private and was made in Pleasantville, N. J.

Verna Whitaker, '11, Marries

Miss Verna A. Whitaker, '11, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whitaker and the Rev. George T. Hillman, pastor of Trinity M. E. Church, were married in Millville at noon on January 20. The ceremony was performed at the Whitaker home, Third and Main streets, and was witnessed by half hundred guests.

Following the wedding a luncheon was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Hillman departed for a wedding journey. They refused to reveal their destination. Upon their return they will reside at the Trinity parsonage on South Second street.

The Rev. E. C. Sunfield, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Bancroft, an uncle of the bride, was the officiating clergyman. He was assisted by the Rev. J. B. Kulp, of Millville.

U. P. Alumni To Have Voice In University Management

The University of Pennsylvania, like practically all other colleges of any age, has had to consider the question of alumni participation in the management of the institution. Alumni of all colleges, who are constantly being appealed to for funds to help run their alma maters, are demanding that in return for their support they be given some voice in the direction of affairs. Pennsylvania, which is now at the start of a long drive to raise forty-five millions, has found it expedient to decide this matter in favor of the alumni. The following item concerning the situation is taken from the Penn News, issued by U. P. in connection with the big drive:

Carrying out their policy to provide for a close official contact with the alumni for their better understanding and mutual co-operation in the handling of their respective problems, the trustees of the University of Pennsylvania have invited the president of the General Alumni Society to attend the trustees' meetings in the future.

Decision to invite the alumni head to be present at their meetings was made by the trustees at their meeting on December 21 and was incorporated in a formal resolution which provides that the Alumni Society president shall have the privilege of participating in discussions and the consideration of the various University projects, but without the right to vote.

As a result of the trustees' action, Dr. J. Norman Henry, present head of the general alumni organization, will now attend the trustees' meetings and will be the first man occupying that office to enjoy the privilege.

Dr. Henry who was graduated from the College in 1893 and from the Medical School in 1895, was active in undergraduate activities while a student and has consistently maintained his interest in the University since his graduation. As a result, his attendance at the meetings of the Board of Trustees insures the presence of an alumni representative who is extremely well versed in the University's affairs.

In addition, Dr. Henry, through his close contact with the alumni and his familiarity with the activities of the Alumni Society, is particularly qualified to present to the trustees the alumni viewpoint on the various University projects.

Now we are sure that pro and con are opposites since we have the words progress and congress to prove it.

Wolfe House Suspect Paroled After Trial

Admits Breaking and Entering With Intent to Commit Larceny of Money

Eugene Catherman, the boy who was arrested at the Wolfe House, January 13, appeared in court Saturday, January 16, before Judge Miles I. Potter, and plead guilty to a charge of breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny. The court suspended sentence and placed the youthful offender on parole for a year.

Catherman was caught by local police officer William Murtha as he was about to enter the Wolfe House, Wednesday evening, January 13. After some questioning by Officer Murtha and others he admitted that he had come there in search of money. At a caring before Frederic E. Bower, Justice of the Peace, held the next day, he was also charged with entering the cigar store of George I. Flick with felonious intent. He plead guilty to both of the charges and was held for court.

During the period of parole, which Judge Potter set as one year, Catherman will be required to make weekly reports to the local probation officer, Oscar I. Liddick, and to tell how he has spent his time and where he has worked. He will also be required to pay the cost of the prosecution of the case.

BAPTISTS HOLD FORUM ON CREEDLESS CHURCH

An open forum service, in which students from the University took a leading part, took place of the regular evening sermon at the Baptist church Sunday evening. Professor Charles M. Bond of the department of religious education acted as chairman for the discussion, the subject of which was "Entire Freedom of Belief, or the Creedless Church."

The scripture reading was given by Clifford Wester, '26, and prayer was offered by Barton Dakin, '27. Both of these young men are studying for the ministry. The subject was introduced in a ten-minute talk by the Rev. Dr. Raymond M. West, '89, pastor of the church and also student pastor. Following his discussion questions or remarks from the floor were in order, floor speakers being limited to three minutes. Among those who spoke or addressed questions to the chair, who in turn addressed them to Dr. West, were Professor White, A. H. Rawlinson, '29, R. H. Edwards, '26, H. B. Higby, '27, Mary Harrar, '26, Maud P. Keister, '26, and Mildred Fox, '27.

The forum discussion, although something new in the history of the local church, was very successful and the responses were freely given. Many of the students, especially, expressed their desire that similar services be held frequently.

Among Important Facts

Venus is both cold and slow, astronomers claim her day is as long as her year, and her daytime temperature just above freezing.

"HOW MANY POPS?"

No, Mamie, we don't want to know whether you're a Mormon, nor is this a physics quiz in the strength of corks—we were merely referring to the Belle Hop Popularity Contest which has been popping up rather frequently since the announcement in the last issue of our local digest of Bucknell wit.

It is evident from the large number of inquiries that the rules of the contest, although extremely simple, are unknown to a large part of the student body. Hence we have agreed to take the role of Hoyle on behalf of our numerous contemporaries and to expand and elucidate.

Every copy of the next issue of the Belle Hop will contain "One Pop for Popularity." It is understood that the campus sheiks will be barred, (also the half Nelson and headlock) and the competition will be limited to the "Seminary." At the present stage we observe that every one of the sororities thinks it has the title cinched. A great deal of of discussion, as usual, is taking place on the Hill and the fraternities are placing bets on their various choices.

By the way—as we started out to say—there will be no limit to the voting; age, color, sex, or otherwise. Just cut the "Pop" out of the next issue, fill out the line with the name of "that wonderful girl" and send by mail, female, or special messenger, to the Contest Editor of the Belle Hop.

ceable in Williamsport at the time of his matriculation at Bucknell, entering from the Lewisburg High School, he has been so long associated with Williamsport and its athletics that he certainly belongs in this story.

"Bart' was a sterling end on the Bucknell varsity football team during his senior and junior years. Fast, brainy, and a sure tackle, he rated with the best wingmen in the state. It was "Bart" who brought more than one ambitious backfield opponent to grief as he aspired for yardage around the Bucknell end. During his junior year the later Williamsport High coach did not attain great success, as victories and defeats go. The fighting team for 1911 which worked with machine like precision and accuracy, was forced to submit to several lashings only because 1911 was a great football year in Pennsylvania. The Indians that year defeated Bucknell 39-0. During his senior year the team had a better season and "Bart') gained a name for himself. In addition to playing varsity football he was a member of his class grid team during his sophomore year.

"A clever courtman, too, was 'Bart,' for in basketball his grid speed served him in good stead. His best besses his accuracy from the fifteen foot mark. As a foul shooter he was without an equal. His ability in this department of the cage game is not unknown to many Williamsport fans who have seen "Bart" perform with a basketball in the "High" court. Shooting them with an overhead motion, unlike many of the foul shooters today, he had a dead eye for the basket. The Bison cage team during 1911 had an up and off season, winning its first five games and dropping the last six. "Bart" played class basketball in his first two years at Bucknell and was captain of the team during his sophomore year.

"Bartholomew also played class baseball during his freshman year. His other activities at the school include 1'Agenda board, toast at the sophomore class banquet and sophomore class banquet, and sophomore class banquet and sophomore class banquet, and sophomore class banquet, and sophomore class banquet,

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Mose Quinn and Lloyd Trimmer, '28 were guests at dinner Saturday noon.

R. M. Sheddon of Phiadelphia, was a week-end guest. He is a brother of "Tiger" Sheddon, '26.

"Goat" Davis, 23, visited the chapter during the week-end.

"Eddy" Jones, ex-'27, visited the chapter for several days. He is now playing with Challis' orchestra in Syracuse, N. Y.

The Fiji basketball team is rounding into fine shape, and manager "Abe" Gaskill predicts that it will be a strong contender for the championship. The team has had little practice, but has won by easy margins the two games it has played.

KAPPA SIGMA

Brother "Tom" Horan, '23, was a guest at the house on Saturday, January 30.

Hoffman and Dare of the Albright basketball team were guests at the house Saturday and Sunday.

Plans are being made for a "Sem" dance to be held at the house next Saturday. Noble and his orchestra will be the entertainers.

The basketball team is rounding into good form with the help of the consistent but heavy work of Hollinger and Shorts.

Preparations are being made for the district conclavs of Kappa Sigma which will be held at the chapter house March 5 and 6. Brothers Decker, Ferguson, and Wyckoff as well as the representatives of the seven chapters of the third district will be in attendance. Alpha Phi chapter is glad to have the honor and privilege of entertaining the conclave this year.

DELTA SIGMA

Many of the boys were away between semesters, practically half the house spending the week-end elsewhere. In the meantime the rest of the chapter was not inactive. A "Vic" dance was given Saturday afternoon. Ten couples danced to the music of Paul Whiteman. Whitey Kauffman, George Olsen, and other prominent orchestras. Mr. and Mrs. George Faint chaperoned.

Founders' Day will be celebrated this Saturday. Several alumni are planning to return for the play, "Cappy Ricks," which will be given Friday evening in Bucknell Hall, for the Fraternity basketball games, and for the Founders' Day banquet to be held in the Cameron House Friday evening, February 5.

ALPHA CHI MU

Reverend and Mrs. Frank B. Everitt, and daughter, Miss Helen Everitt, '26, were guests of the fraternity at dinner on Sunday, January 31.

The manager of the Albright basketball team, Paul Price, who is a senior at Albright, visited one of his friends at the fraternity and remained for dinner on Saturday, January 30.

On Saturday Mr. Samuel Gittins, of Kingston, Pa., unexpectedly dropped in at the house to visit his son, John Gittins, '28.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

Plans have been completed for a formal "Sem" dance for Saturday, February 20. The Blue Band will play.

Ross Hagerman, ex-'26, was a recent week-end visitor.

Theta U's basketball team lost a close game to Bloomsburg Normal's reserve team last Friday night at Bloomsburg. The score was 31 to 25.

"Bunny" Learn, '26, has installed a radio set, so that the house may hear WJBU.

"Red" Heather, ex-'28, was a dinner guest on Monday, February 1.

KAPPA GAMMA

The Kappa Gamma fraternity basketball team is practicing hard for its second Interfraternity league game. This will be against the Sigma Chi five, Saturday night, February 6.

Harry Spranca, ex-'26, now a student at Franklin and Marshall College was a visitor at the house a few days ago.

PI DELTA EPSILON

The regular monthly meeting of Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity, will be held at the Phi Gamma Delta house, Thursday evening. The fraternity's editorial contest, which it expects to carry out during the second semester, will be the main topic under consideration. The rules of the contest, qualifications and the closing dates will probably be available for publication next week.

PHI MU ALPHA, SINFONIA

Sinfonia met in Professor Norris' studio in the School of Music Monday evening and considered the drawing up of a program of activities for the second semester. The fraternity is planning to have at least two public recitals during the term and the first is to be presented in the Baptist church during the month of March.

The regular meeting night of Sinfonia was changed from Monday to Tuesday and the meetings will be held the first and third Tuesdays of each month at nine o'clock in the evening.

All College Sports Now Under Scrutiny

Carnegie Foundation to Inquire Whether Too Much Emphasis Is Put on Athletics

An unusually sober season of stock taking has followed the close of the 1925 football season. After the excitement over the Big Three games, the Dartmouth showing, the Red Grange episode, and the gridiron clash at the Tournament of Roses, college officials, coaches, faculties, zealous alumni, and serious devotees of amateur sport have begun to deliberate and to ask what it is all about.

Grievances, protests, criticisms, suggestions, and prophecies have been voiced on many sides over the so-called evil ways upon which the national college sport has fallen. On the other hand, high college officials have come valiantly to its defense.

January is inventory taking time, and this year the stock of college athletics will be thoroughly overhauled. The Carnegie Foundation of Teaching has undertaken the task of checking up the debit and credit balances of sport, which is in itself an indication of the importance and dignity to which the whole question has risen. A thorough survey of the situation will be conducted during 1926, and the conclusions of the foundation are awaited with keen interest.

Announcing at the recent meetings of the National Collegiate Athletic Association that this inquiry would be made by the Carnegie organization, Brig. Gen. Palmer E. Pierce, president of the N. C. A. A., remarked that his association had been formed just twenty years ago, when the playing rules of football needed revision, and expressed the opinion that the beginning of the second twenty years was an auspicious occasion for another accounting of the game and college sports in general.

The conclusions of the Carnegie Foundation investigators cannot be forecast, but it is thought not unlikely that their report will touch upon and perhaps propose remedies for certain practices that have already been much discussed. These include overemphasis by student bodies and the public upon football, scouting, proselytizing, coaching from the side lines, the menace of professional football and baseball, paid coaching, and the tendency to treat the whole matter more as a business than a sport.

That tremendous stress is placed on football every year cannot be gainsaid. The crowds that see single big games, 50,000, 75,000 and even 85,000, are greater than the populations of many cities. Whether this emphasis is an exaggeration remains a matter of dispute. Previous expressions of opinion by Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation, indicate that his organization regards it as out of proportion. In his annual report issued a year ago in March, he said:

The Place of Athletics.

"Today the outside activities of the college overshadow and run counter to the intellectual life. Athletics, in large measure, professional in its methods and organization, fills a larger place in the eyes of students and even the public than any one other interest. No student in the undergraduate life of one of our university colleges should expect to receive the recognition or appreciation given to a successful football player.

"No reasonable man will object to the employment of these activities—for example, athletics—in their due perspective. But when they are allowed to dominate the intellectual life of the colleges they become abuses. The paid coach, the professional organization of college athletics, the demoralization of students by the use of extravagant sums of money, constitute a reproach to American colleges and those who govern them."

On the other side stand President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth and President John Grier Hibben of Princeton. The former told the delegates to the N. C. A. A. meeting that the benefits greatly outweighed the evils and that, on the whole, the situation was on a healthy basis, working no detriment to the intellectual purposes of the college. Dr. Hibben told the Princeton alumni that the only protests about the overemphasis on football came from those outside of the colleges.

Meanwhile, all interested in college athletics have expressed themselves as eager to see what data the Carnegie survey can collect that will tend to establish the facts one way or the other. William Church Osborne, speaking on the same occasion as Dr. Hibben, said that the only trouble with last year's Princeton team was that there were too many Phi Beta Kappa men on it.

That the colleges are alarmed over the inroads of professional football and baseball on undergraduates is generally evident, but this situation promises to remedy itself. Professor James P. Richardson of Dartmouth College told the N. C. A. A. delegates that at least five members of the Green team had been approached with offers to join pro teams last fall at the close of the college season and play in the South, even as Red Grange and Ernie Nevers are doing. The story is told that one star who could not afford to pass by a very tempting offer was only dissuaded when alumni promised him an income that would equal what football promoters offers at the end of his college days.

The cure, however, seems in sight. The officials of the New York pro football team are making a determined fight to bar from the professional league all college players who have not completed their courses. Another curb was adopted by the American Association of Football Coaches when it ruled that no person connected with pro football, as player, official or coach, should enter the organization.

Similar remedies are contemplated regarding baseball. A request will be made on behalf of the N. C. A. A. to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball, to stop the practice of scouts offering professional contracts to college undergraduates. The colleges in California have already made such a request, saying that professional invasions have wrecked varsity teams.

More important in the baseball situation, most colleges feel, is the question of playing for pay in the summer. This was the principal issue raised by Professor Richardson in his report to the N. C. A. A. The issue involved is keeping the college amateur from the professional taint and yet not drawing too fine a line. Professor Richardson pointed with approval to the position taken by the Harvard Advisory Committee. Charges of professionalism who play on hotel or town baseball have been made against college men teams, or are active in the game as camp counselors, or give athletic instruction in any other form. The Harvard position is quoted as being that such participation does not impair their amateur standing.

The question of scouting has its proponents and its opponents also. Coach Roper of Princeton denounces it. Others defend it as practiced today, since there is no secrecy about the presence of a rival representative. The tendency, it appears, will be to minimize the practice.

Highly paid coaching has long been a moot question and probably will receive about as much attention from the Carnegie Foundation as any that will be considered. Harvard has already taken a stand to pare down the salaries that coaches command. On this subject the Carnegie Foundation has expressed itself before. A survey made in the South, which was covered in the Foundation's report issued in 1924, declared that the "athletic coach, and in particular the football coach, sets the standard of the whole system of intercollegiate sports and is responsible for many of its most demoralizing features. It recommends that the coach should be a member of the faculty, employed for the full season and elected by the faculty or other college authorities; and that his salary should be paid by the college and not by alumni or other organizations, and should be in no wise contingent upon winning certain critical games."

This report alleged that the influence of alumni in demanding winning teams was one of the greatest contributing factors to athletic evils.

The charge that sport is treated more as a business than a pastime was partly answered at the N. C. A. A. meetings when a resolution was adopted against colleges participating in games that have a predominatingly commercial setting, such as post-season intersectional games. The general impression seems to be that building huge stadia and accommodating alumni, even if they number high in the thousands, is only a natural and

LIKES THE LIBERALITY OF AMERICAN COLLEGES

American colleges have the foundations for a much more liberal culture than those abroad, according to Miss Helen Darbishire, exchange professor at Wellesley, from Oxford. But in spite of her approval of the methods pursued here Miss Darbishire hastened to defend her alma mater by explaining that although the culture could be more liberal it necessarily was more superficial than the instruction received at Oxford.

"The students in my classes at Wellesley are keen and eager to learn and have many interests," said Miss Darbishire, "but I notice that their information is superficial. This is not to be wondered at when they study so many things. At Oxford we are much more limited but we thoroughly understand a subject when we have finished.

"There is a delightful interest in the newer sciences here; many are well established here which have not been considered at home. The conservatism at Oxford has such disadvantages, for they are slow to embrace a change. However, when they do it is done in a wholehearted fashion. On the whole, though, the American colleges are more open-minded to newer subjects than at Oxford. It was interesting to me to find the Bible studied so thoroughly at Wellesley, whereas, at Oxford, it is most indifferently engaged in."

Presentation of Classics In Modern Dress Popular

Inspired by the much-discussed New York presentation of Hamlet in modern clothes, by Horace Liveright, several student groups are venturing the experiment. The Little Theater of Dallas, Texas, and a dramatic class at the University of California, Southern Branch, are planning such productions.

Meanwhile the Roister Doister Dramatic Society of Massachusetts Agricultural College has selected Oliver Goldsmith's play "She Stoops to Conquer" for presentation in modern dress. —The New Student.

U. P. DRIVE FOR "Y" FUNDS REACHES $438,207 MARK

The campaign fund of the University of Pennsylvania Christian Association worked nearer the $750,000 goal when additional subscriptions announced at the luncheon of team captains and workers on January 28, at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel brought the total already pledged to $438,207, an increase of $35,410 over the day before.

The meeting, attended by some 300 persons, was enthusiastic, each individual resolving to shoulder the burden of the campaign and do all in his power during the remaining three days of the drive to help raise the quota.

Representative Benjamin H. Ludlow, of Montgomery County, urged each worker to do his utmost to make the campaign a success. He emphasized the great need of a Christian Association building at the University, and laid particular stress upon the splendid work the organization was doing among the students.

Comparing the university to a big town composed of thousands of young men and women, the speaker said "spiritual equipment is needed to gird those young men and women so that they may go into the world better prepared."

Among the various denominations supporting the drive the contributions have been proportioned as follows: Episcopal, $13,500; Baptist, $10,801; Methodist, $4343; Presbyterian, $3620; Lutheran, $2800 and Reformed, $2000.

JUNIOR 'PROM' WEEK AT YALE SPORTLESS

No Hockey, Swimming, or Basketball Events Scheduled; Festivities Limited To Two Days

Yale's junior promenade committee announced for this year a sportless promenade week. No hockey, swimming, or basketball events have been scheduled. This is one of the most radical departures from the usual program in the seventy-five years since the junior promenade was inaugurated.

Several years ago the faculty cut the days given up to the festivties from five to three. This year the festivities will be crowded practically into two days, Monday, February 8, and Tuesday, the ninth.

The Sheffield scientific school receptions, the Glee Club concert, the promenade and the closed dances at "Sheff" are all scheduled for Monday.

The only general event on Tuesday will be the annual production by the dramatic association, which will present "Out of Luck," by Tom Cushing, which had its premiere in New York last month. There will be dinner dances on Tuesday night at practically all the fraternity houses.

RAILROAD UNDERTAKES EDUCATING COLLEGE MEN

The value of the college-trained man to modern transportation is a problem which is receiving serious study today by many railroad officials.

In order to lay a groundwork of the principles of railway transportation upon which college students can base an intelligent opinion of future railway problems as they may arise, the Illinois Central Railroad is conducting an educational campaign this year in the college publications along its lines. These are in the form of monthly statements appearing over the name of C. H. Markham, president of the company. The first of this series follows, in part:

"The process of civilization has been largely a struggle against the primeval limitations of time and place. As transportation has developed, life has been broadened; more has been put into it; its possibilities have been increased. The difference between ancient and modern conditions of life is mainly a difference in character of transportation.

"Now, by means of improved transportation, our standards of living have been improved. We can intelligently and profitably specialize in production. We can do better work and more of it and get more for it. We can exchange our products for the products of all parts of the world as we need them; they are easier to get, and we are better able to pay for them than ever before."

Students Shave in Classroom.

Fighting 'Dolling' by Co-Eds

The principle of equal rights for men has been established at the University of California. Professor Ira P. Cross recently expressed annoyance at the time taken from studies by feminine students powdering their countenances. He said boys had an equal privilege and rights if they desired them.

Two men appeared next day with shaving equipment and when Professor Cross started his lecture they lathered and shaved. Professor Cross led the applause, saying that if they would make their names known to him—he was unable to recognize them under the lather—he would see that they received a grade of "A" for the term.

TEMPLE HONORS FOUNDER

Simplicity and solemnity marked the observation of Founder's Day at Temple University on Monday, February 15, the first Founder's Day since the death of Dr. Russell H. Conwell, famous educator and former head and founder of the university.

The event assumed the character of another memorial gathering in honor of Temple University's founder. Dr. Conwell died December 6, last. Chas. E. Beury, newly elected president, presided at the exercises. This was his first official appearance.

STUDENTS MUST JOIN UNION WHEN THEY CLEAN WINDOWS

Because of protests from professionals, University of Denver students who are earning their way through college by cleaning windows may be forced to join the International Building Employees' Union, Window-Cleaners' Division. The reason given for the protest is that the students are taking lower wages for their work.

WOMAN IS NEW HEAD OF YALE DINING HALLS

Miss Cora C. Colburn, who has accepted the position of director of the Yale University dining halls, has arrived in New Haven to take up her official duties. Miss Colburn was formerly head of the department of institution economics and director of the commons at the University of Chicago.

University officers said lately that educators in the past five years had come to realize the responsibility placed upon them to give attention to the health as well as to the intellectual training of their students.

University authorities said that they hope to work out at Yale a plan by which a few highly selected graduate students may prepare themselves in the Yale dining halls under supervision for similar posts elsewhere. The system now under consideration is one similar to that of internship in medicine. The student would make a study of dining-hall organization, thus becoming familiar with the administrative as well as the theoretical aspect of the work.

Miss Colburn came to Yale on leave of absence from Chicago in 1923 and re-organized the dining halls. She introduced the cafeteria system for all students except freshmen.

The cafeteria has become increasingly popular. In its first month 626 meals per day were served. In December, last, 1612 meals per day were served. The average cost of a meal in the cafeteria has never exceeded 22 cents.

Miss Colburn returned to Chicago last year, leaving the dining halls in charge of her assistant, Miss Marion G. Dana. Miss Colburn now comes back to New Haven on a permanent appointment and Miss Dana remains associated with her in the development of this work.

WISCONSIN SELECTED FOR SOCIAL SCIENCE RESEARCH

Headquarters for social science research work costing more than a million dollars is to be located at the University of Wisconsin. Professor Arnold Bennett Hall of the Wisconsin political science department was elected chairman of the committee on problems and policies, and Shelby M. Harrison, director of the Russell Sage Foundation, secretary.

The committee now has pending for its study and approval research projects in the social sciences involving an expenditure of thousands of dollars. The research projects, according to Professor Hall, are usually financed by the large educational foundations established for that purpose.

The work of the committee, which was re-organized at the New York meeting, will be to pass upon all research projects that come before the council for the purpose of making recommendations to that body as to practicability of the project, the scientific character of the methods exposed, and the ability of the personnel to carry out the enterprise in a scholarly manner.

PRINCETONIAN INTEREST INCLUDES EVOLUTION WORKS

Evidence of the increase of public interest in evolution is revealed by the announcement of the Princeton University Press that two books dealing with that subject were the best sellers for the past year. The popular volumes are "Science and Heredity," by Dr. Edwin Grant Conklin, chairman of Princeton Biology Department, and "The Dogma of Evolution," by Louis Trenchard More, Dean of the Graduate School of the University of Cincinnati and Princeton vanuxem lecturer this year.

The books present almost completely antithetical viewpoints, Dr. Conklin's work being one of the best-known expository treatises for evolution, while Dr. More's book takes the stand that biologists have claimed too much for the theory. Since the publishment of Professor Conklin's book in 1915, thirteen editions comprising 25,000 copies have been sold.

'PENN' SECURES $4,000,000 MORTGAGE ON 14 ACRES

A mortgage of four million dollars, secured on fourteen acres of property, at Locust and Meadland streets, has been taken by the City of Philadelphia from the University of Pennsylvania. The mortgage was placed by the University to enable it to refinance the original purchase of the property and a group of proposed improvements. A new gymnasium and other buildings are contemplated.

BUCKNELL'S STAR KICKERS PLACED FIRST IN NATION

McCORMICK'S 50-YD. DROP, AND 55-YD. PLACEMENT BY TRIMMER, STAND

It is an interesting diversion in football to ascertain the players who have made the leading records in all departments of scoring play. Let us search therefore for the heroic fellows who have made the longest-scoring runs in all departments of the running attack. Let us make an acquaintance with the player who has kicked the longest goal from the field by a drop-kick, and with the player who has scored the longest place-kick, and let us also ascertain what field-goal experts have kicked the most goals during the fall. Our journey into the statistics of football will be a happy one with many pleasant surprises along the way.

The longest-scoring run made in any manner upon all the collegiate gridirons of the United States during the past season was a dash of 90 yards reeled off by Edward L. O'Connor, captain of New Hampshire, against Tufts. Very dramatically, this run was with the initial kickoff of the game, and equally dramatically it won the game, as the score finally terminated New Hampshire, 9; Tufts, 6.

Similar to running back a kickoff for a touchdown is running back a punt. Two players tie for the honor of having made the longest-scoring run back of a punt. These two players are Richard S. Converse, of Worcester, and Robert Maniere, of the University of Detroit. Converse ran a punt 92 yards through the formidable Massachusetts Aggies, and Maniere covered the same distance with a punt against St. Louis.

Slagle's and Waltons' Runs

Out of the thousands of scores made by dashes from scrimmage, the run of Jacob W. Slagle, of Princeton, of 92 yards against Yale, was one of the two longest scoring runs of the character in the United States. The press of the country following this game reported the length of this run variously from 82 yards up to 97 yards. The discrepancy in many instances was due to a difference in method, some observers measuring the run from the point where the ball was put in play; others from the spot on which they judge Slagle received the ball. The ball on this play was put in play 78 yards from Princeton's goal line. Slagle fell back so though to punt and, therefore, received the ball 8 yards from his own goal line, or 92 yards distant from Yale's goal line.

The other surpassing run from scrimmage likewise was a dash of 92 yards, achieved by Joseph B. Walton, of Temple University, against the Pennsylvania Military College eleven.

Two players tie for the honor of having made the longest-scoring run with a complete pass. August Calbrinth, of Dayton, received a pass of 10 yards from Louis R. Mahrt, and ran 63 yards through the Haskell Indians for a touchdown, which carried with it the victory, as it was the winning score of the day.

Spangler's and Sweeley's Feats

Charles M. Spangler, of Gettysburg, received a pass of 5 yards from Jones and likewise ran 63 yards thru Ursinus for a touchdown.

Similarly two players tie for the honor of having made the longest-scoring run with an intercepted pass. Cecil Barron, of Milligan University, intercepted a Tennessee Wesleyan fling and ran 96 yards for a touchdown. Fred E. Sweeley, of Dickinson College, likewise intercepted a pass thrown by Pennsylvania Military College and ran 96 yards through his adversaries for a touchdown.

More scores have resulted from blocked kicks in 1925 than in any other preceding season in years, if never before. More kicks have been blocked behind an opponent's goal line than out upon the field of play. There are, however, a few instances of long runs with blocked kicks. The longest of these was a dash of 75 yards by Thomas L. Dickson, of Maine, who blocked a kick of the Connecticut Aggies and, with his prize, raced that long distance not only for a touchdown but for the winning score of the game. Scoring runs with fumbles in 1925 fortunately were comparatively few in numbers, nevertheless there were enough of these fukes to fill a substantially large page in football's leiger. The longest-scoring run in this category was a race of 97 yards by Schuyler E. Widener, of the New York Aggies, against Manhatten.

Oberlander's Long Passes

The long-distance, forward-passing artist of the American gridiron this fall has been Andrew J. Oberlander, of Dartmouth. Against Cornell this mighty centurion of the greensward flung a pass of 50 yards, which was completed by Henry A. Sage, the Dartmouth end, and by the latter carried to a touchdown. In this same combat Oberlander threw another pass of 50 yards which was completed by George Tully and carried forward for a touchdown. These two passes present the longest complete passes of the year.

It should not be surprising, therefore, to be told that Dartmouth also captures the honor of having pulled off the longest distance scoring forward pass play of the year, pass plus the run, 80 yards. This play occurred against Hobart. Oberlander threw a pass of 35 yards to George C. Tully and the latter galloped 45 yards for the touchdown.

Schoolboy's 55-Yard Dropkick

Field-goal scoring has been more abundant this fall than ever before. Each year for the last ten years has seen an increase in the number of goals kicked from the field. The longest goal to be scored by a drop-kick, 55 yards, was achieved by a high school boy, John Cavosie, of the Ironwood High School, of Michigan. So amazing is this performance by a school boy that it can only be appreciated when it is stated that only two collegians in the annals of football have kicked longer-scoring dropkicks than this high school boy. Cavosie is a native of Shenandoah, Pa. He is 6 feet 2 inches high and capable of making any fullback position on any college team in the United States. Cavosie's goal was scored against the Menominie High School.

The collegiate record for a scoring long-distance drop-kick is 50 yards. Felix J. McCormick, of Bucknell, achieved such a record against George Washington, and John Broderick, of Villanova, duplicated the performance against Muhlenberg.

Trimmer's Place Kick

The longest place kick scoring a goal in the United States this fall was a shot of 55 yards by Lloyd M. Trimmer, of Bucknell, against George Washington. Thus Bucknell presents the extraordinary instance of presenting both the champion long-distance drop-kicker and the champion long-distance place kicker of all the college teams in the United States, and, stranger still to chronicle, both of these record kicks were achieved in the same game, Bucknell vs. George Washington.

The drop-kickers and the place kickers will have to divide the honor of having scored the most goals from the field in a single game. Against Gallaudet Felix J. McCormick, of Bucknell, kicked three goals by drop-kicks from the 35 and 20 yard lines, respectively. Incidentally, this performance equaled the record at Bucknell for such feats, a record which has been held for twenty-five years by the late Christy Mathewson, who was a fullback at Bucknell in his undergraduate days.

The single-game place-kicking champion is Andrew Gustafson, of Pittsburgh, who against the highly formidable Lafayette eleven kicked goals from the 35, 33, and 31 yard lines respectively.

BUCKNELL NEEDS A HISTORICAL RECORD

Professor William C. Bartol, in preparing the history of our pioneer professors of mathematics, which he read at the recent joint meeting of the Big Four and the Pi Mu Epsilon societies, has done a very real service to the University, because there is no one now connected with Bucknell who is so well qualified as he is to do this task. It was a work that required many weeks of study and research and much correspondence. This work revealed certain aspects of the development of Bucknell which had previously been unnoticed. If he would go on and complete the job, and write the history of the mathematics department since he has been in charge of it, we should have a complete, detailed, accurate story of the development of the mathematics department at Bucknell from the very beginning.

That is what we ought to have of the Latin, the Greek, the English, the chemistry, the engineering departments, and of every other department in the University. If we had them, then we could have a history of Bucknell.

That is one thing this University lacks—a history in written form. No one has ever taken the trouble to get it together. There have been some contributions toward such a history. Dr. Harris told us much in his papers on "Thirty Years at Bucknell," that were published in the Lewisburg Saturday News. There is also a small publication called "Memorials of Bucknell University," prepared by Dr. Harris upon the occasion of Bucknell's fiftieth anniversary. The alumni catalogs likewise contain some historical material. But we have no history of Bucknell, nor has any one ever gathered those historic details and incidents that give life to history.

Yet some day we shall necessarily have to write the history of Bucknell. The longer that writing is delayed, the less valuable and the more incorrect the history will be. Facts, bare, cold, lifeless facts, can probably be dug up years hence. Such data can usually be had from account books, ledgers, catalogs, pamphlets. But those things are merely the bare bones of history. The things that make history live, that clothe the skeleton with flesh and blood and give us an animate creation, are the incidents, the little odds and ends of happenings. These can come only from the storehouse of the human mind.

We have still with us older men and women, some in the college and some in the town, whose memory goes back well toward the beginning of Bucknell. It is these folks who must write for us this living history, or supply the data for such a living history.

The task of collecting all these data is staggering in its immensity. Those unfamiliar with literary work can hardly appreciate its size. Properly, therefore, the writing of a Bucknell history is not a one-man job but a task for many men.

Fortunately we have many men who are fitted to do this work. Dr. Bartol has shown us the way. If the head of each department would delve into the story of his own field and put the results on paper, these efforts would be invaluable to the person who must some day be called to write the history of our University. The Bucknellian, by printing Dr. Bartol's talk, has made sure that when this future historian needs the data concerning the department of mathematics they will be available. The Bucknellian would like to secure the stories of the other departments at Bucknell. Who will be the next person to undertake this labor of love?

JULIAN WILL MANAGE CHAMBERSBURG TEAM

Julian's application arrived it immediately attracted attention, and because he was a college man and a good ball player, and because the directors recalled that Chambersburg's last pennant was won with a college man at the helm, the former Bucknell player was selected.

The general practice in the league is to pick up veterans who have seen service in the majors to act as managers for the teams and Julian will be one of the few college men in the circuit. Many of the players as well as the managers are also "farmed" from teams of the major circuits. It is expected however that "Doggie" will do the catching for his team in the season that will soon open.

NOW is the time to get that boy-bob.

ROOSEVELT DAY LECTURE

Roosevelt Day, when throughout the country due recognition will be given to the achievements of the late president Roosevelt, will be observed on Thursday, February 9.

The Men's Bible Class of the Presbyterian Church offers to Lewisburg friends the opportunity of hearing a well-known lecturer, the Rev. Elliot Chidsey Armstrong, D. D., of Williamsport, who has assembled a large number of interesting slides picturing the career of Roosevelt, and who presents his life in a fascinating way. The admission is free, with a silver offering asked. The student body is cordially invited. Every American should know the whole story of this remarkable leader.

come from the United States of America. It cannot come from Europe, which is still filled with racial hatreds.

"Although we have so far failed to take the opportunity for leadership that has been awaiting us, the speaker said, there is no reason to despair. For we are now on the threshold of an emergent national faith. There are signs of this everywhere. Our magazines are printing serious articles about the situation. We are going through a period of self analysis. We are coming to a realization that we must make our contribution to world progress. Other signs pointing in the same direction are our reviving interest in serious drama and a growing curiosity about our past, a revival of interest in our own history, a sympathetic interest in the best in that history.

"All his," said Professor Coleman, "is going to give us a new conception of what this democracy of ours means. It is going to do more. It is going to give our cosmopolitan population a new perspective of national life. We have these foreigners. They are everywhere. We must absorb them or they will absorb us. We must let them into the secret of our wonderful life."

Professor Coleman condemned those who spoke slightingly of foreigners, of the working classes, of the great middle class. He said it was the common people who made this nation what it is.

"We must express ourselves nationally and internationally," said the speaker in conclusion. "Our history shows that we are intended to take the leadership of the world. We lay stress upon a statement of Washington's, advising us against entangling alliances, forgetting that at another time he spoke of the days of international brotherhood that he hoped to see. Woodrow Wilson said 'We must make the world safe for democracy.' Coolidge says we must mobilize the conscience of mankind. We have come to the place where we can throw down the barriers of nationality and take up world leadership in the best sense."

At the conclusion of the talk, the assemblage moved to Dr. Hunt's home, where a pleasant social hour followed. Light refreshments were served.

It's Work or Get Out, at Gettysburg

Thirty-seven Gettysburg College students were expelled February first for low scholastic standing, according to announcement by Dr. F. H. Kramer, chairman of the Scholastic Committee. Twelve others are expected to be expelled after all the marks of the first semester's work are recorded and a "very large" number placed on probation, it was stated by Dr. Kramer.

As a result of the expulsions, it was said the varsity basketball team would be seriously crippled, and one of the main features of the glee club would have to be eliminated. All names were withheld, but it was learned that a number of football stars and other athletes are included.

NEW VIEW BOOK NOW READY

Finely Illustrated, 36-Page Book For Prospective Students

Registrar H. W. Holter has just received the first copies of a new Bucknell bulletin and view book which he has had prepared, and which is printed under the title "Life at Bucknell." Copies will soon be available for distribution, and the Registrar wants to place a copy in the hands of each prospective student.

This new booklet, consisting of thirty-six pages of text and illustrations, is quite different from any bulletin the University has ever issued, and is well described by its title. The book endeavors to picture life at Bucknell rather than the mere physical University we have so often seen pictured in our bulletins. It shows many of the college buildings, but they are pictured as a background for the life of the institution. Many pictures of campus life are included in this volume. The main object of the publication is to show the spirit of the University and the life that is lived under the influence of that spirit.

A second attractive advertisement of the University that Registrar Holter has gotten out is the new Bucknell calendar.

This is approximately 7 x 10 inches in size, and carries on the upper half of the space a picture of the front of Old Main and a cut of the Stadium during a big game. The calendar itself is very legible, and the whole thing makes an attractive appearance. One of these calendars is being mailed to each alumnus with the current issue of the Alumni Monthly.

A third advertising device has come out of the Registrar's office in the shape of a small Bucknell blotter, which will be widely distributed.

COUNCIL PADDLES GET DUSTING; SO DO FROSH

Jones was up for not speaking, and Pollock was charged with not speaking and not carrying matches. In addition to being paddled, Pollock must say "Hello Sir" to everyone he meets within the next two weeks.

Two were sent before them.

This giant hydro-electric unit weighs 750 tons and consists of a vertical shaft hydraulic turbine attached to an electric generator delivering 52,000 kilowatts at 12,000 volts.

Bigger Generators— Cheaper Electricity

A 70,000 horsepower hydro-electric unit recently installed at Niagara Falls utilizes the same amount of water as seven former 5,000-horsepower units, yet does the work of fourteen such units. And it saves 700,000 tons of coal yearly for the nation.

As more and still more uses are found for electricity, larger and more economical generators are installed. At the power plant, as well as at the consumer's end, important changes and startling developments have steadily reduced the cost of electricity for light, power, and heat.

And wherever electricity has blazed its trail—in towns, cities, industrial centers, and rural communities—comfort and progress have come to stay.

Generating and distributing electricity concern the technical student. But electricity's application in the betterment of industry, the professions, and home life concerns every educated person. Cheap electricity means many startling achievements today, but countless and unbelievable possibilities tomorrow.

The General Electric Company, as of December 1, 1924, had 37,716 stockholders, of whom 45 per cent were women. The average number of common shares held by stockholders was 85. In ownership, policies, past and present activities, G-E is unselfishly dedicated to the cause of electrical progress.

Bison Five Defeats Albright Team 41-24

McCaskey Is High Scorer With Five Baskets For Bucknell; Line-up Is Revamped

Bucknell kept its record of victories on the home court unsmirched by defeating the Albright basketball team last Saturday evening by a 41 to 24 score. The absence of Bach, the varsity center, was keenly felt by the Bison quintet.

A revamped line-up took the floor with McCormick at forward and Kirker at center. The teamwork of the new combination was not on a par with that of the regular five. Mc Cormick took the bench in favor of Fritzinger after the first few minutes of play. Both Kirker and McCormick played hard ball, but they appeared strained in their first varsity start and this overeagerness impaired their passing and shooting.

McCaskey and Rigg played the best games of the evening. Rigg constantly proved a defensive menace and contributed two mid-court baskets, while McCaskey was high scorer with five baskets. It is worth noting that McCaskey's tireless cutting for the basket netted him all five baskets. None of them was shot from a distance greater than five feet from the rim.

Fritzinger made two successive sensational shots from back court which whipped the net without grazing the basket's rim, and Murphy, although he appeared without his regular "hot mitt," caged four baskets.

Angle constituted Albright's chief offense. This diminutive player ("Flash" the Albright rooters called him) was an adept dribbler and a good shot. He caged four baskets during the game.

Bucknell ed, 25 to 15, at half time. The game became more rugged in the second half. Toward the end of the half an altercation between Hitchens and Grigg was quickly stopped by players and spectators and the game continued as if the incident had not occurred.

Peddie Headmaster Wishes Plant Success

Swetland Expresses Deep Regret at John Plant's Departure; Dinner To Be Given

The following letter is being mailed to all Peddie alumni urging them to attend a dinner to be given in New York as a testimonial and farewell to John Plant, recently appointed as head of the Bucknell department of physical education:

THE PEDDIE SCHOOL
Hightstown, N. J.
January 28, 1926.

Dear Peddie Alumni:

As you will have noted in the dinner announcement letter sent out by the officers of the Peddie-New York Alumni Association, that dinner is to be made a testimonial to John Plant. It is altogether fitting that this should be done and the purpose of this letter is to emphasize that fact and to urge you to come.

No man ever deserved the love and esteem of Peddie alumni more than John Plant does. No man in our staff could be more keenly missed than he will be. We have done everything in our power to hold him at Peddie, but he feels that he must go to Bucknell.

Let us, then, by our presence at this coming testimonial dinner express in some measure our affection for "John," our gratitude for all that he has done for us, our regret at his going, and our heartfelt wishes for his success in his new field of service.

Sincerely yours,
R. M. SWETLAND,
Headmaster

PLANT WILL BRING HONOR TO BUCKNELL, SAYS SMITH

"Phenom" Smith, the baseball manager who secured Christy Mathewson from Bucknell to pitch for the Norfolk Club, in a letter to the sports editor of the Philadelphia Inquirer printed in last Sunday's issue of that paper, says, "Bucknell will be honored just as much by having Plant as she was by Matty." Smith also managed the Bristol basketball team upon which Plant played. The letter follows:

S. O. Grauley.

Dear Sir:

I was greatly impressed with your write-up of "Honest" John Plant. He deserved every word of it and it was a remarkable tribute to a remarkable fellow.

Bill Bennett and John Plant were two of the greatest of that time, and with Mulliner, Klein, and Hough made a combination which was hard to defeat.

Plant's going to Bucknell University reminds me that I secured Christy Matheweson from Bucknell to pitch for my Norfolk Club and Bucknell will find John D. Plant just as fine a fellow as Matheweson was and Bucknell will be honored just as much by having Plant as she was by Matty.

Please accept my thanks for your kind write-up of "Honest" John D. Plant.

Yours respectfully,
JOHN F. "PHENOM" SMITH.

SPORTS EDITORIAL

If Bucknell students and devotees of the court game wish to see a fast and clean brand of the dribbling game played on the home court, they will have to learn one of the first rules of good sportsmanship, that of accepting the referee's decision.

Intimidation of a referee merely comes back upon Bucknell and upon those students who resort to this unsportsmanlike practice. A good referee is always in demand and does not have to arbitrate in front of a crowd that will not back his decisions. A referee who can be intimidated by threats of the crowd is not a good referee, consequently the game gets away from him; the players run riot; Bucknell gets a black eye for hiring partial officials; and the spectators go home unsatisfied because they have seen a loosely played game.

The only way to insure good basketball is to treat the "ref" white. If he is incapable, the authorities will not hire him. It is a hard thing to see every play just as it happens. Most of the ribald gallery comment comes from prejudiced and partial spectators whose sportsmanlike instincts have become so warped in their animalistic desire to see a fight, that they discolor everything which happens upon the floor in favor of the team for which they are cheering. These few we should squelch.

This, however, is not primarily a tirade against that minority which has been attempting to disturb the referee's judgements. It is a plea for those who wish to see good basketball to do a little straight thinking. A plea for them to see that "razzing the ref" defeats the very purpose for which they come to the gym, that of seeing a good, clean game with the best team winning. If a referee is razzed by the crowd, the comment glances off and he continues to call the plays as he sees them. If a poor referee is scared by gallery yells, the game becomes more loosely officiated. No good is accomplished in either case. Let us pursue the only honorable course. Allow the captain of the team to complain to the referee if any protest is to be voiced.

A LESSON FOR PRIVILEGED AMERICAN COLLEGE YOUTH

Restricting himself to only two and three hours' sleep each night in order to attain his ambition for a graduate degree in American scientific agriculture, Peter Dutko, a Czechoslovakian, who landed penniless in Philadelphia two years ago, received the degree of Master of Science in Animal Husbandry at the Pennsylvania State College commencement in June of last year.

Unable to speak English, though master of five other languages when he came to the United States, the thirty-year-old Czech resolved to teach himself the language. He worked in the anthracite mines in Mayfield until he saved enough money to enter Penn State. He entered last fall as a graduate student, having enough credits as a graduate of an agricultural college in Czechoslovakia.

Although at first he could hardly understand the lectures of his professors, he stuck to his task, worked until three and four o'clock every morning over his books and finished the year an honor student.—Journal of Education.

When the straight-8 blows a shoe

BEFORE you even look for the jack or tire-tools, tuck a neat wad of Prince Albert into the muzzle of your jimmy-pipe. Light up . . . and get yourself in the frame of mind where a flat tire is "all in the day's work." Talk about a gloom-chaser!

P. A. simply knocks troubles for a row of planished-steel mudguards. Its cool, soothing smoke percolates into your system, the sun crashes through the clouds, and everything is hotsy-totsy. Yes indeed, Fellows, Prince Albert is great tobacco.

And paste this in the fly-leaf of your thesaurus: P. A. can't bite your tongue or parch your throat, no matter how hard you hit it up. The Prince Albert process flunked Bite and Parch on their first examination. Get a tidy red tin of P. A. now and see.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Albert Lauderbaugh, '27, visited friends in Williamsport after his examinations were finished.

* * * *

Eleanor Berry, '24, of Mifflinburg, visited her Phi Mu sisters and attended the dance Saturday evening.

* * * *

John Fisher, '26, and William Parlow, '27, spent a few days at their homes in Tamaqua last week.

* * * *

Archie Spangler formerly of the class of '25 has re-entered college as a junior. Archie is at home to his friends at 47 East Wing.

* * * *

Professor R. F. Howes and his family and Mrs. N. H. Stewart called on friends at Susquehanna University, Selinsgrove, Sunday, a week ago.

* * * *

C. F. White, '25, visited here during the week-end. As usual "Charlie" trod his well beaten path between the "Semi" and the Delta Sigma house.

* * * *

Theron Cramer, '26, spent the time between semesters in Shamokin, which is his home town. Ernest Shaffer also spent his vacation in Shamokin.

* * * *

According to the calendars issued by the University, Baccalaureate Sunday will fall on Saturday this year. The class of 1926 just has to set some precedent.

* * * *

Thursday night it was so cold in the "Semi" that all the "Tassers" left early. It's reported that Miss Clark caught an idea from that but we'll await developments.

* * * *

Rumors that Bucknell is to have a boxing team seemed about to materialize Saturday evening at the basketball game, when "Red" Hitchens had a strenuous workout.

* * * *

Fred R. Helwig, who spent two and a half years as a member of the class of '26, but who has been away from Bucknell for a year, returned to take up his work Monday morning.

* * * *

Eugene S. Biddle, '23, visited his Beta Kappa brothers for a few minutes while passing through Lewisburg Saturday. Biddle is now in the insurance business and living at Ashland.

* * * *

Following a custom started in other colleges some of the students refused to shave during the period of examinations. We couldn't tell the difference by looking at some of them though.

* * * *

Blue books are anything but blue. Professor Rice explains that they derive their names from the atmosphere that surrounds them. These books are "blue books" even if they're yellow, pink, brown or grey.

* * * *

Howard Thomas, '25, instructor in French and biology at Bellefonte Academy was on the campus this Saturday. Thomas also visited his old home the "T. U. O." house. Does it still look like the same place Tom?

* * * *

Haldeman-Julius has just issued his catalogue of blue books for five cents apiece. That was the wrong thing to issue at this time "Hal" for Bucknell students are tired of blue books and wouldn't carry away all you could give them.

* * * *

Ping pong is at a standstill in East Wing because of the fact that "Bunny" Fogelsanger stepped on the last ball Slifer possessed. "Ken" is almost bankrupt furnishing his East Wing companions with ping pong balls. This game offered some real mental diversion during the exams.

* * * *

Emerson Thomas, '28, has moved from the T. U. O. house to room 23 East College.

* * * *

Margaret Morgan, '23, attended the Phi Mu dance at the "S. A. E." house Saturday evening.

* * * *

W. Harold Sloan, '26, has taken a position as instructor in religious education at the Lewisburg High School.

* * * *

Donald Eaton, '28, has left school to become a partner in his father's undertaking business at Wilkinsburg, Pa.

* * * *

President Emory Hunt and his daughter, Miss Carolyn Hunt, witnessed the Albright basketball game last Saturday.

* * * *

After the examinations, Alfred Ulmer, '28, hurriedly snatched his suitcase and slipped home to Salladasburg to see his parents.

* * * *

George Ocshier, ex-'28, and Ralph Hertzler, ex-'28, have been visiting friends in Lewisburg. George Ocshier is in the Philadelphia College of Optometry, and Ralph Hertzler is at the University of Pennsylvania.

* * * *

Gordon Throne, '26, followed his usual custom of spending the week-end at home. Sometimes "Jake's" home is in Montgomery; and then again it isn't. He didn't say which one it was this time.

* * * *

Rolland N. Dutton, '26, went to Fishers Ferry last Sunday with Paul Hauspiroys who has a church there. "Dut" is going to be a "fisher of men" and he thought that a place like Fishers Ferry would be a good place to make a start.

* * * *

The young people in the local Presbyterian church enjoyed last Sunday evening a musical evening, featured by vocal solos by Clyde Fouse, '27, and R. Dilworth, '27, a piano solo by Lois Lee, '28, and selections by a male quartet, and girls' quintette.

* * * *

The oft' decorated bronzed Apollo that stands in the "Sem" living room served a new purpose last Wednesday afternoon when "Bill" Saufley, in revenge for his failure to secure his usual seat, placed the statuette full in the doorway, hearing the sign. "CROWDED."

* * * *

Mary Laning, '28, was compelled to discontinue her studies at the end of the semester due to ill health. On Saturday last she was tendered a farewell party by friends at the home of the Rev. F. B. Everitt. On Sunday she left for home. She expects to return to college either in September or next February.

* * * *

"Tubby" Johnston laughs so heartily that Mr. Kosser, proprietor of "The Orpheum," has forbidden him to sit in the balcony when funny pictures are being shown. Johnston, it has developed, weakened some of the beams, and the mayor was about to condemn the theater, but Johnson agreed to the verdict and will in the future sit downstairs.

* * * *

Emerson Ware, '26, William Brown, '28, and Harlan Downer, '29, the three New Jersey boys of Beta Kappa spent several days at their homes when they had finished the work of the first semester. Downer went home by the hitch-hike method. Brown was the first to return, arriving Saturday evening. Ware was more reluctant to return but got here for the opening of the second semester.

* * * *

The rain, with the help of the ice on the pavements, made walking a really exciting sport Sunday. Trying to keep one's feet under such conditions as the sidewalks of Lewisburg present in weather like this makes one go through some motions that no instructor in physical training can immitate before a class. For the information of the new students there is a borough ordinance to the effect the sidewalks should be kept clean. Is that right, Mr. Mayor?

* * * *

"Dad" Crabbe janitor in East Wing, is still incapacitated owing to an accident at Fourth and Market street. "Dad" was on his way to work when he stepped out into the street, and discovered that he was in front of a speeding automobile. He stepped back quickly and was struck by another going the opposite direction. The auto causing the accident did not stop, and no one got the number of the speeding car. The man who struck "Dad" took him to a doctor. It was discovered that his leg was not broken has been rumored. We all wish you a speedy recovery "Dad."

* * * *

"Christy" Mathewson, '27, spent the week-end in Factoryville, and Nanticoke.

* * * *

"Doug" Haviland, '28, spent Saturday night and Sunday in Williamsport.

* * * *

Assistant Professor William H. Schuyler spent last week-end in Williamsport.

* * * *

George Roller's examination schedule made it possible for him to go to Juniata on Wednesday and stay there until Sunday.

* * * *

Kimball Miller, '29, and "Wallie" Wilkinson put in a few days at their respective homes in Williamsport during examination week.

* * * *

G. Meason Shultzabarger, '28, has left school to work in the Long Island power plant of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

* * * *

"Eddie" Ramsdell, '27, and Clyde Roller, '27, took advantage of the between semesters week-end to make a little tour of various points north.

* * * *

After a semester's "lay-off," "Gene" Halleran, '27, came back to Bucknell with his ever-present trumpet. The genial freshman is now a pre-legal student.

* * * *

Paul Webster, '27, and "Abe" Sheckells, '27, took charge of the morning and evening church services at the Muney Baptist church last Sunday.

* * * *

William D. Stayer, '28, of Pittsburgh, returned to college this semester, following a year's absence. Last semester he attended Slippery Rock State Normal School.

* * * *

Anthony F. Riofski, '28, and Joseph S. Skobba, '28, who were biology students here last semester, have left college. It is believed that they have gone to a medical college in Indiana.

* * * *

Miss Frances R. Mapes, of Glen Ridge, N. J., was one of the campus visitors last week-end. She spent a few days away from art school with her brother-in-law and sister, Professor and Mrs. R. L. Matz.

* * * *

"Vic" Meyer, '29, and "Ken" Rhone, '29, went to Philadelphia to relax after their mid-year exams were over. They didn't get much relaxation, however, as they figured in two automobile accidents while en route.

* * * *

Arthur Shorts, '29, was painfully injured last Saturday, when his right eye-lid was cut in a collision during a practice basketball game in Tustin Gymnasium. Dr. W. L. Gearhart dressed the wound, and closed the cut with four steel clamps.

* * * *

Frank Hammel, '29, took advantage of the few days after his examinations were over, when freshmen rules no longer applied to him, to wear his black derby. We warn him that it is poor policy to appear under an "iron kelly" when there is so much snow on the ground.

* * * *

Assistant Professor Voris B. Hall's usual luck with his radio when there is company around was present at the meeting of engineering professors and instructors when he attempted the part of the social commitee and his new Neutrolyne set failed to respond. The lunch he served later proved more entertaining.

* * * *

"Lew" Davis, '27, preached at the Northumberland Baptist church last Sunday evening, while Dwight Bahr, '28, filled the pulpit for him in the morning. Pauline Ware, '28; Helen Thompson, '27; Mary Taubel, '29; Mary Graham, '25; Albert Sheckells, '27, and Grace Pheifer, '27, attended the evening service. Miss Pheifer sang a solo, and Sheckells and Davis played a cornet duet.

* * * *

"Zookie" and "Mike the mouth-organ man," who have been entertaining the crowds at the basketball games between halves, did not make their appearance at the Albright game. It is feared that intense rivalry prompted the managers of these youthful actors to discontinue their performances until a basis of financial distribution can be agreed upon. On account of the rush of exams Professor Heim has been unable to offer any advice on the subject.

* * * *

"Phil" Murray, '29, went along with "Henny" Fessler, '29, to the latter's home in Newberry last Wednesday and both returned Sunday night. Phil reports an unusually fine time, in spite of the fact that his ability at the pipe organ was discovered and made use of by the congregation of the Newberry Memorial Baptist church, where a new organ had just been installed.

* * * *

H. L. Winters, '26, passed the week end at home in Williamsport.

* * * *

George J. Koch, '26, spent the week end at his home in Williamsport.

* * * *

* * * *

Frank C. Dixon, '26, visited his home at Hudson, Pa., during the week end.

* * * *

R. "Cliff" Jones, '29, spent the greater part of last week at his home in Pittsburgh.

* * * *

Walter S. Shorts, '26, paid a visit to his home town, Dickson City, between semesters.

* * * *

John Krajeski, '27, has suspended the process of education for the present and is not returning for the second semester.

* * * *

C. D. Hollinger, '27, recuperated from the strain of his examinations at his home in Lansford.

* * * *

"Bill" Samuel, '28, and "Turk" Jones, '29, spent the week-end in Nanticoke. Bill will remain home all week under medical attention.

* * * *

"Jim" Mabee and Grier Riemer spent the week-end at the latter's home in Bloomsburg, and while there heard the program from WJBU.

Rome Students in Near Riot

Demonstrations took place in Rome on January 29 in protest against the Anti-Italian campaign in Germany.

Fascist students marched to the German Embassy this morning to conduct an old style show before the eyes of the German officials gathered at the window. But the police interfered and the students were dispersed, not, however, before they had burned piles of German and Austrian newspapers.

Later in the day a larger crowd, mostly of students but augmented by others, assembled outside the post-office and marched about the streets in an orderly protest against the German campaign against the Italian "tyrants" in the Upper Adige region.

The Government has issued strict orders against such disturbances and an order as broadcast calling a halt to them. The Fascist leaders issued a stern rebuke to the students, declaring that the student class must pave the way of discipline in the party and that more was expected from them than from the rougher elements who as yet were untrained in the new spirit of Italy.

The violent anti-Italian agitation that has been going on in Germany has been met calmly by the Government newspapers. Except for the Impero, which is carrying on a furious editorial war with the Germans, the trend of the press is to ignore the assertions that the Tyrolese are being intimidated.

Small demonstrations have occurred in Florence, Naples and Venice among the student groups.

GET SUBJECT FOR STUDY

Municipal Judge of Toledo sentenced Carl Kilbortz, Monroe, Mich., banker, to an "indefinite term" as a subject for study by the University of Toledo psychology class. Kilbortz ran amuck in his automobile, wrecking two other cars and a house. He paid all the damages.

An original reason for taking a thorough course in English grammar was given by Dr. W. F. Luebke, head of the University of Denver English department, who says that the college ran on romance bent must know how to say more than just "good-night" to his lady love.

B.U. Bookshelf

Beside Our Campfires, by Suzanne Weddell, is a little book of goodnight meditations written originally for the Chicago Girl Reserves of the Millhurst Campfire, one of the excellent institutions of the Chicago Y. W. C. A. Taking the Campfire Code as a basis, there are meditations for twelve weeks, each article in the Code being exemplified by some woman. Thus Gracious in Manner is identified with Alice Freeman Palmer, Ready for Service by Florence Nightingale, and so on, the list including Grace Dodge, Helen Keller, Mary Lyon, Joan of Arc, Mary Slessor and Julia Ward Howe. For each night there is a selection touching the life and work of the particular character, and a short poem. The work has been finely done, and is the outgrowth of campfire experience, as the author has been in charge of the Millhurst Camp for Girls.

—Missions

Miss Weddell was graduated with the class of 1912, receiving the degree Sc. B. Her address is 515 Garland Bldg., 58 East Washington St., Chicago.

TUFTS TESTS TEACHERS

Professors at Tufts College will be graded by their students. The student council has approved the idea and will set to work devising a suitable plan. The faculty will probably be marked for knowledge of their subject, ability to teach it, general intelligence, personal force and personality.

Hassrick, '06, Heads Legal Aid Bureau

Extensive Report for Past Year Shows Bureau Served 13,000

Romain C. Hassrick, '06, chief of the bureau of legal aid in Philadelphia recently made a report in which he revealed something of the immensity of the work which at present his department is doing. The bureau, which aims to bring justice to the poor by giving them legal advice without cost, is the largest municipal organization if its kind in the country.

The report showed that nearly thirteen thousand cases were handled by the bureau during the year covered by the report. Forty-two nationalities were represented among the applicants for aid. Quoting from the report as it appeared in part in the Public Ledger:

"The bureau has held itself out to the active practicing attorneys in Philadelphia as the channel through which redress may be obtained for persons whose financial circumstances will not permit the lucrative employment of private counsel. Applicants who are really too poor to employ an attorney nevertheless can be represented by the bureau, thus maintaining the first American principle that justice will not be denied to any person because of his financial inability to obtain proper legal representation.

"Persons of forty-two different nationalities applied for legal aid in 1925. This remarkable diversity of nationality furnishes to the bureau opportunity to exert an Americanizing influence on an impressively large percentage of the foreign-born population of Philadelphia. This is a cosmopolitan city and the bureau endeavors to make the best of this opportunity. Not only does it seek to minister to the legal needs of these foreign-born applicants in a courteous manner, but also to convince them that this branch of the municipal government is a true friend.

"After rendering service to the foreign-born persons, it directs the unnaturalized applicants to the United States Bureau of Naturalization, so that naturalization may be effected. In addition, the name of every unnaturalized person is referred at once to William Henry Welsh, director of extension school of the board of education, thus enabling the applicant to obtain the benefit of educational facilities provided by the taxpayers. During ten months of the year in 1925, the bureau kept a record of applicants who could neither read nor write. There were 219 in this ten-month period—an average of more than twenty-one a month.

"Immediately after making application to the bureau, these persons are visited by a representative of the board of education so that, if they choose to do so, they may improve their condition."

Albert W. Johnson, '96

A dispatch from Washington says an amendment to the judicial code of the United States that would facilitate the business of the court of Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson, of the Middle District of Pennsylvania, was introduced in the Senate Tuesday by Senator George W. Pepper.

Under the existing law the judge of the United States Court for the Middle District of Pennsylvania must sit at Sunbury and the clerk of the court has his office at Harrisburg. This came about through the fact that the late Judge C. B. Witmer resided at Sunbury and found it more convenient to transact business at that place and in Harrisburg.

Judge Johnson, the present jurist, desires to conduct his court at his home town of Lewisburg and also to have his clerk at that place. Senator Pepper's amendment is to accomplish this.

"Missions" Re-Publishes Old Review of President Malcom's Book

President Howard Malcom's book, "Travels in South Eastern Asia," is mentioned in the current issue of Missions. Like many other publications with a historic sense, Missions is running a column called "Fifty Years Ago." In this column it says: "Travels in South Eastern Asia," by the Rev. Howard Malcom, is published. In 1835 Mr. Malcom was delegated to visit the Baptist Mission Fields and these two volumes describe in detail his impressions during the two and a half years he spent in Burma, Arracan, Siam, China, and in South India where he assisted in opening the mission among the Telegus."

Dr. Malcom was the first president of Bucknell, though Acting President Stephen W. Taylor really started the college. President Malcom, it will be remembered, built the house now owned by the Kappa Sigma fraternity, and paid for it with royalties received from his Bible dictionary, the first book of the sort published. It was distinctly a "best seller." In fact, its sale was phenomenal. Malcom street, the thoroughfare separating the homes of Dr. Joseph R. Wood and Mrs. George W. Miller, was named for President Malcom.

William D. Reitz, '24

Mr. William D. Reitz of Lewisburg, is the third of the four new members of this year's Senior High School faculty at East Stroudsburg. Like Miss Gracious in Manner is identified with Alice Freeman Palmer, Ready for Service by Florence Nightingale, and so on, the list including Grace Dodge, Helen Keller, Mary Lyon, Joan of Arc, Mary Slessor and Julia Ward Howe. For each night there is a selection touching the life and work of the particular character, and a short poem. The work has been finely done, and is the outgrowth of campfire experience, as the author has been in charge of the Millhurst Camp for Girls.

Mr. Reitz was born at Mt. Carmel, Pa., and attended both Mt. Carmel and Lewisburg high schools. After graduating from these schools, he entered Bucknell. He was a member of the Lambda Chi Apha fraternity there. Last year was spent in teaching near his home town, which is Lewisburg. The presence of Mr. Reitz is welcomed by both the teachers and students of the Senior High. His patience in explaining problems and his spirit of co-operation are worthy of praise.

John A. Walls, ex-'98

John A. Walls, ex-'98, has become a joint partner in the firm of Aldred & Co., of New York. The firm represents one of the largest banking and financial distributing groups in this country.

Mr. Walls was raised in Lewisburg, is a son of William C. Walls, the president of the Lewisburg National Bank. He has been spending considerable time in the last few years in Italy and France, having been selected by the financial interests of the United States to supervise the reconstruction of power plants, and to look into the feasability of lending funds to aid the industrial conditions of these countries.

Mr. Walls is vice-president and chief engineer of the Pennsylvania Water & Power Co., the largest hydro-electric power plant at the mouth of the Susquehanna River, chief engineer and director of the International Securities corporation operating in France and Italy, and is also connected with a number of other industrial corporations. He is regarded as a very high authority in all hydro-electric developments.

John C. Groff, '05

For the first time in the history of Co. L, 111th Infantry, of West Chester, a member has been sent to prison on the charge of non-attendance at drills and may get a real sentence for the offense later. He is to face a summary court-martial on Monday evening before Major John C. Groff, acting as judge advocate, who will convene a court to hear evidence against the private and pass sentence.

The prisoner is Private Ira C. Ferner. The charge against him is that he absented himself from many drills during the last year and disobeyed the commands of Captain Jos. N. Reilly, who warned him, and he was finally ordered court-martialed. In face of this, he is said to have left town for a considerable period. He was arrested by County Detective William Mullen.

—Public Ledger.

Major Groff is a son of the late Professor George G. Groff, who was one of the most outstanding men ever connected with the faculty of the University. He was in charge of the science work at Bucknell, and built and owned the house now occupied by the Kappa Delta Rho fraternity. Major Groff has won prominence in the National Guard. He performed very meritorious service during the World War, attaining the rank of captain. Continuing in the National Guard after the war, he is now a major.

Dr. S. Lewis Ziegler, '80

The funeral of Dr. S. Lewis Ziegler was held at his late residence in Philadelphia. The service was in charge of the Rev. Ivan Murray Rose, minister to the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia where Dr. Zeigler was a member. President Hunt, Dr. George L. Nichols, '78, and Dr. Milton G. Evans, '82, president of Crozer Theological Seminary, and Dr. MacColl, Mrs. Zeigler's pastor, also took part in the services.

SEVENTY-NINE FAIL TO PASS AT UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO

Because they failed to pass the required amount of work during the fall quarter, seventy-nine students out of 2,635 have been dropped from the rolls of the University of Colorado, according to official figures announced recently.

Out of 972 freshmen, 154 failed to pass eight hours, and of these 125 were re-admitted. The freshmen who were re-admitted must pass ten hours in the second quarter or must bring the total for the two quarters up to sixteen hours.

One hundred and eighty upper classmen failed to pass ten hours out of fifteen required by the university rules. One hundred and thirty-four of these applied for re-admission and forty-six voluntarily dropped out of the university. Of the 134 who applied for re-admission, the boards readmitted eighty-four, they refused regomission to fifty.

Students Learn Virginia Reel To Dance at Henry Ford's Inn

The Wayside Inn at Sudbury, Mass., where Henry Ford is reconstructing a typical old-fashioned New England village, recently rang with the strains of old-time music such as the Virginia Reel and other dances of other days. The senior class of the Malden High School, in choosing the historic inn as the scene of its annual party, accepted the terms of its owner, Henry Ford, that only old-fashioned dances should be permitted.

Several weeks ago the manufacturer gave permission for the Malden pupils to use the inn if their revels were strictly in line with his views on the dance. Since that time the seniors have been rehearsing steps familiar to their grandparents.

W. and J. Planning to Build

President H. S. Baker, of Washington and Jefferson College, in addressing students there recently, outlined plans for a $750,000 building fund campaign for this year. The money will be used for both educational and athletic purposes. A part of it will be devoted to the building of a new gymnasium and covered stands at the athletic grounds.

The remainder will be devoted to improvements about the college campus to include the erection of a chemistry building, the conversion of the present gymnasium into a James D. Moffatt memorial chapel, and the remodeling of the interior of the main building.

LORENZO SCOTTI, '27, IN HOSPITAL AGAIN

Lorenzo Scotti, '27, was taken to the Geisinger Hospital, in Danville, on Sunday morning, January 31, suffering from kidney trouble. The difficulty is chronic, and this is the second time Scotti has been sent to the Geisinger during his stay at Bucknell. He has been assisting Dean Rivenburg, at the latter's home, in recent weeks. Late last week he began to suffer severely again, and on Sunday the Dean found it necessary to summon the community ambulance and send him to Danville.

just gratification of a reasonable demand.

Proselytizing, scholarships for athletes, and other similar practices have declined to a marked degree, according to officials from all over the country, though they still exist here and there.

Whatever the evils may be in college sports today, followers of college athletics are united in looking forward to the Carnegie report, believing that it will sublimate the facts out of the present confusion of opinions and prejudices. As far as is known this will be the first national survey of the kind, and if concrete data are collected, it will doubtless help pave the way for remedies where they are needed, just as Carnegie Foundation reviews in other directions have been helpful.

Demostheneans Will Give "Cappy Ricks"

Play Will Be One Big Feature Of 27th Celebration Of Founders' Day

As a part of its Founders' Day exercises, the Delta Sigma, Demosthenean fraternity will present "Cappy Ricks," its fifteenth annual play. Other features of the Founders' Day celebration will be two basketball games, a smoker, a banquet, and a rendition of the ritual in a fraternity initiation. The basketball games and the banquet will take place on Saturday, February 6, the twenty-seventh anniversary of the founding of the fraternity at Bucknell.

The annual play of Delta Sigma has grown to be a campus tradition and, from that fact, is the most important of the functions that will crowd the week-end. The play selected is the work of Edward E. Rose, who derived his material from the novel written by Peter B. Kyne. It is a three act comedy filled with humorous situations arising out of the love affair between a father's daughter and his business antagonist. Included in the cast are some of the best undergraduate players in the University. All but two players are members of the college dramatic societies. They are under the direction of Assistant Professor Harry R. Warfel, '20, one of the alumni members of the fraternity. Frank E. Johnston, '28, is acting as stage manager and property man.

Following are the members of the cast:

Jessie Fielding, '29, Eleanor Dakin, '26, Yolonda Frank, '28, Albert Lauderbaugh, '27, Gilbert McCune, '27, Clifford Mellor, '27, Harry Pierson, '28, and Earl McClune, '27.

The presentation of the play will take place in Bucknell Hall before the fraternity and its invited guests. Following the play the chapter will hold a smoker in the fraternity house and the last ceremony of the evening will be an initiation.

The program for Saturday will open with a basketball game between the team of the active chapter and a team made up of alumni members of the fraternity. The fraternity team will play a second game in the afternoon with the Non-Frat team of the Interfraternity League as its opponent.

The second big feature of the celebration will be the banquet to be held Saturday evening at the Cameron House. C. W. Lotte, '14, will be toastmaster at this affair. It is expected that a hundred of the members of the fraternity will be present for this final function of the celebration.

FACULTY GIVES "PREXY" BIG BIRTHDAY PARTY

those of us who were here, felt your warm, friendly personality permeating and strengthening the relations not only between the administration and ourselves, but also among us all. The unfailing and cordial support and cheer we have received from you have been a constant inspiration. For the clear vision and fine courage with which you insisted, at a time when our financial outlook was dark and ominous, upon the material upbuilding of the University, the erection of the Engineering Building wing, the addition to the Chemical Laboratory, the purchase of the Miller farm, the renovation of the old buildings, and, greatest, the erection of new departments of study—we congratulate you. For your constant thoughtfulness of our own comforts, we thank you. It is, we feel, as it was expressed at a recent faculty meeting, that to your leadership, Mr. President, the credit is due for the great progress that Bucknell University has enjoyed since 1919. And, therefore, it is our own pleasure and desire to renew to you and your administration our pledge of continued cooperation and loyal support."

During the evening there were, of course, some songs—Annie Laurie, Old Lang Syne, and the like—in which everybody joined with a will. The quartette of the Girls Glee Club slipped up on the side porch and sang a song, ending their greeting to the President with a lusty "Give 'em L, Bucknell," which wasn't bad advice under the circumstances.

The Cake of the Century

What the visitors actually got was cake and ice cream. And the cake was a wonder. It was done in Chef Moon's finest style. It was a three-decker, carrying a topsail of narcissi, full rigged with asparagus ferns, mounting sixty-four guns in the shape of red candles, and warranted to do frightful execution. It was loaded with eight pounds of nuts, 16 dozen eggs, and 40 pounds of sugar, and ornamented from keel to topsail with rosettes of frosting. It took the chef thirteen hours to build it, and completely refuted that old saw about the number thirteen.

Altogether the evening was a memorable one. It makes another red letter day for the month of February on the new Bucknell calendar.

DEFENDS TRICK DRESS

President Little of Michigan has said, in answer to a criticism of the nondescript clothes appearing on the campus:

"If a man has enough originality to dress as he sees fit, with a view mainly to comfort, cleanliness, and convenience, regardless of the prevailing modes, there is a chance that he may think for himself in greater things. Perhaps one of the highest tributes ever paid to Harvard University was the remark that it is the only school where a student can walk across the campus on a clear day wearing overshoes and carrying an umbrella without attracting attention. It takes a highly intelligent community to let a person do as he thinks best for himself without trying to make him follow what everybody else is doing."

BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY

REMEMBER THE CO-ED BELLE HOP POPULARITY CONTEST

VOLUME XXIX LEWISBURG, PA., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1926. NUMBER 19

Bucknell Octogenarian Now; Charter Granted Feb. 26, 1846

ACT GAVE TRUSTEES RIGHT TO BUILD UNIVERSITY AS SOON AS $100,000 WAS SUBSCRIBED

Friday, February 5, 1926, marked the eightieth anniversary of the passing of the act by the state legislature, which gave "The University at Lewisburg," now our own Bucknell, its earliest corporate rights. In memory of this event the Bucknellian is printing the substance of the charter in this issue. The attested copy of the act is now in the office of the Carnegie Library.

AN ACT

To Establish the University at Lewisburg

Whereas, the Baptists of Pennsylvania, as a denomination, are not now engaged for the maintenance of any particular College or University in this State.

And Whereas, the chartering of a University to be placed under their patronage, supervision, and direction, would be a measure well adapted to call forth, from all parts of this commonwealth, concentrate, increase, and render effective, in the cultivation of sound learning, the efforts of said denomination, and thereby promote the general interests of science, literature, and good morals: Therefore,

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same. That there be, and hereby is erected and established, at or near the borough of Lewisburg in the county of Union, in this commonwealth, a University to consist of a Primary School, an Academy, a College, and such other departments appropriate to a University, as the patrons and managers of said Institution shall find themselves able to maintain; and that the name and constitution of the said University shall be, and they are as follows:

ARTICLE 1.

Section 1. The said Institution shall be forever called and known by the name of "The University at Lewisburg."

ARTICLE 2.

Sect. 1. The said University shall be under the management, direction, government, and supervision of a number of trustees, not exceeding twenty, and a number of curators, not exceeding forty, or a quorum of each, as hereinafter mentioned.

Sect. 2. The trustees and a majority of the curators shall be regular members of the Baptist denomination. Five or more of the trustees shall be a quorum of the trustees; and seven or more of the curators shall constitute a quorum of curators.

ARTICLE 3.

Sect. 1. The trustees of said University shall consist of the following persons, to wit: James Moore, James Moore, jr., Joseph Meixell, William H. Ludwig, Samuel Wolfe, Levi B. Christ, Henry Funk, Joel E. Bradley, Eugenio Kincaid, Benjamin Bear, William W. Keen, William Bucknell, jr., Thomas Watson, James M. Linnard, Lewis Vastine, Oliver Blackburn, Caleb Lee, Daniel L. Moore; which said trustees and their successors, to be elected as herein subsequently mentioned, shall be, forever hereafter, and they are hereby created, established, and declared to be a body politic and corporate, with perpetual succession, and with all the incidents of a corporation, in deed and in law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, by the name, style, and title of "The Trustees of the University at Lewisburg;" by which name and title, said trustees and their successors shall be capable, in law and in equity, to take to themselves and their successors, for the use of said University, any estate in any messuages, lands, tenements, hereditaments, goods, chattels, moneys, or other effects, by gift, grant, bargain, sale, conveyance, assurance, will, devise, or bequest, of any person or persons whatsoever; and to hold ten acres of land together with the improvements thereon exempt from taxation, Provided, That the annual net income accruing from said estate, and subject to a yearly appropriation or disposition of said trustees, shall not exceed the sum of twenty thousand dollars; and the same messuages, lands, tenements, hereditaments, and estates real and personal, to grant, bargain, sell, convey, assure, demise, and to farm let, and place out on interest, or otherwise dispose of, or invest, for the use of said University, in such manner as to them, at least a quorum of them, shall seem most beneficial to said Institution; and to receive the rents, issues, profits, income, and interest of the same, and to apply the same to the proper use of said University; and by the same name, to sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, in any court of law or equity, and in all manner of suits and actions whatsoever; and, generally, by and in the same name, to do and transact all the business touching or concerning the premises, or which shall be incidentally necessary thereto, as fully and effectually, as any natural person, or body politic or corporate, has power to manage the concerns belonging to such person, or body; and to hold, enjoy, and exercise all such powers, authorities, and jurisdictions, as are customary in other Universities, or in Colleges within this commonwealth.

Sect. 2. Said trustees shall cause to be made, for their use, one common seal with such devices and inscriptions thereon, as they shall think proper; and by and with it, all deeds, diplomas, certificates, and acts of said incorporation shall pass and be authenticated; and said trustees may, at their pleasure, alter their seal, or break it and substitute a new one.

Sect. 3. A quorum of said trustees shall meet at Lewisburg, within ten days from the date of this charter, to transact any business which the interests of the Institution may then require. (More particular notice of said meeting shall be given by the first trustee first named on the list.)

Sect. 4. There shall be a meeting of said trustees held as often as once in six months, at or near the borough of Lewisburg, and at such particular times, and place or places, as said trustees, or a quorum of them, shall appoint; of which, after the first meeting, notice shall be given by a written communication signed by the Chairman or Secretary of the Board, and addressed to said trustees severally, at least ten days before the time of such intended meeting, and if at such meeting less than a quorum shall be present, the members present shall have power to adjourn to some other day; but if a quorum of said trustees meet at the appointed time, or at any time of adjournment, then the majority of the votes cast of such quorum or Board, shall be capable of doing, and transacting all the business and concerns of said University not otherwise provided for by this act, and particularly, of making and enacting ordinances and by-laws for the government and instruction of said University; of abiding, within the limit prescribed by article two, section one, to the number of trustees whose names are inserted in this charter; of electing trustees in the place and stead of those who shall decline serving, resign or die, or whose places become vacant from some other cause; of electing or appointing the President, Professors, Tutors, and other teachers of said University; of agreeing with them for their salaries and stipends; of removing them for misconduct, or breaches of the ordinances of the Institution, or other sufficient causes; of appointing a Chairman, Secretary, Treasurer, and other officers necessary for managing the concerns of the corporation; of providing for the maintenance and observance of discipline in said University, and of prescribing and inflicting the penalties due to all violations of the rules, ordinances, or regulations thereof, or to other misconduct committed by students or other persons thereat; and generally by the majority of the voices of the Board or quorum of said trustees, at any stated or extra meeting, shall determine all matter of things (although not herein specified) which shall occasionally arise, and be incidentally necessary to be determined by said trustees; Provided, That said laws, rules, and ordinances, or any of them, be not repugnant to the laws

EAT THREE MEALS, SAYS 'STUDENT EX.'

"Sem" Girls Adopt Health Rules: Sleep, Eat, Exercise, Drink Are Commandments

The women of the college are now in the midst of the second week of a four week's health program, drawn up by the Women's Student Government Association at the suggestion of Professor John W. Rice.

Every once in so often somebody gets an idea that folks don't smile enough, or don't read the right kind of books, or something of that sort, and the result is that we have a National Smile Week, or Book Week, or Clean-up Week. The students at the Women's College found that they were staying up too late at night and in other ways impairing their health, so now they are having a Health Week of their own, only it is to last four weeks instead of one.

A definite health program for the four weeks was drawn up and presented to the students at the regular Student Government meeting on Wednesday evening, February 3. It was enthusiastically adopted.

Professor John W. Rice, who spoke to the girls on the subject of "Health", remarked that they would have a hard time living up to their resolutions, if he knew anything about women. In his talk he outlined the general principles of health, stating that health is positive, and not merely an absence of illness.

Will Eat, Sleep, and Drink

In order to attain this positive state of health the girls resolved that for the week beginning February 3 they would get eight hours of sleep every night. The second week they will get three meals a day and no heavy food after 9 P. M., at the same time continuing with the eight hours of sleep. One hour of exercise every day, preferably in the open, is the program for the third week, while the fourth week will find the co-eds all drinking six glasses of water a day.

Members of the faculty who live at Women's College are also observing these rules. Dean Clark has set a good example by faithfully "getting her eight" every day so far. There is close rivalry between Miss Jenkin-

To Award Belle Hop Loving Cup At Dance

Most Popular Girl To Be Named; "Sem" Co-eds May Attend

On Friday, February 19, the staff of the Belle Hop will have another issue off the press. This issue will be unique in that it will contain votes to be used in the choice of Bucknell's most popular co-ed. The votes will have to be cut out of this issue and turned in to the Belle Hop contest editor before March 1. Votes can either be mailed or placed in the Belle Hop contribution box in the College Inn.

The co-ed receiving the largest number of votes will be awarded a large silver loving cup, suitably inscribed, and her portrait will be published in the March issue of the Belle Hop.

In conjunction with the popularity contest, the staff of the Belle Hop has completed plans for a dance to be held on March 27. The winner of the popularity contest will be announced and the cup awarded, at this dance. Music will be furnished by Noble and his orchestra and Sem girls will be allowed to attend. Plans for extensive decorations and novelty programs are also under way.

Be sure to get your copy of the next issue of the Belle Hop and vote for your choice for the most popular girl.

Teachers of Women's College To Play Students on the Court

The fast-stepping Faculty five will meet a team of star players picked from the women's student body in a basketball game which bids fair to be the sensation of the present season. This epic of the cage, which is being sponsored by the Y. W. C. A., will be held in the Tustin gymnasium sometime in the near future, the proceeds to go to the Student Friendship Fund.

DON'T MISS MISS POPULARITY

D. A. R. ENTERTAINS ALUMNAE WITH PLAY

Members of Lewisburg's D. A. R. Give "The Ladies of Cranford," A Charming Comedy

The Lewisburg Alumnae Club and friends were privileged to see "The Ladies of Cranford," a charming old comedy recently produced by members of the local chapter of the D. A. R. and reproduced by them for the Alumnae Club, on Tuesday evening, February 9, in Bucknell Hall.

Cranford is a little town without a man. Maiden ladies and widows come here to forget their lovers and griefs. In the first act news of the failure of the bank in Cranford has reached Miss Matilda Barker. A mystery in the nature of the whereabouts of Peter, Miss Barker's brother, is imparted to the audience.

The second act takes place in the home of Miss Barker, who has been licensed to sell tea, in order that she may live honestly. In the meantime news that Peter has been elected a Llama of Tibet has reached the town. The scandal mongers decry the fact that Peter does not return to aid his poor sister.

In the third act Peter returns to his sister Matilda, and in spite of the fact that Cranford has existed without the aid of a man, there is comfort in the fact that a man will now make his regular abode in that town of Amazons.

Music was furnished by Robert Dilworth, '27, who sang "Old Black Joe," while Alex Horseback Jr., '27, accompanied him on the banjo which he cleverly plays with a bow to make it sound like an old church organ. Robert H. Smith, '26, played the obligato on the violin. P. G. Murray accompanied Mr. A. J. Roth, '29, while he played "Sharps Flats." Robert Dilworth closed the musical program with "Dawn Light and Bird Song," accompanied by P. G. Murray.

Cast of characters in order of appearance: Miss Mary Smith—Mrs. C. Willard Smith; Miss Jessie Brown—Mrs. George Irland; Martha (Miss Mattie's maid)—Miss Carolyn Hunt; Miss Matilda Jenkyns (the rector's daughter)—Mrs. Strunk; Miss Betty Barker (formerly a milliner)—Mrs. M. L. Drum; Miss Pole (a spinster)

Demie Founders' Day Includes Fine Play

Presentation of "Cappy Ricks" Wins Admiration of Audience

Presenting "Cappy Ricks" as its fifteenth annual play, Delta Sigma staged the dramatic treat of the year for the faculty and its other invited guests in Bucknell Hall last Friday evening.

The inimitable "Doc" McCune, in the leading role of "Cappy," took the audience by storm with the clever handling of his part. Playing with "Cappy" was his fair daughter, "Billy" Dakin, whose acting, coupled with a winsome manner, captivated the listeners in its own way. "Flory's" big, handsome Matt Peasley, a capable ship's mate, in the employ of Ricks, was represented by "Mike" McClune.

The sub-plot received its impetus and effect through the commendable work of Jessie Fielding and Harry Pierson. Albert Lauderbaugh, as Ricks' right hand man, more than once proved to be not only the brains of the Red Star Line executive, but likewise the brawn. Yolanda Frank filled the place of "Cappy's" elderly sister to perfection. The cast is complete with the mention of "Abie" Mellor, in the double role of chauffeur and lawyer.

The "Demie" play has been a unique college function at Bucknell for the past twenty years. No fraternity on the campus, and on only one other college campus in this country as far as is known, has ever followed the similar custom of presenting an annual play. The last play given by this fraternity was "Clarence," in 1923. Then there was a lapse of several years, broken by the presentation of "Cappy Ricks."

The production was directed by Assistant Professor Harry R. Warfel, and the stage management was in the hands of Frank E. Johnston, '28.

The presentation of the play was

University Chief Beneficiary Under Will of Mrs. Larison

CONTRIBUTIONS TO BUCKNELL MORE THAN $25,000. DR. JOHN T. JUDD APPOINTED EXECUTOR

The will of Mrs. Katherine B. Larison who died recently at the home of Professor and Mrs. W. G. Owens, where she had lived for many years, makes Bucknell University the chief beneficiary. Although the estate is not yet settled, Dr. John T. Judd, treasurer of the University, whom the will names as executor, has stated that he expects the gift to amount to at least twenty thousand dollars.

Mrs. Larison had formerly given the University six thousand dollars from which she received an annuity during her lifetime. This will now become the unconditional property of the University and taken together with the portion stipulated in her will, will make her total contribution to Bucknell between twenty-five and thirty thousand dollars.

Following are some excerpts from the will:

"First: I give and bequeath the following sums in money to the following named persons respectively, that is to say: To Mrs. William E. Martin the sum of four hundred (400) dollars; To Mr. William C. Bartel the sum of three hundred (300) dollars; To W. Walter Harris, son of John Howard Harris, the sum of two hundred (200) dollars; and To the trustees of the First Baptist Church of Lewisburg, Pa., the sum of two thousand (2000) dollars.

"Fifth: All the rest and residue of my estate, real or personal, remaining after the aforesaid legacies and the payment thereof and of my funeral expenses and debts, if any, and the expenses of administration of my estate, I give and bequeath as follows, to wit: That if I shall continue to live at the time of my death, then and in such case I give and bequeath to the said Mrs. Jeanette Owens the one-third part of my said residuary estate, provided, however, that if I shall not have my home and continue to live with the said Owens family up to and at the time of my death, then and in such case the above bequest to Mrs. Jeanette Owens shall be null and void and the said one-third part of my residuary estate shall go to Bucknell University, a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, and located at Lewisburg, Pennsylvania.

"Sixth: And in consideration of my great interest in Christian education and of my personal relations to and love for the institution, I give and bequeath the remaining two-thirds of my residuary estate to Bucknell University, located at Lewisburg, Pa., as aforesaid.

"Seventh: I appoint my friend John T. Judd, of Lewisburg, Pa., to be my executor, giving him full power to select one or more persons to act with him in that capacity, if he so desires.

Dean Clark Talks To Philadelphia Alumnae

Tells Them What College Girls Do Today, at Club Luncheon

"What College Girls Are Doing Now" was the subject of an address by Miss Amelia E. Clark, dean of women, at a luncheon of the Bucknell Alumnae Club of Philadelphia in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel on Saturday, February 6.

Approximately fifty alumnae attended the luncheon, which was preceded by a short business meeting.

Miss Clark, in her address, which she insisted was not a "dleanly talk on the modern trend of education nor a discussion of the smoking problem, but merely an informal chat," told about the health program which is being carried out now at Women's College. She said, "We are doing our best to keep up, in the midst of their studies, the cast iron constitutions our students have brought with them. While none of them seem to be in the least danger, we are holding a contest which aims ultimately at the consumption of only three meals a day."

The opportunities for social and spiritual as well as physical development were outlined by Miss Clark in order to show that Bucknell girls are not being allowed to become mentally top-heavy. "The boarding school graduate, I have always felt, has a distinct social advantage over the college graduate," she said. "Though the latter may be much superior mentally, she suffers from the lack of social training, or disuse of the home training. Sorority activities help, but they do not reach the entire student body." She also told of the work of various campus organizations in offering opportunities for religious training.

Miss Clark, who was guest of honor at the luncheon, was the guest of Mrs. I. H. O'Harra, 4109 Locust street, Institute, '88. The president of the Alumnae Club is Miss Jennie G. Eckels, '91.

Mrs. K. A. Lovell, Institute, '65, spoke about life when she was in college. She recounted how, when the men students left for the Civil War, they all lined up while the college girls went along the line and kissed every one of them goodbye.

Students at Yale and at the University of Michigan are seeking self-help by selling their blood for transfusions.

Mr. Asa C. Baldwin To Lecture on "Alaska"

Will Speak in Baptist Church March 4; Knows Northland

The lecture on "Aaska" to be given by Mr. Asa C. Baldwin on March 4, will be given in the Baptist church at eight o'clock. The Education Club of the University, under whose auspices the speaker will appear, hopes to arrange a matinee lecture also, but has no definite information on this point as yet.

Mr. Baldwin's acquaintance with the North Country is based on seventeen years of experience and travel on the trails in various parts of Alaska, and he brings a lore of the territory that few men possess. His experiences in Alaska, are supplemented by his experiences elsewhere and it is his background of exciting and extraordinary experiences that makes him unusually interesting as a lecturer.

One of the most interesting fields of his experience was his part in the educational work of the territory as the first president of the University of Valdez which was opened November 1, 1916, at Valdez, Alaska. The university was situated in a mining locality and was intended to meet the needs of the community. The emphasis was placed on matters connected with the mining industry. Courses in assaying, geology, mineralogy, chemistry, surveying, and hydraulics were conducted by experts and experienced teachers. A course in practical electricity was also included in the curriculum.

In addition to the work closely related to the mining industry, there were courses in home economics, civics, bookkeeping, history, English, French, Spanish, German, education, and first aid. Music was also taught and regular courses offered in piano, guitar, mandolin, violin, and voice.

Mr. Baldwin is a graduate of Western Reserve University. He served with the American Expeditionary Forces during the war and participated in the Meuse-Argonne battle.

Seniors who wish to enrol in the appointment bureau conducted by the department of education, are requested by Professor F. G. Davis to meet him in room three in Old Main, on Monday, February 15, at 3:30 o'clock. The services of this placement bureau are free and Professor Davis will be glad to do all he can to secure teaching positions for those who enrol.

VOTE ON THE 19th.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI KAPPA PSI

Phi Kappa Psi takes pleasure in announcing the pledging of A. W. Katchmar, of Ansonia, Conn., and J. G. McLain of Morgantown, West Virginia.

Brother C. T. Bunting, of Philadelphia was a recent visitor at the house.

Mrs. Lewis B. Kesler, of Millville, New Jersey, and Professor and Mrs. Stolz and family were entertained at dinner on Wednesday, February 3.

Gardner's Campus Serenaders have been secured to furnish music for an informal dance to be held at the Phi Psi house on Saturday evening, February 13.

SIGMA CHI

The pledges of Kappa chapter of Sigma Chi entertained the active chapter with an enjoyable town dance at the chapter house on Friday evening, January 29. Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders furnished the music for the evening.

William Beynon, captain of the Washington and Jefferson College freshman eleven of the past season, visited friends at the Sigma Chi house on Wednesday, February 3.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Brother "Cap" Reed, '24, was a guest of the chapter at dinner Sunday.

Brother Dick Richards, '24, of Altoona, spent the week-end with his brothers. "Biff" is now engaged in the steel business in Altoona.

The chapter takes great pleasure in announcing the initiation of "Bill" Samuel, '28. Bill can now be seen every morning in the Inn with his coat wide open. (He doesn't mind colds).

Brother Bender, freshman basketball coach at Gettysburg, and Pledge Brother Fisher, were guests of the chapter Friday and Saturday.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Pennsylvania Zeta of Sigma Alpha Epsilon announces with pleasure the initiation of Pledge Brothers Davison, Mackenzie, Montgomery, and Shipman on the evening of February 2.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon announces with pleasure the pledging of Preston B. Davis, of Milton, Pa., and N. Frederick McKinney, of Detroit, Michigan.

Brother Tom Umlauf visited the boys for a short time last week.

Mrs. L. E. Baker of Milton was a dinner guest at the house Thursday evening, February 4.

Plans have been completed for the formal "Sem" dance to be held on Saturday evening, February 20. Music will be furnished by Nesbit's Ramblers.

The Rev. Gilbert Lovell, of New York City, well known vocational counsellor, was a luncheon guest at the house last Saturday.

Professor and Mrs. H. Scheidy Everett and daughter, Margaret Louise, were guests of the fraternity at dinner on Sunday, February 7.

KAPPA SIGMA

Alpha Phi chapter of Kappa Sigma announces with pleasure the initiation of Harry R. Barber, '28, and James P. Davis, '28.

The chapter held an informal "Sem" dance at the house Saturday evening, February 6.

"Ed" Servic and "Lonny" Kittle, two members of the chapter at Penn State, were entertained here during the week-end.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Iota of Kappa Delta Rho held a dance for its friends at the "Sem" on Saturday evening, January 30. Mr. and Mrs. Lowry and Mr. and Mrs. Smith were the chaperones. Peppy music was furnished by the Campus Serenaders and the whole effect was given "the air" by the University radio station, WJBU.

The chapter takes pleasure in announcing the pledging of Paul Crago, of Porto Rico.

Assistant Professor and Mrs. D. M. Griffith were guests at dinner at the house Thursday evening.

Brother Dykins, from the chapter at Franklin and Marshall College, visited Iota Wednesday.

ALPHA CHI MU

Two radios at the house are now busily engaged in "tuning in" on the programs broadcast by WJBU. Ken Moyle and Gilbert Bennett have installed receiving apparatus in their respective rooms, and have little difficulty in getting Bucknell because of its proximity. Last week Ken also listened in on KFAM, Long Beach, California.

To recuperate from that hectic week of examinations which we are all glad is over, but not forgotten, a "Vic" dance, with refreshments on the side, was held at the house last Saturday. The twelve couples who attended were chaperoned by Mrs. Beatty, house mother at the Brady, and Miss Kathryn Clush.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

Theta "U's" basketball five lost to St. Joseph's High School team of Ashland on Saturday, February 5, by a score of 35-33.

"Gene" Halleran, '27, has organized a ten-piece house orchestra to provide entertainment for the boys throughout the winter. Cornely, '26, Klingler, '29, Halleran, '27, and Angus, '26, comprise a "blue-blowers" quartet which is hard to beat.

BETA KAPPA

Eta chapter of Beta Kappa expects to hold a "town" dance in the Lewisburg Club Saturday evening, February 20.

Brother Carstater will leave Thursday evening for a week's trip. He has been selected by the national officers to carry out some of their plans for the Pennsylvania region.

PI BETA PHI

Pi Beta Phi held a tea in the parlors of the Women's College on Tuesday afternoon, January 19. The guests included wives of the faculty, and feminine members of the faculty. Constance Ziegler, '28, entertained with selections on the piano, and Elizabeth Sale, '29, gave a reading.

The fraternity held its second informal dance of the first semester in the Sigma Chi house on Saturday evening, January 30.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Delta Delta Delta gave a midyear dance at the Phi Gamma Delta house on January 8.

On January 16, Mrs. Colestock, one of the Tri Delta patronesses, gave a party and candy pull to the Tri Delta girls. Each one of them donned an apron, attacked the pots and pans and the sugar can, and proved her skill in the art of candy making.

Another patroness of Delta Delta Delta, Mrs. Paul Stoltz, gave a party to the girls on January 23. She invited them to hear Tri Delt songs on the radio.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Eta chapter of Alpha Chi Omega is very grateful to Mrs. James H. Matthews, one of the patronesses of the fraternity, for the rewiring and relighting of the chapter's suite in Wolfe House.

Eight "Sadies" were pledged to the fraternity on Monday evening, February 1, in the suite: Eloise Bailey, Edythe Evans, Clara Fortner, Jane Foust, Helen Leininger, Josephine Roberts, Margaret Wallace, and Jean Wood.

Mrs. Beatty, house mother of Brady and Doubler Houses, and a patroness of Alpha Chi Omega, entertained the girls at a delightfully informal Sunday evening supper at 5:30 on February 7, in Brady House. A special treat was the plates of steaming hot homemade biscuits.

PHI MU

Th relief from the strain of examination week was evidenced by the gayety at the formal dance given by Phi Mu at the S. A. E. house on Saturday evening, January 30. Novel favors, attractive decorations, dainty refreshments, and a peppy orchestra contributed to the success of the affair. Guests from out of town were Grace Matthews and Margaret Matthews, of Philadelphia, Betty Mendenhall, of Kennett Square, Nellie Harper, of Scranton, Mary Taubel and Sally Myers.

The chaperones were Mrs. Llewellyn Phillips and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph F. Hartz. Noble and his orchestra entertained.

Mrs. Lillian Mogarit, a Phi Mu of Winston College, Salem, S. C., recently visited the chapter. Mrs. Mogarit is planning to take up extension work in law at the University of Pittsburgh.

ZETA GAMMA TAU

Zeta Gamma Tau is pleased to announce the initiation on Tuesday evening, February 2, of Dorothy Wolverton, '28, and Genevieve Punches, '28, and the pledging of Naomi Brace, '29.

Lonely Spot

One a year a little ship, the Moravian, crosses the Atlantic to Moravian missions among the Eskimos of Labrador. A solitary missionary of the Church of England is stationed there at the Indian settlement of Ungava. There are few lonelier inhabited areas in the world.

Moorish Superstitions

One of the first things a traveler notices in a Moorish town are the "hands," painted or drawn, on the walls of many dwellings. These are to avert the "evil spirit"; five, the number of fingers, is considered a sacred number.

The Diary Of A Girl Of The Middle Ages

By Virginia D. Wallis

On this, the fifth day of June, in the year of Our Lord 1292, according to the calender of Caesar, I, Yolanda, daughter of the Baron of Garnier, having been instructed in the art of quill-writing by the scribe, Pedro, and, being desirous of practicing my accomplishments, do hereby begin a record of my life. Perchance some of my descendants, who have learned to decipher script, will find this manuscript, and be enlightened as to the manner of living on a barony.

I arose in the fourth this morning. Marie and Rosalie assisted me with my toilet. We then knelt in prayer as every pious lady in the land should do. The morning was fair, and, my maids, being in a frolicsome spirit, desired a walk in the garden. We breakfasted at five. My mother being dead this many a year, I have the management of the palais. I attended my Sire on his inspection of the falcon house and the stables. Dinner at ten was unusually late. I embroidered tapestry this afternoon. My taper burns low.

June 8

My Sire presented me with a valuable falcon, a glove, and an elaborate hood. I had it out today. He is a well trained bird. I do not need to use a lure, but he will return to my wrist of his own will. We had a glorious race over thicket and fallow until a blue heron was sent up. I unhooded my falcon, and straightway he rose in the air and darted after his prey. I am exceedingly proud of my bird. Were not vanity so sinful, I would carry him to church. Indeed our bishop chained his pet falcon to the alter during mass on Sunday.

June 15

Everything is bustle today. About the seventh hour came the sound of a horn in the turret. The steward reported that the guests were strange nobles and their retinue. My Sire went forth to lead the horses, while I summoned my maidens. We assisted them to remove their armor and bathed their feet. They carry the banners of Normandy. I admonished Richard, the cook, to do his best, and indeed he did. One dish, very elegant, was a peacock served as though it were strutting on a bright green lawn. Our guests will tarry a few days.

June 25

I have, on this day, discovered the purpose of the nobles' visit. They wish to arrange a marriage between their prince and me. I should be honored. It is not every day that a girl, as humble and as lacking of maidenly beauty, has her hand sought by a prince. My Sire has promised that I shall never marry against my will. He is kind indeed to his motherless daughter. I cannot marry a man whom I have never seen. If my Sire does not regret and forget his promise, I am fortunate beyond all hopes. How I pity Marie, daughter of Deboise! Methinks it is unfitting for a girl to marry a man three times her age. But that was the wish of her father. Father has invited the prince to the palais. His coming will be celebrated by a tournament.

July 1

The weather is balmy. It is almost too warm to wear my pelisson. This morning word was brought to me that a long line of poor were standing by the drawbridge, asking alms. I sought out the castle almonier, and we went to the gate. I found many of the same old beggars and some new ones. These last, by their trickery, would have us give alms where none are needed. Alas! That I cannot do something to relieve the worthy ones! But we are blest by having the poor among us. It is by much alms-giving that our sins are forgiven. How unfortunate that we have been promised, "The poor will be with ye always." The cry of "Alms! For the sake of Christ, alms!" always has a curious effect upon me. It causes a lump to form in my throat. I must seek advice from Maitre Henri the next time it happens.

July 10

A troupe of wandering jongleurs are guests today. They played upon their harps and viols while we danced the galliard and tourdion. I was near exhaustion. Father was making plans for the tournament, but as yet the Norman prince has not appeared. I wonder if he will be tall and have a fierce visage.

July 12

The jongleurs are still with us. Truly they are marvelous. They hung by their feet on the beams. They did tricks with playing cards, and made peas disappear under shells. They even gave a short farce. Then they started to tell stories. I and my maidens withdrew immediately. Father was well pleased with them. He gave each a denier before they left.

July 20

Rene, one of the serfs, was reported sick. Father says he is very valuable as a gardener. I visited his family today. They live in a miserable hovel. I must speak to father about it, although he will be angry with me. Maitre Henri had given Rene a panacea of dried toad's liver and goat's milk. Good Father Gregorie brought from the monastery two teeth of the prophet Amos and a shred of the robe of Saint Bernard. Rene is dreadfully sick. His neck is swollen below his ears to an immense size. He also has a fever.

July 29

Rosalie is becoming very clever at chess. She checkmated me fairly today. I spent the afternoon in the garden with my maidens. I set them to weaving woolen cloth for winter. My figs are failing, but my herbs and flowers are at their height. Grapes are coming on. Herman says that next spring we will try to raise cherries without stones.

Father will take us to the fair so that I may find suitable gowns for the coming tournament. He still plans for it, but the prince has not arrived. Today father spoke about carpenters to build the lists. I wonder if the prince will have blue eyes and golden hair. I reminded father of his promise. He said not a word, but his eyes twinkled right merrily.

I have been at the fair for one glorious week. I have never been so far from the palais before, except when I was a child. Mother had taken me with her to this same fair. I did not remember anything about it. There were people from many lands. They wore strange clothes, and spoke outlandish tongues. The dark skinned Jews with their saffron circles on their coats, were everywhere. All the beggars and cripples for miles around were there. I commissioned Richard to purchase a goodly supply of spice. The prices are shockingly high, but one must have clove and cinnamon. There is a queer new flavoring called sugar. It gives the food a honey-like taste. It comes in small lumps, and is appallingly high in price.

As for clothes, I found a pair of fine cordova slippers. The pointed style is becoming quite popular. I found some ermine to trim my new pelisson. I have yards of green silk for my bliaut. My girdle will be of gold disces, each engraved and set with gems. The merchant assured me that it had been wrought in Athens. I have yards of snow white linen and some sendel silk for banners. I bought some indigo dye from Jerusalem, and will set my maidens to dying wool and weaving. Blue is the color of our house, and all the servitors shall have new blue bliauts before the tournament.

August 20

A new troubadour is here. He is indeed handsome beyond words. He is tall and strong, has curling yellow locks and flashing blue eyes. He has but lately come from Normandy and tells of the peace and plenty that reigns there. He does not want to speak of the prince. He has a beautiful voice. Father has set the date for the tournament—September 15.

August 28

My troubadour sang to me in the garden while I worked on some tapestry. He also told me of the wonders of Italy, of the great churches and buildings, of the silks, satins, and furs worn, and of the beauty of Venice. He tells of a little pronged stick that the priests are using to eat with. My troubadour is so gentle. A wren was exhaustion. Father was making

Washington & Lee Students May "Take It or Leave It" Under Honor Sales System

There has grown up on the Washington and Lee campus a method of buying and selling which must be unique since it seems to awaken such amazement among the visitors. The "Co-op store has regular counters piled with priced articles where every customer pockets whatever articles he selects, makes his own change out of an open money box, and departs, without the intervention or even the notice of a salesman. The day before a recent "great game" with the University of Virginia some enterprising student placed hundreds of lapel buttons with the college colors on a table under a campus tree, priced according to size, with an open box to afford change and hold the money. Before night the box was so overflowing with bills that a passing professor placed a weight on them to keep the pile from blowing away. Over 300 emblems were sold in this way without a salesman in sight, and before dark the pile of bills and coins on the lonely table exceeded $125. At the same time the following were noticed in a walk through the University buildings:

In the basement of the Gymnasium was an immense box of bagged peanuts with an open box near by to hold the money. Near the stair landing of the largest dormitory an open barrel of fancy apples was found, with a money box resting on the apples, and a card put up by the unknown salesman stating the price. Meanwhile, in one of the corridors of the Graham Dormitory, holding 116 students, might be found every night in the lighted open hall a well-stocked "midnight lunch" table with money box and schedule of prices, but no visible salesman. It was stated that the box generally held from three to five dollars by morning.

The above are but a few concrete example of the honor system in actual operation. Perhaps other institutions may be even more successful in realizing its full possibilities as a character builder. Amid the ebb and flow of incoming and outgoing classes these methods and customs illustrate the amazing dominance of the atmosphere and traditions of a college campus, which are often more permanent than its buildings and always more powerful than its faculty regulations.—Washington and Lee University Bulletin.

One Thousand "Best Books" Go on U. P. Library Shelves

With a $10,000 gift from an anonymous donor to be devoted to its maintenance, a special collection of 1,000 best books was recently installed in the University of Pennsylvania Library to aid students and others who wish to embark upon a comprehensive course of helpful reading.

The books were selected by Asa Don Dickinson, university librarian, and represent the consensus of opinion as expressed by fifty-eight different authorities who, from time to time, compiled lists of worthwhile books. Works of fiction, poetry, drama, essays, humor, criticism, history, biography and travel are included in the collection.

Mr. Dickinson has subdivided the books into ten representative lists of 100 each, and suggests that it would be quite practicable for a booklover to acquire a general acquaintance with all the books on one of these lists each year, in addition to actually reading at least several of those that particularly appeal to him.

Of the 400 authors whose works make up the collection, Great Britain has contributed 220; the United States 99; France, 51, and Germany, 20. Sixteen Greek, 14 Roman, 11 Italian, and 6 Russian authors are represented, as well as several writers of other nationalities.

On the basis of the fifty-eight lists consulted in compiling the 1,000 best books collection, Sir Walter Scott's writings are given a prominent place, thirty-eight authorities having included one or more of Scott's works in their lists. One or more of Shakespeare's works was endorsed by thirty-four authorities; Dickens received thirty endorsements; Cervantes and Thackeray twenty-eight and Goldsmith, Dante and Milton twenty-seven each.

Works of Bunyan, DeFoe and Homer appeared on twenty-six of the lists, and Hugo's works on twenty-five. Other authors, one or more of whose writings received the recommendation of at least twenty authorities, were Eliot, Hawthorne, Swift, Kingsley, Bacon, Carlyle, Emerson, Wordsworth, Balzac, Bronte, Byron, Cooper, Dumas, Fielding, Plutarch, and Spencer.

Of the 1,000 books selected 257 were written in the nineteenth century, 87 in the eighteenth; 34 in the seventeenth; 22 in the sixteenth century; and 24 in the period before Christ.

Princeton Men to Investigate Reason for Cleopatra's Hops

"Why did Shakespeare make Cleopatra hop?" is the question whose solution will win a monetary and scholastic reward for some upper classman in the Princeton University. The Bard of Avon attributes this queer behavior to the most attractive of ancient beauties in his play, "Anthony and Cleopatra," in the passage in which a minor character speaks of "seeing Cleopatra hopping forty paces along the public street." There is no commonly known source for the imputation of such an action to the lovely Egyptian and as an incentive to outside investigation of the classics bearing on the life of Cleopatra, a reward has been offered by Professor Thomas Marc Parrott, of the English department, for information concerning the source of the passage.

It is thought by students of Shakespeare that the greater portion of historical data used in "Anthony and Cleopatra" was taken from Plutarch's "Lives," but there is no account of such a hopping method of travel by Cleopatra in the "Lives." It has been suggested by a German student of Elizabethan literature that Shakespeare simply invented the passage, probably as the result of seeing some woman of the taverns fulfill a wager by hopping across the street, but Professor Parrott declared that Shakespeare was not in the habit of inventing passages of this type.

There exists a paper by a Shakespearean commentator which declares that the dramatist transcribed the passage in question from the work of a classical historian. It is the source for which the students are searching and for the discovery of which the reward will be paid.

Illinois Students Object To Alumni Boozing at Games

The day before the great Michigan-Illinois game the Illinois Student Council issued a manifesto, from which we are glad to quote, because we believe it expresses typical undergraduate sentiment.

From such evidence as we can gather, backed by personal observation, we believe that undergraduate lawlessness in violation of prohibition is local, is restricted almost wholly to certain metropolitan districts, and is instigated largely by alumni influence. The following manifesto, which appeared in The Daily Illini, supports this opinion.

"To the visitors on the campus this week-end:

"The Student Council of the University of Illinois at this time calls the attention of those who come here today and tomorrow to certain aspects of Homecoming from the undergraduate point of view:

"The students are trustees of a great responsibility and a great name—the University, created and sustained by the genius and effort of countless thousands of constructive thinkers.

"The undergraduates strive as best they can to discharge the duties of trustees. They observe the laws and regulations of the University, they maintain the University's good name, and they do what they can to further the general interests of the entire University.

"Whatever occurs within the precincts of Champaign and Urbana reflects indirectly on the state, to be sure, but directly and immediately it reflects on us, the students of the University. Within the state it is the undergraduates whose most vital concern the reputation of the University is.

"The student body frowns on drinking. There is a definite sentiment on the campus against it. Drinking reflects on the reputation of the University in general, and on the students in particular. The undergraduates, to a degree, are judged wherever they may go by the behaviour of the alumni whom the University has sent out, and the visitors it has attracted.

"The Student Council therefore begs every visitor of the week-end to do nothing which will harm the well-being of the University of Illinois."

Claremont Colleges A Novel Organization

Plan Proposed By Pomona Head Is a New Step In Meeting Crowded Conditions

We are indebted to President Blaisdell of Pomona College for the following interesting statement:

Pomona College is proposing an experiment in collegiate organization which is attracting wide attention. Some years ago this college limited its attendance to 750 undergraduates, since which time it has been possible to receive only a small proportion of the applicants for admission; nor has it been possible to accept those applying for advanced standing. There has been a growing feeling that it was not wise to maintain so severe a restriction. On the other hand, there has been strong objection to any increase in the size of the present college.

Instead of enlarging the present institution, the authorities have determined to welcome the establishment of other colleges upon the large campus of nearly five hundred acres. It is hoped that thus the values of the small college may be maintained, increased by facilities which can only be secured where a larger body of students is present. It is the plan that these colleges will function together in certain mutual interests. The central library, certain laboratories, and other facilities will be used in common, though the institutions will maintain separate administrations and existence. No definite number of colleges is planned, and the scheme will be allowed to unfold naturally.

As a first step in the development of the project, Miss Ellen B. Scripps has given $500,000 toward the establishment of a college for women, to be known as Scripps College for Women. This innstitution is now being incorporated together with a central institution through which the others will carry on their mutual projects. The latter is to be known as Claremont Colleges, the name "university" being purposely avoided. It is expected that all graduate and extension work will be carried on by the central body. The various colleges will be residential in character, and there will be free interchange of academic opportunities. The details of the whole interrelation will be worked out deliberately. President Blaisdell being set free for a year for the study of educational organization and the development of the plan. He is now in Europe on this errand.

Pomona has always been in the best sense one of the most conservatively administered colleges of the West. Its success has been due largely to this character, and its effort to serve an enlarged constituency while at the same time maintaining the advantages of the smaller groupings will undoubtedly be watched with great interest.

CORNELL'S $4 TAX AIMS TO HUMANIZE COLLEGE

Students entering Cornell University this fall are required to pay a special tax of four dollars. The proceeds of the tax are to be expended to make Cornell "a more human university." That seems very old. Most of the complaint that is heard about American universities is that they are too human. It is incessantly charged that too much time is devoted to the social and athletic welfare of the students and not enough to their intellectual development. . . .

The "college boy" scion of the country' hears is an expensive-looking young man who travels around to football games in a high-powered car and reaches into the pockets of his raccoon coat for hundred-dollar bills to bet on his team. This specimen, however, is representative of only a small fraction of the students at universities.

For every student going through college in ease and comfort there is another (usually two or three) having a pretty miserable time. His club is a rooming house, his dining hall is a noisy and messy cafeteria, and his refuge is a corner drug store, or possibly the library.

In every large university in the East there are thousands of students who only see the gay side of college life from a distance. Some know it only through the novels they read.

Cornell will expend the fund raised by the special tax to organize a pleasant social life for students who have no clubs, no motor cars, no doting daddies to ease the course of their university education. If the money is well expended, it is possible for Cornell to make another notable contribution to the advance of education in the United States.—The Rutland News.

The tournament draws near. My troubadour is leaving before the event. Father only smiles when I ask him about the prince.

September 14

The carpenters have been busy all day in the lists. My troubadour is gone, and the prince has not come.

September 16

The tournament is over, and I am nigh bursting with joy. The lodges were filled with gorgeously dressed ladies from all parts of the barony. There was a great deal of ogling and waving. The jousting came first, then the melee. There was a strange knight in the melee, one who would not give his name. How courteous he was when he unhorsed an opponent. I was to present the crown of victory, and when the strange knight rode up and lowered his vizor, I almost collapsed. There was my troubadour in silvery mail. I glanced at father, and his eyes were full of twinkles. I just stood there and gasped until father said, "Daughter, the Prince is waiting." I managed to put the wreath on his head.

MEIKLEJOHN ACCEPTS WISCONSIN POSITION

Former Amherst Head Will Teach Philosophy at Western School

Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn has accepted a post in the department of philosophy of the University of Wisconsin. He will commence work at the University at the beginning of the second semester.

Inn a recent statement President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin said:

"Dr. Meiklejohn is one of the great and gifted teachers of this generation. His philosophical studies have been enriched by fruitful contacts with activities outside the boundaries of his special subject. I think Wisconsin is to be congratulated on Dr. Meiklejohn's appointment. From him we expect productive scholarship and provocative teaching."

In 1923 Dr. Meiklejohn was forced to resign from the presidency of Amherst College because of opposition of his liberal curriculum reforms. His popularity among the students was attested by the fact that 13 seniors refused their diplomas as a protest against his resignation.

DO WE HAVE WRITERS OF MERIT?

Several years ago the University maintained two publications with seperate staffs, the one a newspaper and the othe a literary magazine. The Bucknellian was at that time a four page paper issued weekly. The literary magazine was named "The Mirror" and was scheduled to come out five times a year. In 1923 the staffs of the two publications were theoretically combined and the merger produced our present Bucknellian with eight pages of reading matter.

According to the agreement made at that time a certain amount of the material used in the Bucknellian each week was to be of a literary nature in order that the students who were interested in writing might not lack a medium of expression. The year that the new policy was adopted, 1923-24, a department called the "Literati" was made a regular part of the paper and it was under this department that the literary productions of the college should have made their appearance. In the two years during which this column was a regular feature of the paper it ceased to be a medium through which aspiring writers might find expression and became an instrument of fame for the editor. People who were willing and able to contribute were hard to find and the result was disheartening.

This year the staff decided to discontinue the column because it lacked interest. The Bucknellian is open to contributions of a literary nature; in fact we want to be the sponsors of student literary productions, but we feel that these should be spontaneous and not enforced.

In order to give the staff a start we have encouraged several essay classes that were considered worthy of the time to read the writer's opinions. The best of these appears in this issue. We hope to be able to present others during the term, but most of all we hope for voluntary contributions to the Bucknellian. That is the only kind of work that shows real interest.

FOUNDERS' DAY

In this issue of the Bucknellian we are printing the original charter as set out by the Pennsylvania Legislature "creating and establishing a University to be near the borough of Lewisburg."

This act was passed on the fifth day of February, 1846, and the corporate existence of the University began on that date. It is then only natural to suppose that this would be the Founders' Day of the University.

Yet few of our students are aware of the fact that has just been stated. Why do we not fittingly mark that day?

The arrangement would be very simple. The calendar of the college might easily be so adjusted that this date should fall between semesters. Here then would be an opportunity to have a mid-year commencement, an academic procession, an elevation of classes and a celebration of the birth of the University at the same time. For this year the date is past and we have made only passing notice of the fact. May we not look forward and plan for a better recognition of the day when it next passes?

Pi Delta Epsilon Editorial Contest

Pi Delta Epsilon, the honorary journalistic fraternity, decided early in the year to hold an editorial contest in which every student of the college would be eligible to participate with the exception of members of the fraternity. This plan has developed slowly until in the meeting held last Thursday evening the rules were drawn up and approved. The rules for contestants are as follows:

1. Eligibility: Any student in the college may participate unless he is a member of Pi Delta Epsilon.
2. Subject: The subject may be any need that the writer feels to be present at Bucknell. The need may be either positive or negative but must be concerning the University.
3. Length: The maximum length of the editorial will be seven hundred (700) words. There is no minimum.
4. Mechanical requirements: All manuscripts must be typewritten, double-spaced on white paper of business size. Margins of at least an inch must be left on each side of the paper.
5. Method of submission: The manuscript may not bear the name of the author or any other distinguishing marks except its title. Manuscripts shall be sealed in an envelope along with a slip of paper giving the writer's name, class, and college address. All manuscripts should be sent to Eugene D. Carstater, editor of the Bucknellian Box X, Lewisburg, and should be marked "Contest."
6. Date of closing: No manuscripts will be accepted that bear a post mark later than 12 M., March 16.
7. Prizes: The fraternity will award two prizes of fifteen and ten dollars to the writers of the editorials which shall be adjudged respectively first and second. These editorials and also first and second honorable mention will be published in the Bucknellian.
8. Unsuccessful contestants: All manuscripts are to become the property of the fraternity to be used by it for any purpose. It may publish any of these, giving credit to the writer.

The judges have not yet been chosen but there will be not less than two and they shall be members of the faculty. The manuscripts will be given to the judges bearing only numbers for identification and they will be judged only on their merits as careful, constructive treatments of specific needs at the University.

The winners will be announced and the prizes will be awarded as soon as the judges have reached their decision.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

The presentation of the annual play by the Delta Sigma fraternity calls to our mind the value of such functions especially to college fraternities.

George Banta, editor and publisher of Banta's Greek Exchange, one of the national officers of Phi Delta Theta, and the highest authority on Greek letter fraternities in the United States today, in addressing a convention of a small fraternity last summer remarked that he considered every fraternity as an educational institution.

How much of our education really does come from our associations with our fellow students! And how often that association does not lead to the best results!

It is such customs as the presentation of a play or the holding of an essay contest, as Phi Gamma Delta is now doing, or the presentation of scholarship cups as several others do annually, that make the fraternity really become an educational institution, as Mr. Banta said it should be.

Here at Bucknell there seems to be a lack of annual customs of this sort among the fraternities. There is an annual Founders' Day Banquet, an annual dance of some kind, an annual Symposium, and an annual initiation, but the existence of a distinctively educational nature are very few.

We point out the need for more of these customs in the hope that some live fraternity will see fit to initiate a really worth while movement. We hope that man will be forthcoming will be found.

One should not overlook exercise, either, in the building up of customs. The organization of a monthly basketball team has given impetus and has a nucleus for live-ship, a common cause for which to work. That center should not be abandoned at the end of the athletic season.

Briefly we want to say that in an educational system where the overcrowded condition makes it necessary that the greater part of what is gained must be self-education, we should aim to make that self-education of the highest and best type. We should see to it that it has a permanent cultural value as well as a transient amusing value. Let's look ourselves over, size our institutions up, and do some constructive work.

CYRIL KRITZER, EX-'28 NOW PUBLICITY MAN

J. Cyril Kritzer, ex-'28, has just been appointed to the post of publicity man for St. Bonaventure College. Kritzer entered St. Bonaventure last fall. He had worked on the Bucknellian, the Bucknell Alumni Monthly, and on newspapers in Wilkes-Barre and the vicinity. When St. Bonaventure recently decided to have a publicity staff, Kritzer and another student were chosen to organize the work. They have been very successful, and have gotten a considerable amount of matter about St. Bonaventure into the press. Kritzer writes that if he can get a paying job for the summer, he will surely be back at Bucknell next fall. His home is in Avoca.

"I haven't seen your father lately." "He's having trouble with his vertebra."

"I hate those foreign cars."

"Ah, a brief case," remarked the attorney when the man was convicted in record time.

preceded by the playing of a college medley by three "Demie" musicians; Paul Murray, '29, at the piano, and R. H. Smith, '26, and Paul K. Stolz, '28, playing violins. During the first interim, Murray played several more selections, and Robert E. Dilworth, '27, sang three songs during the second curtain.

The audience included members of the faculty and faculty ladies, the members and alumni of the fraternity and their guests, the members of Cap and Dagger and of Frill and Frown, and representatives of the other fraternities and their guests. The hall was comfortably filled.

The twenty-seventh Founders' Day celebrations by Delta Sigma fraternity consisted of a full program of activities during the past week-end. In addition to the presentation of the play "Cappy Ricks" on Friday evening, there was the initiation the same night of two new members, a basketball game Saturday afternoon, and the regular Founders' Day banquet that evening in the Cameron House. "Cappy Ricks" started things with a bang. From the fact that the play was a hit to all those who saw it, the Demie alumni had no reason to believe that the chapter has been on the down grade since their active connections with it.

Later on Friday night, the alumni had the opportunity to go back over the memories of initiation, when J. Kimrel McDowell and Paul Stolz, both of '28, were taken into membership.

The basketball game Saturday afternoon, which the Demies lost 23-15, was rather disappointing to both alumni and natives. Delta Sigma was favored to win, but ragged playing turned the tables on her.

With the banquet at the Cameron House on Saturday evening, the Founders' Day activities were brought to a climax. Twenty-five returned alumni, and all the active and pledge men joined in a few hours of renewing acquaintances feasting, and listening to speeches. The one and only "Abe" Lutz sat up in his usual style as Toastmaster. Paul G. Abraham and Leola W. Bobey likewise made their presence felt both by addresses and by the customary exchange of jokes on one another. Other alumni talked to the gathering, and each class of the actives was represented by a speaker. Dr. Thomas F. Hamblin, of the Bucknell faculty, who is always present at such Delta Sigma functions as guest, was also one of those who spoke.

Carstater Visits Colleges To Inspect Frat Petitioners

This issue of the Bucknellian was published during the absence of the editor-in-chief, Eugene D. Carstater, who was selected by the national officers of his fraternity, Beta Kappa, to inspect groups of students at Allegheny and Penn State, that are petitioning Beta Kappa for membership in that organization. It is altogether unusual for an undergraduate to be selected for a task that carries so much responsibility. This appointment, in the opinion of the members of the staff of the Bucknellian, is truly merited, and the staff takes this opportunity to congratulate the editor. Both Bucknell and the Bucknellian are honored by this expression of confidence in a Bucknellian.

Boys flying kites haul in their white-winged birds;
You can't do that when you're flying words.
"Careful with fire," is good advice we know;
"Careful with words," is ten times doubly so,
Thoughts unexpressed may sometimes fall back dead,
But God himself can't kill them when they're said.

Bucknell Frosh Trim Battlefield Boys

Bucknell Frosh ran wild in the game with the Gettysburg yearlings, defeating them by the evened score of 60 to 30. The Frosh rained twenty-eight field goals thru the basket, Seiler leading with ten. Eddie Halicki followed Seiler's lead with eight field goals. All the regular players scored.

Lipsky, the Gettysburg center, took advantage of Seiler's basket shooting proclivity and slipped six double deckers thru the rim that the Bucknell Frosh were guarding. McIlhenny, a Gettysburg forward, accounted for their other two field goals.

Frost and Mitchell alternated with Klosterman and Woodring, but the scoring power of the Freshmen was not diminished.

Sigma Chi, 58; Kappa Gamma, 21

In the second game played Saturday afternoon the Sigma Chi cagers continued the fine basketball which they displayed in their first game of the season and snowed the Kappa Gamma dribblers under with a 58-21 score.

Fritzinger, varsity forward, and Neal Blaisdell, were responsible for most of their team's points. Very seldom did either of these two split the ball without swishing the mesh. "Fritz" caged 9 goals and Blaisdell counted 8 times from the floor. Timm played best for the losers.

Fighting Non-Frats Defeat Delta Sigma

Fighting with determination against a team that was generally conceded to be its superior, the basketball five of the non-fraternity men scored both a moral and an athletic victory in their game with the Delta Sigma fraternity five last Saturday afternoon. The score was 21 to 15.

The work of Simon, the diminutive forward for the winners, was the outstanding feature of the game. His dribbling, dodging, and shooting netted six of his teams points and got his teammates out of more than one ticklish situation.

The fraternity team played loosely and while demonstrating team work showed lack of practice and an apparent inability to locate the hoop from the floor. Frabel who has been playing a stellar game for his team was decidedly off form.

"Johnny" Peifer of the non-frat team almost broke up the game early in the first half when the door at the West end of the gymnasium gave way to one of his charges and he came to a stop on the icy steps outside. The fall made him somewhat dizzy and he withdrew from the game after trying to carry on for a few minutes.

Beta Kappa Wallops Phi Lambda Theta

A long distance bombardment of the basket by Young of the Beta Kappa passers was responsible for the 18-13 victory his team registered over the Phi Lambda Theta quintet. Young dropped in six two-pointers from all angles beyond the middle of the floor. His great shooting disrupted the Theta offense and his teammates easily counted a win.

The Phi Lambda Theta five showed an improvement over its showing in the first game and with a little luck in their shots should prove a menace to opponents in the future.

Kappa Sigma Loses To T. U. O. Cagers

Theta Upsilon Omega played the whole game against Kappa Sigma in a fraternity game played in Tustin "gym" last Wednesday evening. The "T. U. O." quintet led by Vastine and Wiss mopped up their heavier opponents by a 39 to 14 score.

Vastine was the whole show with nine baskets and two fouls. "Dan" Wiss caged four two-pointers and had two fouls to his credit. Loper played a nice guarding game for the winners. Pierce was responsible for most of the scoring by the losers. The Kappa Sigma forward netted three baskets and a brace of converted errors. Gus Shorts demonstrated good floor work.

Dickinson Juniors Conquer B. U. Frosh

The Dickinson junior varsity got revenge for the drubbing which they received at the hands of the Bucknell Frosh in Tustin gym, by defeating the yearlings 35 to 27 last Saturday, at Carlisle.

The game was closely contested from the opening whistle, although it was in the first half that Dickinson attained her lead. Early in the second frame both Woodring and Seiler were ruled out on personal fouls. This weakened the team, but the Frosh held the J. V's, even in this period.

The score at the end of the first half stood 8 to 15, with Dickinson voting with the majority. Luber, their forward, had scored four field goals in this period. In the second half both teams lubricated their scoring aces and brought them into action. Dickinson scored a total of thirteen field goals and shot nine out of eighteen fouls, while Bucknell scored twelve field goals and counted three out of five foul shots.

Peddie Basketballers Go On Winning Under Coach Piatt

Peddie School's basketball team, which is coached by John D. Piatt, who is to be Bucknell's new director of physical education, defeated the Morristown Academy team, February 3, winning their eleventh straight victory. The Peddie team has won every school championship of the state of New Jersey for several consecutive years.

Penn Sixth in Enrollment; Leads in Medical Students

With 15,299 students, the University of Pennsylvania ranks sixth in total enrollment among educational institutions in this country, according to a recent survey of 183 American colleges and universities.

The survey shows the University of Pennsylvania leads in enrollment in departments of medicine and schools of commerce and finance. Aside from these two branches, the University ranks second in enrolment in dental schools and is tied with Texas University for second place among schools of education.

The University's enrolment in the department of medicine is 992. Minnesota is second with 976, Michigan third with 540, Northwestern fourth with 527 and Harvard fifth with 507.

The Wharton School of Finance of the University, with an enrollment of 2077, leads all other schools of commerce and finance in full-time enrolment. The Wharton School was a pioneer in its field. In this field the University of Illinois ranked second, with 2054; Ohio State third, with 1644; New York University fourth, with 1350, and Syracuse fifth, with 1088.

Penn Dental School Second

Although the University of Pittsburgh's dental school enrolment had a decrease of 205 from 1924, it continues to lead with 888 students. The University of Pennsylvania ranks second, with 542. Michigan follows, with 396, and California is next, with 372.

With 3910 students, a record enrolment in its history, Teachers' College of Columbia University maintains its lead among schools of education.

Pick a pipe and pack it with good old P. A.

TALK about "alliteration's artful aid" . . . the printer certainly raided the "p" box that trip. But let that go! The advice is just as serious and sound as though it were couched in the careful diction of an English prof.

Just get yourself a jimmy-pipe and fill the bowl to the brim with Prince Albert. Light up, and let the first fragrant whiff tell you that no other tobacco is like P. A.—or can be! Cool and sweet and fragrant, P. A. has everything a fellow ever wished for in a smoke.

P. A. can't bite your tongue or parch your throat. The Prince Albert process settled that in P. A.'s freshman year. Get yourself a tidy red tin of Prince Albert today. The first load-up will tell you why pipes are so fashionable among young men today.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half pound tin humidors and pound crystal glass humidors with sponge moistener top. And always with every bite and puff removed by the Prince Albert process.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

Ferne McNeal, '27, was a patient at the infirmary in Women's College last week.

* * * *

"Al" Conklin, '26, spent three days at his home in Elmira during examination week.

* * * *

Samuel P. Bernhaut, '28, left on Thursday, February 4, for his home in Newark, New Jersey.

* * * *

George Timm, '28, and Clifford Drum, '28, spent the week-end in Berwick at the latter's home.

* * * *

"Jack" Dowd, '26, has returned to school for the second semester. Jack expects to graduate in June.

* * * *

Lois K. Reinhardt, '28, spent a recent week-end at the home of Naomi Brace, '29, at Trevorton.

* * * *

George Nieder, ex-'29, when last heard from, was roaming about in the wide open spaces of Texas.

* * * *

Fred McKinney has entered Bucknell as a sophomore. He comes from the Michigan Agricultural School.

* * * *

Betty Mendelhall, of Kennett Square, Pa., was the guest of Grace Milhous, '27, at the Phi Mu formal dance.

* * * *

Nellie Harper, of Scranton, Pa., was the guest of Anne Griffiths, '29, during the between-semesters week-end.

* * * *

"Henny" Fessler, '27, failed to spend the usual week-end in Newberry, but managed to get there on Sunday.

* * * *

Phoebe Bloomfield, '27, visited the Williamsport Hospital on Monday, February 1, and had her tonsils removed.

* * * *

Thelma Showalter, '29, was the hostess at a little dinner party at her home on Second street last Saturday evening.

* * * *

We are all pleased to hear that "Doug" MacKenzie, '26, has completely recovered from a recent attack of the grippe.

* * * *

Andrew, the young son of Professor and Mrs. "Jack" Rice has been critically ill, but is now reported on the road to recovery.

* * * *

Anthony J. Kostos, '26, left for Brooklyn, N. Y. on February 4 to visit his brother, Stanley V. Kostos, '23, who is sick in a hospital.

* * * *

Mutt and Jeff are rooming together at the S. A. E. house. "Don" Davison, '28, and "Hugo" Coleman, '26, make a rare combination.

* * * *

J. L. Cornely, '26, has been hobbling around with a cane the past week. He sprained his ankle while playing basketball in Tustin "Gym."

* * * *

I. M. Mossler, secretary of the Williamsport Y. M. C. A., visited on Tuesday, February 2, with our "Y" president, Ray Edwards, '26.

* * * *

Lorenzo Scotti, '27, is back at work on the Hill again, following a short stay at Geisinger Memorial Hospital at Danville for treatment of a kidney ailment.

* * * *

Frank Bavitz, ex-'27, who left school at the close of the first semester, has secured a position on the reporting staff of the Wilkes-Barre Times Leader.

* * * *

The interfraternity basketball league now has two bespectacled players, C. L. Carpenter, '27, and J. R. Vastine, '28. Each wears a wire cage to protect the glasses.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Ware, of Millville, N. J., are visiting their daughter, Pauline Ware, '28. While in Lewisburg they will be the guests of Professor and Mrs. J. W. Rice.

* * * *

William F. Cougenour, '28, left college to get a job at the end of the first semester. He has secured a position with a surveying gang on State road work near his home at Latrobe. "Bill" will return to college again when the condition of the exchequer is improved. He entered with the class of 1927 and has already spent one year at work since then.

* * * *

Mildred Fox, '27, has taken the great step and gotten her hair cut. We must confess it looks very nice.

* * * *

Kathryn Hallier, '28, is at the Nanticoke Hospital, where she was operated on for the removal of her tonsils.

* * * *

"Tracy" Rockwell, '25, spent part of the week-end here. "Tracy" is the sport editor of an Elmira newspaper.

* * * *

William McNutt, '26, left college at the end of the first semester but expects to return to complete his course next September.

* * * *

"Sis" Jones, ex-'26, returned for a short visit on Saturday, February 5. "Sis" is working with "Ted" Costides, ex-'27, at Rutherford, N. J.

* * * *

Fred Heather, ex-'28, spent the week-end with his friends and fraternity brothers. Fred is secretary of the Alumni Association of North East High School, Philadelphia.

* * * *

Ann Zerby, '26, had earned enough credits to graduate at the end of first semester. She has left for her home in Jenkintown. The Tri Delts are going to miss Ann a lot.

* * * *

Mary Harrar, '26, spent the week-end at Dickinson College, Carlisle, overseeing preparations for the Student Volunteer Conference which is to be held there February 19 to 21.

* * * *

Patty Milliken, '26, took a trip to Geisinger Hospital, Danville, during examinations to have a slight operation. Needless to say, she doesn't enjoy carrying her arm around in a sling.

* * * *

Rodney Barlow, '28, gave an impromptu exhibition of how the Charleston should be done, according to Hoyle, at the Lambda Chi dinner dance. "Rotney" sure can handle his "hoofs."

* * * *

Donald Streeter, ex-'28, who is well known on the campus for his artistic ability and is now at an art school in Philadelphia, had one of his drawings printed in the Belle Hop, reprinted by Judge.

* * * *

"Toots" Thomas, '29, was the guest of "Kate" Wilmer, '28, at her home in Lock Haven during a recent week-end. "Toots" came back well-trained in the art of shooting a gun, and we don't mean maybe!

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Moyer and Mrs. J. Elmer Saul, of Norristown, Pa., recently spent a few days with Frances Saul, '29. Mrs. Moyer will be remembered as Ruth Saul, '25, of the School of Music.

* * * *

John Namisniak, '26, who is teaching mathematics in the high school at Nanticoke returned to greet old acquaintances last week-end. His time was pretty well divided between the Kappa Gamma house and the Hill.

* * * *

George Spratt, '27, left for his home in Coatesville, Pa., on Monday, February 1. George is going to work in his father's machine shop, thus studying the practical side of his chosen work. He will continue his studies next year.

* * * *

Howard Whitling, '29, has had severe pain in his eyes, caused by swollen optical nerves. An examination at the Geisinger Hospital revealed neuritis in the optic nerves. An operation may be required if the pressure is not relieved in a few days.

* * * *

Veta Davis, '27, entertained at her home in Nanticoke on Saturday night, January 30, the following Bucknell students: Blanche Thompson, '27, Jane Rees, '27, Barbara Reifsnyder, '28, James Replogle, '26, Tom Hann, '26, Bill Samuels, '28, and Christy Mathewson Jr., '27.

* * * *

Marian Coe, who after leaving Bucknell attended Columbia University, and Eleanor Kitlowski who left Bucknell to attend Goucher College in Baltimore, have returned to continue their work here. Marian and Miss Jane Coe, instructor in piano at the School of Music, are sisters.

* * * *

Raymond Frank Brandiff, '27, has become engaged to Miss Camille Thompson, daughter of Robert W. Thompson, '04, and Mrs. Thompson. Miss Thompson has attended school at Linden Hall Seminary. Brandiff attended Gettysburg during the first semester, but returned to Bucknell at the beginning of the second semester. The engagement was announced by Mr. and Mrs. Thompson.

Charles Coene, '27, has come back to college for the second semester.

* * * *

Herschel Allison, '27, has left college for the second semester expecting to return next year. He has secured a position with the Southern Pacific Railway.

* * * *

George Henggi, '26, left for his home in Oakmont after finishing the work required for his diploma. He will probably be seen in Lewisburg again for a few days while stopping on a motor trip to Florida.

* * * *

Earl and Myrl Goodwin, '28, have left college and returned to their home at Graft, Colorado. They intend to spend several weeks with their parents before reporting at the St. Petersburg training camp of the Boston baseball club of the National League.

* * * *

Ed Colestock, '29, son of Professor H. T. Colestock, has passed all necessary examinations and will enter the government Naval Academy at Annapolis next June. This will be a blow to Bucknell athletics as Ed is a tennis and basketball player of no mean ability.

* * * *

B. F. Klosterman, '29, was high scorer in the twenty-minute tussle between the freshman and varsity fives, on Wednesday afternoon, February 3. The frosh were ahead practically the entire time and were leading 18 to 13 at the finish. With these lanky freshmen available for next years varsity, Bucknell should have "one sweet" basketball team.

* * * *

Basing his talk on "The Art of Examination," an article in the January issue of the Atlantic Monthly, by President Lowell, of Harvard University, President Hunt pointed out in chapel on February 2 that final examinations are of infinite value to the student in that they enable him to obtain a bird's-eye perspective of the course as a unit.

Bucknell's broadcasting station, the call signal of which has been changed from WJBQ to WJBU, has been heard in Massachusesetts, New Jersey, and Delaware, as well as in numerous towns in Pennsylvania. A box of candy, offered to that person who picked up a WJBU program at the greatest distance, has been awarded to a correspondent in New Hampshire.

Sells His Own Blood To Pay College Bills

To want a college education and to have little if any funds with which to get it is a serious problem in any young man's life. But to lose an arm before going to college is another matter. That is what faced J. Milton Goss of Tyrone, Pa., who wanted to go to college, but had only one arm and very little money. Goss, however, found a way out. He wanted an education and he wanted to work for it. So he sells his blood to go to college.

On the cold formal records of the part-time employment bureau of the Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh, Pa., Goss is listed as a "transfusion donor." To young Goss these records mean that he must be on call at all times to give part of his blood whenever one of the Pittsburgh hospitals needs it to save or prolong the life of a patient.

Altogether Goss has laid himself up on the operating table seven times in the last two or three years to donate his blood. To save the life of one patient during the Summer of 1922 he submitted to the transfusion every six weeks. For each donation of his blood Goss is paid $25.

Goss is a senior in the department of machinery production of the College of Industries. When next June comes around his financial troubles, he hopes, will be over. He can then sell his services as a college-trained man instead of his blood. But he doesn't feel at all like a martyr about it. He has never had any ill effects from any of his transfusions. In fact, he says, he feels better afterward and he likes especially to have one near examination time, because, he says, his head feels "clearer."

Incidentally, Goss holds the record for "donations." Merril R. Thompson of East Liverpool, Ohio, and Herbert Knappenberger of Apollo, Pa., also seniors in the College of Industries, sell their blood under similar circumstances. Each is listed as to type, for there are four different types according to the quality of the blood, and each is subject to call whenever a doctor decides that his patient needs more blood of a certain quality.

Examinations Play Part In Education

Furnish Incentive For Effective Study, Says Contributor. Defends Cramming

Now that examinations are past and we have once more resumed the usual tenor of our lives, it might be worth while to pause a moment in retrospect, and ask ourselves a few questions. Probably each one of us has already asked at least two such questions: Did I pass the examinations? What are my grades? But these questions are unimportant. What we ought to inquire about is of greater moment: Did I get any benefit from the examinations?

Human nature is contradictory in many of its aspects; and nowhere is it more so than in this matter of examinations. We come to college to get knowledge. We pay a big price for that privilege, either in cash or effort, or perhaps both. Our entire aim is to get schooling, no matter what the cost. Yet when the opportunity comes to ascertain whether we are getting the worth of our money or our efforts, too many of us draw back, half afraid, half resentful. We don't want to know whether we have obtained the thing we have paid for. We declare examinations a nuisance and wish they were abolished.

This is an unfortunate frame of mind because it is psychologically wrong. In one sense examinations may be a test of learning. In another sense they are far more; they are an opportunity for learning. They offer a chance to acquire one of the great characteristics of success—the power of concentration.

We Give "Cram" a Bad Name

There is a proverb to the effect that you might as well hang a dog as give him a bad name. There is wisdom in the saying. We have given a bad name to the word "cram." We almost look with contempt upon the person who crams for an examination. That attitude of mind is as foolish as it is undiscerning. The student who learns how to cram has gained a great advantage in the race of life. He "has it all over" his fellow student who fails to acquire that advantage. He has gained something that will help him to success.

For life is nothing but a series of crams, at least for the successful man. The hundred-yard dash champion crams everything he has in the way of speed into a brief ten seconds. The prize fighter crams his whole physical effort toward victory into a few rounds. The lawyer who is to try a case hasn't a chance in the world unless he crams—and crams harder than most college students even dream of doing. The man who makes his living writing magazine articles could just as properly divide his time into crams as he can into days and months. He gets an idea, crams, writes his theme, and repeats—endlessly. The surgeon who performs a difficult operation packs into a few moments of intensive effort the thought and knowledge of years of preparation. For the successful man life is just one cram after another.

We Should Learn to Cram

But how are you to cram if you don't know how? How can a sprinter run one hundred yards in ten seconds if he doesn't know how? Jogging around the track won't teach him how, no matter if he jogs a million times. He must learn by practice how to condense into those ten seconds his whole effort, how to concentrate physically for this brief space of time. That practice you can't cram successfully in a mental way any better than you can in a physical way. You need the training.

Examinations, though they may show what we know and what we don't know, and though they may give us grades, which may or may not mean anything, do offer us an opportunity for practice in concentration. To be sure, we have such opportunity daily, but not in such great measure, and not when so much is at stake. Examinations, then, offer an opportunity that perhaps many of us have overlooked. If we could alter our psychology in respect to examinations, if we could look at them in a true rather than a false light, we should not only come to them in a different state of mind but we should reap great benefits that at present many of us miss altogether.

Two Universities To Merge

Johns Hopkins University will take over the school of business administration of the University of Maryland next October, it was learned today. The merging of the business school with Hopkins ends negotiations of several months.

The consolidation was made, it was announced, because it was not felt there was enough demand in Baltimore for two similar schools. Students who have completed two years of University of Maryland work, may continue business administration classes at Johns Hopkins to receive University of Maryland degrees. Students who have not completed two years of work at the University of Maryland will receive Johns Hopkins degrees.

Michigan Men Seek Variety In Relations With 'Fair Sex'

One hundred and fifty dates a year with 150 different girls is the aim of a club recently organized by the men of the University of Michigan. A man is eligible for membership only after he has been in the company of a goodlooking girl, and upon initiation must give the name and address of the woman.

Alumni Notes

George E. Deppen, '94

George E. Deppen, '94, and Alem P. Hull, ex-'18, were recently elected directors of the City Insurance Company, of Sunbury, Pa.

Dr. Chas. Lose, Honorary, '85

Dr. Charles Lose, formerly principal of the Lock Haven Normal School, will be one of the speakers at the twenty-third annual convention of the Union County school directors, to be held in the Lewisburg Court House, February 18. Bucknell gave Dr. Lose an honorary A. M. in 1885.

Mathew E. Haggerty, '09

Mathew E. Haggerty, '09, who was one of the attorneys for Raimond Valentino, of Avis, who was recently found guilty of murder in a Clinton County court, is trying to obtain a new trial for his client, on the ground that the verdict was against the law and the weight of the evidence.

Wilhelmina D. Butler, Inst. '90

Mrs. Leroy T. Butler, Inst. '90, who has been in a Williamsport hospital for some time following an operation, is expected to return to her home this week. Before her marriage to Leroy Butler, '97, Mrs. Butler was Wilhelmina Darlington. She taught art at the Seminary for some time.

Thomas Carson Hanna, '95

The Reverend T. C. Hanna, '95, pastor of the Sunbury First Baptist Church, has begun the first movement for the relief of striking miners to be started outside of the anthracite region. His church was thrown open to the donations of goods and funds. The contributions received were worth several hundred dollars.

Emory O. Bickel, '05

Following the dinner Monday night the Lions Club meeting was given over to E. O. Bickel, county superintendent of our public schools. He gave a most interesting and illuminating history of Lewisburg's public schools, followed by facts pertaining to the new methods of inculcation. As an educator Mr. Bickel is one of the most progressive and forceful we have ever known, and all felt when he had concluded his address that the welfare of our public schools is in safe and able hands.

Albert W. Johnson, '96

Albert W. Johnson, Judge of the Middle district of Pennsylvania, has been invited by Garrett Cochran Post, No. 1, of the American Legion to be a guest and speaker at the sixth annual banquet of the post next Thursday evening at Trinity house. Judge Johnson at present is in New York holding court for the Southern district of New York but will return to Lewisburg this week, and will be able to be at the Legion banquet Thursday. The other speakers for the evening will be National Commander John R. McQuigg, and State Commander U. McK. Crumrine.

Dr. Mary Wolfe, '96

Dr. Mary Wolfe sailed from New York City on February 3 for a vacation trip of six weeks to the Pacific Coast, via the Panama Canal. Dr. Wolfe was graduated from the Institute in 1891, and from the University in 1896. She secured her M. D. at the University of Michigan. For several years she was in charge of the women's branch of the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane at Norristown. When it was proposed to create an institution for feeble minded women, Dr. Wolfe was made a member of the commission to select the site. A tract of land at the ede of the state forest near Laurelton was chosen, and Dr. Wolfe was made head of the new institution. She has developed this very successfully, and is still in charge of it.

THE DEAN SHOVELS SNOW

Dean Rivenburg was seen literally playing Eskimo on Thursday morning after the big snow which lasted all Wednesday and the following night. He was forced to shovel his way out of his door before he could get up the Hill, and early risers could see him briskly breaking a path across his front porch toward the sidewalk while another person shivelled toward him from the walk.

2300 at Kentucky University

The biennial report of the University of Kentucky, Lexington, says that the resident students now number 2300, the largest in the history of the university. It is anticipated that in 1930 this number will be increased to 3,200. The total expenditures last year amounted to $321,534. Frank L. McVey is president of the university.

Writer Says Colleges Ought To Clean Up

Declares Colleges Now Tolerate Too Many Student Follies

The following article was written by Herman Sweet and appeared in The Educational Review. He urges that administrators of colleges ought to make a greater effort to rid their institutions of "moral degenerates" so that higher education can accomplish more than it does.

I believe that education, especially in the small Christian college, . . . has a duty of reclamation; that it should neglect no opportunity to save a boy or a girl from folly; and that often a little patience will make good men and women out of mighty questionable material. On the other hand, I believe that the time has come to cease tolerating some of the things that we are tolerating in American colleges and universities. If college students persist in breaking the law of the land, if they persist in gambling, in breaking college rules, and in other evil practices, they should be dismissed from our campuses.

The college has a duty to them, perhaps, but it has a duty also to those others upon whom their influence is not good and with whose progress they are interfering. Furthermore, education is too expensive to permit wasted energies and wasted resources. Furthermore, we have educated too many men and women with warped moral conceptions and turned them out in the world with degrees and the mark of the approval of higher education upon them. Lastly, if the institutions of higher learning do not take a decided stand against violations of the law of the land and the laws of decency, by the "cream of the earth," where shall we look for a check, and what shall we hope for the future?

And I also believe that if faculties and administrations, both in endowed and in public institutions, would make an effort to rid their institutions of the moral degenerates, destructive agitators, and social parasites, who masquerade under the guise of students, regardless of whether they have money and position or not, regardless of whether their friends or parents may or may not give to the next endowment campaign, and regardless of the fact that any school has enough enemies without increasing the list, these same faculties and administrators would find the best students right behind them. Our schools would be more wholesome places for young people to live in. There would be fewer casualties and fewer disappointed parents. Higher education would accomplish more. The standard of the college-bred would be raised. There would be greater respect for law. Scholarship would be higher and more highly regarded. Athletics would be cleaner and more valuable. The future of the nation would be more secure.—HERMAN SWEET, in The Educational Review.

CLASSICAL EDUCATION AND ITS RELATION TO BUSINESS

Business needs several things more than it needs the education called "practical." It needs open-mindedness,—that generous-mindedness that comes with the habit of accomodation, the habit of trying tolerantly, sympathetically to understand the other man's point of view and to be respectful to his personality. Business needs deliverance from Bourbonism and radicalism, from Bourbonism not less than from radicalism. It needs, for the solution of its problems having to do with human relations, the open-mindedness of the conservative and the liberal who, but for their open-mindedness, would be Bourbon and radical. And then business needs, in the youth it takes over from the schools and colleges, the capacity to think with concentration and precision, capacity for the clear thinking that is helped and proved by clear expression. It needs clear-thinking youth for the long pull more than it needs vocationally trained youth with their temporary advantage.

Now why do we believe that these needs can be met with classical education? I cannot answer in terms of the philosophy of education. The bit that I can give is in terms of observation. We have coming to us, increasingly, youth confident that their training in business courses has fitted them for business, and we find that as employees in the workroom they have neither open-mindedness nor the capacity to think with concentration and precision, nor the habit of work induced by "discipline of the spirit." We have coming to us, decreasingly, youth humble in the hope that old-fashioned education in the classics and mathematics has not unfitted them for business, and we find that as associates in the office they are those on whom we count for the future.— Evans Woollen, President, Fletcher Savings and Trust Company, Indianapolis, Indiana.

MASTERY SHOULD LEAD TO MASTERY—ROBBINS

"Students find themselves in a mixed-up state of mind," declared Professor Robbins, in addressing the upper class chapel on Thursday February 4. "They say that philosophy get them nowhere. I am glad that we do not reach ultimate conclusions. If we should reach the place of perfection, we would die mentally and physically. Mastery is a joy only when it leads to greater mastery.

"The high school graduate has a feeling that he knows it all. The college student only wants to know it all. There is some hope for the college man, for the truly educated man is he who realizes that he cannot know it all, and is content. He feels that there will be something to strive for in the next life.

"The most hopeful philosophy is that of the old man who has not attained all his 'ideals. Browning, in his "Rabbi Ben Ezra" says:

'Grow old along with me!
The best is yet to be,
The last of life, for which the first was made;
Our times are in his hand
Who saith, "A whole I planned,
Youths shows but half; trust God,
see all, nor be afraid!"

"Attempt to find some philosophy of life and trust to God in the unsettled part. God has given us minds to master the physical world, conciences to decide right and wrong. Wisdom comes from God alone."

Professor Robbins concluded his address by reading the twenty-eight chapter of Job, twentieth to twenty-eighth verses.

Rutgers Will Have New Course

Rutgers University will give a short course in highway engineering under the direction of the College of Engineering in cooperation with the New Jersey State Highway Department, it was announced recently. The course opened on February 8 and will continue until February 27, and will offer instruction in hikhway maintenance, construction, drainage, traffic investigations, road laws, equipment, and various allied subjects.

Twenty-four hours of the three-week period will be devoted to classroom work, fifteen to laboratory work in the testing of materials, twelve to special lectures by members of the Highway Department and engineers of national standing and three hours to inspection trips.

Dean Edward H. Roekwell of the Rutgers College of Engineering will have charge of the course and will have associated with him Professor Stuart A. Stevenson Jr. and Major William G. Sloan, State Highway Engineer.

Use Old Newspapers

Newspapers make an excellent crack filler. Cut the papers fine and soak them. Make a paste by boiling one pound of flour in three quarts of water and add one teaspoonful of alum. Boil the shredded newspaper in this mixture until it becomes the consistency of putty. Force this into the cracks with a blunt knife. When it becomes dry stain or paint it to match the boards and you will have a smooth surface.

"Brutal And Boorish," Writer Calls Hazing

Urges Frosh To Organize Class Resistance To Hooliganism

One of the greatest breeders of bad manners, surviving in some as yet adolescent college communities, is the utterly inexcusable brutality and boorishness displayed in initiation and class hazing programs. One college daily recently described an imation of an "honorary" society, which consisted in "the infliction of various indignities by a group of red clad and red painted adult males upon another group, bound and prostrate upon a dias. The latter were vigorously if not viciously bastinadoed, and most thoroughly soaked with a hose. There was not a spark of good humor or dignity in the whole performance. It seemed to be pure brutality, recklessness, and childishness. . . . It is hardly conceivable that a whole group of prominent upperclassmen can inflict such brutal indignities, much less submit to them. It does seem that, if the society cannot impart some dignity, interest, or good wholesome fun to the ceremony, had better spare the public."

The Harvard Crimson has recently given publicity to freshman English themes on the subject "My Impressions of My Reception at Harvard." One such theme particularly commended was the following:

"At all ——— colleges each member of the freshman class is met at the railroad station by a deputation of sophomores, equipped with various instruments of torture, such as hair clippers, war paint, paddles, etc. When the innocent freshman emerges from the train, these representatives of the sophomore class fall upon him with shouts of joy, immediately giving him a convict's hair cut with the clippers and ruining the clothes he happens to be wearing with the paint. After this each sophomore takes a good swipe at the posterior portion of the freshman's anatomy. When this ritual is completed, the freshman is sent along to his dormitory, while the bloodthirsty sophs operate on another victim.

"After the freshman arrives at the dormitory, he finds upperclassmen in the same building, who guarantee to make his life miserable for the entire year.

"As I have heard of this form of hazing all my life, naturally I expected about the same sort of treatment at Harvard.

"Imagine my surprise, then, when I was not only allowed to go to my room unmolested, but have not been bothered since. You may rest assured, however, that this surprise was a very pleasant one. I was amazed to find the attitude of the upperclassmen one of friendly helpfulness, instead of one of haughty superiority. I was still more amazed to find that the freshman class had the best dormitories reserved for them. In short, Harvard regards a freshman as a rational human being, instead of a babe in arms."

The hazing of freshmen has developed as a self-perpetuating nuisance, largely because of the spirit of reprisal which is born of its humiliations, the spirit of the bully who is determined to take it out on the next available victim. A possible remedy for such barbarisms is looming on the horizon in a growing number of institutions. What an opportunity is offered in the new and increasingly popular Freshman Week, for a chance to organize in resistance to upperclass savagery before the upperclass savage arrives on the scene! Why should a class which has seven days in which to get together, to orient itself to unfamiliar surroundings, accept as ordained from above those absurd conventions and traditions, observances and requirements, ostensibly designed "to keep freshmen in their places" but really perpetuated as an outlet and excuse for hooliganism and abuse of privilege on the part of a slightly more mature group, themselves just escaped from thralldom? Organized resistance by a numerically larger group could stand up against these inflictions. Will some kindly faculty adviser pass this suggestion along? We should really like to see it tried.

and constitution of this Commonwealth.

Sect. 5. As soon as said trustees shall have obtained, in the form of subscriptions believed to be valid, the amount of one hundred thousand dollars, they shall purchase a lot or farm and proceed to erect thereon suitable buildings for the use and benefit of said University, to procure the requisite library, apparatus and specimens in natural history; and they shall exercise their own judgement and discretion in so doing, as likewise in the general management and disposition of the funds of said University; Provided, however, said trustees shall exact from their Treasurer adequate security for all the moneys and other property of the Institution, which he may at any time receive; Provided, also, That if any person contributing to the funds of said Institution, indicate a special appropriation of the amount so contributed, said contribution, if accepted, shall be disposed of in strict accordance with the evident intent or expressed wish of the contributor; Provided, likewise, That a fourth part of said one hundred thousand dollars, and, at least, twenty-five per cent. of all moneys and every species of property capable of producing revenue tand no herein already specified or excepted, which shall come into the hands of said trustees for the use and benefit of said Institution, shall be placed out on interest the principal or stock secured by bond or mortgage on real estate; and the revenue thence accruing shall be exclusively and forever appropriated to the support of instruction in said university; And Provided too, That said trustees shall not for any cause or under any pretext whatsoever, encumber, by mortgage or otherwise, the real estate or any other property of said Institution, and they shall not involve it in any debt, which they have not the means of paying consistently with the restrictions above mentioned.

Sect. 6. Said Trustees shall annually publish an abstract of the minutes of their doings.

ARTICLE 4.

Sect. 1. The President, Professors, Tutors, and other teachers, or a majority of them for the time being, shall constitute the faculty of the University, and, in their respective departments, shall have the power of enforcing the rules and regulations adopted by the trustees for the government and instruction of the students; and the President and Professors, with the counsel and consent of a quorum of curators, shall have the power to grant and confirm the students of the University, or unto others deserved worthy, such degrees in the liberal arts and sciences or in certain branches thereof, as have been usually granted in other universities; to grant likewise, to said graduates, diplomas under the common seal of the corporation in order to authenticate and to perpetuate the memory of such graduation; and to grant, also, certificates to such students as have duly completed the course of studies prescribed in any subordinate department of the University.

ARTICLE 5.

Sect. 1. The curators of the University shall consist of the following persons, to wit: The Governor, and the Secretary of this Commonwealth, the Judges of the Supreme Court, and the President of the University, (ex officio,) together with Abbott Green, G. S. Webb, George B. Ide, William Shadrach, J. Lansing Burrows, A. D. Gillette, J. H. Kennard, Wilson Jewell, David Jayne, A. A. Anderson, Charles Tucker, John O. Rockefellow, Simon Schuyler, Martin Bell, James Estep, Simon Cameron, George I. Miles, Joseph Green, James Buchanan, Jackson M'Faldin, George F. Miller, James Irwin, Morgan J. Rhees, (Delaware,) George M. Keim, William R. Williams, (N. Y.,) T. O. Lincoln, (N. J.,) and Jacob Wagenseller; which persons and their successors, in perpetual succession, are hereby made and declared to be, and forever hereafter, are to be known by the title of "The Curators of the University at Lewisburg."

Sect. 2. Within six months from the date of this charter, (the room and hour to be designated by the curator whose proper name is first mentioned above,) said curators, or at least seven of them, shall meet at or near Lewisburg, and appoint a Chancellor, a Scribe, and such committees of their own body, as they may deem requisite in order to the faithful and convenient discharge of their duties, and they shall observe the same rules in calling meetings, passing decisions, adding to the number of curators whose names are herein specified, and filling vacancies in their own body, as herein prescribed to the trustees. The meetings are all to be held at or near the borough of Lewisburg, and, after the first they are to be notified by the Chancellor or Scribe.

Sect. 3. Said curators, a quorum of them, or at least a committee of three, are required and expected to attend the principal examinations and the annual commencements of the University; they are to make themselves acquainted with the manner in which the work of study and recitation is planned for the students, and by them executed, and particularly, with the scholarship, conduct, and character of such students as are candidates for admission from a lower into a higher class or department of the University, or for degrees; and the consent of the majority of the curators present shall be necessary in order to a student's promotion, or receiving a degree.

Sect. 4. Said curators are to have access to the minutes of the official doings of the faculty, and they are, likewise, to take care to inform themselves respecting the methods of government and instruction adopted and practised by the several teachers in the University.

Sect. 5. Said curators are to inspect the records of the business transactions of the trustees, and audit the Treasurer's accounts.

Sect. 6. Finally, the curators shall every year, publish, in at least three papers having extensive circulation in different parts of this Commonwealth, such a statement of the result of their observations as they shall reckon due to the University, and to its patrons and friends.

ARTICLE 6.

Sect. 1. No misnomer of the said corporation shall defeat or annul any gift, grant, devise, or bequest, to or from the said corporation, Provided The intent of the parties shall sufficiently appear upon the face of the gift, grant, will, or writing, whereby any estate or interest was intended to pass to or from said corporation.

ARTICLE 7.

Sect. 1. No religious sentiments are to be accounted a disability to hinder the election of an individual to any office among the teachers of the Institution, or to debar persons from admittance as pupils, or, in any manner to abridge their privileges or immunities as students in any department of the University.

ARTICLE 8.

Sect. 1. The Legislature reserves the right to alter or annul this charter in case of any abuse of the privileges hereby granted.

Payne Recovers Car; "Bad Swipe," Says He

A car that stood in a country lane longer than the ordinary time attracted the attention of a woman living near Williamsport one day last week, and she decided to find out what caused the delay. Investigation showed that the car was deserted. The woman telephoned to the police of Williamsport giving a description and the license number of the car and another investigation began. This is the story of the recovery of Guy Payne's Buick.

"Guy" and Mrs. Payne, along with the Rev. and Mrs. Raymond M. West, drove to Williamsport, Tuesday evening, January 26, to hear Dr. Brougher, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church of Los Angeles, who was speaking in the First Baptist Church at Williamsport. During the service the car was parked near the church but it was not locked. When the party looked for their car after the meeting was over it was nowhere to be found and they had to return by train.

Just a week later, Tuesday, February 2, Mr. Payne received word from Williamsport that his car had been located. It was found in the lane leading to the Antlers Club, off the state road north of the city. It had been reported by a woman whose name was not given. Guy immediately went to retrieve his property and found that the only bad effect that had been suffered was the freezing of the radiator.

In speaking to a Bucknellian reporter after the car had been recovered Guy said that he was paid the highest compliment by having the bus stolen for he had thought that no one would want it. His theory is that it was taken by mistake by some person who, at the time was not responsible for his actions. After becoming more sober, Mr. Payne believes, the thief recognized the fact that he had undo a bad swipe and decided to clear out as soon as possible. However, the keeper of the Inn on the Quadrangle claims that the car is worth more to him than the compliment and he was glad for the second exchange.

Yale Plans Library For 5,000,000 Books

Facilities Will Be Provided For Next One Hundred Years

A university library building unsurpassed by any other such structure in the world is promised for Yale, according to plans now made public, a library designed to house 5,000,000 volumes and to cost some $6,000,000. The Sterling Memorial Library, as it is to be called, will be in memory of John W. Sterling, eminent Yale graduate of the class of 1864, the trustees of whose estate are furnishing funds to provide a monumental Gothic structure.

The university's library needs for the next hundred years have been taken into account by allowing for acquisitions in addition to the immediate facilities for the proper use of Yale's priceless collection of books, accumulated during two centuries and a quarter.

In outward appearance the building will harmonize with the Harkness Tower and the Memorial Quadrangle, both of which are the work of James Gamble Rogers, of New York, the architect for the new building. It will be the dominating architectural feature among the buildings to be grouped about it and along the new cross-campus avenue which is to be opened between Wall and Elm streets.

Twenty-one antiquated structures, now standing on the library site, which is bounded by High, Wall and York streets, are to be demolished and it is expected that construction will be completed two years from now.

Yale authorities believe they will then have the largest and best-planned university library in the world and that its special services and conveniences for students and professors will be without rival.

A Gothic tower of warm yellow stone, 192 feet high and 85 feet square, surmounted by sculptured allegorical figures, will challenge the attention of newcomers. It will be known as the "book tower." The entrance tower, nearby, will open into the Memorial Entrance Hall, which will resemble the nave of a great cathedral, the vaulted roof of which will be supported by massive stone piers. All the main rooms for readers will be on the ground floor and, in all, 2000 readers may be seated at one time in the various rooms of the library.

The most important collections owned by the Yale University Library, according to a brief summary by the librarian, follow:

The Goethe collection, consisting of material by and about Goethe and by the whole of the Weimer Circle of his day.

The Oriental collection, including the whole of Prof. Edward E. Salisbery's library, which served as a foundation for Yale's becoming the great American center of Oriental studies.

The Library of the American Oriental Society, which has just been voted by the society to Yale in perpetuity.

The Yale collection of American literature, originally given by Owen F. Aldis.

The Penniman Library of Education, already one of the largest in the country, which is being constantly enlarged by the donor, Dr. James Rosmer Penniman, Yale, '84, of Philadelphia, who has made these gifts as a memorial to his parents, James Lanman Penniman and Maria Hosmer Penniman, and the James Fennimore Cooper Collection.

Dr. Penniman established, also, a similar educational library, in memory of his parents, at Brown University and still another, in memory of his mother, at the University of Pennsylvania.

Wisconsin Offers New Course in "Comparative Journalism"

Travel, study of foreign newspapers, and summer instruction in journalism are offered students who join a European tour of "comparative journalism" to be conducted next summer by E. M. Johnson, associate professor of journalism at the University of Wisconsinm.

The tour will last six weeks, and classes in feature writing, comparative journalism and the supervision of school publications will be held on shipboard.

The party will sail on July 6 and will return on August 21. The study tour includes Montreal, Glasgow, London, Manchester, Oxford, Stratford-on-Avon, Warwick, and Kenilworth in England; The Hague, Amsterdam, Ostend, Zeebrugge, Blankenberghe, Knock-sur-Mer, Bruges and Brussels in Belgium and the Netherlands; and Paris, Versailles and Cherbourg in France.

Physical Education at "Sem" Resumed, Under Mrs. Whyte

Mrs. James P. Whyte has been given charge of the physical education of the students of the Women's College during Miss Agnes R. MacCann's absence from Bucknell. Gymnasium classes began on Tuesday afternoon, February 9.

Three classes have been organized; at 2:30 on Tuesday and Thursday for freshmen, 3:30 Tuesday and Thursday for sophomores, and at 2:30 on Wednesday and Friday for juniors.

Folk dancing, aesthetic dancing, and singing games will be taught. No definite plans for May Day have as yet been made, but Mrs. Whyte will have charge of this also if Miss MacCann's health prevents her return in sufficient time.

Speaking of May Day, Mrs. Whyte said she thought it would be better if the attendants of the May Queen were representative of all the classes, instead of being all seniors, and that the May Queen should choose these attendants herself rather than have them appointed by the women's physical director, as heretofore. Who the May Queen is to be will be kept secret until the great day itself, as in former years.

Mrs. Whyte is fully capable of taking up the gymnasium work, for she is a trained physical education instructor.

Three years of gym work for women students is required for graduation. Cuts in this subject will not be counted out of the permitted seventeen up the hill, but will be recorded at the Women's College. An excessive number of cuts will cause the student to fail in the work.

"THE BEST SOUP I EVER HEARD," FROSH OPINE

Four freshmen who faced the Interclass Council on Monday evening were, after being duly convicted of their charges, treated to "paddle soup" on the Quadrangle. The unanimous comment was that the soup was entirely too "hot" to be appreciated.

Three of the freshmen, Abe Morelli, Philip Moses, and David Paul were convicted on the charge of "not speaking." In addition to the hot soup Paul must express a smiling "Hello Sir!" to everyone he meets for one week. Charles Kolp who caught a cold from running down the Senior path to chapel, said that two spoonsful of the soup served to cure him.

Gives Blood To Help College

Charles Menge, a graduate of Wagner College, Staten Island, donated "blood money" to his alma mater.

Menge sold $25 worth of his blood for a transfusion operation and forwarded the money to the college, which is raising a $500,000 endowment fund.

"I have no money," he wrote from Philadelphia, "but here's some of my blood for alma mater. She can have more, too, if she needs it."

Classes Will Keep Scores

Lists of the members of each class and of the faculty have been posted on the bulletin board, and each girl puts the figure one after her name for every day that she has gotten her eight hours of sleep, a 2 for every day that she has eaten three meals and not eaten after 9 o'clock, a 3 for every day that she has had an hour of exercise, and a 4 for every day that she has drunk six glasses of water. At the end of the four weeks the class scores will be determined, and the two classes having the lowest percentages will entertain the two having the highest at a party in the gym.

The need for a definite health program at Women's College has long been felt. Several weeks ago a campaign for the proper ventilation of rooms was initiated by Miss Ruhl, the college nurse. Both she and Dean Clark are heartily in favor of the present project.

AFFIRMATIVE TEAM, IN THREE CONTESTS, WINS TWO DEBATES

Loses To Rutgers in Two To One Decision Under New Jersey System of Judging

TEMPLE AND URSINUS BEATEN BY BUCKNELL

Team Lunches with Mr. Herndon, Tax Consultant of Phila., Who Chats on Europe

The reopening of forsenic activities for the second semester was celebrated last week in a three-day tour by the men's affirmative team. This trip resulted in a victory for Rutgers and defeats for Temple and Ursinus.

The first peep of the reopening activities was really a week earlier when the negative team consisting of Carl Hile, Henry Coleman, and Francis Lybarger, with Burns Drum as alternate, debated with the team of Elizabethtown College but the judges were absent at this contest and so it became an exhibition of oratory on the subject of the League of Nations.

Each of the three contests of the past week was a battle royal however. T. B. Drum, '26, B. J. Miller, '27, L. F. Lybarger, '28, and W. G. Snow, '27, alternate, composed the team. The first of the series of debates was against the team of Rutgers College at New Brunswick, N. J. and resulted in a two to one decision for the Rutgers debaters. Bucknell's argument was especially strong in the refutation of this debate but technicalities involved in the New Jersey method of judging resulted in a win for the opposition to America's entrance into the League of Nations.

The following evening at Temple University the one man system of judging was followed, and the judge, Mr. John G. Herndon Jr., tax consultant for the city of Philadelphia, announced that the Bucknell team had won the debate by a majority of seventy points. The contest here was the most stubbornly fought engagement of the trip, the teams meeting squarely on the issues and giving argument for argument.

Friday noon the victorious debaters were the guests of Mr. Herndon at lunch at the Philadelphia Manufacturers' Club. Mr. Herndon entertained the boys delightfully for an hour and gave them some first hand information on their subject as he has travelled widely in Europe and has an acute comprehension of the European situation and the attitude of the European countries toward the United States in their rejection of the League.

Friday evening the debaters met the team of Ursinus College at Collegeville and defeated it by a unanimous decision of the three judges. The team was entertained at an informal gathering after the debate.

Miss Hunt Is Guest Of Honor At Lunch

Carolyn J. Hunt, '25, was a guest of honor at a valentine luncheon given by Miss Ellen W. Focht, '14, and Mrs. Ralph Brough, at the home of the former, on Monday, February 15. The luncheon was followed by bridge.

Miss Hunt, of course, got the guest's prize, a half dozen glass salad plates.

Miss Hannah Bubb won the first prize for play, consisting of towels, and Mrs. George A. Irland was awarded the second prize, a quantity of beads.

Bucknellians made up the majority of those present. The guests included Mrs. C. Willard Smith, Mrs. Robert E. Harris, Mrs. James F. McClure, Mrs. Neil Baker, Mrs. Malcolm Musser, Miss Hannah Bubb, Mrs. Stirling, and Mrs. Bikle of Mifflinburg, Mrs. Fox, Miss Helen Follmer, Miss Helen Bartol, Mrs. Henry Meyer, Mrs. H. E. McCormick, Miss Maria Spyker, Mrs. M. L. Focht, Mrs. Ralph Keser, Miss Carolyn Hunt, Mrs. George A. Irland, and the hostesses, Miss Focht and Mrs. Brough.

Women are all alike when it comes to being different.

Big Time Expected At Engineers' Ball

Dance March 6; Semites Allowed; In Engineering Building

One of the most smoothly rolling affairs of the social season is the promise of the engineers in announcing a ball for the evening of Saturday, March 6. Dancing will be from 7:30 to 11:30.

The upper classmen of the engineering department are sponsoring the affair and intend to make the main portion of the attendance a one hundred per cent. engineering crowd. For the other, or better half, Miss Clark has given permission for the girls of the "Sem" to attend the function, so that it is expected that the majority of this section will be students in the other departments of the University.

The tickets for the dance will be limited to fifty in number and upper classmen will be given the preference in the purchase of these. Noble and his orchestra will furnish the music, and, as the dance is to be held in the Ball Room of the Engineering building the new studio of WJBU will transmit the strains to the air.

Professor and Mrs. F. E. Barpee, Assistant Professor and Mrs. G. A. Irland, and Mr. C. W. Halligan will be responsible for the proper conduct of the dance. Novel programs, refreshments, and entertainment during intermission are promised by the committee as extra attractions. The pasteboards will sell at $2.75. They can be obtained from the following members of the committee: E. C. Shaffer, Beta Kappa house; Fred Evans, Phi Kappa Psi house; F. J. Bailey, Lambda Chi Alpha house; T. J. Hann Jr., Phi Gamma Delta house; and J. D. Carll, Kappa Delta Rho house.

"Lizzies" Numerous In Women's College

"What is the most popular name among the co-eds?" There may be nothing in a name, but it is interesting to note which names stand highest in favor.

One would almost expect Mary to head the list, but an actual count has revealed the fact that there are forty-five Elizabeths at the "Sem," five in the senior class, nine in the junior class, fifteen in the sophomore, and sixteen in the freshman. Mary ranks next with eight in the senior class, seven in the junior, twelve in the sophomore, and ten in the freshman, making thirty-seven in all.

Catherine holds third place with twenty-nine. There are twenty-one Margarets. Eighteen girls have Anna for a name. Dorothy and Helen hold almost equal places with seventeen and sixteen respectively. Louise and Sara tie for next place with thirteen each. Twelve girls bear the name of Ruth.

Some very rare names appear on the list, as Jessamine, Leone, Audrey, Myrtella, Gwendolyn, Oella, Winnetta, and Yolanda.

In Biblical times, names were selected because of their meaning. The custom has died out, but it is interesting to know what each name means.

Elizabeth means "Worshipper of God." Mary is of Hebrew origin and means "Star of the Sea," or "Their Rebellion." Catherine, whether spelled with a C or a K, is a Greek name meaning "Pure." Margaret is also of Greek origin and means "A Pearl." Anna is closely related to Hannah and means "Grace."

Dorothy means "Gift of God"; Helen, "Light." Ruth is a Hebrew name meaning "Beauty." Louise is the feminine of Lewis, a name of Old High German derivation meaning "A Bold Warrior." Sara is a "Princess".

Several names on the list are the feminine forms of men's names. Caroline is the feminine of Carolus, the Latin for Charles. Geraldine is the feminine of Gerald, meaning "Strong with the Spear". Harriet and Henrietta are feminine forms of Henry. Jene, Jean, and Jeanetta are forms of John.

But after all, "What's in a name?"

Dog Quite At Home in "Sem"

One of the numerous campus dogs took refuge from the cold and the rain on Saturday night by staying at the Women's College. He seemed to like his quarters, for he stayed the greater part of Sunday.

COLESTOCK TALKS ON UNFINISHED TASKS

Says We Must Adjust Problems In All Fields Of Industry, Religion, Government

That America, if she is to keep from stagnation, must hear the call of her unfinished tasks, was the sentiment voiced by Professor Henry T. Colestock, head of the department of history at Bucknell, in a speech on "Some Unfinished Tasks," given before the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian Church at York, Pa., on Tuesday evening, February 9.

"America must not rest upon the achievements of the past," warned Professor Colestock. "China did this about 2000 years ago, and she became stagnant. She failed to go forward and other nations passed her. We, as the world's most prosperous nation, are in danger of resting in complacent contemplation of the achievements of our fathers. We worship our ancestors and their work. To keep from stagnation we must be sensible of the menace in the 'backward look.'

The Call of Our Tasks

"We must hear the call of our tasks. They are not necessarily new tasks, but are unfinished ones," he said. "A task unfinished by our fathers is the adjustment between the weak and the strong. It is found today in the problem of capital and labor. The view of our ancestors was that the strong should be the masters; the weak, the slaves—the strong the feudal lords; the weak, the serfs. We repudiate slavery and serfdom, and should also realize that capitalism is unsatisfactory. The labor problem is an unfinished task which needs the best intelligence in the country to solve. We must not be content with the past, but must work out a real, harmonious, happy living."

The second of America's great tasks lies in the problem of government, Professor Colestock pointed out. In 1787 the United States had the most progressive government in the world. Our forefathers, in planning the Constitution, made it include all the best principles of government then known. We have adhered to these principles while other nations have gone ahead of us.

Our government now lacks modern principles. We are resting on the achievements of our fathers, worshiping their work and not solving our own problems. Our lack of progress is shown in our method of making laws. The committee system first adopted was good for a small nation, but does not meet the needs of the United States today. All other nations of any importance in the world have the "cabinet system" which has proved to be the finest and most efficient in existence. America is fifty to one hundred years behind the times in this problem.

Religious Tolerance Needed

"The unfinished task in religion is

Sophomore Cotillion Committee Named

Frank E. Johnston, president of the sophomore class, has announced the committee for the Sophomore Cotillion, the date of which has been set for Saturday evening, March 13. The committee is composed of the following: Frable (chairman), Karmilowicz, Arow, Brauchler, Nicholson, Gring, Drum, Buffington, Hitchins, Yolanda Frank, Catharine Marshall, Elizabeth James, and Catharine Cunningham.

The committee will have charge of all arrangements to be made for the dance.

Chairman Frable will have his committee meet in the chapel period Friday morning, February 19. Details concerning the Cotillion will be announced later.

SYMPHONY CONCERT

The Bucknell Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Miss Charlotte G. Armstrong, will give a concert in the Baptist church on Tuesday evening, February 23, at 8:15 o'clock. There will be no charge for admission to the recital, which is an annual affair.

WHO?

PROGRESS OF WORLD DUE TO THE GREEKS

Sculptors, Artists, Law-givers Got Inspiration From Them, Says Prof. T. F. Hamblin

"To one small people it was given to create the principle of progress in the world. That people was the Greek. Except for the blind forces of nature, there is nothing which moves in this world which does not owe its origin to one small people called the Greeks."

Professor Thomas F. Hamblin teacher of the Greek language and literature in Bucknell University, when asked by a Bucknellian reporter for a statement concerning the value of Greek in the college curriculum, gave this quotation by Gompery from the history of "Greek Thinkers" by Sir Henry Waine.

Professor Hamblin placed the cultural value of the study of this subject as one of the most important factors for the average college student. "Every branch of knowledge is affected by it," he said. "All modern institutions are based on it. Government, the drama, law, arts, all come from the Greeks. Sculptors and architects today follow the old Grecian style. Our most noteworthy poets received much of their inspiration and material from the literature of this ancient civilization. The chief reason for the superiority of older writers to those of today lies in the fact that Greek and Latin formed the foundation of the education of these earlier masters. The Greek standard in every department was absolute perfection, which all tried to attain."

Professor Hamblin then turned to the language itself. "Greek is the most perfect language which has ever existed," he said. "It is the most correct, the most accurate, and the most expressive. All students of English should have a foundation in this subject.

"Because of its accuracy of expression, this language is used as the basis of all scientific and educational terms. This is especially true of the medical profession, in which a knowledge of scientific Greek is absolutely essential. Professor Hamblin cited one instance of a medical student who studied scientific Greek in his senior year. This student said at the completion of his course that if he had had the benefit of this subject in his freshman or sophomore year, he would have saved a great amount of time and energy which he expended on pure memory work of scientific terms and names which are derived directly from the Greek.

"The study of the Greek language and literature," concluded Dr. Hamblin, "is valuable today because of the part which Greece played in the history of the world. This one small nation has had a greater influence for good on the general trend of civilization than any other group of people that the world has ever known."

Sixty New Lab Desks; New Chemistry Class

With the installation of sixty new desks in one of the laboratory rooms in the basement of the Chemistry Building, members of the chemistry department hope to eliminate the interference between classes in biological and in general chemistry, according to Professor William G. Owens.

Heretofore these two divisions have had to use the same laboratory rooms, causing a great deal of congestion. Many students were forced to go there in the evenings or before breakfast in the morning to work off their "unknowns."

"The fitting up of the new laboratory will put a stop to my being awakened at five o'clock in the morning to unlock the doors of the Chemistry Building," said Professor Owens.

A class in agricultural chemistry has also been started. This course was not given last year.

Oratorical Contest To Be Held In March

Representative for Union Meet To Be Selected Soon

The orators of the college are now planning to hold their local contest in preparation for the contest of the Eastern Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Oratorical Union to be held at Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa., during the month of March. The local contest to decide who shall represent Bucknell in the event will probably be held on March 2. Orations being prepared for the contest may not exceed two thousand words in length.

The contest of the Eastern Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Oratorical Union has been an annual event in the forensic work of the colleges of the state for some fourteen years. Bucknell was admitted to the Union four years ago and in the four years has had one winner of first prize, T. Burns Drum, who attained this honor in his sophomore year when, as it happened, the contest was held at Lewisburg. The by-laws of the Union make the winner of the first prize for one year ineligible for further competition, so it will be necessary to pin the hopes of Bucknell on some other contestant this year.

Each college in the Union is allowed to present one representative at the annual contest, and first, second, and third prizes are awarded. The members of the Union at the present time are Albright College, Gettysburg College, Muhlenberg College, Lafayette College, Ursinus College, Franklin and Marshall College, and Bucknell University.

Y. W. Sleigh Ride Cold But Joyous

"A very good time, but a mighty cold one", said the members of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet and freshman commission when they got in at 1:30 A. M. from their sleigh ride to Anne Steven's home in Mooresburg, twelve miles from here, on Monday night, February 8.

Twenty-six girls piled into the two sleighs waiting for them at the front door of the Woman's College at six o'clock, for the annual sleigh ride given by the Y. W. cabinet to the freshman commission. The two and a half hour ride to Mooresburg, twelve miles away, was filled with stories and songs. The orchestra, consisting of "Billie" Dakin's "uke" supplied the music.

Because of the extreme cold, several of the more venturesome hopped out of the sleighs and ran along beside them. There was almost one less member of the freshman commission when "Jerry" Fortner, '29, alarmed everyone by slipping and falling directly under the noses of the horses drawing the second sleigh, but she escaped injury.

When the sleighs drew up before the Stevens' home, everyone dashed to the fireplace, and welcomed the hot dogs, rolls, bacon, cocoa, etc., with open hands. During this time, the girls managed to sing. They learned a negro spiritual, and sang "Follow the Gleam". Anne VanDine gave a clever little speech welcoming the commission.

The fact that the horses were stabled a mile away, delayed the party's return. Mrs. C. M. Ware, mother of Pauline Ware, who was visiting her daughter, acted as chaperone. Irene Bell, '26, president of the Student Executive Board, was a guest.

BAND PRACTICE NOW: WJBU PROGRAMS SOON

The Bucknell Band is functioning once more after a vacation of two months. The first practice of the second semester was held in Commencement Hall on Thursday, February 5.

The immediate purpose of the practices is to prepare several operatic numbers to be presented through the University radio station, WJBU. Several concerts are scheduled for the spring season too and practice will be continued each Thursday night in preparation for these.

WISE DISTRIBUTION OF GREAT RICHES GIVER'S PROBLEM

Richardson, Private Secretary, Of John D. Rockefeller Jr., Points Out Difficulties

WILL MONEY DO HARM IS QUESTION MET WITH

Says The Younger Rockefeller Receives 12,000 Requests For Aid Each Year

"One who has large sums to give finds it necessary to develop principles and policies by which to regulate the giving," said Mr. W. S. Richardson, private secretary to John D. Rockefeller Jr., in his address before the Bucknell Sociological Society in Bucknell Hall, Monday evening. He illustrated his point by giving instances of the difficulties encountered in philanthropic work and showed how the problems of giving are met.

"There is in this country an increasing number of men who are confronted with the difficulties involved in giving away large sums of money," said the speaker. "Riches in themselves are a great problem, and a wise distribution of them in charitable work presents an even greater problem.

"One way of giving is through the industries, building better houses for the workmen of various communities, and improving conditions generally for this class. Another is to create trusts, sums of money set aside to be held and managed for the benefit of some particular group or institution. But what interests us tonight, and here the real problem comes in, is the outright giving away of money."

Mr. Richardson pointed out that one of the chief questions arising in the mind of a donor is, "Will my money do harm?" In order to give wisely and helpfully one must be careful to discriminate between the deserving and the undeserving, for there are many applications for money by individuals and organizations that are not deserving but are made to appear so.

"One who has large sums to give finds it necessary to develop principles and policies by which to regulate the giving, and this is a real task. Of course, not every request can be complied with although all might be worthy, and it is in order to decide among applicants seeming to be equally deserving that policies are decided upon."

In support of this statement concerning the inability of even the greatest philanthropist to grant every plea for money, Mr. Richardson said that the younger Mr. Rockefeller receives 12,000 such requests each year.

"Another problem is, 'How much shall I give?' This is very hard to

Burpee Toastmaster At I. O. O. F. Banquet

Professor Frank E. Burpee was toastmaster at a banquet given by the Lewisburg chapter, No. 96, I. O. O. F., Friday evening, February 12, at the lodge rooms in the post office building. There were about 150 present.

Following the banquet, a program consisting, for the most part, of musical and reading numbers was presented by several Bucknellians.

John Gilmour, '27, sang two solos, "Friend of Mine," and "Where My Caravan Has Rested." Mrs. Wilfred W. Wilcox also sang two selections, "Coming Home," and "Birth of Morn."

Dr. G. V. Brown then gave a very interesting exhibition of the uses of liquid air, performing some experiments to help illustrate his talk.

Edna Watson, '27, came next on the program, giving two readings, "Newly Weds" and "Betty at the Baseball Game." Robert Dilworth, '27, then sang two solos, "Duna," and "Ma Little Banjo."

The Lewisburg Orchestra also aided in entertaining the lodge members by playing several numbers during the evening.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI KAPPA PSI

Brother Richard Peden celebrated his birthday by distributing Bobby Burns cigars again.

Extensive preparation is being made for a formal, Seminary dinner dance to be held at the chapter house February 27.

Mr. Franklin Neer, of Baltimore, Md., a graduate of Princeton, was a guest at dinner Sunday, February 14.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Phi Gamma Delta takes great pleasure in announcing the pledging of James Hughes, '29.

Brother George Henggi, and Brother Paul Hann of Denison, visited the chapter during the week-end.

A general good time gathering was held at the chapter house on Saturday afternoon from two till five o'clock. Miss Clash chaperoned the party. Cards were enjoyed by many and Miss Clash and Cliff Jones won the prizes, which were a box of candy and a carton of Luckies. "Lou" Kesler entertained at the piano for more than an hour, and this helped to break the monotony of the "vic." The party was the first of a series of Saturday afternoon dances that are being held under the leadership and pep of "Giza" Elder.

Headmaster James Hughes and Business Manager Charles Hughes, of Bellefonte Academy, were guests of the chapter Saturday and Sunday.

Brother "Bill" Mulhaffey, '25, of Oakmont, visited the chapter during the week-end. The brothers however saw very little of Bill.

Brother "Gnat" Davis, '23, of Williamsport visited his brothers during the week-end.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Mr. K. S. Miller, father of pledge Miller, '29, was a luncheon guest at the house on Monday, February 8.

Assistant Professor and Mrs. D. M. Griffith were guests of the fraternity at dinner on Thursday evening, February 11.

Mother Miller was a guest at the card party given at the home of Mrs. L. E. Baker, of Milton, Thursday afternoon, February 11.

Yen Wai Wong of Xicotencotl, Tampe, Mexico, was a visitor at the house Thursday evening, February 11.

Pledge Brother Mose Quinn, after a brief visit at his home in Memphis, Tennessee, has returned to college as a special student.

Brother "Cy" Haas, of Reading, spent last week-end visiting the boys at the house.

Brother Shimp, '27, spent last week-end at his home in Quinton, N. J.

KAPPA SIGMA

The living rooms on the first floor of the chapter house are being redecorated. The boys expect the work to be completed before the district convclave that is to be held here during the first week-end in March.

DELTA SIGMA

Plans are complete for a formal "Florida" dance to be held at the house Saturday, February 20. The committee is busy constructing a suitable atmosphere.

The members of the annual play "Cappy Ricks" were entertained at dinner by Assistant Professor and Mrs. Harry R. Warfel at their home, Monday evening, February 15.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

The basketball team returned from Muncy last week-end with another out-of-town victory. Thus far the boys haven't been defeated in out-of-town games. After the game a square dance was given in honor of the players and many witnessed their first square dance. This coming Saturday Kappa Delta Rho meets Watsontown Big Five at Watsontown.

Brother Wilson, '23, visited his brothers during the week-end.

Iota is planning a town dance for the first week in March.

Brothers Birci and Cargill ventured to Lewisburg during the week-end in Bird's two-cylinder speedster.

The house has been thoroughly renovated and many new articles of furniture have been purchased.

Paul Craps, '29, is showing the boys many new Charleston steps which he brought up from Porto Rico.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

Assistant Professor and Mrs. R. L. Matz dined at the house Sunday, February 7.

An old fashioned sleighing party to Buffalo Valley Inn at Mifflinburg was held on Tuesday evening, February 9. After the "eats" some time was spent in dancing and merry making, the party returning home at an "early" hour tired and cold but nevertheless in fine spirits.

The formal initiation of six new men into active membership of Phi Lambda Theta was held at the house Saturday evening, February 6.

PHI MU

Arlene Kimball, '27, presented three dozen silver spoons to the Phi Mu girls for use in their suite. Each Phi Mu girl plans to give something to add to the suite furnishings, on Founders' Day, March 5.

WHY—

Macedonians Are Haunted by Fear

There are many other lovely mountain districts in Europe, and in some respects Macedonia recalls the scenery of the Scottish highlands. But there is nowhere else in Europe where you are conscious of the same strange brooding human spirit.

It is partly fear and partly poverty. But there is also an element of menace and savagery never far behind. You see it in the eyes of the passers-by, of the little village groups. You hear grim stories of banditry, now ominously reviving after a pause of half a century.

That is, I suppose, why the Greek government insisted that we should enjoy the company of ten gendarmes, cheerful men, but generally so far in the rear that we had to rely upon their spiritual support alone, says Harold Spencer in the London Telegraph.

Fear—that is at the base of this spirit that pervades Macedonia—the inherited fear of a population that has been harassed and ravaged for centuries, and expects to be hurried and ravaged again. That fear has become defensive, and it is expressed in the behavior of the sheepdogs—animals that come from afar across the fields rushing swiftly at your motor and almost leaping into the car with deep baylngs, only giving up the pursuit when they are quite exhausted. Those dogs remind one of the wolves of Russia.

This Macedonian fear becomes an alarmed curiosity as the people watch your car. What are you there for? What honest purpose could bring a man possessed of his senses to this forlorn land? What kind of oppressor are you? A landlord, a taxer, or an evictor? Do you come to sell weapons? To kidnap men?

These are the fleeting shapes and forms taken by the fear of Macedonia. Remember that it is only twelve years since those people were subject to the caprices of any passing Turkish pasha or beg, and that since then, they have been hunted about between the ambitions of two Christian states. Even today they are being visited by murderous bands. No wonder there is fear in Macedonia.

Peanut Not Properly Appreciated as Food

The peanut sold in this country, mainly to boys in the street and to persons wishing to feed the animals in the zoo, is rapidly becoming an article of the greatest commercial value. Already it is being used in the production of 145 foods and useful articles.

From the peanut we obtain peanut butter, ten varieties of salts, five kinds of breakfast food, two grades of flour, ice cream, salad oil, sauce, metal polishes, toilet and laundry soaps, oleomargarine, wood stains, leather dyes, ink, and glycerin.

A successful oil peanuts can be made into a pint of milk, while the nuts make a better lard substitute than does cottonseed oil. Mixed with wheaten flour, peanuts make a palatable and highly nutritious bread; they also make excellent biscuits and cakes.

Strictly speaking, the peanut is not a nut at all; it is what is called a "legume"—akin to the bean and pea. The peanuts grow underground, and the crop is harvested with a plow, there being special machines which clean and bunch the nuts.—London Tit-Bits.

Tree Frogs Creatures of Peculiar Habits

Many strange variations in breeding habits and rearing of young characterize the tree frogs of tropical America. A famous South American species makes small pens or nurseries under water, in which its eggs are left to hatch, and where the tadpoles are confined, protected from all danger. Another species carries its large eggs on its back until they hatch and the young remains some time afterward. Another species develops pouches in the skin of the back of the female, in which the eggs and young are safely transported.

North American tree frogs possess to a remarkable degree the faculty of changing color by modification of the contents of the pigment cells under the skin, no doubt a provision to enable them to elude their enemies. In winter they bury themselves in the earth or in the decayed wood and disc of old stumps, and breed in the spring.

Only a few can have their faces on coins. The others are content to get their hands on them.

LEWISBURG

By S. Cober Braucher, '28

Of Lewisburg city the best and the fairest,
A few pleasant things I here wish to tell,
'Tis here that in peace, in hope, and in plenty,
A people progressive and honest do dwell.

A patriot town ever loyal and willing,
To help Uncle Sam on land or on sea,
In all our great wars we never were lagging,
From Sixty-one down to our brave Cavalry D.

We all have a pride in our seven fine churches,
Our court house so stately, so neat, and so grand,
Our schools are as good as money can make them,
Our instructors the best in all this fair land.

Our banks are as strong as the Rock of Gibraltar,
Our newspapers fearless in every good fight,
Our stores are all noted for zips and for beauty,
Their motto in business is, "Ever Do Right."

Our town is well lighted, and streets nearly perfect—
Our drainage and cleanliness none can excell,
Our air is so pure, the breezes so free,
Come visit our city next spring and see.

Community Ambulance to comfort and bless,
The Red Cross a Savior for all in distress,
Humane and progressive we read and we think,
We stand by the right, are opposed to "Strong Drink."

Our brave and efficient fire company boys,
Have lightened our fears and doubled our joys,
The pride of our city they are a live wire,
And the devil well knows they can put out his fire.

I reserve the last verse for the best of my song,
To say that the charm and the beauty belong,
To Bucknell's Daughters who sure head the list,
Each one "sweet sixteen and never been kissed."

Question: "What is a paradox?"
Answer: "A couple of wharves."

VICE CONSUL FOLLMER, '15, GOES TO ESTHONIA

Cyrus B. Follmer, '16, who went into the American Consular Service shortly after his return from France with the A. E. F., and who was for some years vice consul at Lyon, is now vice consul at Tallinn, Esthonia. Reval may be a more familiar name to some for this seaport.

Follmer has not only found time to perfect himself in spoken French and to read widely in French literature, but has acquired the ability to read and write Russian.

Mr. Follmer's home was in Milton. When the United States entered the war against Germany, he enlisted in one of the Bucknell ambulance units. When the boys left Bucknell, enroute for France, Follmer was practically in charge of the squad. He went through some gruelling experiences in France, in common with the other Bucknell men. His ambulance unit was awarded the croix de guerre for exceptional service, and brought home a citation signed by Marshal Petain. This citation and the accompanying small silk banner may be seen in the college library.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

Princeton Entrance Exams Stiffened With New Tests

Applicants for admission to Princeton University this spring will be required to satisfy four distinct requirements, instead of simply passing the college entrance board examinations, as in former years, it was announced recently by Professor Radcliffe Heermance, dean of freshmen and director of admissions. Furthermore, at least 500 candidates will be definitely admitted in June but only 150 will have the privilege of re-examination in the fall.

The new ruling provides that the candidate for admission must give information from his school principal or headmaster regarding his character; he must file a certificate from his school recording the actual grades he has attained and his standing in comparison with schoolmates; he must take a psychological examination designed to indicate native ability and alertness of mind; and finally he must take the examination of the college entrance board in the fifteen units of school work required for admission to the university.

Before limitation of numbers by means of the selective system of admission became necessary, the grades that a candidate obtained on the college entrance board examination were almost the sole criterion by which he was judged. The value of the examinations is unquestioned. They provide a standard in measurement by which a school boy from remote sections of the country will get an equal chance with the product of the best known preparatory schools, provided he has studied the required subjects and has an adequate preparation to do college work. Although the high school student's actual mark in the college entrance examinations may not be so high as that of a preparatory schoolboy, who has been pointed especially for college entrance, the other requirements will give the public school applicant an opportunity to qualify on natural ability and on strength of character.

"The mere passing of the college board examinations no longer insures admission. They are but one of four factors. This predicts a greater fairness in selection, for a young man of keen native intelligence and fine integrity, who has been handicapped by a lack of adequate preparation, may under this system gain admission, even though his examinations have not been entirely satisfactory; whereas, an applicant who has had the advantage of a splendid preparatory school, and frequently intensive tutoring as well, but who has failed to take advantage of his opportunities, even though he passes the examinations, will be refused admission on the basis of his school standing."

Vocabulary of Princeton Men Show 6 Per Cent Increase

The average upperclassman at Princeton University has a vocabulary 6 per cent larger than was the case ten years ago, according to Harry Franklin Covington, professor of public speaking and debate. Professor Covington each year estimates the vocabulary of the average man in his department by means of the 100-word recognition test devised by Professor L. M. Terman, widely known psychologist of Stanford University.

In reference to the tests Professor Covington said: "If we conservatively assume a maximum of 18,000 words as the normal reading vocabulary of an educated person, and it is possible that the correct assumption is twice this number, the test indicates that the average upperclassman of 1916 had a vocabulary of about 15,500 words, while the upperclassman of 1926 has a reading vocabulary of 16,500 words."

U. P. Professor Says Dress Plays Big Part in Success

Dress and social poise are two important factors in a young man's struggle for success, according to Dr. Alfred H. Williams director of the industrial service department of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania.

Doctor Williams considers them so important that he has incorporated the questions in a list of eight general characteristics on which each student is examined every year to determine his chances of success in his chosen career. The other factors considered in the annual examination are mental alertness, industry, expression, co-operativeness, and reaction toward criticism.

The personal rating system developed by the department under Doctor Williams will make it possible for employers to know just what type of young men they are about to employ. Experience has convinced the officials of the school that personal characteristics as well as classroom ability play a vital part in finding the student to fit the job. The system developed will provide, it is believed, a trustworthy basis not only for gauging the student's potentialities for certain work, but also for tracing his development while in school.

A card covering all the characteristics and classifications is made out for each student, and in June, at the end of the second term, cards from each member of the faculty, recording reactions toward each student, will be received by the department.

U. S. Journalism Students Now Exceed Five Thousand

The study of journalism in universities and colleges since the establishment of the first course by the University of Wisconsin in 1905 has increased until now 200 instructors are teaching 5,000 students in 50 schools, according to a survey just made by L. W. Murphy, director of the courses in journalism at the University of Illinois, a 1921 graduate of Wisconsin.

Mr. Murphy's estimate by courses is as follows: Reporting, 3,000 students; feature writing, 2,100; introductory courses, 4,500; advertising, 2,700; copy reading, 1,500; history of journalism, 700; ethics of journalism, 650; country journalism, 450; law of the press, 450. In addition to these courses, students are enrolled in courses in editorial writing, critic writing, agricultural journalism, the teaching of journalism, publicity, and public opinion.

More than 50 professional courses and schools of journalism are operating today, says Mr. Murphy, as compared with approximately 85 schools of medicine and 120 schools of law.

SINCLAIR LEWIS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF KANSAS

For two busy days Sinclair Lewis lionpected Americanhigher educationas at the University of Kansas. "This," Lewis confessed, "is the first opportunity I have had of gaining first hand observation of college life for four years. I am interested in knowing the feelings of American college men and women. . . ."

On Monday noon, January 25, the author of Babbitt spoke before the Rotary Club of Lawrence, the college town. He also spoke that day at the all convocation and the university club.

The following afternoon Lewis spent with the "Young men who are behind the Dove," a liberal journal of student opinion.

"I liked these young men very much," he said, "and I heartily approve of the thing which I am told they are attempting to do at the University. I have not yet had an opportunity of reading their publication, but I am not willing to condemn it merely because it is said to be 'half-licked,' 'destructive,' and some of the other things which I have heard it called."

"I do not expect the average college student to turn out well-thought-out, mature writing, for the very reason that the average college student is not himself mature. Such independent student publications as the Dove, which give the contributors an opportunity for original expression, are of distinct worth in the student's education.

Lewis also advised the students to write of the things that immediately concern them, to keep away from broad and general discussions of religion and world problems.

Yale to Give Scholarship to Training Camp Volunteer

A scholarship providing free tuition at Yale University, to be competed for in the Citizen's Military Training Camp at Camp Devens by young men who shall fully qualify in June of this year for admission to Yale next fall, was announced recently by the United States Military Training Camps Association through President James R. Angell, of Yale. The scholarship will be renewable to the winner in succeeding academic years on the basis of a satisfactory record, and a similar scholarship will be offered for competition in 1927.

"We shall be glad to make this experiment for two years and see how it works," said President Angell. "As we have limited our entering class to 850 students and always have many more applicants than we can accommodate, we shall expect the Military Training Camps Association to pick any such scholarship students with great care and with due regard to the possession by the candidate of sound character, fine physique and satisfactory evidence of marked intellectual ability."

DON'T MISS MISS POPULARITY

More Private School Students Work Their Way at Princeton

More graduates of preparatory schools are working in student commons at Princeton to earn part of their college expenses, according to figures announced recently by the Princeton Bureau of Student Employment. Of 151 members of the four classes who serve meals and act as head waiters, eighty-seven came to the university from private schools, as against sixty-four from high schools.

According to Norvel B. Samuels, director of the bureau, the figures are significant, "because they show that, contrary to popular belief, not all American boys who prepare for college at private schools are necessarily wealthy. At many of the leading preparatory schools of the country boys of limited means are given an opportunity to work their way."

The student waiter system was founded at Princeton in 1914 and is considered by university officers to be unusually successful. —N. Y. Times.

Oldest U. S. Social Fraternity Completes Its First Century

Now has arrived the centennial of a college fraternity marking the hundredth anniversary of the system that has spread through the universities and reached down into the high school. Kappa Alpha is the original of the undergraduate "secret" societies. It is not really the senior of the Greek letter fraternities, though. Phi Beta Kappa, organized at William and Mary in the year of national independence has that distinction and the society of the watch key, too, was in its early period a secret one.

It is now strictly a "literary and philosophical society," membership attesting scholarship rank. Virtually all the broad of Kappa Alpha are social clubs. Union College, Schenectady, where Kappa Alpha was born, was the scene of the centenary observances recently.

College administrations were not always hospitable to the early growth of the fraternities, especially as, following the example of Kappa Alpha, they developed along social lines instead of emulating the aspirations of Phi Beta Kappa. It was an "extra-curricular" interest that threatened to be as diverting as football, say, has now become.

Union College nevertheless soon repeated with two more Greek letters and the idea was galloping through the colleges when given pause temporarily by the coming of the Civil War.

N. Y. U. to Have First School of Aeronautics at Any College

Ground was broken at University Heights, October 22, for the first building of the Daniel Guggenheim School of Aeronautics, at New York University, the first school of its kind connected with an American University. This building, a two-story structure 120 feet long, will face the southern entrance to the campus. It will be ready for use before the end of this school year. In turning the first spadeful of earth Mr. Guggenheim said:

"I am thrilled at the thought of the opportunities that the science of aeronautics has before it —the greatest road of opportunity in the world today. The possibilities of achievement in my own line of mining and metallurgy, for example, I firmly believe are insignificant in comparison.

"If I were a young man seeking a career in science or commerce I would unhesitatingly turn to aviation. As I am an old man whose active days of toil are passed I shall dedicate the rest of my life with my son's active aid to the study and promotion of the science of aeronautics."

Penn Students Prefer the Passée

The modern girl is not the sort that one would settle down with, according to youthful students at the University of Pennsylvania. The old-fashioned girl, with her airs and graces, her domestic propensities and her "touch-me-not" attitude, was far superior, they say, to the young miss of 1926, with her rolled stockings, her cigarettes, and cocktails, and her freeand-easy attitude toward "petting parties."

Andover Gets Historic Chair

The old rocking chair in which the Rev. Samuel Francis Smith sat when he wrote in 1832 the hymn "America" has just been acquired by the Phillips Andover Academy.

Smith at the time was a student at the Andover Theological Seminary, then a part of the academy. He is said to have written the words in half an hour.

The chair, long in possession of his descendants, once was carried to California, but now is here to stay.

Justice seems to be absent when one is dealing with the Frosh, as was shown by the aid given to the Sophomores of Washington and Jefferson college by the upperclassmen in spanking the top-victorious Frosh. Take heed, '29, in the spring Frosh-Soph combats.

Rare Old Volume Shows Cost To Students In Bygone Days

A recent addition to the Maria Hosmer Penniman Memorial Library of Pennsylvania is a rare volume published in 1732 containing a number of suggestions about solving the cost of higher education at that time.

The book, given to the library by Dr. Josiah H. Penniman, president and provost of the university, is "The Expenses of University Education Reduced", a second addition and of great value.

Though the book is of little value in helping cut down expenses of young men and women seeking a college education, it is of great interest. It reveals that parents of the early eighteenth century had just as much trouble financing their son's education as they have today.

CIVIL SERVICE NEEDS JR. SOCIAL ECONOMIST

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination for position as junior social economist.

Receipt of applications for junior social economist will close March 13. The date for assembling of competitors will be stated on the admission cards sent applicants after the close of receipt of applications.

The examination is to fill vacancies in the children's bureau, of the department of labor, and vacancies in positions requiring similar qualifications.

The entrance salary is $1,860 a year. After the probational period required by the civil service act and rules, advancement in pay may be made without change in assignment up to $2,400 a year. Promotion to higher grades may be made in accordance with the civil service rules as vacancies occur.

A separate register of eligibles will be established for each of the following optional subjects: general child welfare problems; industrial problems; and problems of dependency, neglect, or delinquency.

The duties are to assist in field studies relating to the extent, conditions, and regulations of the employment of minors in different industries and occupations and the relation of industry to child welfare, or in studies relating to problems of child dependency, neglect, or delinquency, or in other field studies of conditions affecting child welfare. Field work includes interviews with parents, children, officials of public and private agencies, and employers, and analysis of public records and records of public and private agencies and institutions.

Full information and application blanks may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Rutherford, N. J., Feb. 12, 1926.

The Editor,
"The Bucknellian,"
Bucknell University,
Lewisburg, Pa.

My Dear Editor:

Well, Mr. Editor, now that examinations are over, and the time-honored post-examinations furor among the students relative to the merits and demerits of the honor system, the monitor system, fair and unfair grading, partiality and impartiality, ad infinitum, is in full swing, I consider it a propitious time to offer a suggestion—gained from my experience since attending law school—in the hope that it might prove of value to the University.

My suggestion is as follows: At New York University, the day before an examination takes place, each student goes to the office and draws a number, which number is known to no one but the student and the Dean, who issues the numbers. The examinations are carried on as at Bucknell—that is, the questions and examination books are given to the students by the monitors. Then the students, instead of putting their names on the books, write their numbers on them, the subject, and the name of the professor. When the students are through with the examination, they turn in the books to the monitor, the professor concerned being absent. No other marks of identification are placed on the books. This system lightens the heavy burden resting upon the professors, in that no student can claim that he or she has not been given his or her just deserts.

Now, you might say that this system is practicable at a large school like New York University, but how can it be applied at a comparatively small university like Bucknell, where practically all the professors are acquainted with the handwriting of almost every student in their particular classes? This is especially true of departments where it is customary to hand in papers, but does not hold true in other departments—such as Professor Howes', Professor Colestock's, the economics department, as well as a few others. In departments where papers are handed in, the difficulty can be overcome by having the professors of the department interchange examination papers, thus allaying the suspicions of the ever-critical students.

Finally, Mr. Editor, you may accuse me of unduly stressing the importance of examinations. In the first place, isn't the question of whether or not a student advances in college from his freshman to his senior year and finally graduates, dependent solely upon his or her ability to pass tests? And passing out from college into the world, in view of the fact that life is a series of tests, isn't it the essence of a college education to prepare one to meet these expected contingencies and to overcome them successfully? In the business world and in the professions we are called upon very day to meet and solve problems, to make prompt and definite decisions; in other words, to use our judgment. It has been truly said that a man's judgment is no better than his information, and isn't it the primary purpose of a college education to give him an adequate background of information? Examinations are designed to bring out how much knowledge a student has assimilated and how capable he or she is of applying it. That is why I feel justified in stressing the importance of examinations.

Sincerely,
Theodore Costides, ex-'26.

To the Students of Bucknell University:

The Committee on Student Activities as previously stated in these columns maintains an official university calendar for your protection and information. With this committee fitting into the scheme of things more evenly each day your attention is again called to the function of this official calendar.

The purpose of this calendar, maintained at two separate offices on the campus, is to prevent conflicts in dates of meetings, debates, lectures, musicals, etc., and to give a service to all fraternities and organizations by means of an official clearing house of information relative to the advisability and selection of dates. It also renders a greater and more important service to the student body in protecting it from conflicting engagements, and arranging events so that each event may enjoy the greatest possible attendance. As a secondary purpose this calendar aids the Publicity Department in the emanation of news from Bucknell to the press.

At the office of Dean Clark in the Women's College, and at the office of the Alumni Secretary in Main College, will be found copies of this calendar which is always open for your inspection.

It is important as well as imperative that you consult the calendar before arranging programs.

A. G. Stoughton
Secretary the Committee on Student Activities.

to reduce intolerance. This has always been a problem in the history of every intellectual people," Professor Colestock continued. "Just now a wave of intolerance is appearing among us. Christianity is being torn into animosities because there is intolerance between the Liberals or Modernists and the Conservatives or Fundamentalists. This intolerance is as great as that between the Catholics and the Protestants, the Anglicans and the Puritans which brought about war. We're in the midst of the same thing, but it does not manifest itself in the same way. There is an emergence of that old, venomous thing, religious intolerance, that is threatening to rend Protestantism asunder. Religion is in the views of either or both. Religion is life lived in the fellowship of God—the other is merely the dress of religion."

Dr. Colestock gathers these three unsolved problems, government, religion, and adjustment between weak and strong, from a study of the world's activities. His urge is to look forward, to see the problems ahead of us; not to rest, worshipping the achievements of our ancestors, but to solve our own problems courageously.

GERLACH USES NERVE; FOOLS DICKINSONIANS

"Well, of all the nerve." This was the expression of several students when William H. Gerlach, '28, told them how he had passed as a freshman, and had attended the annual Freshmen Dance at Dickinson College on Friday evening, February 12.

Early in the evening, at the basketball game between the Dickinson College girls' team and the Moravian College girls' team, "Bill" noticed that the freshmen were not under rules, and he inquired and was told that this was the annual "freshmen night."

As "Bill" was walking out of the gymnasium after the game, one of Dickinson's freshmen passed him and asked whether he was going to the dance. "Bill," always ready for a new adventure, replied that he was.

According to Gerlach, the dance was a marked success. When he entered the dance hall, he was not acquainted with anyone, but it was not long before he had formed the acquaintance of some of the students.

"Bill" never intended to attend this dance when he set out to hike to Carlisle on Friday afternoon. His purpose was to attend a dance given by the Dickinson Commons Club on Saturday evening as the guest of Wendell LaCoe, a brother of "Wally" LaCoe, ex-'28.

PAUL ALTHAUS, ex-'12, SINGS SOLOS AT WJZ

Paul S. Althaus, ex-'12, and Madame Julia Claussens, both Metropolitan Opera stars, gave a concert on the evening of Sunday, February 14, for the radio audience that tuned in on WJZ. A very able orchestra accompanied them and also played alone at times. There were nine numbers. Although sung four solos, and joined Madame Claussens in a duet.

This concert is the second of four sponsored by the Bakelite Corporation. They are of interest because, to quote the announcement of them, they "are of an experimental nature and are offered to the listeners as 'sample programmes,' so that the sponsors may determine through the response received, which type of entertainment is most desired by the radio audiences on Sunday nights, and will pattern all the future programmes accordingly."

It is gratifying to know that a Bucknellian was selected as one of the artists to present to the public music of the very highest type.

SEC. DAVIS WRITES ON ALIEN PROBLEM

United States Secretary of Labor, James J. Davis, to whom Bucknell gave the honorary degree, doctor of laws, in 1924, is the author of an article, "Shall Aliens Be Registered,?" in the February 13 issue of the Dearborn Independent.

Secretary Davis proposes enrollment of alien residents as a preparation for citizenship and a safeguard against immigration fraud. "The enrolment plan would provide the contact now lacking between the foreign-born resident and the government," he writes.

During Bucknell's endowment drive, Secretary Davis was honorary chairman of the endowment committee.

A contemporary of John Wesley, a theological student at Leipsic, endorsing his view that cleanliness was next to godliness, took a bath, whereupon, because of his modernism, it is said he was refused his degree.

STATION WJBU

Station WJBU, Bucknell University, planned a novelty program for Wednesday, February 17, when outside performers were scheduled to play the concertina and the harmonica for listening radio fans. Later in the evening the Phi Gamma Delta boys were to go on the air for one hour, with a varied program of vocal and instrumental music.

The basketball game on Friday night will be broadcast, as usual.

There will be no program this week on Saturday.

When the new studio in the Engineering Building is complete, full programs will be given each week.

B. U. Chess Team Ties Williamsport A. C.

Bucknell Players Handicapped; State Team Here Saturday

Handicapped by the disadvantage that only three out of six players were present the Bucknell Chess Club met the Williamsport A. C. Chess Team in the Y. M. C. A. there and held them to a 3-3 tie in the first match of the season.

Instead of cancelling the game the Williamsport players showed their sportsmanship by permitting the Bucknell men to do double duty by each playing two opponents. In view of this double opposition credit should be given to the Bucknell players for holding one game to a tied score.

Before the contest it was agreed that a time limit from 8:00 until 11:00 should be fixed, allowing an hour and a half for each set. At the end of the time limit for the first set the game at the first board between Keyser and Freed was the only one finished, as Freed, after losing his central pawn on the forty-third move, had resigned.

As the games were not allowed to exceed the time limit the game at board number two, between Ross and Thompson, was adjudicated. Ross had lost a pawn in the middle game, and on the strength of that pawn-superiority, Thompson was awarded a win.

At board number three the game between Professor Robbins and Kline was adjudicated in favor of Kline, although Professor Robbins was generally conceded to have the better position. At the end of the first set the score stood Bucknell 1½, Williamsport 1½. Keyser of Bucknell played the winning game in this first set.

In the second set the game between Bennett and Keyser at board four was very closely contested. Throughout the game neither man was able to gain any advantage over his opponent, and at the time limit the game was judged a draw.

At board five Ross completely outmaneuvered Lifschutz, scoring a neat win before time was up.

Professor Robbins, after playing beautiful chess against Kline, who is regarded as one of the best players on the Williamsport team, succumbed to the rigorous attacks essayed by Dr. Mann at board six.

The line-up and score is as follows:

Bucknell	Board	Williamsport
M. L. Keyser-1	1	W. W. Freed-0
D. H. Ross-0	2	O. Thompson-1
Prof. Robbins-½	3	J. D. Kline-½
M. L. Keyser-½	4	J. S. Bennett-½
D. H. Ross-1	5	Lifschutz-0
Prof. Robbins-0	6	Dr. Mann-1
Bucknell 3		Williamsport 3

With the experiences of the Williamsport game behind it, the Bucknell chess team feels that it is ready to meet the strong State College team in a six-board match which will take place in the Library this coming Saturday, February 20.

The team of the University of Pennsylvania will also be Bucknell's opponent at Lewisburg on April 20. A return match will be played with Williamsport later in the year.

STOUGHTON ADDRESSES LEWISBURG ROTARIANS

Alfred G. Stoughton, general alumni secretary and director of publicity of Bucknell University was the speaker of the evening at a meeting of the Lewisburg Rotary on Monday, February 15.

Mr. Stoughton recently returned from a two weeks trip, during which he visited many colleges in the eastern part of the United States, studying the work of the alumni and publicity departments of other schools. In his talk Mr. Stoughton told the Rotarians many of the things he learned of the work of other colleges.

Theta U Vanquishes Non-Frat Quintet

A steady bombardment of the backboard, led by Mitchell and Vastine, resulted in a 28-9 victory for the Theta Upsilon Omega quintet over the Non-frat cagers in the second game played Wednesday evening, February 8. Mitchell, filling a guard position, scored five times from the court and contributed one foul for a total of 11 points. Vastine caged three baskets and two fouls.

Both teams played good basketball and the Non-frat passers drew considerable praise for their excellent teamwork and fine passing. The diminutive Simon and Frost showed up best for the losers, although neither had the ball often enough to score many points. The summaries:

Phi Lambda Theta Downed By Phi Psi

Phi Kappa Psi and Phi Lambda Theta locked horns in an interesting court tilt Wednesday evening, February 10. The "Phi Psis" coming out on the long end of a 39 to 10 score.

The game was fast but rough, and before it was half over several of the "Phi Psi" players seemed doomed to leave by the personal foul route. Tuck and Johnson had three personals chalked against each of them during the contest, but both escaped the fourth.

Tuck and Holmes played best for the winners while Ellzey shone for the Phi Lambda Theta outfit.

Phi Lambda Theta Vs. Lambda Chi, 60-18

The Lambda Chi Alpha cagers dropped in twin counters from all parts of the court in their rout of the Phi Lambda Theta quintet Monday evening. The Lambda Chi team attacked the basket with a vengeance early in the contest, and kept firing away all through the game for a 60 to 18 win.

Colestock, yearling center, was the bright star of the evening. This Lambda Chi tip-off man shone brilliantly, especially in the second half when he scored eight two-pointers. McCormick and Karmilowicz also were much in evidence in the scoring column of the winners.

Ellzey was Phi Lambda Theta's best bet, counting three field goals. The summaries:

K. D. R. Has Close Win Over Delta Sigma

One of the hardest fought and closest contests of the season was the game between the Kappa Delta Rho quintet and the Delta Sigma five, Saturday afternoon. Leading by one point until the last minute of play, the "K. D. Rs." got the game on lee when Marley lopped a long one through the mesh for a final score of 19 to 16.

Both teams seemed to be pursued by a jinx. Neither had difficulty in locating the basket, but both experienced considerable trouble in causing the ball to fall inside the mesh. Time after time the ball would roll around the rim only to fall on the negative side of the scoring net.

"Bud" Preible, Haviland, and Coates were much in evidence for the "Delta Sigs", while Marley and Carpenter did most of the work for the winners.

S. A. E. Gains Victory Over Kappa Sigma

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon dribblers added another win to their list when they took over the Kappa Sigma passers 26-17 in the second game played Monday evening, February 8.

Shortz and Hollinger aided the Kappa Sigs considerably, while Halicki, Marc, and Hitchins did most of the S. A. E. scoring. The box score for this game was not available.

Beta Kappa Buckles To Sigma Chi Five

An avalanche of field goals by the Sigma Chi dribblers swept a weak Beta Kappa five off its feet in the first game played Saturday afternoon, the "Sigs" winning 65 to 12.

The Sigma Chi passers divided scoring honors, Fritzinger counting seven two-pointers and two fouls, Neal Blaisdell registering eight field goals and one foul, and Remer scoring eight baskets. "Tony" Kostos annexed five baskets and two fouls.

Young was responsible for most of the Beta Kappa scoring. The Kappa forward scored three field goals and two fouls out of the same number of attempts.

Rudisill Challenges Tilden; Leaves Him Still A Champion

Few Bucknellians know that in their midst there is one who has met a champion, and who has, contrary to the usual rule, given a good account of himself. Frederick Rudisill, '28, of York, Pennsylvania, met the world's champion tennis player, William T. Tilden Jr., in the Western Pennsylvania Tennis Tournament on Pittsburgh courts. Both men had decisively eliminated all opposition in their previous contests and had qualified for the finals. Young Rudisill captured two hot games from Tilden and forced him to extend himself in the rest. The final score was: 6-2, 6-0, a very noteworthy achievement for "Rudy," considering the fact that Tilden has beaten the majority of his opponents by love sets. Rudisill says that Tilden is proficient in all the strokes of tennis and does not have any favorite one.

Who's Who at B. U.

Those who know say that hard work is the father of accomplishment. In the class room and in the general field of activities Ray Daggs has used that rule, and, as a result, has accomplished things.

While in high school, Ray, generally known as "Tony," was not overly blessed with a love for studying, but preferred to spend the major part of his time on athletics. Upon entering Bucknell he soon found out, as most of us do, that the word "student" had a different meaning from that which he had formerly placed upon it. So "Tony" at once came to the conclusion that if he were to be a successful doctor, he must make a successful start by getting into the "grind." He "ground" away persistently, burned no little midnight tallow (in those days candles were used after twelve o'clock in the dormitories) and found himself ranking high scholastically.

But this ambitious, hard working "pre-med" has not allowed his studies to make him lop-sided. His other activities are proof of this. During his first two years here, he sang in the glee club. His junior year found him in Y. M. C. A. work and also an active worker in the Student Volunteer Movement. In the latter organization he was registrar for a convention which was held at Bucknell. At the present time he is president of the Pre-Medical Society, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, president of the Epworth League in the Methodist Church, a member of the band, and holds three assistantships under different professors on the Hill.

Aside from these activities, Ray has persisted in fulfilling his social obligations. This he does with such a will that the motive surely can't come from a sense of duty alone. Last year he took a leading part in the play, "All on Account Of Polly," which was given in the Methodist Church and in several surrounding towns. As an actor he made a decided hit.

Through thick and thin, Ray is a friend. He can be depended upon to speak his mind if asked to do so, and after he has spoken, we usually agree that he has said something with sound reasoning behind it. His one unforgettable and ever present aim in life is to be a doctor, and if past deeds have any bearing on future accomplishments, he will be a good one.

P. A. throws pipe-peeves for a loss

AND the bigger they are, the harder they fall, as Shakespeare or somebody said. You can prove this beyond question with a jimmy-pipe and a tidy red tin of Prince Albert. Any time. Anywhere. As a matter of fact, tackling pipe-grouches is P. A.'s regular business.

Cool and sweet and fragrant, P. A.'s wonderful smoke comes curling up the pipe-stem, filling your system with a new brand of pipe-pleasure. You smoke—and smile! For the first time in your life, you've found the one tobacco that scales to your blueprint of bliss.

Slow or fast, no matter how you feed it, P. A. never bites your tongue or parches your throat. Those important items were taken care of in the original plans by the Prince Albert process. Get yourself a tidy red tin of this friendly tobacco today.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge moistener top, which keeps that tobacco in fine and perfect condition.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

HILLTOP BRIEFS

William O'Neil, '29, spent the week-end at his home in Kingston.

* * * *

Andrew Silensky, '26, visited friends in Williamsport on Sunday, February 7.

* * * *

"Si" Povish, '27, is now an "ex." "Si" left school to enter business with his father.

* * * *

Howard Suckling, '28, spent a recent week-end with his parents, in Hollidaysburg.

* * * *

"Lew" Kesler, '28, gave a birthday party at Professor Stoltz' on Monday night, February 8.

* * * *

The marriage of Anne Coyne, '24, to Harold Reitz, of Sunbury, in June, 1924, has been announced.

* * * *

Don Swartz, '29, passed a pleasant week-end between semesters at Trenton, N. J., and Bristol, Pa.

* * * *

"Bud" Wisa, '29, had a busy Saturday hiking through the heavy snows between Lewisburg and Ashland.

* * * *

Dale R. Wagner, '26, who dropped out of school the first semester, has resumed his studies again this semester.

* * * *

"Cas" Kleckner, ex-'26, who is visiting in Mifflinburg, runs over every once in a while to see her Phi Mu sisters.

* * * *

Ray Edwards, '26, was a Harrisburg visitor, February 6. LeMoyne Connely, '26, spent the day in Williamsport.

* * * *

Kitty Smith, '29, is back for the second semester. She did not return to college after the Christmas holidays, due to illness.

* * * *

"Mac" Jones, '26, is burning the mid-night oil in his attempt to put out the Popularity Contest number of the Belle Hop, on February 20.

* * * *

Ralph L. Walter, Asa Eaton, and Walter Shorts, all of the class of 1926, are doing practice teaching in Milton High School every afternoon.

* * * *

Stearns E. Warner, '27, spent the last week-end at State College where he witnessed the basketball game between State College and Bucknell.

* * * *

Martha Jones, '25, spent the week-end at the "Sem." She is teaching mechanical drawing and general science in the West Pittston High School.

* * * *

Once more New Building will rock upon its foundations! Classes in aesthetic dancing for our "airy fairies" at the "Sem" are on the program again.

* * * *

Margaret Rhoads, ex-'28, has returned to Bucknell for the second semester. She spent the first part of the year at Virginia College, near Romnoke.

* * * *

Black eyes are quite the rage on the Hill. "Bernie" Klosterman, '29, has just recovered from such an affliction, and "Red" Holmes, '29, is the present owner of one.

* * * *

On a recent 85 per cent. roll of honor, the girls outnumbered the boys 3 to 1. Don't you think it would be a good idea to require the males to "be in" before 10 P. M.

* * * *

Arthur Harris, '29, is trying to trace a hank draft that was stolen while enroute from California. The order was cashed in Lincoln, Nebraska, and the offenders escaped with the money.

* * * *

Many of the men students, and quite a few of the "Semites," took advantage of the recent heavy snowfall to try their hands at skiing. From observation of the contestants, we have decided that only "practice makes perfect."

* * * *

A large police dog interrupted the game between the Bucknell freshmen and the Gettysburg freshmen, when he persisted in dashing at the legs of the players. "Mose" Wilsbach, the referee, decided that cheering at such a stage was untimely, and ordered the dog to be cast out of the gym.

* * * *

A useful little book called "How To Study" was given without cost to the members of the Sociological Society last week for the purpose of general edification. The books had been sold to the class in orientation at 25c a copy, but as there had been a few left-overs, the Sociological Society decided to give them to the members of the Club instead of returning them. The gift was greatly appreciated.

Bill Madison, '27, spent a recent week-end at his home in Muncy.

Harry Knudson, '28, transferred to Susquehanna for the second semester.

* * * *

Fred Frnsworth, '27, spent the week end at his home in Bloomsburg, Pa.

* * * *

Harry Cox, '29, received word that his sister is going to visit him sometime in the near future.

* * * *

William Reis, '29, left for Drexel, where he will continue his engineering course.

* * * *

George Esgar, '29, spent the week-end of February 6 at his home in Wyoming, Pa.

* * * *

Mary Taubel, '29, was called home on Saturday, February 6, because of the death of an uncle.

* * * *

"Al" Lauderbaugh, '27, was a Williamsport visitor Saturday and Sunday, February 6 and 7.

* * * *

R. B. Vastine, '27, is planning a trip to New York by way of Allentown the week-end of the twelfth.

* * * *

"Len" Coates, '26, spent Saturday night and Sunday with "Buster" Hall, '24, at the latter's home in Shamokin.

* * * *

"Jerry" Kremer, Music School '28, attended the junior prom at University of Pittsburgh, Friday, February 5.

* * * *

Paul Humphreys, '28, gave a very interesting talk at the Baptist Christian Endeavor, Sunday evening, February 7.

* * * *

The Y. M. C. A. recently sent a basketful of fruit to Hiroto, '29, who is confined at Camp Devitt with tuberculosis.

* * * *

H. Browne, '26, was pleasantly surprised by a visit from his father, who spent the week-end at the Lambda Chi house.

* * * *

Francis Wood, '28 is planning to enter Cornell next fall. "Woody" believes he will be able to take up more extensive work in his chosen field of architecture.

* * * *

The Girls' Glee Club has resumed its work, and has planned a series of concerts to take place during the month of March.

* * * *

"Rolly" Fredericks, '29, has a new E flat alto saxophone. Rolly can be heard practising almost every day in his room in West College.

* * * *

Kathryn Kleckner Laber, ex-'26, who is visiting her home in Mifflinburg, spent Saturday, February 7, in visiting friends at the "Sem."

* * * *

"Bud" Wisa, '29, sustained a severe cut above his left eye, in an interfraternity basketball game, Wednesday evening, February 10.

* * * *

Elmer Dietz, '27, has proved his worth as an athlete. He played a stellar game for the Lambda Chi team against the Phi Lambda Thetas.

* * * *

C. I. Carpenter, '27, sang "Nearer My God to Thee" at the funeral service held for Wesley W. Wolfe on Tuesday afternoon February 9.

* * * *

G. M. Benson, Jr., '28, after seeing the tournament at Stahl's poolroom, has decided that there are one or two men in the country who can catch him a thing or two about billiards.

* * * *

The Bucknell Trio, composed of "Bob" Smith, Alex Heroschak Jr., and "Bob" Dilworth, was on the program at the Bucknell Alumnae Club meeting, held on Tuesday evening, February 9, in Bucknell Hall.

* * * *

Saranac Lake, where the late Christy Mathewson spent several months in his fight with tuberiulosis, has planned two memorials to Bucknell's greatest hero and baseball's greatest pitcher—a club house and a trust fund for welfare work.

* * * *

At a meeting of Frill and Frown on Monday evening, February 8, the organization decided to use a three-act play for its annual presentation. "Figs," "Captain Applejack," "A Pair of Sixes," and "Quality Street" are the four plays under consideration.

* * * *

Do the men on the Hill know the fire rules and the punishment inflicted upon those who vioate them? Last Tuesday night, a small fire of papers was seen burning in one of the colleges. Investigation revealed a heap of smouldering papers and several charred overshoes, intended no doubt, to drive someone from his room by creating an offensive odor.

* * * *

Sonia Frey, ex-'27, visited at the "Sem" last week. She is attending New York City College this year.

* * * *

Fern McNeal, '27, has recently recovered from illness which kept her in the infirmary for two weeks.

* * * *

Mrs. W. H. Coleman, patroness of Pi Beta Phi, is entertaining the Pi Beta Phi seniors Tuesday afternoon at her home on St. George Street.

The commuters' cars are noticeable by their absence on the hill these days. You can't blame them for that—blame the snow!

* * * *

Mary Foust and Clifford Wester attended the Milton Symphony concert Monday night, February 8, in which Hans Kindler was soloist.

* * * *

Fred Helwig, '27, who returned to college for the second semester, after an absence of a year, spent his first week-end at his home in Millersburg.

* * * *

Many of the college students attended the exhibition given by Edouard Horeman, the ex-champion billiardist, at Stahl's poolroom, on February 10.

* * * *

James Auhl, '25, renewed acquaintences on the Hill Saturday. "Jimmie" is to coach another play to be given by the members of the Methodist church.

* * * *

John Weber, '28, has succeeded in taking a very beautiful picture of the quadrangle at night. "Johnnie" is considered one of the best photographers in the college.

* * * *

Disappointments and surprises were numerous on last Thursday morning when the students looked at the list of those who had made a grade of 85 per cent. last semester.

* * * *

Fern McNeal, '27, and Dorothy Nickel, '28, are both recovering from sieges in the infirmary. We hope they will soon be on their feet again and ready for the fray.

* * * *

Roland Banks, '28, was suddenly summoned to his home in Kingston last Sunday, January 7 when he received a telegram that his sister, Miss Thelma Banks, had died.

* * * *

McClure, '27, Howard, '27, Frable, '28, and Johnston, '28, are real basketball fans. They have not missed a game that has been played in the gym since the season started.

* * * *

The chef at the "Sem" has found his work doubly increased this week. Health rules for the week include "three square meals a day," and most of the girls are living up to this rule.

* * * *

Ruth Bray, '28, Deborah Walton, '28, Betty Davis, '28, Kathryn Boozer, '28, and Ethel Hurst, '28, spent the week-end of February 12, 13, 14 in Freeland, Pa., at the home of Ruth Bray.

* * * *

While observing in the high school Thursday morning, February 11, "Len" Coates, '26, was unexpectedly called upon to take a class in literature. He managed to survive the hour of trial.

* * * *

Elizabeth Royer, '28, had a most disagreeable experience Saturday evening, February 6, when she fell on the ice near her home in Watsontown. Although Betty is attending classes she is still lame.

* * * *

The second floor of Wolfe House will be nearly empty next week-end. "Babe" Reifsnyder, '28, "Peg" Tennant, 26, Blanche Thompson, '27, and Vita Davis, '27, are planning to return to their homes.

* * * *

"Sam" Bernhaut, '28, while riding on the rear end of a sled on the Phi Lambda Theta straw ride, was very fortunate in escaping with a slight injury when the rear end of a car swung into the sled.

* * * *

Jersey-ites are getting the "razz" because of an item that appeared recently in one of the Philadelphia papers to the effect that the citizens of a certain New Jersey town were preparing for a storm—there had been two inches of snowfall!

* * * *

Since the deep snowfall last week, skiing on the Hill has become both popular and hazardous. Every afternoon amateur skiiers can be seen piled in grotesque heaps at the bottom of the Hill. To their chagrin they have discovered that dodging trees in their swift descent requires a skill no less than that possessed by a St. Moritz champion skii jumper. Believing in safety first and doubting the accuracy of the Hilltop skiiers in making their sudden descents, the squirrels have wisely taken to the topmost branches of the trees.

* * * *

"Dick" Beatty, '29, spent the week-end of February 6 visiting friends in Williamsport.

* * * *

Francis Wood, '28, is planning to Milton Frable, '28, and Dwight Bahr, '28, will be week-end visitors at Berwick, Pa.

* * * *

Blanche Thompson, '27, spent the week-end of February 6 in Norristown as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hoffman.

* * * *

Philip Martin, '27, spent last week in bed. He contracted a bad case of tonsilitis, and although in no danger, was very sick. His condition is improved.

* * * *

"Doug" Anderson, '27, is a busy man these days. "Doug" has become more serious than ever and can be found "on" his books almost any time.

* * * *

Mr. Robert E. Harris, the new instructor in English, lectured to the classes in English literature on Monday and Tuesday afternoon and amused them with his dry humor.

* * * *

Elizabeth King, '28, was forced to leave college this semester because of the illness of her mother. "Libby" expects to be back at Bucknell next fall.

* * * *

Lorenzo Scotti, '26, by his splendid solo in chapel Tuesday morning, February 9, demonstrated that any bad effects derived from his recent illness has left him.

* * * *

Some people might really believe that the Women's College was a zoo, what with the families of little mice in New Building and the industrious ants in Main.

* * * *

The Williamsport Grit of February 7 gave "Tom" Murphy, '26, a nice little "write-up." "Tom's" picture and a short testimonial to his athletic ability were printed.

* * * *

The office force at the "Sem" has been greatly depleted this week because of the illness of Isabel Wieser. We wish Isabel a hasty recovery, for we miss her efficient service.

* * * *

W. Beckett Brown Jr., '28, and Albert F. Buffington, '28, are taking a course in moving pictures. They have not missed a show since they have returned from the Christmas vacation.

* * * *

With the new semester came a change in the administration in the various buildings of the Women's College. New house-presidents, proctors, and fire-captains have all entered upon their duties.

* * * *

"Jimmy" Hughes, '29, who spent the first semester at the United States Naval Academy, until being obliged to leave because of poor eyes, entered college at the beginning of the second semester.

* * * *

The Delta Sigma fraternity has unanimously voted to "pass out" diamond rings at iniation instead of the usual fraternity pins. "Jim" Sugden, '27, is the latest victim of the "Sem." The few remaining "Demie" pins are being donated to the fraternity to be placed in the archives for future reference.

* * * *

Donald Rigg, '26, captain of the varsity basketball team, was played up by the Philadelphia Inquirer in its sporting page on Sunday, February 14. The paper carried a photograph of captain Rigg, with this text as an underline: "Meet Donald Rigg, '26, captain and guard of the Bucknell University cage squad. Rigg is playing good ball for Bucknell and has played a big role in helping the Lewisburg collegians to achieve their success."

We can appreciate the letter from the president of the Elizabethtown college, read by Doctor Hunt in chapel Tuesday morning, February 9. It revealed the true Bucknellian spirit on the part of our debaters.

* * * *

Professor Clarence R. Johnson's survey class is planning to obtain further statistics concerning the number of Bucknell students who attend church. One census was taken last semester, but the class is seeking further light on the subject.

* * * *

Judge O. B. Dickinson, '77, handed down a decision in the Federal court on February 8 whereby numerous firms using alcohol that had their permits taken away from them last December by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews, will now have those permits returned to them.

* * * *

Edith Mae Freed and the Misses Matthews were seen besporting themselves on "the bleachers" in front of Old Main last Saturday afternoon. With the aid of "Doug" Mackenzie, '26, "R. Henry" Coleman, '29, and the necessary skills they spent a very enjoyable period of physical culture.

Supt. Robbins Resigns As City School Head

Was Large Factor In Improving Williamsport School Methods During Superintendency

Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, '98, for the past twelve years superintendent of schools for Williamsport, will retire from the superintendency at the end of his present term, this coming May. In a recent letter to President Edward L. Taylor, of the Board of School Directors, Superintendent Robbins says that he will not be a candidate for re-election.

Mr. Taylor said, when questioned concerning the matter, that Dr. Robbins decision to retire from the superintendency is a matter of very great regret to the Board.

"Dr. Robbins has been a most capable superintendent," he said. "Under his direction the schools have progressed and his leadership has been invaluable in wise planning for the future."

The Williamsport Sun, in commenting editorially upon Dr. Robbins' proposed retirement, has this to say: "Williamsport does not award to its citizens medals for meritorious service. If it did, one of the most deserving nominations for such honor would be Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, who at the close of this school term will end a service of exceptional value to this community.

"As a citizen, Dr. Robbins has made a distinct contribution to the city in example and practice. He has taken a wholesome interest and concern in all phases of life, religious, fraternal, social, and welfare, and it is hoped deeply that his retirement from active connection with the school system will not take him out of these several channels.

"But while giving much in thought and service to these phases of community activity, never has he allowed one of them to interfere one second with the primary reason for his residence here, that of directing as district superintendent the school organization of Williamsport.

"The last twelve years have witnessed the most effective innovations, changes, extensions, and growth in the history of Williamsport, and for successful administration they have required a trained, careful hand and ripened judgment. Dr. Robbins has supplied each of those with measure heaped up and running over."

Dr. Robbins was elected to the superintendency in August 7, 1914, being selected from a field of thirty candidates. Before coming to Williamsport he had been superintendent of schools at Lebanon. He had also been principal of the Muncy Normal School, and had held principalships at South Williamsport and Montoursville.

THE REV. A. J. IREY, '79 DIES AT AGE OF 75

The Reverend Abner Jones Irey, '79, died on the night of Friday, February 12, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jane Reed, in Danville, Pa. He was 76 years old.

Dr. Irey was born in Lionville, Pa. in 1850. He was graduated from Bucknell University in 1879 with the degree A. B. In 1881 he received the degree A. M. In 1904 his alma mater gave him the honorary degree doctor of divinity.

He was licensed to preach at the Phoenixville Baptist Church. On June 20, 1880, he was ordained at the Pilgrim Church in Philadelphia, where he had already been preaching for a year. He became pastor of this church and served this congregation until 1882. For seven years following he was pastor at Vincent. From that pastorate he went to the Baptist Church in Wheeling, W. Va., where he remained until 1895. At that time he became pastor of a church in Warren, Pa. His last pastorate was in Danville, where he served 15 years, resigning in July 1924, because of ill health. For two years Dr. Irey was a teacher in the business department of the Pennsylvania Classical Institute. For a number of years also he was proprietor of a shoe store in Lewisburg.

Dr. Irey married Ella Musser, Inst., '81, who survives him. Their two children are also living. They are Philip, '08, and Mary Jane, '13. Since his retirement from the ministry Dr. Irey made his home with the latter.

WESLEY W. WOLFE DIES; MEMBER OF OLD FAMILY

Wesley W. Wolfe, who attended the Bucknell Academy from 1874 to 1877, died at the Geisinger Memorial Hospital in Danville on Sunday, February 7. He was buried in the Lewisburg cemetery on Tuesday, the ninth. Funeral services were held at the home of his sister, Mrs. William P. Thomas, and were conducted by the Rev. Harry F. Babcock, of the Beaver Memorial Methodist Church. Mr. Wolfe is survived by his wife and one sister. He was 75 years old, and had been in ill health for some years.

Mr. Wolfe was a member of one of the oldest families in Buffalo Valley. He was a great grandson of George Wendell Wolfe, a Revolutionary soldier from Berks County, who moved into Buffalo Valley soon after the Revolution. The deceased was born in East Buffalo Township, not far from Lewisburg, July 15, 1849. He attended the Academy during the years mentioned. Fellow schoolmates of his at the Academy were some of our best known townsmen, including Thomas Newton Reber, T. E. Irland, John H. Wingert, University '72, and William C. Walls, '73.

In 1878 Mr. Wolfe married Miss Mary M. Gaunt, of Centre County, who survives him. He was for a number of years engaged in general mercantile business, but in late years has been dealing exclusively in grain and coal. He was a member of the firm of Wolfe and Shultz.

OLIVER J. DECKER, '99. HEADS ARTIST COURSE

Oliver J. Decker, Esq., '99, who is chairman of the Williamsport Lions Club Celebrated Artists committee, recently reported that the concert course for his present season had not only been a success, in that it brought to Williamsport some of the outstanding concert artists of the day, but that the course had netted one thousand dollars profit. This sum will be given to the Williamsport Hospital building fund.

A second concert course has been determined upon, and some of the performers have already been secured. The high light of the course will be the appearance of the New York Symphony orchestra under Walter Damrosch.

The concerts this winter were the initial program in this effort by the Lions Club to bring to Williamsport the best performers of the day. The plan is in no sense a money making scheme, but has as its object solely the purpose of securing for the enjoyment of the people of Williamsport entertainment of a quality not commonly to be had in towns no larger than Williamsport. Mr. Decker's committee has been eminently successful. The indications are that the next year's course should be even more successful, from both an artistic and a financial standpoint. At the last concert of the present course $5500 was guaranteed toward next year's expenses, through advance ticket subscriptions.

MRS. F. B. EMERY SPEAKS ON CLARKESBURG BILLET

Mrs. Frank B. Emery, (Gertrude Ross, '09,) was scheduled to speak to the Garrett Cochran post, No. 1, of the American Legion, in Williamsport, on Tuesday, February 9, to explain the work of the Clarksburg Billet, which was sponsored by the national organization of the American Legion, to care for orphans of World War veterans. This institution is located at Clarksburg, N. J., thirteen miles below Camden. It cares for children from Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey.

The Clarksburg Billet occupies a fifteen room colonial mansion, and has a force of seven persons. Twelve children, ranging in age from two to twelve, are already quartered in this home. Those who are of school age attend school in Clarksburg.

The number of children who will be taken into this home is limited to twenty. Here they will be properly cared for and given schooling. Where proper foster parents can be found, the children will be given for adoption.

The first billet established was at Otter Lake, Michigan, and was so successful that other similar institutions have been established as fast as possible.

MISS CAROLYN J. HUNT GETS HUGE VALENTINE

St. Valentine, benevolent patron of love and marriage, paid homage to Miss Carolyn J. Hunt, daughter of President and Mrs. Emory W. Hunt, at the home of Professor and Mrs. Nelson Davis, Saturday afternoon.

For on this day the good saint prompted Mrs. Davis to invite to her home, on Front street, about two dozen guests to celebrate Valentine's Day with a party. And with them, at the bidding of the old rascal, was Miss Hunt.

But was the merry soul satisfied with a party? Indeed, he was not. While refreshments were being served, he commanded one of his messengers to appear at the door. The bell rang. The messenger asked for Miss Hunt and gave to her a large valentine box. Cupid touched her cheeks a blushing red. During the laughter that followed, she withdrew from the box gifts of silver ware, linen, and cut glass. The party turned into a delightful shower, to the surprise of Miss Hunt, the recipient of the benevolent old rascal's good will.

ELLERY H. HARVEY, '24 RECEIVES PH. D. DEGREE

Ellery Hale Harvey, '24, of 2102 Junction street, South Williamsport, received the degree of doctor of philosophy in chemistry at the University of Wisconsin, on January 22. Dr. Harvey originally entered Bucknell as a member of the class of 1917, but was not graduated until 1924. Meantime he was a student at the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia. He has made the chemistry of foods and nutrition his special field of study. His thesis for his doctor's degree is based upon researches concerning vitamines, and the reaction of sulphur chlorides with fatty oils. He is a member of the American Chemical Society, American Association for the Advancement of Science, Sigma Xi, Beta Phi Sigma, and Chemists' Club of New York City. For a time Dr. Harvey engaged in industrial work as chief chemist for the Perkins Glue Company, Lansdale, Pa.

MRS. JOSEPH R. WOOD GIVES VALENTINE TEA

A valentine tea in honor of Mrs. Horace Siner, of Germantown, mother of Doris Siner, '29, was given by Mrs. Joseph R. Wood, '94, at her home on University avenue, on Saturday afternoon, February 13. Mrs. Siner was a member of the North Frankford Baptist Church, of which Mrs. Wood's husband, Dr. Wood, was formerly pastor.

Practically every one present was a graduate of the University or in some way connected with it. In addition to Mrs. Siner, the guests included Mrs. Esther Osborn, Mrs. George Bolton, Mrs. John T. Judd, and Miss Anna Judd, Mrs. James Primrose Whyte, Mrs. William C. Bartol and Miss Helen K. Bartol, Mrs. Lewis E. Theiss, Mrs. William G. Owens, Miss Marjorie Rivenburg, Mrs. Harry Babcock, Mrs. Joseph M. Wolfe, Mrs. Harold McClure, and Mrs. Jennie Phillips.

Mrs. Dix D. Colvin, '09

Mrs. Dix D. Colvin, '09, recently won a prize of $50 in one of the daily crossword contests of the Philadelphia Inquirer. Mrs. Colvin was Katherine E. Heiges, of Milton. She is still a resident of that town, her home being at 633 North Front street.

The puzzle which she solved contained 38 letters. Part of the task involved was to make a sentence of these letters. This is the sentence Mrs. Colvin made with her 38 letters: "Fame awaits all boys who, if eager dare to be game." She says it took her twenty minutes to write this winning sentence. The fifty dollars she received she intends to use to help defray the expenses of a proposed trip to Bermuda.

Capt. Clair Groover, '15

Captain Clair Groover, '15, who has been in command of the local troop of the National Guard for the past two years, has tendered his resignation. He intends to make his home in Florida, and will take up his permanent residence in West Palm Beach.

Mrs. Charles A. Gundy, '99

Mrs. Charles A. Gundy (Eveline J. Stanton, '99,) was scheduled to address the Civic Club at its regular monthly meeting in the parlors of the Lewisburg Club, Wednesday afternoon, February 17. Mrs. Gundy was dean of women at Bucknell from 1897 to 1904. She has always been greatly interested in welfare work.

William C. Walls, '73

William C. Walls, '73, remembered many of his men friends in town and gown by sending them valentines in the form of invitations to a stag party at his house on the evening of Friday, February 12. Even Mr. Wall's capacious home was taxed to hold all his guests. A most enjoyable evening, with delicious refreshments and an abundance of pleasant small talks, was reported by all in attendance.

Christy Mathewson, '02

Bozeman Bulger, the sport writer, has written the "Life of Christy Mathewson," which he has syndicated the story being published serially by different newspapers in various cities. The story is based upon information supplied by Mrs. Mathewson, and contains many intimate stories about the great baseball pitcher.

The installment published in the Pittsburgh Post on February 10 is illustrated with a photograph of Christy Mathewson, Jr., '27, and his father, and shows the former at the age of eight or nine years, receiving instruction from his father in methods of carving a baseball.

Bucknell students who had never seen a Carnegie medal, were given an opportunity to see the one awarded to Joe Lippincott, '26, when the medal was placed in the hands of Miss Elsie J. Martin, the librarian, to show upon request to any curious student who wished to see it. This opportunity was given Tuesday, February 9.

"Dad" Cornelius, janitor of East College, was kept busy Tuesday, February 9, informing shivering students, many of them hoping to keep warm by staying in bed, that the coal supply was exhausted. Later he informed them that a carload of coal had arrived, and four more were on the way. This was a disappointment to some who had hoped for a vacation.

The Girls' Quartette, composed of Edna Watson, Hannah Metcalf, Katherine Bossler, and Grace Pfeifer, with Inez Robison as accompanist, gave a concert at the Washington Presbyterian church near Allenwood on Saturday evening, February 6. Between the musical numbers, Edna Watson gave several readings. The girls were entertained at the home of Anne Everitt, at Allenwood.

Professor and Mrs. H. W. Robbins

Professor and Mrs. H. W. Robbins entertained a number of faculty friends at an informal tea at their home on South Seventh street, Friday afternoon, February 12

The English department has initiated the practice of serving tea each Friday afternoon at 4:30 in the seminar room, 34 Biology Annex. There were about twenty-five members of the faculty and their wives present last Friday. Mrs. Jennie D. Phillips poured. The teas will probably be continued throughout the winter for all members of the faculty who care to drop in for the occasion.

At the monthly meeting of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors, held last Thursday at the home of Professor H. T. Colestock, a paper on "Honors Courses in English" was read by Professor L. L. Shades Of Sam Houston! What's Happened To Texas

The following encomium on the merits of the state of Texas was presented by one of that state's native sons as a part of the work in journalism. It might well be the work of a publicity agent for the state and is obviously partisan in its standpoint. The writer prefaced his statements by saying that the article was intended for those who had never seen the "Lone Star State" and probably never would, so this fact may well be kept in mind while assimilating the statements, we shrink from saying facts, contained herein:

"Texas occupies all the continent of North America, except the small part set aside for the United States and Canada. Texas owns the north of the Rio Grande, the only dusty river in the world; also the only one, with the possible exception of the Trinity, which is navigable for mud cats and pedestrians.

"Texas is bounded on the north by twenty-five or thirty states, and on the east by all the oceans in the world except the Pacific, and on the south by the Gulf of Mexico and South America, and on the west by the Pacific Ocean, the Milky Way, and the real side of the universe.

"If Texas were chopped loose from the rest of the United States at the Panhandle it would float out into the ocean, as it rests upon a vast subterranean sea of fresh water.

"Texas is so big that the people in Brownsville call the Dallas people 'Yankees', and citizens of El Paso sneer at the citizens of Texarkana, Texas, as being big snobs from the effete East.

"It is 150 miles further from El paso, Texas, to Texarkana, Texas, than it is from Chicago to New York City; Fort Worth is nearer to St. Paul, Minn., than it is to Brownsville.

"The chief occupation of the people of Texas is trying to keep from making all the money in the world. The chief pursuit of the people was formerly chasing Mexican bandits, but now is land buyers, steers, and Texas crop records. The United States with Texas off would look like a three-legged Boston terrier.

"Texans are so proud of Texas that they cannot sleep at night. If a Texan's head should be opened, the map of Texas would be found photographed on his brain. This is also true of his heart. Unless your front gate is eighteen miles from your front door you do not belong to society as constituted in Texas. Mrs. King's gate is 150 miles from her front door, and she is thinking of moving her house back farther so that she will not be annoyed by passing automobiles and peddlers.

"Other Texas landlords have whole mountain ranges and rivers on their ranches. One Texan has forty miles of navigable water on his farm. If proportions of cultivated land in Texas were the same as in Illinois, the Texas crops would equal those of forty-seven other states.

"Texas has land enough to supply every man, woman, and child in the whole world with a tract of five by twenty feet, and have enough left over for the armies of the world to march around the border five abreast.

"Texas grows so much alfalfa, that if baled and built into a stairway, it would reach to the pearly gates.

"If the hogs in Texas were one hog he would be able to dig the Panma canal in three roots.

"If all the Texas steers were one steer he could stand with his front feet in the Gulf of Mexico, one hind foot in the Hudson Bay, and the other in the Arctic Ocean, and with his horns punch holes in the moon, and with his tail brush off the mist from the Aurora Borealis.

"If all the cotton raised in Texas annually were made into one mattress all the people in the world could take a nap at one time.

"Texas is rightly named the Garden of the Lord, and if all the Bermuda onions grown along the Rio Grande were made into a necklace it would encircle the globe."

Rolfe Gerhart, Ex-'85, Dies At Age Of 63

Rolfe Gerhart, ex-'85, died at his home at Charles Town, W. Va., on Thursday, January 28. Death was due to angina pectoris, from which he had suffered for some years.

Mr. Gerhart was born in Lewisburg in 1863, in the house now occupied by Mrs. T. C. Thornton, on South Third street. In 1885 his father, Dr. Henry Gerhart, moved to the house now occupied by the Kappa Sigma fraternity, and here young Gerhart spent his boyhood.

He prepared for college at the Lewisburg public schools and in the Bucknell Academy, which he attended for three years. He entered the University with the class of 1885 but did not complete his course. He was a member of the Kappa chapter of the Sigma Chi fraternity.

Upon leaving college he was employed for a time in the local post office. Then he had some experience in keeping store in Centre county. In a short time he went to West Virginia, to engage in the coal business, and from that he moved on to the lumber business, in which he continued permanently.

Soon after going to West Virginia he met his future wife, Miss Manning, whose family for generations had owned a large plantation. Mr. Gerhart married her and, upon the death of his wife's father, bought the ancestral homestead, then a plantation of 800 acres. The couple moved thither and there they lived until the day of Mr. Gerhart's death.

Mr. Gerhart played on Bucknell's first football team and took part in the very first intercollegiate contest, that with Lafayette College. He was also a good baseball player, and continued to play the game for some years after leaving college.

He is survived by his widow. There were no children. Dr. Weber L. Gerhart of Lewisburg is a brother of the deceased.

Matches Burn Car Top

The Quadrangle is coming to bear a strong resemblance to "Hogan's Alley," for the principles of the young gentlemen residing in West College seem to be those of the habitants of that famous "Alley." Up with the window, out with the refuse, and let him who walks below beware! "Chic" Lontz, '28, is the latest sufferer. A large hole burned in the tonneau of his Overland car as it stood parked on the Quadrangle is mute evidence of another lightest match tossed carelessly away.

Wise Distribution Of Great Riches

decide in most cases. One method used to decide this is to grant a sum equivalent to a given percentage of the annual budget of the applying organization. It is interesting to note that a larger percentage of the budget is given to women's organizations than to any other. A limit of six or seven per cent. is kept where it is possible."

The next question touched upon by the speaker was, "How can I give so that the money will do the most good?" There are several ways in which this is answered. Sometimes the philanthropist offers to give dollar for dollar where some organization launches a campaign for funds, and donates a dollar himself for every one that is obtained elsewhere. Or he may offer to give the last given number of thousands. If too large a gift is made it may prevent others who should give from doing so. All this must be taken into consideration.

"To know how to obtain the facts relating to the applicants for donations is also very perplexing. There is so often difficulty in getting people and organizations to play square. One must guard against even those who present their pleas most convincingly, for there is a certain number who do not possess even common honesty. However this is not true in the majority of cases; far from it.

"The problem of giving to individuals is especially complex. Many of their requests are not worthy, although a few are, and it is dangerous to grant them without careful investigation.

"We are constantly striving to solve these problems through application of the principles that we find by experience, by conscientious thought, and real work," was Mr. Richardson's conclusion.

Following the address the speaker consented to answer any questions which the audience might wish to ask concerning the aspects of philanthropy with which he is familiar. Fifteen minutes were spent in this way.

Before the speaker was introduced Mr. R. F. Hartz led the audience in singing "Hail Bucknell." Edna Watson, president of the Sociological Society, introduced Mr. Richardson.

HEALTH

"Her rosy cheeks are fading since the druggist moved away" cannot be applied to the girls of the "Sem"—at least not this month.

* * * *

Some of the girls at least are trying to live up to the slogan of "Early to bed and early to rise," and have added the extra advice that three regular meals a day are to be eaten—

* * * *

Still we don't seem to notice any change in the crowd which frequents the Inn at certain set times during the day.

* * * *

But then, that might be one of the regular meals, you know.

* * * *

It would be rather hard on the Inn and the rest of the candy selling places if all that sort of thing should be cut out.

* * * *

Another regulation of this Health program at the "Sem" is not to eat anything "heavy" after nine in the evening.

* * * *

By "heavy" we judge they mean that no "sinkers" are allowed—keep away—ye old temptation! Anyway we can have them before nine.

* * * *

But why pick out nine o'clock? Doesn't the Board know that that's about the time the "movies" let out?

* * * *

The Board must be in "cahoots" with the men on the Hill! Say, that's a thought! Wonder who suggested it to them?

* * * *

He must have been the originator of that little song—

"It was only a lonely nickel,
I fain would keep it yet,
But—oh, my girl is hungry—
Ah, there's, the Nickelette!"

* * * *

Anyway—The Board seems to be keeping the regulations! That's some credit to them. We can't blame them at that! They started it, so they're duty bound to sleep and starve with the rest of us.

* * * *

We're wondering who will be the most proficient drinker around the "Sem" when the drinking regulation takes effect.

* * * *

Six full glasses of H20 per day!

* * * *

It will be a case of "Water, water everywhere, and I must drink it all."

* * * *

The heavy drinkers will be quite ready for that week to come—and those who have been practising up these past two weeks will have quite a start on those who wait till that week comes before they begin.

* * * *

Anyway "Adam's ale doesn't kill a person the way other drinks have a habit of doing eventually, so there ought not to be any fatal consequences.

* * * *

Unless some innocent freshman thinks that "fire water" is as good to use as straight H20! Oh, won't some one tell the dear children the difference? We wouldn't want to degrade our freshmen like that!

* * * *

And then, the exercise! At least one hour a day! Oh my! Can we count the minutes we trot up the Hill? That ought to count double!

* * * *

Some of the girls, most of them in fact, will be able to get that hour off in "gym". The seniors and "doctor's excused" ones will have to find a different method.

* * * *

The seniors might try going down to the movies, to the bridge, or around Faculty several times. Of course, they should not be lonely on the walks thus taken—that would ruin the good of the exercise.

* * * *

They'd be very likely to get back within the hour too—and that would be wrong.

* * * *

a good trip, too. So, all get your al-

For those extras—the four mile is lotted exercise, three regular meals, six glasses of water, eight hours of sleep, no "heavy" food after nine o'clock—

* * * *

And then! Just think of the pep, health, vitality, vim, energy, enthusiasm, etc., etc., that you will have by the end of the Month of Healthy life!

* * * *

It's a fine idea—and we're well started on it—let's keep it up—and maybe the Hill folks will try the same stunt—it wouldn't hurt them at all!!

Weaver, '05, To Head Williamsport Schools

Principal A. M. Weaver, '05, of the Williamsport High School, will probably succeed Dr. Frederick W. Robbins as superintendent of schools in Williamsport, when the latter ends his present term of office this coming May. Dr. Robbins, who is also a Bucknell man, has informed the school directors that he will not accept a re-election.

A member of the Board of Education, interviewed by the Williamsport Sun, is quoted as saying, "There is no question that Principal A. M. Weaver will be selected for the position when the Board of Education holds its election in May. While Mr. Weaver has not been a candidate for the place, the Board of Education members feel that he is the logical man for the position of city superintendent.

"Mr. Weaver is recognized, not only in Pennsylvania, but throughout the East, as an able educator and school man. He is thoroughly equipped and trained for the position, not only by experience but by education along all lines."

Mr. Weaver some years ago was the assistant principal of the Williamsport High school, then went to Conshohocken, where he was the superintendent of schools for some time. Upon the death of Principal P. M. Ballard, of the Williamsport High school, the board of Education succeeded in getting Mr. Weaver to return to Williamsport and assume the principalship, which position he has successfully held ever since.

It is not yet known who will take Mr. Weaver's place in the High school. Several teachers have been talked of, but the Board of Education has not yet settled upon anyone.

AFFIRMATIVE TEAM OF CO-ED DEBATERS DEFEATS URSINUS

Coup in Rebuttal Turns Tide For Bucknell in Stubborn Contest Held Here

JUDGES TURN IN 2-1 VOTE FOR HOME TEAM

Negative Team at Collegeville Defeated; Victorious Over Temple University

The affirmative team of the Bucknell girls' debating squad defented the debaters of Ursinus College, 2-1, in a close contest held in Bucknell Hall on Thursday evening, February 18. The subject for debate was the familiar one, "Resolved: That the United States should enter the League of Nations."

Elizabeth Sale, '29, Grace Cooley, '26, Jean Matthews, '29, and Helen Steinhilper, '29, alternate, composed a strong affirmative team for Bucknell, the Ursinus team, consisting of Mary Garber, Catherine Shipe, Ella Watkins, and Ruth Kulp, alternate, proved a rival of no mean ability. The debate was stubbornly fought, each team meeting argument with argument, but a "coup" in rebuttal turned the decision favorable to Bucknell.

The Bucknell team based its argument on three facts. It held that the United States should enter the League of Nations for three reasons; first, the League is superior in obtaining world-peace; second, the League is a potent legislative body; and third, the United States out of the League is in a precarious position.

Miss Matthews, as first speaker for the affirmative, pointed out that war is caused by the division of humanity, and spoke of the attempts made by nations to overcome this through the Peace Conference at The Hague, and the Washington Arms Conference. These attempts were secondary to the League which, with its set meeting dates, its judges, and power of enforcing its laws, is the only effective and tangible agency for settling disputes without war. That the League through the work of its three departments is not a theory but a practical organization was the argument of Miss Sale. Miss Cooley, concluding the direct affirmative argument, showed that the United States faced the danger of Europe's massing itself economically against her.

In refuting Bucknell's argument, the Ursinus team attempted to prove that the mechanism of the League does not work, that the United States would not care to affiliate with an organization such as the League, and that the United States could do more good by remaining out of the League.

Miss Garber, citing the Vilna, Upper Silesia, and Corfu cases stated that the League has failed in its purpose. Because the League is an organization of great powers, of victors who, through their influence, turn it

Judges Announced For Hop Contest

The time limit on the Belle Hop Popularity Contest has been extended three days, from midnight February 28th to midnight March 3rd.

Professor Lewis E. Theiss in conjunction with four members of the Belle Hop staff will act as judges in the counting of the ballots. The five leading contestants are being posted daily in the College Inn.

CONTEST RESULTS

Leading contestants in the Belle Hop Popularity contest up until noon, Wednesday, were:

Miss Eleanor Dakin
Miss Sally Meyers
Miss Priscilla Branch
Miss Lorinne Martin
Miss Cornelia Trowbridge

All votes must be in by midnight, Wednesday, March 3, 1926.

Practical Religion Interests Students

Religious Education Courses Show 20 Per Cent. Increase

"The registration for courses in Religious Education has increased more than twenty per cent. since last semester," said Professor Charles M. Bond recently when asked by a Bucknellian reporter about his work. It is a significant fact that the number of enrolled students in this branch of activity on the Hill has been raised from about eighty to more than a hundred, and seems to indicate that the interest of students in practical religious problems is not on the decline.

Professor Bond came to us this year, bringing, besides an engaging personality and a zeal for achievement, a number of new and attractive courses. Two of the five courses offered by him this semester are "The Literature of the Bible" and "Christianity and the Social Order," both innovations on the Bucknell campus.

The first of these has to do with the study of the interpretation and appreciation of Biblical writings, and comes properly within the work of the English department. The Old Testament prophets are treated in some detail and made to live in the student's consciousness like very real people.

"Christianity and the Social Order" provides opportunity for a practical first-hand study of the influence of Christ's teachings in everyday life, and students in this course are allowed to do extension work in the observation of such phases of interest as ethics of college life or the church and society. Although no credit is offered for this special investigation, several students are pursuing it, and both courses, in fact, have attracted the interest of many young people.

General courses which Professor Bond is offering this semester are "The Spread of Christianity," "Modern Religious Problems," and "Psychology of Religion," all of which are popular with students.

Miss Mary Harrar and Barton Dukin are acting as assistants in the department of religious education, and it is a significant fact that helpers were never before considered necessary in this line of work.

Religious education is coming to occupy an increasingly greater place in Bucknell student life, and Professor Bond hopes that the time will come ere long when special seminary credit will be granted to those who have majored or minored in the work of the department.

Oratorical Contest Bucknell Hall, Mar. 2

The trials for the oratorical contest of the Eastern Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Oratorical Union will be held in Bucknell Hall, Tuesday evening, March 2.

The contest will be to determine who shall represent Bucknell in the contest of the Eastern Pennsylvania Colleges which will be held at Ursinus College, Collegeville, Saturday, March 5.

The contest of the Eastern Pennsylvania Union is only the beginning of a national oratorical tournament that will culminate in the selection of a national chmpion some time in May. At approximately the same time as the contest of the Eastern Union, the colleges of the western part of the state will hold a similar contest. The three prize winners in each of these two contests will then enter a competition for the championship of the state; state champions will meet for sectional honors and the sectional winners will again compete in determining who will be the person and what the college, that will claim the oratorical championship of the country.

The prizes awarded along the way mount to large sums. The prizes of the Eastern Union are thirty, twenty, and ten dollars respectively for first, second, and third place in the decision.

In view of the large number of experienced speakers and debaters in college the selection of the representative should be an interesting process. A limit of 1,000 words is set by the union on the length of the orations to be given. The contest will be held in Bucknell Hall and will be open to the public.

STRING ORCHESTRA GIVES ENSEMBLE

Music Lovers Entertained By The Delightful Performance Under Miss Armstrong

The Bucknell University String Orchestra, under the direction of Miss Charlotte Armstrong, entertained a considerable audience of music-lovers Tuesday evening, February 23, in the Lewisburg Baptist church. The program, which extended over an hour and a half, was well planned and executed, and, though no encores were permitted, the listeners indicated by their applause that they were greatly pleased.

At eight-fifteen o'clock the ensemble began Tschaikowsky's popular "Andante Cantabile," and this was followed by two numbers which were remarkably well sustained and interpreted. For the first of these, two movements from the "Peer Gynt" suite, by Grieg, were used, while in the latter Mr. Weisenfluh, first violinist, played the "Romance" of Svendsen as a solo, accompanied by the other pieces in the orchestra. The program was replete with fine musical effects, but probably reached its fullest form of expression in the rendition of two selections from the "Lake of Geneva" suite, which is no doubt the best work of the composer, Bendel. This was the last number on the program, and found a response in the appreciation of the two or three hundred persons present which will make them enthusiastic supporters of the orchestra's efforts in planning the work of another season. The performance was a credit indeed to the interest and ability of Miss Armstrong in conducting string orchestras at Bucknell over a period of fourteen years.

Below is the program as followed by the instrumentalists, assisted by

Eleanor H. Little, '25, Weds Virginia Mayor

Miss Eleanor Heim Little, '25, was married to Edward Ennis Eanes, Esq., of Emporia, Va., in the Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Church, of Washington, D. C., on February 20. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. A. Lambeth. The newly married couple left for St. Petersburg, Fla., where they will spend a month. After that interval they will be at home in Emporia.

Miss Little is a daughter of the late John Wesley Little, well-known painter, and Susan Heim Little, a sister of our Professor E. M. Heim. She is a sister of Jean Little, '28.

Mr. Eanes is a graduate of the University of Virginia, is a lawyer, and has for some time been mayor of the city of Emporia.

He met Miss Little during the course of her Chautauqua work. Several years ago she became identified with the Swarthmore Chautauqua, and served as a junior superintendent. During an emergency in her troupe two years ago, she took entire charge of the company and acted as superintendent for two weeks. She showed such unusual ability in this position that she was given a position as superintendent, in full charge of a troupe. Furthermore, Professor Paul Pearson, head of the Swarthmore Chautauqua, asked that she be billed for his own circuit. Miss Little took her post as superintendent shortly after being graduated last June. In the course of her summer's work she met Mr. Eanes.

Emporia was one of the towns on her route. It is an old Chautauqua town, and it has long been the custom there for the visiting Chautauqua superintendent to teach the men's Bible class of the Methodist Church on that Sunday on which the troupe is in town. The usual invitation was sent to the superintendent last summer, though it is doubtful if any one thought Miss Little would accept it. She did, and she conducted the class as successfully as she had run her Chautauqua. The regular teacher of the class was Mr. Eanes. The outcome of that Sabbath's instruction was the wedding last week in Washington.

ASA C. BALDWIN TO LECTURE ON ALASKA

Only American Ever To Climb To Summit of Mt. St. Elias; Former College Head

The lecture on "Alaska," which will be given in the Baptist church by Mr. Asa C. Baldwin next Thursday evening, March 4, at eight o'clock, comes highly recommended by various organizations and individuals.

One of the outstanding features of the lecture is an account of the ascent of Mt. St. Elias, the third highest peak in North America, a feat duplicated by only one other party, that under the leadership of the Duke of the Abuzzi. Five other expeditions have failed; two attempts by the "New York Times," one by a Londoner, and two by the national geographic society, in conjunction with the United States Geological Survey.

Besides having the distinction of being the only American who has led a party 17,000 feet up the rugged, icy slopes of Mt. St. Elias, Mr. Baldwin has a magnetic personality as a lecturer, and not only succeeds in holding the interest of his audience, but also gives them a true picture of Alaska. To quote Jacob M. Dickinson, ex-Secretary of War, "From the lecture one could in an hour and a half get a more comprehensive and accurate ideal of that region than he could by months of reading."

Mr. Baldwin's information is, of course, first-hand and of a very intimate and thorough nature, as he spent seventeen years in traveling through and working in the country he lectures about. He was for seven years a member of the party employed by the government in the demarcation of the international boundary line between Canada and Alaska, acting until made chief of the Mt. St. Elias party, as assistant to Thomas Riggs.

More Social Hours Planned By S. C. R. O.

The Student Council of Religious Organizations, at its regular monthly meeting, February 14, took definite action towards the development of a constructive social program for next year. The Council is also looking forward and planning to set aside one month next year to give the students an opportunity to obtain vocational guidance.

It is the opinion of many that the Bucknell student body is in need of more social functions in which all of the students can participate. The S. C. R. O. took a step toward this need by appointing a committee, made up of the presidents of the Methodist, the Baptist, and the Presbyterian Christian Endeavors. This committee hopes to present at the next meeting a plan whereby all of the town churches agree to give social functions the same night. Another suggestion was to hold more college parties, similar to the Freshman Reception which the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. staged last September in Tustin gymnasium.

The next proposition, with reference to vocational guidance, was brought up as the result of the great query among students, especially seniors, as to what their life work shall be. The council felt that little could be accomplished this year, owing to the short time until spring. It was the concensus that one month should be set aside next year, when specialists in vocational guidance would be brought in to give the unsettled student an opportunity to interview them.

This council, which is sponsored by Professor Bond, is made up of two representatives from each of the seven student religious organizations of the campus and the local churches. Those organizations participating are the Y. W. C. A., the Y. M. C. A., the Ministerial Association, the Student Volunteers, the Baptist Young Peoples' Union, the Methodist Epworth League, and the Presbyterian Christian Endeavor. The council holds monthly meetings and discusses problems of vital interest to the student body. The meeting on the fourteenth was held in the "Sem" living room.

Many Bucknellians At S. V. Conference

Mary Harrar Conducts Meetings; Margarida Reno, Secretary

The conference of the Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey Student Volunteers was held at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, February 19-21. Mary J. Harrar, '26, president of the conference, was in charge.

Among the Bucknell people who attended the conference were Professor Charles M. Bond, of the department of religious education, Anna Stephens, '26, Margarida Reno, '27, Maud P. Rinster, '26, Dorothy Gilbert, '26, Pauline Ware, '28, Martha Thomas, '28, Alfred Rawlinson, '29, and Deryl Summerfield, '28. Margarida Reno was elected secretary of the group for the coming year.

The Student Volunteers are a group of young people who intend to go into the work of foreign missions when they finish their preparation at college. The Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey Conference includes Princeton University, Princeton Theological Seminary, Bloomfield Theological Seminary, Drew Theological Seminary, Elizabethtown College, Grantham Mission Bible College, Gettysburg College, Juniata College, Lebanon Valley College, Mount Airy Theological Seminary, Pennsylvania State College, Wilson College, Susquehanna University, Dickinson College, and Bucknell University.

These colleges sent 125 delegates to the conference at Carlisle to discuss the work of the missions and to make a special study of the Chinese missions as exemplary of the work of the whole field. In this discussion Alfred Rawlinson, '29, took a leading part as his experience living in Shanghai enabled him to furnish some first hand information on the subject which he took up, the education of American children in China.

Various other speakers who have done active work in the missions of China and elsewhere addressed the conference at the sessions that packed the week-end.

Mary Harrar, '26, who has just been relieved of her duties as president of the conference after a successful year of service, was the chairman of the meetings and directing hand of the conference. An unfortunate fall on a slippery pavement made her duties during the week-end rather difficult but Mary accepted her hardships like a true missionary and carried the work to completion.

Eight Fraternities Accept Group Plan

Eight fraternities have voted to accept the plan proposed by the Y. M. C. A. for a series of discussion groups, which are to be directed by a number of professors, throughout the month of March.

Two weeks ago a committee was appointed from the "Y" cabinet to draw up a plan for holding four weekly discussion meetings in the various fraternities. This plan was mimeographed and sent to each fraternity, asking for votes on the proposition.

If the plan was accepted, the members were to choose from a proposed list of professors, whom they wished to direct their meeting. The committee in turn got in touch with those professors chosen, who received the committee very warmly, and accepted the proposition. The fraternities also voted to have the leaders rotate each week, that is, they chose a new leader for each week.

Thursday evening has proved to be the most suitable time in the week. The leader for the evening will be the guest of the fraternity for the evening meal, and the meeting will immediately follow, and will not continue longer than 7:30 or 8:00 o'clock.

Weekly meetings are already under way for the men on the Hill. The first meeting was directed by Professor Bond and the subject for discussion was "College Loyalty." The meeting last week was led by Professor Rockwell and the subject was "How Radical Shall We Be?" These gatherings have been held in the "Y" Hut. They opened with songs led by C. I. Carpenter, with C. W. Cranford at the piano. A fine spirit has been manifested and the crowd is increasing.

JUNIATA DEBATERS LOSE TO BUCKNELL ON LEAGUE ISSUE

Teams Well Matched; Audience Entertained, Enlightened, At Close Contest

OPPONENTS UNABLE TO MEET STRONG ATTACK

First Home Appearance of Team Draws Out Only Small Group In Support of Debaters

Making its first home appearance for this season, the Bucknell men's negative debating team defeated Juniata by a 2-1 decision in a close contest, Friday evening, February 19, in Bucknell Hall.

Though the attendance was small, the teams provided a thoroughly entertaining and instructive evening. The technical discussion of the question, Resolved that the United States should enter the League of Nations, was lightened by bits of oratory and clever rebuttals. The speaking and arguments of both sides were even enough in quality to make the contest interesting, and the result was in doubt until the judges' votes were cast.

As lines of attack, the two teams followed the usual arguments presented by opponents and advocates of the League. The clash centered about the affirmative's proposal that the United States should enter the League for its own interests and the general welfare of mankind, since the hope of world peace rests on the League. The negative side argued that it is constitutionally impossible for the United States to enter the League, and besides, that the League does not foster world peace in employing the instrument of war.

Negative debaters put forth a strong case upon the impossibility of the United States joining the League of Nations on account of constitutional limitations. They demonstrated that taking the step would require us to delegate three major prerogatives to the League: regulation of terroritories, raising and supporting of armies, and declaration of war and peace. We should also need to abandon our doctrine of the separation of powers. The inability of the opposition to meet this attack satisfactorily swung the issue of the debate in Bucknell's favor.

The debaters were Juniata—R. S. Ebner, '27, I. N. Taylor, '26, W. McKendree, '26, and T. Henry, '26, alternate; Bucknell—R. H. Coleman, '29, C. A. Hile, '26, L. F. Lybarger, '28, and D. M. Bahr, '28, alternate. Just before the rendering of the decision, D. M. Bahr spoke a few words of welcome to the visiting men, which were gratefully acknowledged by W. McKendree of Juniata.

Mr. Derrick Hartshorn, Williamsport, Mr. H. M. Showalter, Lewisburg, and the Rev. A. J. T. Heistand, Lewisburg, were judges. The Rev. Raymond M. West, of the Lewisburg Baptist Church, presided.

All Tickets Sold For Engineers' Ball

That limitation had its effect on the sale of tickets to the Engineers' Ball can hardly be doubted when we face the fact that only a week after the announcement of the function the fifty admission slips are almost scooped up. Before the date of the dance, March 6, arrives, there may even be a chance for "scalpers" to make money on the "blueprints."

The committee reports that three-fourths of the tickets are already sold and that the whole "cake" will probably be sold out before the end of the week. The sale is restricted to engineering students of the upper classes.

The dance is to be held in the ball room of the Engineering building and Noble and his orchestra will furnish the music. "Sem" girls may be taken to this dance. Dancing will be from eight to twelve.

The committee also promises something novel in the way of programs and entertainment so that the function will be a unique affair. It will be the first Engineers' Ball to be held at Bucknell for five years.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Phi Gamma Delta broadcast a fraternity hour program last Wednesday evening from 9:30 to 10:30. The program was under the direction of John Gilmour and was composed of fraternity songs, solos, trios, and quartet numbers. A special feature of the evening was the "Hotsy Totsy" boys. This trio was composed of Christy Mathewson, Jr. on the clarinet, Phil Stanton, voice and yodelling, and Jeff Foresman on the banjo. Broadcasting was a novel experience for most of the boys, but everyone agreed that they would like to try it again. The "Hotsy Totsy" boys have another engagement scheduled for Friday night, February 19, and they have arranged a special program for WJBU listeners. While the program was being broadcast a telephone message was received from Brother Harold Shimer of Milton. Several other calls were also received from other fraternities on the campus as well as congratulations from out of town listeners.

Brother George Schuyler, '21, of Williamsport, is now engaged in the real estate business in Florida. He writes that if any of the brothers want to make some easy money he can give them a good start.

Phi Gamma Delta held a "Sem" dance Saturday evening from eight till 11:30. Professor and Mrs. Colestock, and Miss Kathryn Clush chaperoned the party. Peppy music for the occasion was furnished by the Paramount Orchestra of Williamsport. Brother and Mrs. Robert Harris were guests. A unique feature of the dance was "Brue" Coene officiating at the punch bowl and pretzel box. "Brue" also served the eats which consisted of Phi Gam cake and ice-cream.

Bill Mahaffey, '25, visited the chapter over the week-end.

Brother "Cap" Reel was the guest of the chapter at dinner Sunday.

Frank Cooper of Shamokin was the guest of Bill Samuel, and Jim Mabee on Monday and Tuesday.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

The chapter sympathizes deeply with Brother Burris E. Shimp in the death of his mother which occurred February 16 at her home in Quinton, N. J. Brother Carlton Coleman, a cousin of Brother Shimp, returned with him to Quinton.

The pledges of Sigma Alpha Epsilon have been invited by the pledges of Delta Sigma to a smoker at the "Demie" house on Friday, February 26. The boys are all looking forward to a pleasant evening.

Nesbit's Ramblers furnished the music for a very enjoyable formal "Sem" dance at the chapter house on Saturday evening, February 20. Mrs. Stanley Kunkle and Miss Anna Mae Speare, '23, both of Lewisburg, and Miss Thelma Griffith, of Juniata, were guests. Professor and Mrs. H. W. Robbins and Brother H. W. Holter and wife were chaperones.

Among the recent dinner guests were Miss Jean Peters, of Mt. Union, Iowa, Professor G. V. Brown, Miss Clarra Lummis, '28, and her sister Mabel, of Bridgeton, N. J., "Red" Mackenzie, ex-'25, and Brother H. W. Holter and wife.

Brother "Chick" Florin, '22, spent the week-end with his fraternity brothers at the chapter house.

KAPPA SIGMA

Brothers A. R. Lewis, '25, and Carl Kivler, ex-'25, returned to the house for a few days last week.

Brother "Pinky" Jones was a recent week-end visitor.

John Cregar, '27, was host to his parents during the vacation period. Mr. Cregar is also a Kappa Sig in the class of '95.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Delta Zeta of Lambda Chi Alpha announces with pleasure the initiation of Harold S. Lynn, Rodney K. Barlow, William C. Krall, and John S. Leigh, all of the class of '28.

The Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity was entertained by Professor and Mrs. H. T. Colestock at the Colestock home, Friday evening, February 12. Professor and Mrs. H. W. Robbins were also guests. "The Synopated Six," including Elmer Dietz, '27, Barlow Smith '27, "Bucky" Harris, '29, 'Art' Harris, '29, Barton Dakin, '27, and Paul Potter '26, added music to the entertainment while the other brothers played cards. Intense excitement was manifest in a tiddley-winks tournament in which "Phil" Martin, '27, showed himself to be a champion. Later in the evening refreshments were served. The fraternity was unanimous in its thanks to Professor Colestock and his family for the enjoyable evening.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

Theta Upsilon Omega held a "Sem" formal dance on Saturday evening, February 20. Unique lighting effects of midnight blue and gold produced a "dreamy" atmosphere. Leather card cases were given as program souvenirs. The guests were Assistant Professor and Mrs. J. S. Gohl, Instructor and Mrs. W. N. Lowry, Miss Helen Bartol, and Mr. Wilbur Leonard. The Blue Band played delightfully.

Ralph Mucher, '25, Robert Shaffer, '25, John E. Lenox, '24, Theodore Costides, ex-'27, M. V. Mussina, '24, and George Long, '24, returned for the dance.

Joseph Shuttlesworth, of Dauphin, was a week-end visitor.

BETA KAPPA

Eta chapter of Beta Kappa fraternity announces with pleasure the initiation of Kenneth Steele, '28, and the pledging of O. M. Huffman, '29 of Watsontown.

Frank Albert and Clark Berliner of Penn State were guests at the house during the week-end.

William J. Lewellyn, '24, visited the brothers and attended the dance Saturday evening. "Shorty" is studying medicine at Temple University.

A balloon dance was held in the ball room of the Lewisburg Club, Saturday evening, February 20. Under the direction of Young, McGinnis, and Buffington the room was filled with red, white, and blue balloons which, during the evening responded to the touch of a cigaret or the point of a pin with loud pops. Noble and his orchestra played. Mr. Young and Miss Stalford chaperoned.

I. N. Taylor and W. McKendree of the Juniata College debating team were guests at the house Friday night.

The basketball team journeyed to Williamsport to lose to the team of the St. Joseph's High School last Friday. The score was 50 to 12. Bellefonte Academy is to meet the high school team this week.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

Carl F. Krause, '27, and Harry I. Knudson, '28, attended a week-end house party at the Alpha Chapter at State College a week ago last Friday and Saturday.

Assistant Professor and Mrs. R. L. Metz dined at the house Sunday noon, February 6, and Professor Frank Davis and family dined with us Sunday, February 13.

Miss Edith Cox, of Bloomfield, N. J., spent several days last week visiting her brother, Harry Cox, '26.

A list of the men who were formally initiated into Gamma chapter of Phi Lambda Theta on Saturday evening, February 6, follows: William B. Rupp, '27, Louis G. Goldstein, '27, Theodore M. Tomaska, ex-'27, A. B. Van Tine, ex-'27, Ivanhoe W. Winemiller, '28, Harold W. Murray, '28.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Kathryn Bossler, '28, Amanda Brown, '28, Patty Milliken, '26, and Deborah Walton, '28, were initiated into active membership in Eta chapter of Alpha Chi Omega on Saturday evening, February 13, in the Women's College.

Lambda Chi Alpha has very kindly granted the use of its house for the formal dance to be held on March 20.

PHI MU

Phi Mu was the fortunate recipient last week of three dozen silver spoons engraved with the Phi Mu monogram, the gift of Mrs. Eugene Kimball of Vineland, N. J. Mrs. Kimball, mother of Arlene Kimball, '27, proved herself a true Phi Mu mother in starting the chapter's silver chest.

A St. Valentine's tea and card party was given by Phi Mu to its patronesses and pledges at the Women's College on Saturday afternoon, February 13. Mary Graham, '25, sang, and Betty McHose, '29, gave a reading. Hattie Fertig, '21, officiated at the tea-table.

The Delta Sigma fraternity will present its play for the second time, on February 27, 1926.

* * * *

The Kappa Delta fraternity held a valentine dance at the Sigma Chi house on Saturday evening, February 13. Noble furnished the music.

* * * *

Delta Delta Delta fraternity gave a tea for the faculty on Wednesday afternoon, February 7. Mrs. F. A. Sprague and Mrs. W. N. Lowry, patronesses of the fraternity, with Anna Van Dine and Jessie Fielding, were in the receiving line.

PI DELTA EPSILON

A meeting of Pi Delta Epsilon will be held at the Phi Gamma Delta house, Thursday evening, February 25.

"Dearie, you just ran over a man."
"What of it? He was already run over by the two cars ahead of us."
—Orange and Blue.

PHI MU ALPHA, SINFONIA

The open meeting was the chief topic under discussion at the regular meeting held Tuesday evening, February 16. Plans are also being made for a McDowell program in which the life and compositions of John McDowell will be the central theme.

It was reported in the meeting that Brother Challis, '25, now has his own orchestra and is playing a successful engagement in Syracuse, N. Y. Brother Eddie Jones is playing the piano for him.

One of the brothers reported the hearing of a sinfonin program broadcast by the Mu chapter at the University of Oklahoma. This led to a discussion of the possibility of Alpha Pi's doing the same through WJBU.

The result was the chapter's decision to hold an open program meeting in the Baptist church on the evening of March 29. The main features of the program were announced at the meeting of the fraternity held Tuesday evening, February 16.

Among the members who will entertain will be Professor Norris and Earl S. Hartman at the piano, Lewis Kessler at the organ, Eugene Noble and Kenneth Corson in a brass duet, Leo Weisenfluh with the violin, Edward Ramsdell with the flute, and Edwin Dolbey at the piano. Robert Dilworth and Albert Weidensaul will sing solos, and a quartet in which John Gilmour, Stanley McCaskey, Melvin Shuttlesworth, and Charles Kushell will be the members, will sing.

Several songs will also be sung by the whole fraternity.

DELTA SIGMA

The "Florida" formal dance held Saturday evening, February 20, was a complete success. The house was appropriately decorated in green and white, with palms placed about to provide a tropic atmosphere. Professor and Mrs. Paul G. Stolz and Professor and Mrs. W. H. Coleman were guests. The "dreamy southern atmosphere" was produced by Jack Gardener and his Campus Serenaders.

Fifty per cent. of the boys went away for the last week-end.

John Taylor Howard, 2nd, has taken up chess and challenges anybody in the house to play him.

"WHY AND BECAUSE"

Why do we use the expression "apple pie order" when we mean that things are exactly in their right places?

Because every Saturday a certain Puritan dame, Hepzibah Merton, made a practice of baking two or three dozen apple pies which were to last her family through the week. She labeled each according to the day of the week on which it was to be used, and the pantry, thus arranged, was said to be in apple pie order.

Why is an unmarried woman called a spinster?

Because women were prohibited from marrying in olden days until they spun a full set of bed furnishings and thus, until marriage, they spent much time at the spinning wheel and were, therefore, "spinsters."

Why do clergymen habitually wear black?

Because when Martin Luther, in 1524, laid aside the habit of a monk and adopted the style of dress prevailing at the time, the Elector of Saxony used to send to him from time to time pieces of black cloth, that color then being fashionable at the court. Luther's disciples thought because he wore black, it became them to do so, and thus it came about that the clergy generally grew to regard it as the only proper color for them to wear.—Dearborn Independent.

Amateurs, Adept and Otherwise, Revel on Skiis Down The Hill

Many of the Bucknell students have taken advantage of the recent snowfall to try their hands at skiing. Last week, "fussers" could be seen gliding down any of the big hills near Lewisburg. A yell issuing from the distance announced that one of the "fair ones" had lost her equilibrium. A few of the more skilled sportsmen tackled the big hill on the men's campus.

In memory of Russell H. Conwell, the noted clergyman and educator, an elementary school now being built in Philadelphia, Pa., has been named for him.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

BOBBED HAIR UPSETS EVE

Shingled Heads Connected With Misfortune Throughout Ages

That the topic of bobbed hair has caused much discussion, is a fact known to every one, but that bobbed hair has driven men to ruin, is probably not. This was the case with William Eve, a Brooklyn truckman, who became so upset when his wife bobbed her hair that he is said to have taken to drink.

Bobbed hair has made old women sit up and take notice of the doings of the younger folks, in many cases causing them to imitate the example set by these in having their locks cut. Estimable women whose ages have run as high as 98 have fallen willing victims to the shears of the barber. It has come near being the cause of death, as in the case of a young girl in Massachusetts, who, roaming in the woods, caught the attention of a hunter. He, thinking the bobbing head a woodchuck, shot at the girl and wounded her.

But it remained for Japan, that land where all hair is well dressed, to voice the first serious objections to the bob. This mode of dressing the hair so shocked the natives that maidens who had taken the fatal step, and submitted their heads to the steel, went to the "seat of forgiveness," and the evil spirits were prayed to in their behalf. The hair dressers revolted and refused to continue the foreign defilement.

Lately it has become a matter of national interest to countries to find instances that betoken the finding of the first bob. In Germany the first bob had about it the element of the keenest romance, as the first damsel to bob her hair was a woman who did so that her country might be aided in its war of 1813 with Napoleon. Her hair brought 200 thalers. She set a fashion which many maids at the time followed.

The latest news about the bob has it that 2,000 years ago, when Julius Caesar went to conquer Gaul, he found women of rank who had cut their hair. The learned essayist, Hans Barth, has pointed out that in the museum of Diocletian are statues of women with hair done in the modern style. These women are from different periods, namely, the Greek and the Roman, the latter from that period that dates before the Christian era.

LAW CLUB TO DEVELOP GOOD FEELING WITH BAR

The law club recently founded at the University of Michigan is perhaps the most modern of college institutions. It was the purpose of the founder, William W. Cook, graduate of the university and a member of the New York bar, through this gift to establish a means of closer association between the students and faculty of the Law School and prominent members of the bar; to establish a fund for legal research; and to found an association for the publishing of the result of such research.

To make possible this dream, Mr. Cook gave to the university the Lawyers Club building, a structure so magnificent and unusual as to make it one of the outstanding campus buildings of the country. The first unit just now completed, was erected at a cost of over two million dollars, and it is planned to complete a two block square quadrangle, which will cost approximately ten million dollars.

At present the building houses 100 students and about 300 eat in the main dining room. When entirely complete the building will house more than three hundred students.

To further make possible the realization of Mr. Cook's dream a fund is being created from any profits which the building may show, with which it is planned to bring to Ann Arbor famous barristers to carry on their legal research there and to make possible the publication of their findings by the Club.

It is interesting to know that the donor of the Club has never been in Ann Arbor since his graduation, and has never seen either the Club building or the Martha Cook building, the magnificent dormitory which houses over one hundred women, and which he gave to the university in honor of his mother. It is said his reason for constantly refusing to return to Ann Arbor is that he wishes to preserve in his memory the campus as he knew it when in school.

Oxford-Cambridge Study Plan Adopted by Temple University

The success which has attended the introduction recently of the "Oxford-Cambridge" method of teaching in Temple University indicates that its application to the general principle of study at the institution will become permanent.

"The system was first adopted at Oxford University and later at Cambridge. In reality, it is a group-method of co-operation association in study," said Dr. Lorin Stuckey, head of the sociology department.

Division of Classes

"From each group a leader is chosen. He acts as guide and exerts the initiative. Having to grasp the subject ahead of the other members of his group, it is necessary for him to develop leadership and scholarship to a greater degree than the others.

"In the case of our experiment last semester, almost every group had difficulty in arranging a time of meeting, because, here at Temple, so many students are working their way through the University and it was necessary for the groups to meet at varied hours.

"One group discovered that the only convenient time to meet was 7 o'clock in the morning, and they met regularly. Another group met on Sunday afternoons, and one of the students had to come especially from Coatesville, Pa., to attend the conferences. But the students were enthusiastic and interested, and hence they did not mind these inconveniences.

"The method aims for self-reliance and self-expression in the student. I find that more books have been taken from the Temple library on unassigned subjects by students working along this plan than have ever been taken out before for any subject."

Hundred Packs of Old Cards Added to Harvard Library

Harvard has received two unique collections—one a group of 40,000 postcards representing a detailed record of architectural design, sculpture, and painting in the museums of Eastern Europe, and the other 100 packs of old playing cards.

The postcards, which go to the Fogg Art Museum, are the gift of the collector, Henry Russell Hitchcock, a member of the department of fine arts in Harvard College.

The playing cards are given by James E. Whitney to the Widener Library. Some of them date back to the early sixteenth century, and are considered highly valuable as specimens of early printing. Designs on the backs include curious caricatures and political cartoons of a satirical nature.

Brown Gets Porter Library

Dr. Harry Lyman Koopman, librarian of the Brown University, announced today that Miss Annie Hageman, of Washington, had given the university the private library of her stepfather, Henry Kirke Porter, of the Brown class of 1860.

The library is a valuable one of over 2800 volumes. One of the treasures of the collection is Pine's edition of the works of Horace, in two volumes, amply illustrated, the text as well as the illustrations being wholly the work of the engraver.

Henry Kirke Porter was the pioneer locomotive builder, of Pittsburgh, a veteran of the Civil War, and a former member of Congress.

What Students Read

Princeton University students are reading for the most part, books which deal with the relationship of science and religion, or the place of science in the life of a man, according to Malcolm O. Young, in charge of the reference section of the library.

"This is a lean year for good fiction," according to Mr. Young. "Kipling's 'If' has been the most popular poem with four of the last five classes at the University. Shakespeare has always been the most popular dramatist, and a second place is usually divided between O'Neill, Shaw, and Barrie."

Speaking of reading generally, Mr. Young said: "About ten per cent of our students read seriously and continually. By that I mean they take out on an average of two books a week over and above the work required in their course. Forty per cent average one book a week, while the remaining fifty per cent may be said to read sporadically."

Dr. Buttrick Attacks Textbook Education

Dislikes Tendency To Teach Practical Subjects.

Dr. Wallace Buttrick, chairman of the General Education Board, expounded his views of college education at the dinner of the St. Lawrence University Club in New York City recently. He said in part: "A few years ago people were urging that education should be more practical, and that people should be taught how to get on in the world.

"As a result, many women's colleges introduced what they variously called the domestic arts or domestic sciences or domestic economy—whatever these phrases may mean—and in many colleges for men, various practical subjects were given, even including stenography and typewriting. How far such subjects are removed from true culture and the development of that mental capacity which gives control of mind and produces high purpose, I leave to you to judge.

"It is gratifying to note that those college and university presidents who are recognized leaders in education, are seriously combating and successfully defeating such tendency to debase the educational process.

"It is gratifying to note that engineering schools see little value in what has been called field practice. Severe training in mathematics, physics, and chemistry, together with equally severe training in the modern languages, in English, and in history and economics, is what the best engineering schools are now aiming at, rather than technical training in the possible experiences of an engineering career."

Dr. Buttrick showed plainly his distrust of textbook education, and his belief that examinations should demonstrate not how much or little the student knows of the textbook scraps he has been assigned to master, but how much he knows—how full "his mastery of the subjects."

Tells of Oxford Experience

"A friend of mine who was in the first group of Rhodes scholars of Oxford," he said, "told me of his experiences there. Dr. W. L. Smith, later and, until his death, the master of Pallol College, was my friend's tutor or, rather, 'advisor'—that is what an Oxford tutor is. His first counsel to my friends was 'you have no time to attend lectures for you must be a student.' Near the close of my friend's experience at Oxford he said to Dr. Smith: 'I've completed all my work, except in economics, and can you recommend a textbook that will enable me to prepare for examinations?' Dr. Smith at once said: 'Textbook, textbook? I don't know what you mean. I can recommend you certain courses of reading that will give you sufficient mastery of economics to enable you to come up for examinations, but I do not know of any compendium that would give a man grasp of that important subject.'

"I said to my friend something about how he felt when Dr. Smith had thus replied. My friend said that he had felt like 'a plugged nickel' that after his years at Oxford he 'could have been so stupid.'

"When my friend finally came up for his examinations, which were not given by his tutors or, as in our case, by his teachers, but by a Board of Examiners, who examined not on any text which may have been studied or on lectures which may have been heard, but on subjects, Smith said 'what a pity you have to bother with such things.'

Wants Truth for Basis

"We should not test students on the basis of classroom exercises, but on the basis of their mastery of subjects. The examinations should not be conducted by the teachers, but by sympathetic and intelligent persons who can judge not what a man knows of his textbook but what he knows of truth.

"The older man is not limited to the textbook where fragments of information are assigned day by day to be reported the following day and graded and marked, which by the way is one of the absurdities of classroom experience. He would stimulate the freshmen to search for truth themselves. This suggestion is not novel; for the past few years, in one of the great universities of the country, senior professors have voluntarily given three hours a week to freshmen for this very high purpose.

"They felt a deep responsibility toward the young men and women who came to them for leadership at the beginning of a life of culture."

U. OF P. GETS $500,000

To Be Used By Phipps Institute In The Treatment of Tuberculosis

A gift of $500,000 to the University of Pennsylvania by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Phipps of New York, to be devoted to the welfare of the Phipps Institute, was announced at the Alumni Day exercises of the university. The Phipps Institute was founded by Mr. Phipps for the treatment of tuberculosis under the direction of the University of Pennsylvania. The gift was made on condition that the university raise an equal amount for the institute.

A gift of $100,000 by the children of Dr. C. C. Harrison, former Provost of the university, to further the interests of the University Museum also was announced.

Former Editor Calls on Sophomores to Aid in Changing Conditions

Defining "Harvard Indifference," William I. Nicholas, of Wilton, Conn., a Harvard senior and former editor of the Crimson, told sophomores attending the annual class banquet that it was "95 per cent laziness and plain bad manners and 5 per cent genuine aristocratic aloofness."

He complained of "discourtesy and inhospitality to visiting athletic teams and newspaper men" and called upon the sophomores to assist in changing conditions which brand Harvard as "indifferent, godless and snobbish."

Vassar Allows Smoking

One more woman's college has followed the lead of Bryn Mawr in permitting student smoking on the campus. By a large majority the self-governing student association at Vassar voted to allow smokers the use of two rooms in the student building. The resolution added that "it is still the desire of the student body that you do not exercise this liberty."

The action was taken in consideration of the growing number of girls whose parents find no objection to their use of tobacco.

Class in Journalism

The prizes of fifteen and ten dollars offered by Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity, seem liable to go begging unless the students show a greater interest in the contest than has been the case since the announcement of the contest.

The fraternity offers the prizes in an effort to find some way of being helpful to the college, aside from the work of its own members. If the event is successful the fraternity will probably make the contest an annual custom. There are many needs at Bucknell about which any student should be able to write a few hundred words constructively. These are the things upon which countless hours are wasted in discussions around the fireplaces of fraternity houses and other centers of student discussion.

Instead of taking it all out in talking, write some of it down and send it in. You may accomplish something.

Says Good Students Held Back By Slower

Education in the United States is suffering because of the manner in which brighter students are held back to the pace of those of slower wit, and athletic competitions are suffering because of the stress laid on the "gate."

These thoughts are the opinions of Dr. Montague John Randall, headmaster of Winchester College, England, and traveling commissioner of the Rhodes scholarship trust.

"By educating down to the ability of the meaner intelligence you are stifling genius and canonizing mediocrity," the speaker declared. "At the universities in America, young men are doing work that ought to be done in their high schools. They are wasting their riper educational years in fiddling about with small pieces, when they ought to be making a whole fabric out of smaller parts assimilated earlier."

"Latin," said Dr. Randall, "is the finest instrument ever offered to man for the education of the adolescent intellect. In this country you are making a grave blunder if boys are deprived of it until they are 13 or 14, for they can't move a step forward without it. Even a boy of 18, who is studying machinery, will grasp all the essentials the more speedily if his foundation in Latin has been good. Give him enough of Latin early and you needn't teach him English, or English grammar at all. This medieval thing is the foundation of all culture of the mind, and the lack of it is the secret of the half-heartedness with which boys enter into the system of American education."

Touching upon athletics, he said they taught boys to become men in the noblest and strongest sense, to be chivalrous in their dealings with others and to show courtesy to a defeated enemy. They taught him to put every ounce into the battle of life, the speaker said

Beds Now Made Right With "Dad" Crab Back

Almost four weeks ago an unkind motor truck and "Dad" Crabb, our East Wing bed-maker and general handy man, had a meeting, attended by unfortunate results for the latter. Since that time "smokes" have accumulated in a number of the dormitories for lack of a recipient and the entertainment afforded by stories from the old man's ample repertoire has also been lacking.

"Dad" Crabb is as much a fixture in old Main as are the creaky stairs and the fantastic walls that make up its internal anatomy. The old adage that "we don't appreciate a thing until it's taken from us" was well illustrated in the enforced leave of absence of "the man with the box".

A dozen anxious queries were heard daily during the space of twenty-one days, such as "Heard anything of Dad?" "How soon'll he be back?" and "Was he badly hurt?"

We are glad to report that he is now back, and that he resumed activities on the morning of Febrhary 18. His boulder is in pretty good shape, his hip's better yet, and, save for a bit more of hesitation in his gait, our helpful manipulator of broom and duster is as hale and hearty as an octogenarian can be.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

Why will a man give up social affairs, studies, time, physical effort and everything else to take part in a college sport but refuse to give up any of these for participation in a test of the intellect?

* * * *

During football season especially, and in the days of other athletic activities, we see numerous examples where students are so imbued with the spirit of the game that they pass anything else by the board and devote their whole time to the interest in hand.

* * * *

But last week the honor and glory and all of the other attributes that make up the chimera that surrounds college activities was at stake in another kind of encounter and the guardians of that honor were not willing to perform their function.

* * * *

Specifially, the chess team had a match and lost because not enough players could be found to oppose the visitors. Although all of the players who could be collected played, the match was a practical forfeit. Every board was tied, the board that was unoccupied was forfeited and so the match was lost.

* * * *

Chess is one of the most highly intellectual contests in which college men try their ability. Each play requires careful thought and the game demands the closest attention. The winner may well pride himself on his attainment, for it is a victory of wits, pure and simple. Chance is no element in the outcome.

* * * *

But the particular chess match occurred on Saturday evening when five fraternities were holding dances and a large number of the students had gone home for the short vacation. The students weren't willing to give up these pleasures for the support of the name and tradition of Bucknell.

* * * *

The loyalty to Bucknell that is true and good goes further than where it is seen by the crowd. Loyalty, like faith, is as much a part of the secret and inner self as it is of the open and external appearance. The test of true loyalty is an activity that takes away the mob and the cheering and leaves the man to fight alone. Unfortunately we have found some lacking.

* * * *

All of this means that we need more students who will work and sacrifice for Bucknell and glory for the personal satisfaction they get from accomplishment. Those who work and sacrifice for the cheers of the crowd and the lip honor that is so easily won and lost will always be with us.

Mason-Dixon Line No Bar At This Theological School

The Mason and Dixon Line is only imaginary, according to the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. Although being a Southern institution it draws no lines and has enrolled this session sixty-one licensed or ordained ministers from Northern or Western states. These come from as far East as Connecticut and New York, as far West as California and Oregon and as far North as Minnesota and North Dakota. The school, which advertises in The Bucknellian, is located on the border line between the North and the South and where East meets West. It is at the center of the nation's population. A circle with Louisville as its center and the distance to Tampa, Florida, or Houston, Texas, as the length of its radius swings for enough West to enclude half of Kansas and Nebraska, far enough North to include all of the Great Lakes, and far enough East to take in the entire state of New York, running through Hartford, Conn. The Seminary has the largest annual enrolment of ministers in the world and is now entering its new $2,000,000 suburban home.

NOTICE

The first opportunity to make up conditions incurred in English courses during the fall term will be the examination given in Room B22 on Saturday, February 27, from 10 to 12. For those who do not wish to take the examination at this time, there will be a second opportunity on the third Saturday in May.

HOW—

VARIOUS KINDS OF BIRDS HAVE FORMS OF SPORT.—The members of an exploring party in the Far North tell of having had a lot of fun with a party of auks—or, rather, the auks had fun with them, I'd say; for a crowd of these ungainly birds would waddle up one side of the tent in their heavy, awkward way, until they reached the ridge pole, and then, what do you think they did? Tobogganed down on the other side! So writes Hallam Hawksworth in his article, "Work and Play in Birdland," in St. Nicholas.

Crows have a game that's really interesting. I don't know just what to call it. It's a kind of handball. I should say, the "hands" being the bills of the players. You'll see a whole crowd of crows in the air and one will have something in his bill—a white flint pebble, maybe—and fly away with it as hard as ever he can, with other crows in hot pursuit. Presently some of the other fellows will overtake him, fly around in front of him, flap their wings in his face and do everything they can to make him drop it. (That's what we call "interference," isn't it?) Then there's a rush and a scramble to catch the ball before it falls to the ground, and the lucky boy is, in turn, chased about.

All of the kinds of play I've been telling you about so far are just plain play, as far as we can see, and have nothing to do with the business of life, or feeling in that respect with the play of the kitten with the ball of yarn. The kitten is really proceeding that ball is a mouse. But the birds also, some of them, have forms of play that are directly related to their future professions. For example those poetic cousins of the crows, the ravens, have a game of solitaire with sea-urchins. A sea-urchin is a little shelled sea creature and is a part of the raven's bill of fare if the raven happens to possess a villa by the sea. The raven's way of preparing his little friend for dinner is to drop him from a height on some convenient stone so that the urchin's shell breaks open. Then, in the language of the well-trained butler, "Dinner is served, sir."

Yet you will often see a raven carry one of these sea-urchins aloft, drop it, and then flap down and catch it before it can reach the ground; and he will do this over and over again. The kitten's game, you see, played by a raven.

(I have called this little game "solitaire," for although the sea-urchin takes a part in it, in a way, the raven really does all the playing.)

Hawks have a game of catch in which two take part. Mates will play in the air in this way with a snake that one of them has caught. Flying to a great height, the possessor of the titbit will drop it and the other will catch it. Then the two will change places, the pitcher becoming the catcher and the catcher, pitcher.

How Nature Provides for Seeds "Traveling"

Most people would be surprised if told that the dandelion growing on their lawn owes its origin in America. Yet this might easily be so, for seeds do travel in the most remarkable way.

How then, do they do it? One way is by air. Those that travel in this manner have a kind of wing or parachute attached to their seed, by means of which they can be carried by the wind for miles before they finally come to earth and grow.

Others with the aid of a light float take a sea voyage and travel with the current of the water for great distances. But by far the most interesting way of all is the seed that travels with animals and birds. This is done with the help of a hooked attachment which clings to the animal's fur.

Charles Darwin once took from the foot of a bird a small fragment of hardened earth; this he moistened and warmed, and waited with curiosity to see whether or not anything would grow from it. To his great surprise no fewer than 80 plants sprang from this small portion of soil.

How Diamonds Are Judged

The color of a diamond is the most important thing. Diamonds of the finest quality are colorless, perfectly clear and are said to be of the first water. Some varieties are green, orange, red, yellow and blue. Those are the most valuable in which the tint is decided and equal throughout. The commercial value of the diamond is affected by the slightest tinge of a different color. The way a diamond is cut is also important.

How Sky Writing Is Done

In the airplane used for sky writing the instrument board is cluttered with some 15 controls and recording devices and half a dozen dials, levers and indicators controlling smoke gear, all of which the flyer must watch.

Gettysburg Defeats Bison Five, 29-26

Use of Long Bounce Pass Aids Battlefield Men in Scoring

The varsity quintet suffered its first reverse on the home floor, at the hands of the smooth Gettysburg quintet last Friday evening, by the score of 29 to 26. From the first the contest was close, with Gettysburg holding the advantage until Bucknell spurted on a brace of goals by McCaskey and Bach, and took the lead for the first time just before the half ended.

Toward the end of the first half, McCaskey, who had been playing a stellar game for Bucknell, was benched because he had been guilty of three personal fouls. Hitchens took his place and remained on the floor for the first few minutes of the second half.

Gettysburg rallied as the final period opened, and drew away from Bucknell. At one time she was nine points ahead. McCaskey was reinstated and continued throughout the game, without making further fouls. Bucknell again drew up on the Battlefield quintet which attempted to freeze the ball for time. The last few minutes passed with Bucknell frantically striving for the two field goals which would win the game.

Gettysburg placed on the floor a well-coached five, whose ability to use a long bounce pass aided them in puncturing the five-man defense. Tuckey, their diminutive and tireless forward, aided the offense materially with his dribbling. Haller was high scorer with six field goals, but Captain Gerhart of Gettysburg played the best game. He took few shots, but made them count, and it was impossibe to pass over or around him.

The Bucknell five played hard ball during the whole game. McCaskey was perhaps the outstanding player and high scorer with four field goals and two fouls.

Weekly Schedule For Frat Games

All interfraternity basketball games for the rest of this week will be canceled in order not to conflict with the varsity and freshman varsity matches.

The schedule for next week will be as follows:

March 1.
Sigma Chi vs. Alpha Chi Mu.
Lambda Chi Alpha vs. Beta Kappa.

March 3.
Kappa Sigma vs. Non-Frat.
Phi Lambda Theta vs. Kappa Gamma.

March 6.
Kappa Gamma vs. Alpha Chi Mu.
Phi Kappa Psi vs. Beta Kappa.

The interfraternity schedule from week to week will be announced in the Bucknellian so that there will be no confusion in dates.

Catholic U. Game To Be Broadcast

Coach "Mal" Musser's Bucknell basketball cagers will face two strong teams this week-end. The Bisons will divide their court activities at home and abroad, playing Catholic University of Washington D. C. in Tustin gym at Lewisburg, Thursday evening and Temple University at Philadelphia Saturday night.

The game Thursday night is the last home game on the regular playing card of the Orange and Blue team, but one or two other combinations may be met here before the playing season ends. The reverse suffered at the hands of the strong Gettysburg collegians last Saturday, the first defeat at home, has instilled a greater fighting spirit into the Bucknell passers who hope to set back the invading courtmen.

The Catholic University—Bucknell game will be broadcast from WJBU, Bucknell broadcasting station.

Susquehanna J. Vs. Trimmed By Frosh

Archie Seiler Scores 22 Points In Easy Tilt Ending 44-19

Archie Seiler, aided by five or six other ambitious freshmen, trimmed the Susquehanna Junior Varsity last Monday in Tustin Gym, 44 to 19, in a listless exhibition.

Seiler, with a total of twenty-two points, scored more than the whole opposition. If the freshmen had really exerted themselves the score would have been much higher, but the opposition held little incentive. From the first it was evident that the yearlings were going to rule the court.

The Susquehanna players were unable to cope with the five-man defense and the fast passing attack of the yearlings. The frosh registered nineteen field goals to seven for Susquehanna.

Seiler and Halicki played best for the frosh, while Shue and Haney put up a scrappy game for Susquehanna.

Baseball Practice May Begin In March

Despite the present wintry atmosphere a general call for Bucknell baseball candidates will be issued about the middle of March by Coach Walter Blair and it is probable that the Bison battery candidates will report even earlier.

The loss of the Goodwin twins, Myrl and Earl, who covered first and third bases respectively, and such stars as Cheney, McKenzie, and Nicklas in the outfield, will be felt, but with the exception of the outer garden the team will be well fortified with veterans.

The battery will be well taken care of with "Tom" Murphy and Phil Martin, right handers, and Neal Blaisdell, portsider, in the box, and "Gus" Shorts, "Mose" Quinn, Gilmore, and McCormick doing the backstopping. Blaisdell is a veteran of two seasons, and Murphy won many games for the Orange and Blue last spring. The brunt of the pitching burden will fall on these two. Shorts will do most of the receiving if he displays his past form but will have plenty of competition from the other candidates.

Tuck, McCleary, Gaskill, and "Tony" Kostos will probably form the infield. Kostos, last season's football captain, will be the chief candidate for the first base position made vacant through the loss of Myrl Goodwin. Gaskill covered an outfield post last year but is naturally an infield performer and will probably be called into the inner cordon.

The outfield will be the chief cause of concern. All the regulars with the exception of Gaskill have left college, and Marley, second string outfielder, is the only remaining man.

The team will be coached this season by Walter Blair, former Bucknell player, major league catcher, and University of Pittsburg coach. Blair will fill the post hitherto held by "Mouse" McCormick who will look after the destinies of the West Point Military Academy nine this spring.

The first game will be played the last week in March or in the first week of April. The schedule has not been announced, but Graduate Manager Griffith is working out one of the stiffest cards ever undertaken by a Bucknell diamond squad.

Two Interfraternity Games Postponed To Later Date

The Sigma Chi—Phi Kappa Psi and Theta Upsilon Omega—Phi Gamma Delta basketball games scheduled in the two interfraternity lengues for Monday night, February 16, were postponed to a later date, inasmuch as a number of the players who would have played in these two games are members of the Varsity squad, which on Friday evening tackled the Gettysburg College quintet.

"Matty" Day Certain After League Votes

In honor of the late Christopher Mathewson, ex-'02, July seventh is to be celebrated as "Matty Day" by organized baseball, according to an announcement made February 23 by President John A. Heydler, of the National League. On that day the New York "Giants" will play the Washington "Senators," at the Polo Grounds, in New York, and the proceeds of the game will be devoted to the erection of the Mathewson memorial gymnasium at Bucknell.

This statement was issued by President Heydler to prevent any misunderstanding of the situation. At the time of Matty's death it was announced that organized baseball would erect a memorial to Mathewson at Bucknell. President Heydler had a conference with President Emory W. Hunt, concerning the matter, and a definite announcement about the plan was published in the Bucknell Alumni Monthly. But uncertainty regarding the project seems to have arisen among baseball fans. To settle the matter definitely, Presidents John A. Heydler and Ban Johnson, of the two major leagues, have agreed upon the date of July 7 for the playing of the initial game to provide funds for this proposed memorial.

MOTHER OF CHRISTY DIES, AGED SEVENTY

Mrs. Gilbert B. Mathewson, mother of the late Christy Mathewson, of baseball fame died on February 18 at her home in Factoryville. She was seventy years old.

Mrs. Mathewson, who became ill last October soon after the death of her son, was born at Factoryville, a farming village, and had been president of the W. C. T. U. there for many years.

The deceased is survived by her husband and two daughters, Mrs. James French, of Thompson, Pa., and Mrs. Walter Branning, of Dunmore, Pa. The funeral will be held Sunday with burial in Factoryville.

ARCHIE SEILER ELECTED CAPTAIN OF FROSH FIVE

Archie P. Seiler, of Hawley, was elected captain of the Bucknell freshman basketball team at a meeting of the frosh cagers on Tuesday, February 16. Seiler will act as frosh leader for the remainder of the season. The new yearling captain played three years of basketball and football on the Hawley High School teams and was captain of both teams. He has been holding down the center job on the frosh team and has been one of the team's highest scorers.

MOURN "ANDY" SMITH

The University of California is mourning the loss of its football coach, who died recently. Friends and admirers paid final homage to the dead coach as his ashes were strewn over the football field by an aviator.

Why Gold Is Getting Scarcer Every Year

The world's annual output of gold is enormous and is greater at the present time than it was 20 or 30 years ago. Even so, there is not enough to go around as the basis of sound money or exchange. The reason for this is the large quantity of the precious metal used in arts and crafts, and hoarded or lost.

Jewelers are the heaviest consumers. Every year they work up nearly 150 tons of gold, scarcely an ounce of which is ever recovered for other use. Goldbeat also absorbs huge amounts, vast quantities being used for plating other metals and for ornamenting pottery.

But it is in China and India that gold is most largely withdrawn from financial use. A form of piety in India is to regild the dome of some religious building. Such an operation often absorbs $50,000 worth of gold. Not long ago an Indian rajah used 17,000 English sovereigns to form centers to each minute pane in the windows of his palace.

Between £2,000,000 and £3,000,000 sterling in gold vanish yearly in India, and quite as much in China. This is all buried, and as a rule the owner dies without revealing the secret of his hiding place; consequently the gold is lost, sometimes forever.

Why Wisdom Teeth

Nature arranges that the apparatus of our body shall be supplied to us in accordance with our needs and development. And so the baby first grows its "milk teeth," a temporary set just strong enough to enable it to take the soft food natural for its age and digestion, and light and small enough not to inconvenience its mouth.

As we grow older and need harder food, these teeth fall out and our real set appears, not all at once, but with additions according to our needs and the growth of our jaws. Last of all come some teeth which today our habits hardly need, and which therefore are held back till last, and when our jaws have room to receive them. Often, indeed, they fail to come at all.

Lunatic an Author

A series of short stories, said to be exceptionally clever in their human appeal, which are to be published soon in England were written by a woman inmate of an insane asylum. Authorities at the asylum said the woman appears normal when writing fiction but that when not thus engaged she is violent or spends her time writing scurrilous letters. Her name was not disclosed.

A RUBBER SLICKER!

These slickers will protect you from the chill winds that sweep across the campus. Whether it rains or whether the sun shines brightly—these slickers are suitable for all weathers and they are very popular with college men, everywhere.

WOLF DREIFUSS ESTABLISHED 1879 MILTON, PENNA.

When it's a rainy night—and with three crafty bridge players your luck is running wild
—have a Camel!

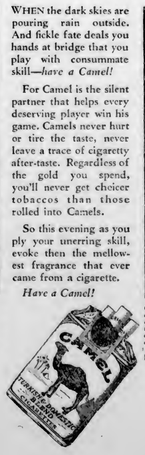
WHEN the dark skies are pouring rain outside. And fickle fate deals you hands at bridge that you play with consummate skill—have a Camel!

For Camel is the silent partner that helps every deserving player win his game. Camels never hurt or tire the taste, never leave a trace of cigaretty after-taste. Regardless of the gold you spend, you'll never get choicer tobaccos than those rolled into Camels.

So this evening as you ply your unerring skill, evoke then the mellowest fragrance that ever came from a cigarette.

Have a Camel!

Camels represent the utmost in cigarette quality. The choicest of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos are blended into Camels by master blenders and the finest of French cigarette paper is made especially for them. Into this one brand is concentrated all of the knowledge, all of the skill of the world's largest organization of expert tobacco men.



Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

* * * *

The new house-presidents of the Women's College were called to meet with the Student executive Board on a recent evening, at which the responsibility of their duty in working for model houses was impressed upon the girls.

* * * *

Willis Snow, '28, while with the debating team in Philadelphia Saturday, February 13, saw an attempted jewelry store hold-up. Willis joined in the chase, and after running six blocks saw the woman bandit arrested by police.

* * * *

Robert N. Tate, '29, of Allenwood, returned home on Saturday for the first time since the deep snow storm. He discovered that the radiators of both the family Studebaker touring car and the Ford coupe had burst during his absence.

* * * *

L. M. Miller, affectionately known to the "Y" as "Shorty" Miller, the state superintendent of college Y. M. C. A., visited Bucknell on Monday February 15. He met with the "Y" cabinet to discuss the feasibility of bringing speakers to the campus.

* * * *

Mary S. Schilling, '25, teacher in the junior high school of Bradford visited her sister, Miss Josephine Schilling, and friends at Bucknell on February 20. "Shekels" is missed by her sisters in Delta Delta Delta this year, and it was good to see her on the campus as of yore.

* * * *

Earl Flesher, '28, who left college at the beginning of the second semester, visited friends in Mt. Carmel during the past week-end. "Flesh" can't seem to make up his mind whether he wants to go to his home in Abilene, Texas, or attempt to find a job in the coal regions.

* * * *

T. F. Morgan, '21, was in Lewisburg all of last week attending to business affairs and visiting friends and fraternity brothers. "Si" is connected with the endowment movement and his work calls him to visit many of the old, loyal Bucknellians.

* * * *

Latest reports from WJBU reveal the fact that the station has been heard from numerous points in and around Philadelphia. It is hoped that the new studio in the Engineering Building, which will be completed in about a week will prove more satisfactory.

* * * *

"Mal" Musser, Bison court mentor, has been playing center on the crack Jersey Shore New York Central R. R. Y. M. C. A. team this season, when it has not interfered with his coaching the Bucknell squad. "Mal's" team is at present topnotching the West Branch Y. M. C. A. league.

* * * *

Registrar H. W. Holter in an interesting speech in freshman chapel recently, set forth the vital statistics of college life. In order of importance, failure in studies, financial difficulties, and home troubles, he assigned as causes for leaving school prematurely, and his prediction is that 60 per cent. of the present class of '29 will graduate from Bucknell, a much higher quota than is to be found in most colleges.

* * * *

The Rev. Raymond G. Pierson, '01, of Dormont, Pa., visited his son Harry H. Pierson, '28, during a part of last week. Mr. Pierson is to be dean of the Baptist Assembly to be held in Selinsburg, at the Kiskiminetas preparatory school, during the coming summer.

* * * *

Phil Martin, '27, claims the tiddledy-winks championship of the Lambda Chi fraternity. "Red" Dorsett, '29, having been defeated in the finals, there is no one to dispute the claim. We are glad to say that "Phil" did not strain his pitching arm by the strenuous exercise.

* * * *

William L. Hawkins, '29, has become the protector of some of the squirrels on the Bucknell Campus. He places peanuts on the window sill outside of his room on the fourth floor of West College and every day at 11 A. M. the squirrels come to carry away his offering.

* * * *

George Strahan, '29, has moved from East to West College, and is now rooming with Roy Horton, '27. The latter has purchased a new gun to add to his large collection. These two students, and Jack Creighton, '27, often spend an afternoon at target practice along the river bank.

* * * *

The WJBU broadcast of the basketball games from Tustin Gymnasium is creating not a little interest among the radio fans of central Pennsylvania. Williamsport, Sunbury, Milton, and Shamokin people have been pleased by these broadcasts. The Williamsport Sun has already commented upon them.

* * * *

William V. Mahaffey, class of '25, visited his Bucknell friends, chiefly in the administration, over the week-end of February 13 and 14. "Bill" was president of "Cap and Dagger" during his junior year, '23-'24, and had many affiliations on the campus, chief of which was membership in Phi Gamma Delta. He is at present a buyer of silk for a firm in Pittsburgh.

The literature and history room in the library is being refitted with new shelving. In the meantime the books that were formerly placed there are occupying long tables in the main reading room. The built-in shelves that were not adjustable are being removed and others of the same type as those in the main reading room will be installed.

* * * *

W. S. Richardson, of New York City, addressed upper class chapel on Tuesday morning, February 16. He told of Rockefeller's gifts to state universities, and of a survey of the results of philanthropic work in these non-sectarian institutions. This survey revealed the great interest of the presidents and regent boards in the religious welfare of the students. Outside influences such as the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. are merely touching the fringe so far as the spiritual outlook of the universities is concerned, and consequently there is a great sphere for bringing the best moral and religious influences to bear upon the students. The Rockefeller Foundation is interested in building personality by interesting faculties and students in a vocationally as well as ethically valuable life.

HARVARD POLL ON LIQUOR

2,000 Students Also to Vote on Military Drill

Harvard undergraduates living in the college dormitories received 2,000 ballots recently, seeking to ascertain student sentiment on prohibition, a Harvard war memorial and the correct place of military science at Harvard. Members of the Harvard Student Liberal Club were the sponsors of the postal ballots.

The students are asked if Harvard should have a suitable war memorial, and their ideas are sought on the form of such a memorial. They are asked to vote whether military science courses should be made compulsory and whether the existing department should be abolished or not.

Their opinion is asked on whether the Eighteenth Amendment should be repealed, if light wines and beers should be permitted, or if the law should be left as it is.

—New York Times.

Quite often simple suggestions are worthy of much consideration. For instance, a Missouri editor observes that one way to keep chickens out of the garden is to eat canned vegetables. —New Orleans States.

Rev. C. A. Hall, Ex-'95, Passes Away At 63

The Rev. Charles Franklin Hall, who passed away on Saturday, February 6, in Muncy, was born on June 14, 1863, in Chester Valley, Pa. He was nearly 63 years old. When a young man he attended Bucknell University, being a member of the class of 1895. He did not finish his course. At the age of 32 years he was ordained a Baptist minister at Honesdale, Wayne County, Pa., and for a number of years was active in the ministry.

When the United States entered the World's War he was appointed Y. M. C. A. secretary at Camp Humphreys, Va., and from there was transferred to Camp Merritt, where he acted in the same capacity, and also in the camp hospital. After being honorably discharged from the United States service he engaged in Bowery work in New York City for the Young Men's Institute for three years.

Mr. Hall resided in New York City for about ten years. Before coming to live with his son in Muncy he lived in Bucks County, Pa., for a short time.

Mr. Hall was the last of a family of nine sons. He married Miss Ella Keyser on February 27, 1895, and to this union were born two children, William F. Hall, of Muncy, and Dr. Sarah A. Hall, an interne at the Women's Hospital, Philadelphia. He left his wife, the above mentioned son and daughter, and two sisters, living in Philadelphia. The funeral was held in Muncy and burial was in Lewisburg Cemetery. —Grit.

David J. Martin, '20

A number of social events were held during the past week in honor of Miss Mary Louise Dayton and David J. Martin, whose marriage will take place this month. Mrs. Charles Kiehl entertained in honor of Miss Dayton at a bridge-luncheon. Miss Dayton and Mr. Martin were guests of Robert Dayton and his fiancee, Miss Marion Hebden, at a dinner at the country club. Mr. and Mrs. Donald B. King and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rodger entertained Miss Dayton and Mr. Martin at a dinner bridge at the Woman's Club Thursday evening. Twenty-six guests were present. Mrs. T. Walter Harris, of 835 Park Avenue, entertained at her home for Miss Dayton at a bridge-luncheon, Friday. —Williamsport Grit.

Harry R. Warfel, '20

Assistant Professor Harry R. Warfel, '20, and Mrs. Warfel entertained the members of the cast of "Cappy Ricks," the comedy recently presented by the Delta Sigmas, at a fireside dinner in the Warfel home, 117 Brown street, on Tuesday evening, February 15. Cast members present were: Earl F. McClune, '27, Gilbert G. McCune, '27, A. B. Lauderbaugh, '27, Clifford H. Mellor Jr., '27, Harry H. Pierson, '28, Eleanor Dakin, '26, Jessie R. Fielding, '29, Yolanda E. Frank, '28, and Frank E. Johnston Jr., '28.

Mrs. M. L. Drum, '98

Mrs. M. L. Drum (Grace Slifer, '98,) was elected vice president of the School Directors of Union County at the annual convention in the Court House on February 18, 1926. Superintendent E. O. Bickel, '05, read the auditors' report of the County Institute for the year 1925. Dr. Charles Lose, honorary, '85, spoke twice. The first subject was, "Three Functions of Good School Discipline" and the second was, "A Professional Attitude for the School Director."

Charles F. Bidelspacher, '01

Assemblyman Charles F. Bidelspacher, '01, of Williamsport has been named, along with several other members of the House at Harrisburg, as a delegate to the meeting of legislators at Denver, Colo., on July 19 and 20. The selections were announced February 18 by Speaker Bluett of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives.

Dr. Charles Lose, Honorary, '85

Dr. Charles Lose, Honorary '85, recently addressed the first meeting in 1926 of the Williamsport Garden Club, in its program celebrating the tenth anniversary of its founding. His subject was, "Garden Club Reminiscences."

Miss Nora Greene, Inst., '94

Miss Nora Greene, Inst., '94, of Lewistown, is touring Europe and Western Asia. Miss Greene has two brothers and a sister who attended Bucknell. One of her brothers, Edward M. Greene, is a trustee.

Mary B. Harris, '94

Miss Mary B. Harris, '94, daughter of the late Dr. John Howard Harris, who was for thirty years president of the University, is about to publish a book reminiscent of the life of her father. Dr. Harris had composed many of his memoirs in different articles that were published as pamphlets and in newspapers, and his daughter will be able to draw largely on these sources.

However Miss Harris will be able herself to contribute many interesting sidelights on the life of the man who brought Bucknell to her present place among the educational institutions of the country. The work will be one to which friends of Bucknell and its great president will look forward eagerly.

Mrs Carl A. Schug, '17

Mrs. Carl A. Schug (Alice Johnson, '17,) sang several solos at a tea served by the Lycoming chapter, D. A. R., in the Woman's club house, February 19, at Williamsport.

Albert W. Johnson, '96

Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96, broadcast an address on Abrahm Lincoln from the Strawbridge broadcasting station in Philadelphia on February 12.

Who's Who at B.U.

Thomas D. Hann Jr., the first president of the Big Four Engineering Society, has played an important part in this new society, and in promoting new projects of the engineering department. He has always been interested in engineering activities, first as a member of the A. S. M. E., and now as the leader of the Big Four Engineering Society.

"Tom" is a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity and also of the Pi Delta Epsilon honorary fraternity. During his freshman year he was manager of the freshman basketball team and on the Belle Hop staff. During his freshman year he was a member of the Stadium Campaign Committee.

The Big Four Engineering Society has already demonstrated its usefulness to the engineering students at Bucknell. Some interesting lectures and demonstrations have been given in the monthly meetings of the society. Through the efforts of the society, an engineers' club room has been fitted out on the top floor of the Engineering Building. The society has made investigations into the field of national engineering fraternities, and it is expected that such a fraternity will soon be established at Bucknell. With Thomas D. Hann Jr., at the head of these projects, we are certain that the interests of the engineers at Bucknell will not be neglected.

JAPANESE SCHOLARSHIP OFFERED TO AMERICAN

A scholarship of $1500 has been made available, through the efforts of a group of Japanese students in New York, for an American who wishes to study in Japan. The scholarship will be awarded only to a native American between the ages of twenty-five and thirty-five years on the basis of his being, in the judgment of the committee, the best student in whom to invest the money.

The scholarship was made possible through the efforts of the Japanese students of New York who, last year, conceived the idea of staging several Japanese dramas at International House and using the proceeds for this purpose.

The committee on award consists of fifteen persons: ten of them are Japanese, and of these six are students. Harry E. Edmonds, director of International House, is chairman of the committee, and one of the other American members is Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University.

Applications for the scholarship must be made before April first, and the award will be made not later than May first. Further information may be obtained from the Japanese Brotherhood Scholarship Committee, International House, 500 Riverside Drive, New York.

"The Man Who Will Not Be Told"

BY MARY ELIZABETH ROYER

Mr. Know-It-All, or the man who will not be told, is retrogressive instead of progressive, but he cannot be made to realize it until he meets his "Waterloo." He walks through life with his head held so high that he cannot see the pitfalls that make the path dangerous. Since he will not be told, he is blissfully ignorant of their presence until he falls into one. Then it is too late to save himself from disaster. Just as Napoleon had to accept complete reverse, the man who thinks he knows everything and so need not be told anything, must also accept it sometime.

One of the traits that causes others to dislike him is his insolent domineering. No matter what piece of work is to be done, what process is to be explained, what official is to be elected, Mr. Know-It-All has the exact method for executing the work, the consecutive steps of the process perfectly mastered, or is perfectly familiar with the duties of the official; at least, he thinks so, and pushes himself to the fore to try to take command. His arrogance creates an antagonism which tries to "put him in his proper place."

It is a difficult task to put him there because his egotism blinds him. The man who will not be told reminds one of a mule that works in the mines. The mule is in the dark so long that he becomes blind. Mr. Know-It-All is so infatuated with himself that he cannot see his true image, which is reflected in the opinions of others. The miner brings the blind mule to the surface for short intervals, to accustom its eyes to the light, in an effort to restore its sight. The time is increased gradually on each trip until the object is accomplished. In the same way, society jolts Mr. Know-It-All by placing pitfalls in his path. Each jolt is made harder in an effort to make him see himself as he is, and the object is accomplished by a last, most severe fall into the deepest pit. The cataract of egotism is removed from his eyes. He sees himself as a man, devoid of the armor of real knowledge, who has met defeat because he thought he knew so much that no one had anything to tell him.

It takes such a hard jolt to bring Mr. Know-It-All to his senses because of another trait common to mules and men like himself—obstinacy. Some kind person tries to make him see the error of his way, but is wasting his time. Kindness must be replaced by severity. Only so can the offending person be brought to his senses.

Persons of this type can be found in every walk of life. One can be easily found in college. He enters the freshman class with a high estimation of himself. A degree cannot be obtained without going to classes, and Mr. Know-It-All recognizes the fact; but he thinks that it will be merely a matter of form with him, because he already knows so much. His attitude is the same in everything.

The first week marks a change of mind and attitude to a slight extent. He received his first jolt when he criticized a professor's method in conducting a class. The professor does not even thank him for the criticism, but informs him that he does not need help in planning his work or doing it.

The second comes when he attempts to explain the details of a pass to the first year football candidates. The coach emphatically informs him that he has not asked for assistance, and tells him to "pipe down."

Senior Council gives him the third jolt, and he loses an ounce of dignity when forced to dress in girl's clothing for a week.

These jolts bring realization for the time being, but his haughtiness soon returns. The three years that follow bring more jolts. Some times the offender becomes less arrogant, but often the jolts made little impression.

After he has secured his college degree and entered the world, he is treated more severely. The position he expects to obtain easily is not waiting for him. When a position is finally found, he wonders at the questions that are asked concerning his knowledge of electrical engineering. Why do they seem reluctant to pay him the respect he deserves? And the "salaries" that were paid! They are absurd for a man of his attainments!

Thus pitfalls into which Mr. Know-It-All falls become deeper as society jolts him harder. The climax comes when he is setting up a large transformer. He has orders to connect it in a certain way. He decides that he knows a way to secure a better connection. It is true that he has worked it out on paper, but it has never been tried out. It ought to work and he knows it will. Accordingly, he directs that such a connection be made.

The power is turned on. The connection does not function. Because the connection is his brain child, and he is confident that it is therefore good, he does not make sure of his own safety. The transformer blows up and he meets his defeat in death. He has time for only a fleeting glimpse of his true image before he crosses the Great Divide. But on the other side thereof he will be given a good view of himself.

When a man has egotism, and obstinacy, he is retrogressive instead of progressive. Because of these traits themselves, it is hard to make Mr. Know-It-All realize that truth. The man who will not be told must experience a "Waterloo" before he can reach the path of real progress.

Take A Tip From The Squirrel

Don't Wet Your Feet in Snow

Hey you! Take a tip from the squirrel and don't get your feet wet! Did you ever see a squirrel wading thru the deep snowdrifts to reach his destination? No, of course not. Instead, the squirrel makes use of the electric light wires which run overhead about the campus. Anytime you can see him dashing up and down the wires in acrobatic style. Oh, he's a wise old fellow, is he.

Reformer: "Young man, don't you realize that you will never get anywhere drinking?"

Drunk: "Ain't it the truth? I've started home from this corner five times already." —W. & J. Red & Black

RUTGERS DIVIDED INTO UNITS

University Composed of 5 Distinct Colleges—Shifts in Courses

Announcements of several changes in the Rutgers University curriculum and the division of the university into five distinct colleges were made in the university catalogue for 1926 which was issued February 20.

Beginning with the fall term the curriculum will include full four-year courses in journalism, business, business administration, and pre-law in addition to the four-year courses now being given. The university will also be organized into five distinct colleges: the College of Arts and Sciences, the College of Engineering, the College of Agriculture, the School of Education, and the New Jersey College for Women. Extension bureaus and divisions now connected with the university include the Agricultural Experiment Stations, the Extension Courses for Teachers, the Agricultural Extension Courses, the Industrial Extension, and the United States Bureau of Mines.

STEWART TEACHING "BIOLOGY METHODS"

Shows Prospective Teachers How To Secure Field Specimens For Work in Biology

A biology course such as has seldom before been offered, either at Bucknell or at any other college in this country, is now being conducted by Professor Norman H. Stewart. This course he terms "Methods in Biology for Teachers."

Time and again there has been brought to Professor Stewart's attention, by calls from biology teachers for certain material, the fact that most of those teaching this subject lack sufficient training in what is known as field and laboratory methods. They may be thoroughly informed on all that concerns the structure of every creature they present, yet be unable to produce the animals from their natural habitat and prepare them for use, or to perform in the laboratory many other things which come within the scope of biological study.

"Methods in Biology for Teachers" said Professor Stewart in a recent interview, "is primarily intended to provide that instruction which shall meet the needs of prospective, or present biology instructors in the respect mentioned. Through it the teacher learns how to secure specimens from the field, to prepare and to preserve specimens, to cultivate protozoa, to keep an aquarium, to make microscopic slides; in short, it makes him more capable and efficient in presenting the subject of biology."

In founding such a course, Professor Stewart has recognized and tried to meet the demand for practically-trained teachers, who shall be able to maintain, within the school, biology departments less dependent upon outside sources for aid and materials, and who at the same time can present the subject more understandingly and satisfactorily to the student.

This course was given at the last Summer School session, and placed formally in the extension department curriculum this past fall.

The Summer School enrolment for the course was twenty-two; for the regular term, six. These are really satisfactory figures, considering the minimum of advertising that the course has had, and its short existence of eight months.

Mrs. Annie Lodge,'72, Dies At Age Of 72

Passes Away Following Lunch With Son, Interment Here

Mrs. Annie Wilson Lodge, Inst. '72, died suddenly on the afternoon of Thursday, February 18, at her home, 522 East 78th street, New York City. She was in her seventy-second year.

She had luncheon with her son, John Lodge, and had returned to her apartment, when she was suddenly taken ill. She died almost immediately. It is supposed that death was due to acute indigestion.

Funeral services were held on Sunday, February 21, in the Collegiate Memorial Church, in New York City. The body will probably be brought to Lewisburg for interment next spring, as her husband and her parents are buried here.

Mrs. Lodge was born in Lewisburg on April 30, 1855. She was educated in the schools of this town, and finished her schooling at the Female Institute, women not then being admitted to the college proper. She was graduated with the class of 1872.

She was married to Louis K. Lodge on October 19, 1882. He was connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad. They lived in Media, Pa. He died December 31, 1889, and was buried in the Lewisburg cemetery. One child, John was born of this union.

Mrs. Lodge's childhood home was a brick house on the southwest corner of Market and Fourth streets. Her father was Dr. Thomas Howard Wilson, long beloved as the town physician. He had his office in the small brick addition to the big house on the corner. In this addition the town health clinics are now held. In this old home Mrs. Lodge lived for a time after the death of her husband. Later she moved to New York. Here she maintained an apartment, though she spent much of her time in Europe. During the recent war she was abroad working with the forces of the Jerry McAuley Mission. She returned to America last fall, reaching home at Thanksgiving.

Her son John, who is married and lives in upper Montclair, N. J., is the sole survivor of this line. Mrs. Frank Simpson, of Lewisburg was a second cousin of Mrs. Lodge.

Mrs. Lodge is remembered as a woman of fine qualities of heart and mind. She was popular as a young woman, and retained the friendship of early acquaintances through the years.

She came of a family that had long been associated with Buffalo Valley. In 1767, eight years before the Revolution, and two years before this region was thrown open for settlement by the whites, Governor Penn sent her great, great, grandfather, James Wilson, to survey lands hereabout. Like other early visitors, he was much impressed with this immediate region, and secured three hundred acres of land, lying between the Susquehanna River and the Buffalo Creek, about a mile north of Lewisburg. The family has continued to live in this valley ever since, and included many of the best known residents of this vicinity.

Lafayette Seeking Mementos of Namesake, Gen. Lafayette

Lafayette College will come into possession of the insignia of the coat of arms of General Lafayette, and of seventeen original letters of the general, one sealed with the ring given him by General Washington, if efforts of the New York-Lafayette College alumni are carried through. A committee of the association has issued an appeal to Lafayette alumni for funds for the purchase of this collection, now owned by Warren Cady Crane.

The collection includes more than 500 different engravings, wood etchings and mezzotints, pamphlets, and bound volumes, and represents a collection of activities of more than fifty years carried on by Mr. Crane in America and Europe. An option of $800 has been paid on the collection, which amount represents only a small part of its value.

Chinese Scholar to Lecture; Chinese Philosophy, Columbia

Dr. Hu Shih, the most famous philosopher of China, announces that he has accepted an invitation from Columbia University to deliver a series of lectures on Chinese philosophy at its next summer school and will sail for America in the spring.

Dr. Hu, a young man, is regarded as China's finest scholar. He actively participated in the Nationalist movement last summer, but became disgusted with the extreme actions of his colleagues at the Peking National University and finally resigned his professorship and went to Shanghai, announcing that he needed solitude for researches which he is making.

Affirmative Team Of Co-ed Debaters into a political organization, Miss Shipe pointed out that the United States would not care to affiliate with it. Since the United States is interested chiefly in North and South America and does not understand European problems, Miss Watkins thought it should remain outside the League. The work done at the Arms Conference was proof that our country could work more effectively alone.

Miss Steinhilper, speaking in rebuttal for Miss Cooley, brought the debate to a close. Her emphatic statement, "Europe is not kicking; Europe seems satisfied with the League," had its desired effect. The judges' decision was two to one in favor of the affirmative side.

Professor Frank G. Davis presided at the debate. Judges of the contest were: the Reverend H. H. Rupp, pastor of the Reformed Church, Lewisburg; the Reverend A. M. Gregg of the Baptist church at Milton; and Mr. L. F. Lybarger, attorney, of Mifflinburg.

The negative team debated the girls of Ursinus at Collegeville the same evening but were defeated by a unanimous decision of the judges. The members of the team were: Helen Durkin, '28, Ruth Cooper, '28, and Mildred Marshall, '26, captain. Miss Lawson accompanied the girls on their trip. Dr. White, dean of Women at Ursinus, presided over the debate.

The Temple University co-eds were met Saturday night by the negative team and here the team was victorious by a 2-1 decision.

Glee Club Concert At Home March 1

The concert of the Bucknell University Glee Club that was to have been given at Danville, February 17, was postponed on account of weather conditions preventing the club from making the trip. The date that has been set for the concert to be given if the weather or some other unforeseen agent does not interfere is Thursday, February 25.

The home concert of the club will also be given within a week as the date set for this appearance is March 1. The home concert of the club which is given each year in the Baptist church is one of the features of the club's work for the year. It usually comes after the club has had a lot of road experience and is no longer susceptible to the kidding of its audiences.

Students will be admitted to the concert without charge as this is the regular budget concert of the club.

STATE COEDS WIN SHOOT

Pennsylvania State's co-ed rifle team won a triangular shoot from Cornell and the University of Nevada, local military authorities announced today. Five Penn State girls shot a perfect score of 500, each opposing university reporting a score of 485.

Dickinson Debaters To Meet Affirmative

The Bucknell affirmative men's debating team will meet the negative team from Dickinson College, Friday evening at 8:00 o'clock in Bucknell Hall. The Bucknell team has won from Lafayette, Temple, and Ursinus and hopes to add another victory over Dickinson.

The debate Friday will be the eighth annual contest between Dickinson and Bucknell. Bucknell has won the last two of these.

The Dickinson team is a strong one and the debate should be one of the best of the whole season. President Emory W. Hunt will act as chairman and the team will include B. J. Miller, '27, W. G. Snow, '27, J. G. Williams, '29, and T. B. Drum, '26.

It was expected that this team would appear at Bucknell once more to meet Bowdoin but the management now fears that Bowdoin will not be able to be here as expected. If that is true, this will be the last home appearance of the affirmative team and the last home debate for the captain and manager, T. B. Drum. The latter has been in fifteen intercollegiate debates and the teams on which he has been a member have won eleven of this number.

The Central Pennsylvania Debating League, a scholastic organization fostered by the debating board of Bucknell University, has set April 2 as the date for the first elimination debates. The delegates from the various schools included in the league met here Saturday, February 13, and completed arrangements for the tournament.

The Lybarger Sup, presented to Bucknell University for excellence in debate, will be awarded to the winner of the tournament. This cup is presented to the Bucknell University debating board, to be presented by it to the high school team that shall be adjudged the best in the league.

It is the gift of Lee Francis Lybarger, of Mifflinburg, father of William Lybarger, '25, and L. Frances Lybarger Jr., '28. Both of these boys have been varsity debaters on Bucknell teams, and the senior Mr. Lybarger has acted as advisor to the teams at various times.

The schools that will take part in the tournament are Williamsport, Lock Haven, Northumberland, Sunbury, Mount Carmel, Mifflinburg, Lewisburg, Milton, Shamokin, and Bloomsburg. The group winners will meet in two dual debates and the winners of these debates will meet in Lewisburg to decide the championship. The debates will be held on Fridays, beginning April 2, and continuing each week after that until the winner is chosen.

WELLS WRITING LONG NOVEL

H. G. Wells is working on a novel which, it is reported, will contain a quarter of a million words.

This work, which will probably be completed in the late spring, is said to be somewhat in the style of his novel, "The New Machiavelli." Although Mr. Wells denied it, the general opinion was that many of the characters in that novel were thinly veiled sketches of celebrities, including Lord Balfour. —New York Times.

Cap and Dagger Play At F. & M. Feb. 27

On Saturday evening, February 27, Franklin and Marshall College is bringing its Junior week to a successful close with the presentation of three one-act plays. Special interest is being taken in that evening because of the fact that the entertainment is being largely provided by students of two other colleges. Cap and Dagger of Bucknell is presenting "The Mayor and the Manicure," by George Ade, while Gettysburg College is offering "The Pot-boiler" by Alice Herstenberg. The third number on the program of drama will be given by the Green Room Club of Franklin and Marshall.

The plays of both Gettysburg and Bucknell were entered in the Little Theatre Tournament held at State College last December. While at the tournament, Professor L. D. Jaikut, dramatic coach of Franklin and Marshall, made arrangements to bring Gettysburg and Bucknell, the competitors for first place, to Lancaster.

For several years the Owl and Nightingale Club of Gettysburg has been exchanging performances with the Penn State players and with the Green Room Club of Franklin and Marshall. They form the nucleus of the Little Theatre movement in Central Pennsylvania. Cap and Dagger has taken a forward step in becoming a member of the Intercollegiate Dramatic Association of Pennsylvania, but through lack of facilities has been forced to forego any such interchange as that current between the other organizations.

The members of the cast of "The Mayor and the Manicure" are leaving Lewisburg Saturday morning. They are: Edna Watson, Eleanor Dakin, Frank Johnston, Kenneth Slifer, and Frederick Davies, manager.

Rice To Give Course On Hygiene Of Child

The extension course that Professor John W. Rice has been giving in Williamsport every week on "Child Hygiene and Problems of Adolescense," he told a Bucknellian reporter recently, will be given at Bucknell on Saturdays hereafter.

"Last semester my talks in Williamsport were about 'Personal and School Hygiene,' but I have decided to discuss 'Child Hygiene and Problems of Adolescense' this semester," said Dr. Rice.

"I have altered the work in bacteriology to meet suggestions made by the class two years ago. The most difficult part of the course will be deferred to the end of the semester, instead of coming at the beginning. This change will make the work easier for the student.

"When the new chemistry laboratories in the basement are equipped, a projection machine will be installed. Microscopic work will be done away with. The students will draw from the screen instead of from the microscope."

BUDGET CONCERT OF B.U. GLEE CLUB WAS BIG SUCCESS

Sings to Appreciative Audience That Demands An Encore For Every Number

EVENING IS ENHANCED WITH SOLO SELECTIONS

McCune Gives Fervid Readings. Horoschak's Banjo Playing Resembles Aged Organ

The Bucknell University Glee Club, under the direction of Ralph F. Hartz, gave its budget concert Monday evening, March 1, in the Lewisburg Baptist church. The fair-sized audience was in a receptive humor, and encores were demanded for each number of the program.

Presenting an excellent chorus group and also a group of soloists on a par with Bucknell's usual high standards, the club showed versatility and gave a novel entertainment. Edward Ramsdell's flute solo was worthy of generous applause. Alex Horoschak's imitation of an old country organ, by playing a banjo with a violin bow, so pleased the listeners that a second encore was necessary.

Chorus Opens Entertainment

The evening was opened with a chorus song. The first strain of "Come Bucknell Warriors" introduced an old favorite, Bullard's "Winter Song". Gilbert McCune "put across" in great style his introduction speech, and then followed with a reading, "That Old Sweetheart of Mine". Robert Dilwort pleased with his singing of Rodney's "The Clang of the Forge". His encore was "Me and My Little Banjo". Ramsdell's flute solos preceded chorus number, Stephen J. Foster's "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming".

Alex Horoschak next held forth in Krayon Kracks. "Meditation" from Thais and "Canzone" were Alton Roth's violin solos.

Dr. West Lends a Helping Hand

Dr. Raymond M. West delivered a short talk, after which an offering was taken. The program was then resumed with "On The Sea" by the chorus, following which was the "Old Country Organ Trio": Robert Dilworth sang "Mother Machree", "Annie Laurie" and "My Old Kentucky

Negative Debaters Meet Ursinus Next

The Bucknell men's negative debating team will meet the Ursinus men's affirmative team at eight o'clock Saturday night in Bucknell Hall, in its next to the last home debate of the season.

The Bucknell men's negative debating team will be composed of the same debaters who defeated Juniata and State College by the decisions of 2-1 and 3-0 respectively.

The affirmative team of Bucknell, which debated Ursinus a couple of weeks ago, reports that the Ursinus squad is unusually strong this year. The result should be a real debate with plenty of pep and a great deal of real spirit.

The Bucknell-Ursinus debate will be the last home contest before the Easter vacation.

Notice to Sociology Students

Dr. John Hope, president of Atlanta Baptist College, (Morehouse College), will speak before the Bucknell Sociological Society on Monday evening, March 8, at 8:15, in Bucknell Hall. All members of the sociology classes are expected to be present and to bring one or two interested friends. The subject is: "The Problem of being a Negro in the United States".

GRESS TALKS TO FARMERS

Dr. Ernest M. Gress, '07, state botanist for Pennsylvania, was scheduled to give a talk at the annual meeting of the Delaware County Agricultural Extension Association, on March 2, at the Brinton Lake Club, near Concordville. The topic selected was "Wild Flowers of Pennsylvania."

Rockwell To Assist In Language Survey

Will Help Examining Committee Find Best Teaching Methods

Professor Leo L. Rockwell has been requested to cooperate in the conduct of the modern foreign language study now being made by a committee of experts in order to determine the proper objectives and methods of foreign language instruction in this country. The wide scope and the present progress of the study are clearly shown in the letter received by Professor Rockwell from Professor Fife of Columbit, chairman of the investigation, a part of which follows:

"The committee on investigation of the study invites your cooperation in a matter of importance. For the past year basic statistical studies, including the enrolment of students and the training of teachers, have been in progress and researches into various problems involving the organization, content, and methods of the courses are under way. Further light will be thrown on these subjects by the administration of achievement tests in a number of centers of modern language instruction.

Mathematics Club To Be Reorganized

At the last regular meeting of the Bucknell chapter of Pi Mu Epsilon, national honorary mathematics fraternity, it was decided to reorganize the Bucknell Mathematics Club. The Bucknell Mathematics Club has been in existence for some years, but it has become desirable, now that Pi Mu Epsilon has been established on the campus, to alter the organization of the former.

The purpose of the Bucknell Mathematics Club shall be: (1) to provide for the University and general public regular programs in elementary mathematics of an expositional, historical, or recreational nature and (2) to provide general social activities in the Department of Mathematics.

The Mathematics Club will be quite informal in organization and in operation. There will be no officers and no dues. The only records kept will be those of attendance and of programs and they will be maintained by Pi Mu Epsilon officers. The program material and social entertainment and the conduct of the meetings will be provided by members of Pi Mu Epsilon. The general interests of the club will be supervised and administered by the director of Pi Mu Epsilon and by his appointees.

Membership for each academic year is available to any member of the University. Enrolment for the current year will be recorded upon indication to the chairman of any program meeting of the Mathematics Club of an individual's desire to join the club.

Each meeting will be announced in the Bucknellian, on the blackboards of the mathematics classrooms, and on two or more bulletin boards on the campus. It is the present intention of Pi Mu Epsilon to hold these meetings monthly throughout the academic year.

Tht first meeting of the Mathematics Club for this year will be held Monday, March 8, at 7:30 P. M. in Bucknell Hall. On this occasion selected slides of a recreational nature will be shown in illustration of the subject: Selected Topics From Elementary Mathematics. This entertainment will be in charge of H. S. Everett, director of Pi Mu Epsilon.

SOPH GIRLS GIVE DANCE ON WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Sixty-five couples whiled away the afternoon of Washington's Birthday, Monday, February 22, at a dance given by the girls of the sophomore class in the living-room of the Women's College.

A large, black, colonial hat was suspended from the ceiling in the center of the room, and from it were lung candy cherries. Punch and cakes were served. "Lew" Kesler, '28, was the pianist.

Mrs. Jennie D. Phillips chaperoned the dance.

HEART TROUBLE TAKES LONE SURVIVOR OF CLASS NEXT TO OLDEST ALUMNUS OF BUCKNELL

William Lyon Nesbit, '60, Sc. B., who belonged to the oldest class that still had a living representative, and who was, in point of age, next to the oldest alumnus of Bucknell University, died Saturday morning, February 27, in his home at East Lewisburg. He was in his eighty-fourth year.

He had been troubled with heart attacks for five or six years, suffering sinking spells on various occasions. For the past two weeks his condition was serious, and he was unconscious for several days before he died.

Funeral services were held at the

William Lyon Nesbit

Nesbit home in East Lewisburg at 1:30 on Monday afternoon, March 1. Burial was made in the Lewisburg cemetery.

He Was Born Near Lewisburg

Mr. Nesbit was born on the Nesbit farm, just opposite the old sugar camp half-way to Milton, on March 7, 1842. Had he lived eight days more, he would have been exactly eighty-five years old.

He completed his public school course in 1851 and entered the Randolph Academy, in Lewisburg, where he continued his attendance until the spring of 1856. In the fall of 1856, he transferred for one year to the Bucknell Academy, and in 1860 was graduated with the tenth Bucknell class, the last to graduate before the outbreak of the Civil War. He was a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

In 1863, Mr. Nesbit was appointed sergeant of Company D, Twenty-eighth Emergency Troops. He had previously been a member of the Third Pennsylvania Militia, in 1862.

Was Farmer and Legislator

Mr. Nesbit spent the greater part of his life in scientific farming. He moved to Tennessee for several years, but returned to Pennsylvania. Mr. Nesbit was a great student and reader; he studied law for a short time; and he was a frequent speaker before county institutes on "Scientific Farming." He was also a member of the Pennsylvania State Board of Agriculture for five years.

He served two terms in the State Legislature at Harrisburg, going there first in 1896 for two years and again in 1906 for another two-year period.

Mrs. Nesbit, who before marriage was Hannah Neagley of Dauphin County, died five years ago. Since that time, Mr. Nesbit's health had gradually failed until his fatal illness the past two weeks.

Five Children Survive Him

Three daughters, two sons, and one brother, survive. The daughters are: Mrs. Frank Moser, Inst., '90; Mrs. William Dreisbach, Lewisburg; and Helen Nesbit, employed in the state capital at Harrisburg. The sons: David, of New York, with the Westinghouse Company, and Fred, of Orange, N. J., in the electrical business. The sole surviving brother is David M. Nesbit, '62, Ph. B., of Washington, D. C.

Mr. Nesbit had the unique distinction of knowing five Bucknell presidents, Dr. Malcom, Dr. Loomis, Dr. Hill, Dr. Harris, and Dr. Hunt. In fact he was acquainted with all the Bucknell presidents, but he was in college as a student under the first two. He was the last survivor of his class. His brother, David M. Nesbit, '62, is also the last survivor of that class.

Professor Nelson F. Davis entertained the members of the Kratzer-Dull post of the American Legion in the Legion Hall on the evening of Tuesday, March 2, with a talk on old Lewisburg. The talk was illustrated with slides showing some of Dr. Davis' old photographs, of which he has such a notable collection.

The Legion members were greatly interested in the photographs showing the University in the early days. One picture, taken about 1860, showed the Hill with the trees all topped "in order that people could see the college building." That was Old Main, which, with the Academy, was the only structure then on the Hill.

Loomis Field as it was Another interesting view was that of Loomis Field, showing it as a lowlying, almost swampy depression, bordered by a high board fence on the east side. The field was rolling, rocky, and uneven. Just the same, the students played baseball there, and the first baseman was sometimes chosen for his agility in getting over the fence back of the base, in time to catch high flies.

Interesting, too, were the slides showing some of the Institute girls, with their long skirts, puffed sleeves, and hustles, and a contrasting view of present-day college girls of the sort that roll 'em.

Perhaps the picture that made the biggest hit of the evening was one of Dr. Davis himself, in his derby, showing him as he appeared not long after he became a member of the faculty.

$22.50 RICHMANS CLOTHES $22.50

Our representative will be at the Cameron House, Saturday, March 6 with a full line of suits, tuxedos, and o'coats. All wool, all one price. Sold under a strict guarantee of perfect satisfaction or money back.

Sophomore Cotillion Will Be On March 13

The first of the class dances for the year will be given on Saturday evening, March 13, at the Armory, when the sophomore class will do the honors for the college.

The time of the dance will be from eight to twelve.

The number of the tickets for the dance has been limited by the committee to one hundred and twenty and the price is set at $2.75. The tickets may be obtained from any of the members of the Cotillion Committee.

It is planned to have the Armory decorated with ballons in various colors while the walls, as is customary at the all-college dances, will be covered with the banners of the different fraternities of the college.

New Orchestra To Play

The Danceland Orchestra from Lancaster, Pa., an organization made up largely of students from Franklin and Marshall College, will furnish the music. Dean and Mrs. R. H. Riverburg, Dean Amelia E. Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Harris will be the chaperones.

The members of the committee, from whom tickets may be obtained, are the following: M. F. Fruhe Jr., chairman, N. Karmilowicz, P. V. Arow, S. C. Bruecher, D. L. Nicholson, D. E. Gring Jr., C. H. Drum, A. F. Buffington, R. R. Hitchens, O. E. Duenaler, S. P. Bernhaut, Yolanda Frank, Catharine Marshall, Elizabeth James, and Catharine Cunningham.

ATTENTION ENGINEERS!

In place of the regular monthly of the Big Four there will be an engineering smoker in the Tustin Gymnasium on March 11. A program of boxing, wrestling, and speeches will be given. Lots of good eats will be provided.

Don't forget March 11. All engineers be present.

Ministerials Preach In Sunbury's Prison

Trumpet Duet, Sermon, and Song Give Prisoners' Unusual Day

Morning worship in the Sunbury jail on Sunday, February 28, was conducted by Paul Webster, '27, Albert Shockells Jr., '27, Lewis Davis, '27, Harold Gamble, '27, Dwight Bahr, '28, and Clarence Cranford, '29, of the Ministerial Association.

Immediately upon the arrival of the group from Bucknell, the prisoners assembled in one of the wings, and the service began with the singing of a hymn. Cranford played the little church organ while Davis led the men in the singing of the hymns. The service continued with the invocation by Shockells, and another hymn.

Webster read the scripture lesson, making several comments as he progressed. Then Sheckells and Davis played a trumpet duet, which was followed by prayer by Bahr. An unusual feature of the service was the duet by the two trumpeters, augmented considerably by the singing of the other members of the group.

Gamble Talks About the Bible

Gamble then contributed his share to the success of the service by speaking on the topic, "The Bible as a Personal Book." He stressed the point that the Bible was open to all who

Here's Your Chance To Study Slide Rule

Professor Everett will begin a slide-rule class next Monday, March 8, for any and all students who want to learn to use a slide rule. The class will meet in the Observatory every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 10:00 to 10:50, the course to last two or three weeks. No tuition is charged. A similar course was offered by Professor Lindemann last semester.

Those who do not have a slide rule can manage with rules of the dollar variety, which are readily available.

This is a beginning class.

The slide rule can be used and is being increasingly used in business computations and in fields other than the traditional one of engineering.

This class is therefore open to all, A. B. students as well as engineering students.

At Monday's session, March 8 at 10:05 A. M. in the Observatory, selection of slide rules will be discussed.

A large demonstration slide rule hung on the wall will be used at the outset certainly and perhaps throughout the course. On this account the first few lessons could be attended with profit by those who are slightly interested but who do not intend to become too seriously involved.

The elementary operations of multiplication, division, involution, and evolution will be taken up first. Two weeks will probably suffice for these topics and for the use of the slide rule in connection with logarithms.

After so much is accomplished, the course may be considered complete for the rudiments of slide rule manipulation, and those who are pressed for time during this half hour generally devoted to inner satisfaction at Guy Payne's might call it enough and drop out. For the rest an additional two or three weeks will be arranged in order to take up the use of the slide rule in trigonometry, and also to consider special and more complicated forms of computation with a view toward simplest settings on the rule. This part of the work may appeal to students already acquainted with the slide rule. March 22 would be the time to begin this second part of the course.

Parent Teacher Association Gives Mrs. Wood A Necklace

In appreciation of her services to that organization, the Lewisburg Parent Teacher Association has just presented to Mrs. Joseph R. Wood a beautiful necklace of amethyst beads with a carved jade pendant. Mrs. Wood will leave Lewisburg soon to join her husband, Dr. Wood, who recently left the University to become pastor of the First Baptist Church of Reading. The church has just purchased a beautiful new parsonage and the Wood family will soon be at home in it.

BUCKNELL SCORES NOTABLE VICTORY OVER DICKINSON

Meets Old Time Rival in Debate; Bucknell Hall Well Filled; Decision Unanimous

VISITORS WELCOMED BY DEAN RIVENBURG

Negative Team Defeats State By Similar Decision To Win Eighth Annual Triangle

In its final home appearance for this season and before an audience that nearly filled Bucknell Hall, the Bucknell men's affirmative debating team won the unanimous decision of the judges over the Dickinson negative team, in Bucknell Hall, Friday evening, February 26. The subject of the debate was, "Resolved: That the United States should enter the League of Nations."

The Bucknell men, B. V. Miller, '27, J. G. Williams, '29, T. B. Drum, '26, and W. G. Snow, '28, alternate, proved themselves decidedly superior to the Dickinson debaters, H. G. Stutzman, F. Perry, W. Shissler, and R. M. Hill, alternate. The Dickinson men were unable to meet the clear-cut, well-defined contentions of the affirmative. Moreover, the Bucknell men successfully refuted every argument brought against them, with the exception of the point concerning the Monroe Doctrine. The Dickinson team did not refute a single argument, but resorted to the introduction of new material.

Miller Opens the Debate

Bruce Miller opened the debate and explained the imminent need for international legislation. He showed that the three previous types of international legislatures, namely, private international organizations, public international organizations, and the international conference system, were limited in their capacities and inadequate.

Stutzman, speaking first for Dickinson, said that the United States should not join the League of Nations because we would have to bind ourselves to harmful commitments. He went further to say that an economic boycott would result from such action. An economic boycott would kill the wheat markets of the United States. Drum, '26, refutesd this argument in

Swartz Gives Gavel From Historic Tree

Dr. James S. Swartz, the chairman of the Board of Trustees, has presented to the University a gavel made of wood of great historic interest.

Alexander Hamilton had what was then a remote country estate in the upper part of Manhattan Island. He brought from Mount Vernon, the estate of George Washington, thirteen linden trees and planted them at "The Grange" in memory of the thirteen colonies.

In recent years Dr. Swartz has been one of the trustees of this estate. The trees have become aged and dilapidated. Only recently they were removed. Dr. Swartz had this gavel made from the wood of one of the trees, and it has been placed in the library.

Phi Beta Kappa For Evolution

Phi Beta Kappa, the honor fraternity of scholars, has decided that it will not in the future establish new chapters in colleges which restrict liberty of thought and speech by such intolerant policies as forbidding the teaching of evolution.

POPULARITY CONTEST

The five leading contestants at 2:00 P. M. Wednesday:

Miss Anne F. Beaver

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI GAMMA DELTA

President Calvin Coolidge and many other prominent leaders in Phi Gamma Delta met recently in Washington D. C. for their annual conference. The Rev. Edwin A. Clattenburg, section chief, of Cynwyd, Pa., recently sent a photograph of those present at this conference to all the chapters in his district. Delta's copy of this photograph was framed at the Shields studio and may be seen in the window.

Brother "Cap" Reed was the guest of the chapter Friday evening at supper.

"Red" Brough was a guest at supper Saturday evening.

Bailey, Kenney, and Harvey, of the Catholic U. basketball team were guests at the chapter house Thursday and Friday.

This year the Cheney Efficiency Cup of Phi Gamma Delta must take the long trip from the state "where the tall corn grows" to the snow clad hills of New Hampshire. The coveted award was won this year by Delta Nu chapter at Dartmouth. Delta chapter at Bucknell won the trophy in 1918, the third year it was open for competition.

The seventy-eighth Ekklesia, or annual meeting, of all chapters of Phi Gamma Delta will be held this year at Colorado Springs. This year it is expected that the largest number of Phi Gams who have ever been collected in one spot will be present.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

The house held a "Vic" dance on the afternoon of Washington's Birthday. About twenty couples tripped the light fantastic to the music of Brothers Hitchens and Jack Gardner.

Marion Higgins, Alice Lambert, and Martha Pysher were dinner guests at the house on Washington's Birthday.

"Doug" Anderson, '27, was a guest at dinner on Thursday evening, February 25.

Brother Martz, '26, and Pledge Brothers Fredericks and Miller spent last week-end at their respective homes in Washingtonville, Lock Haven, and Williamsport. It is a rare week-end that finds "Bottles" Martz and "Rolly" Fredericks in town.

Brother Tom Umlauf, '29, visited the boys on Friday, February 26.

DELTA SIGMA

The pledgemen of the Delta Sigma fraternity were hosts at a smoker given to the pledgemen of the other Bucknell fraternities at the fraternity house last Friday evening. This smoker was attended by more than ninety Greek neophytes.

Twelve tables were available for those who wished to play cards, and "smokes" and "punch" constituted the refreshments. The "Demie" "vic" was over-worked providing music for the evening.

The Delta Sigma pledgemen who were the hosts for the evening were John Horter, Henry Fessler, Dares Hubbard, Philip Murray, Victor Meyer, Frederick Jacobs, Kenneth Rhone, and Geddes Simpson.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Delta Zeta of Lambda Chi Alpha announces with pleasure the pledging of Elmer Blaizis, '29.

The "Sem" dance held at the house Saturday evening, February 27, was pepped up by the rhythmic and invigorating strains of the Blue Band. The dance continued from eight to eleven and the striking of the last hour was the only disappointment of the evening. The chaperones were Miss Lawson and Mrs. Kennedy.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Professor and Mrs. H. T. Colestock were the guests of the chapter Monday evening, February 22.

The basketball team played the Watsontown big five recently, winning by a margin of twelve points. The team, under the captainey of Bill Marley, hasn't lost an out of town game. Next week the boys will meet Muncy.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Feaster, of Carneys Point, were guests of their son at the house Sunday.

A tea dance was held at the house Saturday afternoon. "Resl" Kesler and his orchestra furnished the music.

Iota is planning a "Sem" dance to be held March 12. Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders will furnish the music.

A formal farewell dance will be held just before the Easter vacation, on the evening of March 30.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

Nobbe and his Orchestra have been engaged to play for T. U. O's. last "Sem" dance of the semester on Friday evening, March 12.

Mrs. Thomas Angus, of Conemaugh, spent the past week-end visiting with her son, "Ted" Angus, '26.

The board of directors surprised the group with the installation of a new living room suite last Saturday. Two large chairs and a commodious divan make the front room quite attractive.

KAPPA GAMMA

The fraternity smoked cigars passed out by "Pat" Gillespie Tuesday, February 23. Pat said it was his birthday but the boys think there is something more to it.

BETA KAPPA

Eta of Beta Kappa is planning a "Sem" dance to be held in the Lewisburg club on the evening of March 20.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

The Gamma chapter of Phi Lambda Theta takes pleasure in announcing the pledging of C. C. Wandover, '27.

John Dinkloker of the Alpha chapter at State College spent several days during the week-end visiting brothers at the house.

PI BETA PHI

Pi Beta Phi entertained its pledges at a banquet at the Cameron House, Friday evening, February 26. Miss Eliza Martin acted as toastmistress. Toasts were given by Mrs. Joseph R. Wood, Maria Salisbury, Caryl Dutton, "Betty" James, and "Jerry" Brauch. Helen Steinhilper received the Pi Beta Phi bracelet for high scholarship.

Mrs. W. H. Coleman is entertaining the chapter at a series of teas on Tuesday afternoons. A number of the sophomores of the chapter were guests on Tuesday, February 23.

KAPPA DELTA

A fantasy, "The Maker of Dreams," was presented to the patronesses and Kappa Delta mothers by the Kappa Deltas on Friday evening, February 26, in the Women's College. The glowing fireplace and little supper table of a quaint old room on a winter's night, with the moon peeping in at the window, made up the setting.

Sally Meyers was just the one for the role of Pierrot, and Kitty Cunningham made a charming Pierrette. Edna Watson played the part of the Maker of Dreams. During the course of the evening, Edith Womer entertained with a piano solo. After the serving of refreshments, Edna Watson gave two vocal solos, "The Rose in the Bud," and "Me and My Little Banjo." Kitty Cunningham recited "The Death Disk," by Mark Twain, and the Kappa Delta quartet, composed of Edna Watson, Anne Outwater, Ruth Marion, and Edith Womer, gave several favorite songs.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Alpha Chi Omega celebrated its annual "Hera Day," March 1, by an appropriate ceremony at seven o'clock on Monday morning. The afternoon was spent in visiting the homes of aged, lonely, and invalided people in Lewisburg, and they were given flowers. Poor families were supplied with a little of the means for keeping body and soul together.

ZETA GAMMA TAU

Zeta Gamma Tau takes pleasure in announcing the initiation into active membership of Kathryn D. Hallier, '28, and Margaret E. Rhoades, '28.

An informal valentine dance was given at the Phi Kappa Psi house on Saturday evening, February 13. The decorations were in red and white. Gardner's Campus Serenaders furnished a dance-inspiring program. During the evening, some of the musicians became so zealous that they gave a lesson in calisthenics which was readily learned by the dancers. The chaperones for the evening were Mrs. George Sale and Miss Kathryn Clush. Several out of town guests attended the dance, among them were Mrs. Siner, Miss Fay Reschorman, and Miss Trina Hull from Shamokin.

The Zeta Gamma Tau sorority of Bucknell University was entertained by its patronesses at the home of Mrs. George Kunkel on Broore St., on Friday evening, February 19. Various forms of entertainment were enjoyed after dinner and all had a delightful time. The following patronesses were present: Mrs. Daniel Green, Mrs. Cameron Packer, Mrs. George Guyer, Mrs. F. B. Everitt, Mrs. Harry F. Babcock, Mrs. Weidenhamer, Mrs. Frederick, Mrs. House and Miss Hetzel.

PI MU EPSILON

The Bucknell chapter of Pi Mu Epsilon held its monthly open meeting last Wednesday evening in Old Main. Business matters disposed of, the mathematicians were entertained and instructed by a dissertation on "The Origin of Mathematical Symbols," by Katherine Gaventa, '27. Vice-director W. I. Miller presided.

Falling!

The time has come, the Semite says,
To fall for many things.
For shoes, and ice, and hard-wood floors
For men, and "college-kings."

* * * *

At least—everyone seems to have contracted that habit lately—say within the last few weeks.

* * * *

Even some of the faculty members have proved that they are not immune in this latest college activity.

* * * *

One of the fair daughters of Venus—at the "Sem"—knew who the Sunny Semite happened to be this week, and asked "What is the "Semite" talking about this week?"

* * * *

The reply being "Falling!"—the next remark was made in a sweet air of superb innocence.

* * * *

"Oh, I haven't fallen once this year."

A general shout followed—whereupon the dear child added—"Oh, I mean not on the ice!"

* * * *

We wonder! Why the distinction?

* * * *

But then, there have been other falls, too. As for a certain conference we've heard about—it seems there were more falls than the one taken by the presiding officer!

The whole delegation has barely escaped a "falling out" over two or three young persons attending said conference. It semis that falling was the usual form of diversion.

* * * *

The president could very well say—"All ye like sheep have gone astray"—for, like sheep—they followed the leader—!

* * * *

It has gotten to the place now where there's a cry of "Run, sheep, run" when the mail is being sorted.

* * * *

Sometimes the faces fall when the mail is finally sorted—but that's only an indication of how hard the owners fell in the first place.

* * * *

That modern writer who wrote the lines: "The harder you fall, the higher you bounce!" surely knows the "Semites."

* * * *

Some of them have been in the seventh heaven since conference time! Wonder how long it will take them to come down to earth?

* * * *

But the young lady who took the initial tumble of the week-end did a good job for the others—she gave the men a chance to show the fair Conference-ites how attentive and thoughtful they could be—

* * * *

Bright idea—all the girls plan to break something or other at the next conference—we hope it won't be their hearts! That doesn't need the same kind of assistance.

* * * *

Some of the people at the conference expressed a great feeling of responsibility—after the president's fall—

* * * *

They said they had the Conference on their hands—which they seemed to, certainly, quite a bit of the time! As long as they didn't fall down on the job it was a good way of carrying out the president and her orders.

* * * *

Even some of the men at the Conference show symptoms of having been affected.

* * * *

Which goes to prove that girls are not the only ones who should beware of pride and slippery places! Pride, you know, goeth before a fall—so do banana skins!

* * * *

The Hill is in itself a dangerous place these days—don't have to go to a conference, for that sort of amusement! It's plainly one of the easiest ways of meeting other people.

Come out of Biology building, turn the corner, and—

* * * *

Slide gracefully into some one's arms, or else fall for them at once!

* * * *

Dramatic situation! Quite patriotic also—know that poem?

* * * *

"Our father slipped upon the ice
Because he could not stand!
He saw the glorious Stars and Stripe
We saw our father land!"

* * * *

Don't fall—too hard!

FRATERNITY NOTES

The Delta Sigma fraternity has profitted by the industry of Alfred Parks during the last week. "Al" has been installing a radio set for the use of the brothers.

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity held a "Vic" dance at the house on Washington's Birthday. "Jack" Gardner, '26, and "Rolf" Hitchins, '28, took turns at the piano. "Doug" MacKenzie, '26, supplied the finishing touches.

Mrs. Jennie D. Phillips, Kathryn Smith, '27, Frances Saul, '29, Elizabeth James, '28, Mary Tyler, '29, Jane Foust, '29, Jean Wood, '29, and Goldena Guilford, '27, were guests at dinner at the "Demie" house Sunday, February 21.

Kappa Delta sorority broadcast a tuneful program from station WJRU Friday evening, February 19. Edna Watson, who officiated at the microphone, was a very charming announcer. "Kappa Delta Sweetheart" and "Kappa Delta Blues," two songs sung by the whole group, were especially pleasing to "listeners in."

Phiz: "Don't you just adore Kipling?"

Icks: "I dunno, how do you kipple?"

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

Pres. Lowell Interviewed After 17 Years' Silence

President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard recently broke a self-imposed silence long enough to confide to a Harvard alumnus, who is a newspaper man, that he had not spoken to the press for seventeen years.

"This practice has been a great comfort to me," continued President Lowell, who was staying at the home of Barrett Wendell, Jr.

"I have made it a rule never to be interviewed. I never have anything to say to newspaper men. I have followed this rule without a departure for seventeen years. I do not intend to depart from it now.

"Shall you speak to the Executive Committee of the Federation of Harvard Clubs when you lunch with the committee today?" asked the alumnus.

"Doubtful," said President Lowell.

"But you are going to make an address before the Harvard Club of Chicago tonight, are you not? As a member, I was led to hope so," said the interviewer.

"Well—in any case, I never speak to the press."

These words closed President Lowell's first newspaper interview.

Greenhorn Frosh Vanishing; Now A Man of the World

It comes as something of a shock to hear the freshman is disappearing at the University of Pennsylvania. That is to say, the "frosh." The greenhorn of the old days, the awkward newcomer, fresh from country lanes and haystacks and plowed fields, the dazed small-town chap with his thin carpetbag and few belongings—the freshman type—has departed along with the hick and the straw-chewing clodhopper with the thin whisp of whisker hanging from his chin.

The college freshman of the day, say the campus observers, is already a man of the world when matriculation day arrives. He has had ample schooling in the affairs of the world and knows what's what. No fears and diffidences and timidities fret and abash him. He has knocked about a good deal. The big world doesn't scare him. In short, there is nothing of the freshie about him, nothing of the bucolic simplicity amazed and terrified in the face of a world he has never seen before.

Students Once Sang Latin Lafayette Song Book Shows

Back in the good old days of "classical" courses in colleges, the boys even sang Latin songs instead of lighter popular ditties, if the Lafayette College song book of 1875 can be taken as a criterion. A copy of this book, the first published volume of Lafayette songs, was recently presented by Charles H. Moore, of New York City, to Dr. William S. Hall, clerk of the Lafayette College faculty. The book was edited by the Rev. Joseph W. Scroggs, now professor at the University of Oklahoma.

Only one of the Lafayette songs listed is still sung by Lafayette students. The others, including two in Latin, long since disappeared. The songs of but two other colleges, West Point and Lehigh, appear in the book. Among the popular songs of the day published in the book were various southern melodies, and "The Last Rose of Summer." Contained in the 104 pages of songs are a great number of original compositions by Lafayette students, including "The Ballad of the Last Ichyosaurus."

Lafayette To Banquet Prexy Who Served Eleven Years

An appreciation of his eleven years' service as president of Lafayette College, will be extended to Dr. John H. MacCracken, who recently resigned the presidency, at the annual banquet of the Lafayette College Alumni Association in Philadelphia to be held at six o'clock Friday evening, March 5, at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Speakers for the banquet will be: William C. Sproul, ex-governor of Pennsylvania; Noah H. Swayne, of Philadelphia; Dr. Wilmer Krusen, director of health and vice-president of Temple University; John A. McSparran, of Furnisi, Pa., master of the State Grange, and Dr. MacCracken.

Cat Collection Causes Complaint

The University of Florida has put a stop to the wholesale collection of cats by fraternity pledges in the process of initiation. This action is due to the numerous complaints that have come in from the different owners.

This year's freshman class at the University of Columbia are the youngest, tallest, and heaviest that have entered that institution in the past four years.

Herb McCracken to Teach Summer Football Coaching

Herb McCracken, former University of Pittsburgh star and present football coach at Lafayette college, has been secured to conduct the course for football coaches at Penn State this summer. In making the announcement, Director of Athletics Hugo Bezdek expressed the belief that McCracken would prove a capable teacher for the summer session work.

Coach Bezdek offered the first summer coaching course several years ago and established the class as a summer session feaure. Freshman coach B. M. Hermann has been in charge of the football work for the past two summers, but due to his teaching work in history will be unable to conduct the course this year. Track Coach Nate Cartmell will again take charge of the course for track mentors. Basketball and baseball will not be included in the course this year.

Upper Class Daily Chapel Abolished at Dubuque Univ.

Compulsory daily attendance at chapel for upper classmen was abolished at Dubuque University by a proclamation issued by President Karl F. Wettstone. He said compulsory chapel attendance, even in a denominational institution, "is a survival of former days which had little in common with present conditions."

"Too frequent enforced chapel attendance is bound to become a mere formality. Too much religion at home or at school in many cases is likely to bring about no religion at all."

Charleston Banned in Tyrol

You may still waltz to the strains of "The Blue Danube" along that beautiful stream, and you are permitted to tango anywhere in Austria, but you cannot Charleston in the Austrian Tyrol without incurring heavy penalties. The authorities of the Tyrolean resorts of Kufstein and Woergel have forbidden such modern dances under pain of heavy fines.

No Dance Held for 80 Years

Faculty members of Baldwin-Wallace College have voted to lift the ban on dancing that has prevailed at that institution since its founding 80 years ago. President Storms, although an opponent of student dances, says he will abide by the decision of his faculty.

Students Must Swim to Graduate

Every graduate of the University of Kansas must be able to swim at least 100 feet before he is given his degree. Other colleges making swimming a requisite for graduation are Cornell, Iowa, Rockford, Radcliffe, Syracuse, Cincinnati, Wisconsin, Wells, Western Reserve, and Wooster.

Wellesley Sanctions Smoking

Over 80 per cent. of the girls at Wellesley voted to have smoking sanctioned off the campus. The College Senate, composed of five faculty members and three students, refused the petition by a vote of 5 to 3.

W.S.G. Report Shows Work Of Association

Develops Honor And Citizenship In 3000 Secondary Schools

Irene Bell, '26, president of the Women's Student Government Association of the University has received a report from Miss Gail Burnett, secretary of the extension department of the Women's Intercollegiate Association of Student Government and the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government, cooperating in the work of introducing student government in the secondary schools of the states from which the colleges that have self government for women students draw their membership. The report shows a side of the work of the association of which the local student government is a branch that receives little consideration and is scarcely known to many of the students. A quotation of the report has been given to the Bucknellian and is printed here:

The Women's Intercollegiate Association of Student Government and the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government have recently created a distinct department for the extension of student participation in government in secondary schools. For several years the two associations did this kind of work independently. In the southern association a graduate advisor directed the colleges in carrying on this work, and in the eastern association a committee of college students did it. Then as the amount of work increased, the two associations realized that college students could not do this extension work efficiently on account of their many other conflicting duties. They, therefore, voted to employ a secretary whose whole time was to be devoted to extension work for both associations. Such a secretary was secured and her work began in the fall of 1925.

"Everyone always asks how the colleges happen to be doing such work for high schools. It came about in this way. College student government officials visualized how much freshman training would be simplified if the freshmen had experienced the advantages of student government in the high schools and preparatory schools from which they came. They felt that their efforts would be repaid, if, by helping secondary schools to develop such government, they would better prepare the oncoming college students for the responsibilities of self government there. It was not long, however, before the intercollegiate associations broadened their purpose in the extension work and saw the fine chance of helping secondary school students develop their sense of honor and good citizenship whether or not they ever attended a college.

"Since the territory in which the extension secretary was to work necessarily had to be limited in some way, it has been restricted to the states in which there is at least one college that is a member of the W. I. A. S. G. or the S. I. A. S. G. This makes in all, twenty-three states in which the work is carried on. It reaches more than 3000 secondary schools.

"The work of the department consists in gathering up information about student participation in government and relaying it on to secondary schools. It tries always to gain the co-operation of state educational officials before approaching the schools. It attempts, through correspondence, to interest principals, faculty, and students, and where specific help is needed, to give it. The department is not originating plans or proposing new schemes of government; it is rather making it possible foir the high schools that have worked out successful methods of government, to share their knowledge gained through experience, with thousands of other schools.

"It is a fine thing the college women of the South and East are doing to support such in undertaking. Their support, however, must not end with their college years, for it is when they are teachers and workers in the secondary schools that they must remember this extension work and personally help the students to take upon their shoulders their share of the privilege and responsibility of governing theirown school community."

Conference Discusses Projects Of Students

'How Wet is the U. of Michigan?' Is One College Question

Definite student projects are already under way in a good many colleges all across the country as a result of the Evanston Interdenominational Student Conference which met during the Christmas holidays. Reports of these projects were brought from every section of the United States to the first meeting of the continuation committee which recently was held in Columbus, Ohio.

Many of these student-directed undertakings related very definitely to the demand for church unity which was so persistently expressed at Evanston. Thus at Northwestern University the young people's societies in the Evanston churches are moving more closely together in a common use of the project method.

Recently a representative committee outlined an experimental program on the question, "What is your aim in life?" Students from various denominations undertook a wide survey of student and adult leaders, from Al Jolson down the line, to discover, if possible, a guide to their own thinking. The sessions at which the answers were discussed were livelier and more to the point than any meetings within the memory of these church groups.

A similar project is under way at the University of Michigan. A committee representative of all the young people's societies of Ann Arbor has worked out a common program. The first question that is to be raised by these groups is "How wet is the University of Michigan?" Student commissions are making a survey of Ann Arbor in an effort to gather data on which to base a discussion for that night.

A project of another sort is that at Ohio University at Athens, Ohio, where in a coal mining community, students, with the backing of the churches, have already set about the job of cooperating with the mining groups in night and week-end classes.

All the way from Massachusetts to Oregon reports have come of the wide spread and increasing interest in the proposals for projects of various sorts which were outlined at Evanston.

The continuation committee is helping to start five student commissions to head up project work in these various fields. Each of these comissions, although composed of students, will have the help of an expert adviser. The first commission is to undertake the investigation of the educational processes of the churches, particularly with reference to the way in which the facts are being broadcast, of how the church is already, in terms of definite cases, helping to build a new social order. The material for this survey will be gathered by students. The second commission is studying ways and means for church and student cooperation and relating itself to all the union projects already undertaken by the students themselves. There will be further commissions on students, and international relationships; church leadership in student communities, etc.

The continuation committee is seeking to correlate and conserve these various projects.

The Magazine Field

A well-established New York magazine dealing with politics, current events, art, literature, science has an opening for a man as private secretary. He should have a good knowledge of shorthand, but need not be a typist, the requirements stipulate. Experience on a college publication would be a distinct advantage. The position requires a man who is well read. The initial salary is $40 a week.

Opportunity is offered by a New York company that deals in shellac and varnish gums and China nut oil to take charge of their branch in the Congo. It plans to give the man a thorough knowledge of the business in six months before sending him out, and is interested only in exceptional men who would be willing to pass more than two years in the Congo. Besides a substantial salary, it pays traveling expenses from New York and return, a living allowance in the Congo, and furnishes living quarters.

A motor car company in Cleveland offers a training course for technical apprentices who have studied electrical, industrial, or mechanical engineering. This company has an unusually fine record for satisfactory and rapid development of technical college graduates. Several Yale men recently placed with this company are enthusiastic about the opportunities. Men who have had records in engineering courses are especially desirable. The initial salary is $125 a month.

Professor C. R. Johnson, has been suffering from a very heavy cold for nearly ten days. He has been unable to meet his classes. At the beginning of the week he went to Atlantic City, hoping that the milder air and a complete rest would speedily cure him. Mrs. Johnson reports that the little vacation is proving successful in this respect.

Lybarger, '28, Winner In Elimination Trials

Lee Francis Lybarger, Jr., '28, was the winner in the elimination trials for the oratorical contest of the Eastern Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Oratorical Union, held in Bucknell Hall, Tuesday evening, March 2. His theme was "Organizing the World for Peace," and was admirably presented in a vigorous, oratorical strain.

Three other contestants participated in the try-outs, speaking on topics of diversified content. They were: Thomas D. Williams, '29—"Our Constitution"; Albert Cooley, '28—"Forest Conservation"; Leon Bird, '27,—"Compulsory Chapel."

The judges were Dean Rivenburg, Professor George B. Lawson, and Professor Roy F. Howes.

The orators were greatly handicapped by the fact that they had to face an empty hall. Aside from the judge's the audience did not exceed fifteen in number.

PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION ENTERTAINS GRADE PUPILS

The South Ward Parent Teacher Association entertained the grade students of the South Ward school in the Tustin Gymnasium on the afternoon of Tuesday, March 2, at a colonial tea party. The children themselves provided most of the entertainment, such as reading and music. They also enjoyed romping and dancing games. But the best part of the program came from the grown-ups. It consisted of ice cream and cakes.

One of the children from the second grade volunteered to report the affair for the Bucknellian. "I don't know how they chose the gym," said our young reporter, "but I kind of got a hint how they got it. There's a little Eling boy in our school. His real name is Cutie, I think, but we all call him Donald. His father owns the gym, and I think that's how they came to get it."

Pagan, Radical, Conformist, All Classified By Dr. Fitch

Unlike ancient Gaul, the student body is divided into five parts, the young radicals, young pagans, young conformists, young humanitarians, and new scientific humanitarians. This demarkation was made by Dr. Albert Parker Fitch, professor of history of religion at Carleton College. Dr. Fitch gained some of his knowledge of college youth as chairman of the Evanston Conference, which he described as "high-hearted, generous, confused, inherently conservative . . . a group which if it had showed as much intellectual conscience as moral conscience would have done wonders."

The "young radicals" Dr. Fitch says, "are trying to get at the roots of things." They have "an unconscious dogmatism that leads them into a new kind of orthodoxy, but that is better than the vulgarity of the pagans."

Of the "young pagans" Dr. Fitch says, they are our "most serious problem. They are noted for their muscular brawn and their intellectual lunacy. Their language is painful, profane, and frequent." These pagans are vivacious, sentimental, vulgar and Babbittish.

To complete the definitions, the young conformists are the products of a past pioneer and small town generation; the young humanitarians of the Victorian enthusiasm over mechanical invention and scientific discovery. They are being superseded by the new scientific humanitarians who stake their hopes on the social sciences.

Collegiate Teacher's Pet is Named "Apple Polisher"

Enter: the "apple polisher." He is the man who lingers lovingly about the classroom whence all but the professor have fled. If the professor's hobby is free trade, he attempts to make conversation on that subject. If it is golf, the "apple polisher" talks golf. All his blandishments are to the purpose of increasing his prestige and, incidentally, his grades. At Stanford University, Calif., this business of impressing the professor brought on a reaction; it was even rumored that official action would be taken against the polishers. Sincere students are deterred from asking honest questions and from honest fraternalization with the faculty. But the latest news from the faculty is that no action is contemplated against the polishers, also that "a professor with brains can tell an 'apple polisher' in a minute."

Antenna of super-power transmitter

The World's Loudest Voice

On the rolling plains of South Schenectady, in several scattered buildings, is a vast laboratory for studying radio broadcasting problems. Gathered here are many kinds and sizes of transmitters, from the short-wave and low-power sets to the giant super-power unit with a 50- to 250-kilowatt voice.

Super-power and simultaneous broadcasting on several wave lengths from the same station are among the startling later-day developments in radio. And even with hundreds of broadcasting stations daily on the air throughout the land, these latest developments stand for still better service to millions of listeners.

Only five years old, yet radio broadcasting has developed from a laboratory experiment into a mighty industry. And alert, keen young men have reaped the rewards.

But history repeats itself. Other electrical developments will continue to appear. And it will be the college man, with broad vision and trained mind, who will be ready to serve and succeed.

From the studio of WGY in Schenectady, six miles from the developmental station, there may be controlled a great number of transmitters, one of which is the first super-power transmitter in the world. WGY, together with its associates, KOA of Denver and KGO of Oakland, is the General Electric Company's assurance to the American public that radio broadcasting shall be maintained upon the highest standards.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

BUCKNELL TUMBLES CATHOLIC CAGERS FROM THEIR PERCH

Though Minus Services of Bach, Bisons Play Rattling Game And Win By 36-27

FIVE-MAN DEFENSE PROVES SUCCESSFUL

Large Crowd Fills Tustin Gym To Witness Final Contest In Season's Schedule

Tumbling the team that defeated Princeton 37-25, and Duquesne, the initial conquerors of Navy, the Bucknell varsity quintet Thursday night outscored the visiting Catholic University five 36-27. This was the unexpected as Bucknell was without the services of "Slim" Bach, stellar varsity center. Kirker, substitute pivotman, played an excellent game on the defense in filling the shoes of Bach.

McCaskey as high scorer and Captain Rigg on the defense played excellent basketball. Murphy was in his usual form but could not locate the basket until the second period. Beasor, substitute forward, starting his first varsity game was entirely at home on the floor, his coolness in the passing game being excellent.

Bison Defense very Effective

Before the game the visitors from the Capitol City were favored to defeat Coach "Mal" Musser's proteges. Their showing was good but they were unable to penetrate the five-man defense of the "Bisons" until the second half was well under way—and then it was too late. In the first half the visitors scored only nine points, and only four of those by way of the field goal route.

Opening the game with a goal in less than half a minute the "Bisons" got away with a flying start. Four more field goals were shot in rapid succession before the Catholic U. quintet could break into the scoring column. Beasor dropped two long field goals through the mesh and Rigg scored from beyond mid-floor with a beautiful "swisher" before the first half was ended. McCaskey tallied four times in this scoring orgy of the "Bisons." The five-man defense worked sufficiently well to hold the visitors to a meagre pair of field goals this half. The score at half time was 18-9.

Bucknell Plays Safe

Starting the second period with the same line up "Mal" Musser brought his cagers from the dressing room with instructions to keep up their defensive game. Harvey, high scorer for the Catholic U., opened this period with a side floor shot which was immediately matched by Kirker. Captain Rigg again posed for one of his long ones from beyond mid-floor and counted another brace of points for his team. Harvey and O'Donnel for the visitors, and Murphy for the home club were the high scorers from the floor this half. With the score at 32-20, Hitchens and McCormick replaced Beasor and McCaskey. In the closing moments of the game the "Bisons" played cautiously on the defense allowing the visitors only seven points to complete their scoring. One lone foul by Murphy closed the game 36-27 in a whirlwind of triumph for the 1926 Bucknell cage team in its last appearance in Tustin Gymnasium. An excellent crowd that packed all available seats witnessed the final varsity home game of the season.

Frosh Wallop Sophs In Hard-Fought Game

The pre-game dope ran true to form last Saturday afternoon, February 27, in the traditional Frosh-Soph basketball game, which the yearlings won by the score of 48 to 31.

The sophomores, however, played snappily and held the freshmen to a closer score than had been generally expected, for the yearling combination has been organized and practicing all year and, as we all know, is composed of rangy lads who pass adeptly overhead.

The freshmen ran up a six-point lead before the sophomores were able to locate the rim, but the latter rallied and for the major portion of the first half the score seesawed. Then the frosh again spurted and led 21 to 10 at half time.

Between the halves "Red" Wall, the flaming terror from Texas, led his freshmen cohorts, who were massed on that side of the gym nearer the railroad, in a snake parade, which was soon attacked by the sophomores grouped upon the opposite bleachers. The sophomores had a larger number of supporters than usual but the frosh still held an overwhelming superiority in numbers. After two clashes the Bucknell pacifists, Wilsbach, Stephens, and Kirker succeeded in quelling the near riot.

Klosterman, Woodring, and Seiler formed the scoring machine around which the work of the freshmen centered. Frable, McCormick, and Marley were the stars of the sophomore combination. The score follows:

Delta Sigma Braces; Wins From Kappa Sig

Delta Sigma broke its losing streak Tuesday evening, February 23, when it trimmed the Kappa Sigma quintet 30-17. The game was a hard battle from start to finish.

"Doug" Haviland, playing a guard position, was high scorer for the winners, whipping the net on five occasions. Frable and Cortes also played a nice game for the Delta Sigma team Pierce was the real star of the evening, however, with six field goals. Most of his shots were arched from the middle of the court.

Sigma Chis Smash Phi Lambda Theta

The Sigma Chi combination continued its heavy scoring last Wednesday night, gaining a 44-7 victory over the Phi Lambda Theta passers—its fourth win out of as many starts.

Fritzinger led the attack of the "Sigs" with eighteen points, netting seven field goals and four converted fouls in as many trials. Neal Blaisdell registered four times from the court and scored one free throw. The Sigma Chi team used nine men in the game.

Ellzey was responsible for four of the seven points scored by his team Bachman and Bernhaut played good guarding games.

Uncle Sam Needs Help; Examination In May

The United States civil service commission announces an open competitive examination.

Receipt of applications will close May 1. The date for assembling of competitors will be stated on the admission cards sent applicants after the close of receipt of applications.

The examination is to fill vacancies in the Federal classified service throughout the United States, including the Departmental Service, Washington, D. C., and the Forest Products Laboratory of the Forest Service, Madison, Wis.

The entrance salary in the District of Columbia is $1,800 a year. After the probational period required by the civil service act and rules, advancement in pay without material change in duties may be made to higher rates within the pay range for the grade, up to a maximum of $2,400 a year. Promotion to higher grades may be made in accordance with the civil service rules as vacancies occur.

Examination will be given in the optional subjects of advanced inorganic chemistry, analytical chemistry, organic chemistry, and physical chemistry.

Competitors will be rated on general chemistry, elementary physics, and the optional subject chosen.

Work is Quite Varied

The work of the chemical bureaus in Washington, D. C., covers a wide field embracing chemistry, chemical engineering, and industrial technology, and many problems arise in connection with the work of standardization, regulation, and investigative research, offering splendid opportunity for valuable experience in the lines referred to.

The chemical work of the Forest Products Laboratory at Madison, Wis., includes investigations and research of all kinds connected with the technology of wood products, including wood preservation and hydrolysis. The chances for advancement in the Forest Products Laboratory are good for those who prove capable, and here also experience is considered excellent training for scientific work in industrial research.

Full information and application blanks may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Decorate yourself with the degree of P. A.

THAT means "Pipa Amoroso" in the Latin, or "pipe-lover" in plain campus English. P. A. has certainly endeared a pipe to more men than any other letters in the smoke-alphabet. Because Prince Albert lets a fellow smoke all he wants to—and makes him want to!

Cool as the stare of a marble Venus. Sweet as the approach of vacation. Fragrant as spring blossoms. Think up your own similes, Fellows. You will when you pick P. A. and a jimmy-pipe for permanent roommates. Prince Albert is great tobacco, and that's not blah.

Get yourself a tidy red tin of Prince Albert today. Fill the bowl of that old jimmy-pipe to the brim and borrow a match. Then you're set for some great smoke-sessions, as sure as you're a foot high.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

* * * *

Kathryn Kimble, '23, of Vineland, N. J., has announced her engagement to Joseph D. Eno, also of Vineland. Miss Kimble has been teaching algebra in the High school since her graduation from Bucknell.

* * * *

"Johnny" Peifer, '27, and "Red" Weckerly, '27, reported good luck on their hike to Dubois, February 19. After being stranded in Paddy's Mountain for several hours, they were picked up at 5 P. M., and arrived home at 9 P. M.

* * * *

Professor Charles M. Bond entered his classroom on Tuesday, February 23, and drew from his brief case two pie tins. The students in attendance thought a new course in home economics was about to begin, but the professor merely used the pie tins for an object lesson, and declared that anyone interested in literary production might write a dessertation on the contents of a pedagogue's portfolio.

Earl Flesher, ex-'29, is now working in a grocery store in Mount Carmel.

* * * *

W. Harold Sloan, '26, preached in Johnson City, Pa., on Sunday, February 21.

* * * *

John Farrow, '26, spent the week-end, 19-22, at his home in Haddonfield, New Jersey.

* * * *

George Walker, '27, was the guest of John Gittins, '28, at his home in Kingston over the Week-end.

* * * *

C. W. Cranford, '29, was the guest of "Abe" Sheckells, '26, at the latter's home in Harrisburg, Pa.

* * * *

Roy Goodlander, '29, has purchased a typewriter. Roy is slowly but surely learning to poke the darn thing.

* * * *

Betty Davis, '28, and Mary Foust, '27, spent the recent holiday in Carbondale visiting Lois Lee and her family.

* * * *

Isabelle Smith, '26, gave a very interesting bridge party Monday evening, February 22, in the "Alcove" in New building.

* * * *

J. Charles Phillips, '28, John Gittins '28, and Albert Brenner, '28, spent the week-end, February 19-22, at home in Kingston, Pa.

* * * *

* * * *

D. M. Patterson, '26, David L. Fell, '29, James Kerwan, '29, "Al" Conklin, '26, and James Hurley, '28, visited their homes in Elmira, N. Y.

* * * *

"Red" Mackenzie, ex-'25, was a visitor at the formal "Sem" dance held at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house on Saturday evening, February 20.

* * * *

Irvin Hoch, '29, visited his parents at Oil City, Pa., during vacation. He left Friday, February 19, and returned Tuesday in time for classes.

* * * *

The sophomore girls gave a tea dance at the Women's College the afternoon of Washington's Birthday. Lew Kesler furnished the music.

* * * *

Mrs. Wilfred W. Wilcox returned last Wednesday to take up her work after spending a week's vacation with her husband, Mr. W. W. Wilcox, '25.

* * * *

Freshmen have petitioned Professor H. T. Colestock of the history department to name Washington as the great emancipator. They all think he was.

* * * *

Miss Charlotte Armstrong, violin instructor in the School of Music, slipped and fell on the ice on Market St., Wednesday afternoon, February 24, and injured herself.

* * * *

"Betty" Hettinger, '28, spent Saturday, February 20, in Trenton, attending a session of the New Jersey Assembly, of which her father, Henry A. Hettinger, is a member.

* * * *

Miriam Stanger, '24, spent the recent holiday with her Tri-delt sisters.

Chef Moore at Women's College has recovered from a recent illness and is now regularly attending his duties.

* * * *

"Dusty" Darkes, '27, and Willard R. Hetler, '27, had their first free train ride from Milton to Lewisburg on Sunday night when they came down on the excursion train going to Philadelphia.

* * * *

Kenneth Moyle, '27, forgot his radio long enough to dash home in his "Golden Chariot" during the week-end. "Ken's" home is sometimes in Lacyville, Pa., and sometimes in Brooklyn, N. Y.

* * * *

"Bunny" Learn, '26, while essaying to slide down the steep hill path on the slippery Thursday of February 25, took a flying dive into the ditch paralelling the path. Yes—the ditch was full of water.

* * * *

"Milt" Endres, '27, spent the week-end of Washington's Birthday at his home in Seaside Heights, N. J., and in other places. "Milt" reports a couple of sleepless nights, but looks none the worse for wear.

* * * *

Professor H. S. Everett and Robert Smink, '26, gave an illustrated lecture on "Selected Topics in Elementary Mathematics" during assembly period at the Milton High School, Thursday morning, February 25. Professor Everett gave the lecture and Smink

William B. Brown, '28, spent the week-end at his home in Pitman, N. J.

* * * *

Guy Bailey, '26, spent the Washington's Birthday week-end in Buffalo, N. Y.

* * * *

Al Conklin visited the Bethlehem Steel Works at Bethlehem during the week-end.

* * * *

Harry Spranca, ex-'26, is now attending Susquehanna University at Selinsgrove.

* * * *

Edwin Valentine, '26, spent the week-end, February 19-21, at his home in Jersey City, N. J.

* * * *

Rolland M. Campbell, ex-'26, spent some time at the Beta Kappa house during the week-end.

* * * *

"Jim" Hurley, '28, is complaining of the four hours rest he had during his three-day stay at home.

* * * *

Helen Thomson, '27, spent Washington's Birthday at the home of Catherine Frederick, '26, in Harrisburg.

* * * *

Harriet Smull, '28, went to her home at Mackeyville, Pa., last Thursday and returned to college Sunday evening.

* * * *

Ross Ormsby, '27, visited his father Frederick R. Ormsby, at his home in Akron, Ohio, over the week-end of February 20.

* * * *

"Hill" Knoll, '28, "bummed" to his home in Nanticoke on Saturday, February 20, and remained there over Washington's Birthday.

* * * *

Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders journeyed to Bellefonte Friday evening to play for the Bellefonte Academy's initial football prom.

* * * *

WJBU, radio station of Bucknell University, received word by telegram that its program was being received nicely in Philadelphia, Saturday evening, February 20.

* * * *

F. J. Bailey, M. S. Davies, W. H. Browne, all of the senior class, Elmer Dietz, '27, and Arthur Harris, '29, went to Philadelphia on the excursion Sunday evening, February 21.

* * * *

Dedicated as a lasting monument to the memory of Matty, the Christy Mathewson playground for children at St. Petersburg, Florida, will soon celebrate its first anniversary.

* * * *

Prof. C. R. Johnson has been quite ill since Washington's Birthday and has been unable to meet his classes. On Monday, March 1, he was taken to the Geisinger Hospital, suffering with pleuro-pneumonia.

* * * *

Many Bucknell students have aided in the holding of weekly church nights at the Reformed church every Wednesday evening. These events include suppers and prayer meetings as well as other special features.

* * * *

Howard Thomas, '25, brother of Martha Thomas, '28, of Lewisburg, was confined to his home with grip several days last week. He returned to Bellefonte Academy where he is teaching biology and French, Thursday afternoon.

* * * *

"Hetty" Harmon, '25, paid a visit to Bucknell on Wednesday, February 24. "Betty" is teaching at Hampton Bays, Long Island, and was given a short vacation because of an epidemic in Hampton Bays that necessitated the closing of the schools.

* * * *

"Norm" Thorn, '26, is WJBU's crack sports announcer. "Norm" gives an accurate play-by-play account of the basketball games and keeps the listeners entertained at half-time with a running fire of comment. Keep up the good work, "Norm."

* * * *

George Fritzinger, '26, was the referee in a basketball game between the Milton and South Williamsport high schools on the night of February 19 in Milton. The exhibition of good judgment on the part of "Fritz" was the only bright spot of the game.

* * * *

Richard L. Horter, '26, made the most of Washington's Birthday and the consequent absence of classes by taking a flying trip to his home in Painted Post, N. Y. He evidently discovered that a one-way hike was sufficient, for he "rode the cushions" on the return trip.

* * * *

"On the morrow they returned sadder but wiser men" applies to about a score of Bucknell students who took the excursion to the city of "Brotherly Love" on Washington's Birthday. "Quarante hommes et huit chevaux" may be a good French expression, but when it comes to real cattle trains that excursion on Washington's Birthday had them all stopped.

* * * *

gave the illustrations by means of the projecting machine.

* * * *

"Phil" Murray, '29, journeyed to his home at Staten Island, N. Y., for the week-end of February 20. While at home Murray took a civil service examination for postal service during the summer vacation period.

* * * *

"Ted" Mitchell leaped too high in the Freshmen-Susquehanna Junior Varsity game on Monday afternoon, February 22, and turned his right ankle, necessitating his withdrawal from the game. "Ted" will be incapacited for several weeks with a severe sprain.

* * * *

Don Swartz, '29, did valiant work to help clean up a freight tie-up in the Trenton yards during the Washington's Birthday recess. Don was called out by the railroad company when he returned from college, and he took his turn in the locomotives, earning about $30 in a few days.

* * * *

The Reverend R. M. West gave a short talk at the concert given at the Baptist Church Tuesday evening. He emphasized the importance of effective use of the hands as an important factor in the education in the home. He said that his mother used this well-known method and supplemented her hand with a slipper.

* * * *

When Gordon Thorn, '26, awoke on Sunday morning, February 21, he discovered that he had eight minutes to catch the 10:30 train on which he was supposed to go to his home in Montgomery. "Jake" didn't allow any grass to grow under his feet and succeeded in catching the train. One reason was that it was not on time.

* * * *

Two more "Semites" succumbed to the lure of bobbed hair, when Dorothy Gilbert, '27, and Pauline Shepson, '28, returned to school with shorn locks. Dorothy had hers done while attending the Student Volunteer Conference at Hicksinson, and Pauline had hers done during her visit to her home in Sayre, during the week-end of Washington's Birthday.

* * * *

The Y. M. C. A. at Williamsport claims "Henny" Fessler, '29, every Saturday evening. Fessler plays basketball with the Memorial Baptist team of the Williamsport "Y" Sunday School league, a team which is putting in a strong bid for the league leadership. His teammates count on his ability to score from Bucknell every Saturday.

* * * *

Mary A. Fritz, '28, has a signed news story in the Lewisburg Journal for February 26, in which she reported the girls' debate with Ursinus College. This was assigned work in news writing. Other members of the class whose work has been published in the town papers this semester are: Albert E. Brenner, Amanda Brown, Harry H. Pierson, and Miriam Stage.

* * * *

Mr. F. M. Britton, has been made general superintendent of the University Print Shop, where the Bucknellian is published. Mr. Britton is a printer of many years experience who for several years was employed by the Curtis Publishing Company in the production of The Ladies Home Journal and worked independently for 19 years in his own shop.

* * * *

"Vic" Meyer, '29, claims the biggest feet and the rosiest complexion of any man in the glee club. On the recent trip of the club to Danville, Meyer's feet became tangled up while he was mounting the platform just before the opening number of the concert with the result that he met the floor rather unceremoniously. Fortunately several other members of the club were between him and the audience and his "school girl complexion" was unnoticed.

* * * *

John D. Budd, '26, spent four days last week at his home in Budd Lake, N. J.

* * * *

Gilbert McCune, '27, Paul Stolz, '28, Robert Dilworth, '27, and Philip Murray, '29, were the entertainers at a smoker held by the F. G. F. club of Milton, February 26.

McCune featured with several novelty readings, Stolz played violin selections, and Dilworth delighted the audience with his vocal numbers. Murray, the accompanist, played a piano solo.

* * * *

George Washington's hatchet cut the fetters of "Frosh Rules" in two, and the men of '29 feel like human beings once more, no longer slaves of tradition. There is a noticeable increase in the length of the "waiting line" at the Women's College, the "Sem" parlors are more crowded than usual, and at Wainie's and The Purity freshman "fussers" are in the majority. Apparently the chains of slavery aren't broken—they're merely exchanged for the fetters of feminine wiles. Men must be slaves!

Two Students Disturb Peace But Women See Justification

"My, my, my, what a commotion," exclaimed two elderly women as a couple of college students sauntered around the corner at University avenue and St. George street. The young men were not able to catch any other fragments of the conversation.

The men who had caused the disturbance were Dwight Bahr, '28, and "Lew" Davis, '27. They were just approaching the corner when one of Bahr's feet went east, and the other started west. Of course the result was humorous, and "Lew" had to pick up his friend. While they were enjoying a hearty laugh, the women appeared with their joy-killing remarks.

Alumni Notes

Jonas Hoff Grater, '72

Jonas Hoff Grater, '72, died of pneumonia at his home in Norristown on February 24. He was 81 years of age. Funeral services were held on March first.

Mr. Grater was a member of one of the old families in this state. His forefathers settled at Grater's Ford, on the Perkiomen Creek, in the middle of the seventeenth century.

The deceased was graduated with the A. B. degree from Bucknell, then the University at Lewisburg, with the class of 1872. Later he got the M. A. degree. He was affectionately known by his classmates as "Zeke." He was a good student, and after leaving the University studied law in the office of Judge F. Carroll Brewster. After being admitted to the bar, he formed a partnership with S. E. Cavin and practiced law in Philadelphia. During the Civil War he fought as a private soldier.

Mr. Grater's wife was Emma Kaufman, Inst., '72, of Forest Iron Works, Pa. She died years ago. Mr. Grater is survived by one brother, John Grater, of Philadelphia, and one sister, Mrs. Foss, of Norristown.

The class with which Mr. Grater graduated had twenty-one members. At its fiftieth reunion, in 1922, the class numbered eleven, and the entire eleven came back to the meeting. Several members of the class have died since then, and Mr. Grater's death leaves but six still living.

Raymond M. West, '89

The Rev. Dr. Raymond M. West, '89, pastor of our local Baptist church and trustee of the University, spoke to the young people of the Williamsport Baptist Church, on Friday, February 26, on the subject "Youth." J. E. Nancarrow, '16, who teaches in the Williamsport High School, instructs one of the Bible classes of the church that attended the evening's entertainment. Mr. Alice Hughes told several delightful stories and there was music. The program ended with a cafeteria lunch in the church dining room. More than 200 persons were present.

Mrs. Joseph R. Wood, '94

Mrs. Joseph R. Wood, (Eliza Bell, '94,) went to Reading on Wednesday, February 24, to address the Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church, of which her husband has recently become pastor.

The church purchased a beautiful residence, during her visit, which is to become the Baptist parsonage. This will be the future home of the Wood family. It will be put in condition at once for their occupancy.

Charles F. Lindig, '24

Charles Frederick Lindig, '24, has secured a position on the staff of the Harrisburg Patriot. With Mr. Lindig's addition to the staff, four Bucknell graduates are now employed on the paper. These are: Will Carleton Sprout, '08, Managing editor; Walter D. Roos, '20, political writer; Miss Minnie I. Etzweiler, '14; and Charles F. Lindig, '24.

Jefferson Sangston, '24

Jefferson Sangston, '24, is now attending the Law School of the University of Arizona, at Tuscon, Arizona. "Jeff" attended the Law School at the University of Pittsburgh for a year and a half, but this past Christmas vacation he journeyed to Tuscon to carry on his study. This summer he expects to take work at the Leland Stanford University Law School.

O. B. Dickinson, '77

Judge O. B. Dickinson, '77, who ordered the restoration of about $500,000 worth of property to Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, praised her for her "unswerving love and loyalty for her draft-dodger son," but criticized her as a foolish mother for the efforts she put forth to save her son, Grover C. Bergdoll, from capture and prison.

J. Wallace Foster, '25

J. Wallace Foster, '25, is now teaching history in the Vandergrift High School, Vandergrift, Pennsylvania.

In Spring Young Man's Fancy May Be Reason For The Slip

Guy Bensor, '28, must have something on his mind. "Guy" was practicing basketball the other afternoon, and after the work-out, went down stairs, took a shower, dressed himself, and started to his room. As he walked happily along the path, he was rudely awakened by a running and shouting individual. This person was trying to impress some fact on him as to his mental ability. "Guy" caught the word salt and looked quickly at the one he was wearing. Sheepishly, he started back for the gym. He had put on some one else's apparel.

Who's Who at B.U.

A tiny bit of humanity with dancing eyes and ever-smiling lips—that's our "Floss," of the class of '26. This little maid occupies an important place on the Bucknell campus that a person many times her size would have difficulty in filling. "Floss" consists of more than attractive appearance and magnetic personality for springing from extreme individuality we find an ability to lead where others follow.

Upon entering Bucknell, "Floss" turned her attention to dramatics, and proved her talent along this line. She became a member of Frill and Frown, taking prominent parts in its productions, and is serving as vice-president of the organization in her senior year. Of the four bids to Theta Alpha Phi issued at Bucknell in 1925, "Floss" was one of the girls chosen for the national dramatic sorority. "Floss" has been a member of the Girls' Glee Club during her four years at college, and was its secretary-treasurer in her junior year. Her contribution of business ability was not less great than that of musical ability.

Florence Utt

The Sophomore Cotillion found the name Florence Rebecca Utt listed as a member of the committee. Again this name appeared in 1925 on the list of members of the L'Agenda Staff. The same year, "Floss" represented Phi Mu sorority in the Pan-Hellenic Council, and is now secretary to the Council. Each Monday night finds "Floss" sitting in judgment with the other grave—or should we say sleepy —members of the Student Executive Board. And too, it is she who keeps the Wolfe House girls in order as their president.

Take Warning! Ye Gamblers; Don't Consent to Blind Dates

"Wasn't she a dream?", queried one of two brethren following a recent fraternity dance. The unhappy escort of the dream, who had just entered, replied, "Right, nothing less than a nightmare." He related how he had given away nine dances, "swiped" a tenth, sat out two more, and "tripped" his way through a part of each of the remaining two. One of the other nine victims, the other member of the trio, was quizzed on his opinion of the fair lady in question. Without a moment's hesitation, he burst into raptures—even forgetting his English—and chirped ecstatically, "Oh boy, she danced like she never danced before,"—and she never had!

Hence record, scribe, another dismal failure of ye blind date. Wherein lies the attraction in this form of fallacious fussing? Is it the thrill of the unknown, the "call of the wild," the opportunity to play with Fate, that malicious gambler? Once in a student generation we hear of a "dark horse" that has been "dragged" successfully, but how often—Oh, how often!—do we see some disappointed fusser fuming and fretting in futile folly over a date that wasn't at all it had been cracked up to be, and how often are the attendant resolutions forgotten!

Warm Weather Brings Crows Back to Susquehanna Region

Having been called forth by the short spell of warm weather on Friday, February 19, hundreds of black crows swarmed along the banks of the Susquehanna River between Milton and Lewisburg. The birds gathered together and formed a black cover on the river bank for nearly a mile. A field nearby was also completely covered, and the trees along the edge were so covered that it was difficult to see the branches.

Sidelight from Life

Do dogs think? An occupant of a double house on University avenue does not think so. Returning from church one Sunday morning, he was unable to enter his own house, for there was a German police dog (a neighbor's dog) showing his teeth on the porch. A great deal of persuasion was necessary to convince the dog that he was guarding the wrong door, but at last he reluctantly leaped a railing nd stood on the porch of his master. With a doleful look, he watched the neighbor enter his home.

WHY COLLEGE FITS ONE FOR LIFE

BY MARTHA M. MORROW

The criticism is often made that a college does not fit for the actual work in life. This has been found to be an unjust and untrue criticism; since most of our great men, including statesmen, writers, inventors, and ministers, with a few exceptions, have been fitted for life in the colleges of our country.

There are various views as to the aims of a college education. On the one hand, there are those who deem it unwise and wasteful both in money and time to give a youth studies which are not directly productive of money returns; and as a result a campaign of technical education is sweeping over our country, making of many of our colleges factories that turn out machine-made men.

There are those also who take the other extreme and say that a college should teach no studies which may be of practical application, because the interest is then centered on money returns.

But what is the difference between industrial and college efficiency? The question is often asked why a college which turns out men should not consider the principles of efficiency as much as a factory which turns out soap or shoes. The answer is clear enough. The college is different because it turns out men instead of manufactured articles. Men are vastly more important than the shoes they wear and, therefore, college efficiency cannot be considered with factory efficiency.

The paramount object of a college education is to produce a "cultured" man or woman. But what is a cultured man? A cultured man must have broad sympathies, the power to feel with his fellow beings, keen perceptions, and quick accuracy in his chosen field of study. Responsiveness and independence build both belong to the cultured man; also the power of answering to another's thought, readiness to listen to the other side, but still the independence of the man who is always conscious of his own opinions and standards. He should be self-reliant, but deferential to the opinions of others. A cultured man must have moderation and a sense of proportion.

It was Ralph Waldo Emerson who said: "Never use the superlative." But look at our newspapers, magazines, popular plays, and novels, and you will find them packed with "very" and "absolutely," and other great exaggerations. This lack of moderation in speaking and writing is a sure sign of lack of cultivation.

There is also a moral quality without which we have difficulty in accepting a man as cultivated; that is, courage. But it must be the type of courage which goes with gentleness.

One great distinction between a cultivated man and what we term a "mere" man, versed in technical skill, is that the cultured man considers his education, not finished but still in the making. Technical skill is important, for without it how could our country manage? We would be merely a cultivated nation. Yet what a great improvement it would be to have all our men, not only versed in technical skill, but also highly cultured.

The college has to teach not only the sciences, but to see that the spirit of science shall strike in and make man dissatisfied with inaccurate, standardless, and conscienceless work. Scientific efficiency and the ideal of public service belong together. We shall not keep our science keyed up to its best unless we keep the college awake to its public responsibilities. Its students should make their contribution to the betterment of public administration, and the furtherance of higher aims of government, to the realization of a truer and broader democracy.

Some people doubt if these new forms of culture are as productive of morality, high-mindedness, and idealism as the old; but the new lines have been found to lead also to these moral results. They are therefore competent to train men for citizenship along the lines of human productiveness: literature, science, mining, farming, financing, and all other lines of modern education.

The abandonment of these ideals defeats the ends of true education.

All colleges are in hearty sympathy with the life and work of the world, and are earnestly seeking to graduate students who shall be able to make substantial contributions to movements for human progress. College men and women should be better homemakers, better friends and associates, better partners in the teamwork of the world because of the education they have received. A college education is certainly the best instrument with which to arm a boy or girl, who is facing the pleasures, temptations, and problems of life.

Female of the Species Gets Better Marks Than the Male

That "the female of the species is more deadly than the male," as Kipling puts it, seems to hold true right here at Bucknell. A very recent reminder of that fact is now posted on the main bulletin board in the form of an honor roll. The "co-eds" have a three to one lead on the "eds."

It may be that the "profs" are taking heed of the English muse, and for fear of violence have given the females the benefit of the doubt. However it is more probable that the "Semites" are more fatal to the printed page, and, still possessing that innate obedience to man which is a heritage from their grandmothers, the feminists "get on their hooks" when told to do so by a lowering, though perfectly harmless professor.

All this is a word of advice to the "boy friends," meaning simply that if the "Bucknella" is treated with tender care she will not kill the manly "Bucknellius."

An absent-minded man is defending a divorce action. He kissed his wife good-bye one morning and said: "Now don't forget to type those letters I dictated, sweetie."

Flunking Students Safe At Cambridge

They Can Stay On Indefinitely And Work for Their Degrees, Says Professor Robbins

"The unambitious student is not expelled from Cambridge, after he has made a failure of his studies. He is allowed to remain as long as he pleases, not even being compelled to attend classes or lectures. Some students are thus in attendance for ten or fifteen years."

This was the statement of Professor Harry W. Robbins to a Bucknellian reporter, when asked recently about college life abroad.

"The students are divided into three classes," said Dr. Robbins. "The first class is composed of those who graduate with honors. It is no special distinction, at Cambridge, to receive a degree unless it is accompanied with honors. The second class consists of those who merely have a degree upon graduating. The third class is made up of those who do little or nothing in the way of studying. They are not compelled to attend lectures if they do not wish to do so.

English Colleges Not Like Ours

Many people have the mistaken impression, Dr. Robbins said, that the colleges at Cambridge are schools. Actually they correspond more closely to our fraternities, as they merely furnish the students with lodgings. However, there are tutors at each college to help those who wish assistance.

Students are required to report at the colleges at meal time. Professor Robbins said he remembered seeing several young men enter a college dining room, walk through it, and leave immediately. When he asked if they did not remain for dinner, the man in charge exclaimed, "Oh, no! They eat at the hotel in the town." The young men were evidently too proud to eat with the other men in the dining hall. The food was excellent, and Dr. Robbins said he saw no reason why the men should not dine there.

English Students Like Tennis

In speaking of sports at Cambridge, Dr. Robbins commented on the Englishmen's liking for tennis. "They seem to enjoy it very much," he said, "although they play in a haphazard fashion, nearly always knocking the ball into the net. Canoeing and boating on the river Cam are also popular.

"English boat races are very amusing. Instead of rowing abreast, the oarsmen line up in single file, because the stream is narrow. The object of the race is to bump the boat in front of you. The score is the record of 'bumps' made by the different boats. If a boat is bumped, it is out of the race."

Dr. Robbins painted a very interesting picture of Cambridge University, with its spacious grounds, and many colleges, some of which are very old.

"One cannot fail to see the contrast between the college life at an American university and that at an English university," he said. "However, Cambridge is much less conservative than Oxford. At Oxford women are not admitted, while at Cambridge there is a separate college for women. This is one instance of Oxford's extreme conservatism."

President Southwick To Speak Here Again

The second offering of the Dramatic and Literary Board, which was responsible for bringing Captain Irvine O'Hay to the mass meeting before the Homecoming Day game last fall, will be a dramatic recital to be given by President Southwick of the Emerson School of Oratory, Boston, Mass., during the fourth week in March.

President Southwick needs no introduction to most Bucknellians. Last year he gave Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" and three years ago his recital was "King Lear". On both occasions he was enthusiastically received. This year he will give an interpretative recital which he calls "The Cardinal King," an adaptation from Bulwer-Lytton's drama "Richelieu". This is one of the few plays in English literature that has held the stage for ninety years. The recital is generally conceded to be President Southwick's best. It will be given at the Baptist church and admission will be free to students.

On April 19 another presentation will be made by the Dramatic and Literary Board. Mr. Granville, of the Devereux Players, a troup that appeared here with great success two years ago, will give an evening of impersonations at Bucknell Hall. Mr. Granville calls his entertainment "Dramatic Interludes". It has proved very popular wherever given.

ern foreign languages are constantly before the school and the college teacher, and in answering these questions the considered opinion of well-trained and experienced teachers, if assembled on a wide basis, is of high scientific value. Two thousand such teachers of the modern languages have been listed, carefully selected by their colleagues for training and experience, and properly representative of the different modern languages, of the various types of schools and colleges, and of the regions of the country. It is the intention of the committee to send to such of these as are willing to accept a series of questions covering matters of fact and observation with respect to the objectives of modern language teaching, the organization of courses, their content, and the methods of instruction and administration. To fill in the answers properly in the light of judgment and experience will probably require fifteen to twenty hours.

"Will you be one of the specially selected group to take part in this plebiscite of experienced teachers?"

It is confidently expected that the study when completed will revolutionize modern language teaching in the United States.

would seek within its covers for the truth. He added that the Book should be a personal one for all who would desire help and inspiration for the battles of life.

After Cranford had given a few thoughts on the subject of "Conversion", and a number of New Testaments had been distributed by the group, the meeting came to a close. The men mingled with the prisoners for a few minutes, noting the various things made by them, and seeking to learn the individual life histories of the prisoners.

When the ministerials attempted to depart, Warden H. J. Evans insisted that they linger long enough for dinner. Of course it is against a person's religion to refuse chicken, so they all tarried.

Music School Recital Thursday, March 11

The Bucknell University School of Music will present its first formal recital of the season in Bucknell Hall on Thursday evening, March 11, 1926. Miss Mary G. Graham, '26, has been secured as soloist for the occasion. Miss Graham graduated from the School of Music last June and is now supervisor of music in the Northumberland schools. Her rich voice is still well remembered and her appearance here again is looked forward to with great pleasure and expectation.

Besides Miss Graham's group of songs, nine other numbers will be rendered by the students of the School of Music. There will be two violin solos: "Berceuse Slav," Vuerin, played by Paul K. Stolz, '28; and Wieniawski's "Mazurka", played by E. Daniel Moll of Shamokin.

The four vocal solos are: "On the Road to Mandalay," "Speaks," sung by Carl J. Geiser, '28; "I Love Thee", Forster, by Miss Annarelin Low, '27; "A Resolve", Fontenilles, sung by Miss Ruth Marion, '27; and a song by Melvin Shuttleworth, '28, "In a Persian Garden", Lehman. There will be three piano solos. Miss Mary Hite will play Lily Strickland's "Spring Idyl"; and "Moto Perpetuo", MacDowell, will be played by Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Showalter of Mifflinburg. Lewis B. Kesler will play Rachmaninoff's "Polichinelle".

The recital is called for eight-fifteen on Thursday evening, March 11, and will begin promptly. As usual there will be no admission charged and no offering taken.

DIRECTOR HARTZ COMPLETES ITINERARY FOR GLEE CLUB

The route which the Glee Club will take in its annual Easter tour has been finally arranged by Director Ralph F. Hartz. Mr. Hartz spent several days last week in the Philadelphia district making the arrangements for the presentation of the concerts in the different towns, and returned Sunday with the complete schedule.

The club will assemble at Norristown on April 5, the day after Easter, and will sing in the First Baptist church of Norristown that evening. Tuesday evening the club will sing in Camden; Wednesday, in North Philadelphia; Thursday, in Penns Grove, N. J.; Friday, in Haddonfield, N. J.; and Saturday and Sunday, in Reading. The return to Lewisburg will be made Sunday evening, April 11.

Bucknell Scores Notable Victory

his rebuttal. He admitted that an economic boycott would be a detriment to our wheat market. "But," said Drum, "it is a question of sacrificing wheat or men. We, of the affirmative, want to save our men."

Williams Speaks Next for B. U.

Williams, the second speaker for Bucknell, proved that the League of Nations fully meets the requirement of an international legislative body. It has a decided advantage over the old conference system. The second negative speaker, Perry, said that by joining the League of Nations we commit ourselves and will become involved in European entanglements. He proved that the League of Nations, as related to the United States, is directly opposed to the Monroe Doctrine. Perry also stated that "the entrance of the United States into the League would endanger our position as a disinterested nation."

Drum Shows League Advantages

In his constructive speech, Drum, of Bucknell, contended that under the League of Nations "a defaulting state can never again involve the world in blood." The three chief arguments of the affirmative were that the former systems of international legislation with regard to world problems were failures; that the League of Nations corrects the mistakes of the old conference systems; and that the League is the next step toward peace.

The negative contended that by joining the League, the United States would lose its freedom of action. The Bucknell team answered this by quoting Chief Justice Taft of the United States Supreme Court. Taft said, "The idea, that by entering the League of Nations we delegate any of our powers to the council, is a misconception and is wholly untrue."

The Dean Welcomes Dickinson

Before the debate, Dean R. H. Rivenburg, who presided, welcomed the Dickinson team on behalf of the University. The judges of the debate were George W. Nicely, D. D., and the Honorable Walter E. Ritter, both of Williamsport, and Principal D. W. Wells of Shamokin.

The Bucknell negative team, Carl A. Hile, '26, R. Henry Coleman, '29, Francis Lybarger Jr., '28, and Dwight M. Bahr, '28, alternate, met the affirmative team of Penn State at State College, and they, too, gained a unanimous decision. The Penn State affirmative team won from the Dickinson negative on the third side of the triangle making Bucknell high and Dickinson low in the score of the eighth annual triangular debate between the colleges.

Libelous Paper Causes Arrests

Most college scandal sheets are tame affairs made up equally of wise cracks and petty gossip. But at Baker University, Kansas, the members of Theta Nu Epsilon, secret outlaw fraternity, decided to put out a "real one." Secretly at night their paper, The Rod, containing "obscene and defamatory statements about Baker students," was distributed on the campus. The result was explosions of wrath. Detectives were hired, the district attorney was appealed to, and fourteen students were arrested for criminal libel. The paper was "so bad", the district attorney said, that he would not allow a reporter to see it.

WORLD IS BASED UPON FRIENDSHIP, SAYS DOCTOR HOPE

Negro Head of Negro College Makes Plea For Square Deal For His Struggling Race

DECLARES RIDICULE GREATEST OBSTACLE

Snow Colored Folk Have Climbed In 59 Years of Family Life They Have Been Given

"The world is based on friendship," said Dr. John Hope, president of Morehouse College, in an address, on the Negro problem, before the student body assembled in upper class chapel on Tuesday morning, March 9.

"I tell my students every year", continued President Hope in his plea for our adoption of a friendly attitude toward his race, "not to speak of Wops, and Chinks, and Sheenys, but to call the people of Italy, Italian; those of China, Chinese; and the natives of Poland, Poles." In using such terms, the dignity of the race is lowered, an attitude of ridicule usurps the place that should be held by friendliness, and misunderstanding results," he explained. Calling the negro a "darkie," a "coon," or a "nigger" depreciates his value, underrates his ability and places another obstacle in his path.

Ridicule the Greatest Obstacle

The obstacle of ridicule is the greatest the Negro must face. His highest achievements are as nothing when met by ridicule. As an example, Dr. Hope used the appearance of a quintet of Negro musicians before a New York audience. The players were well-educated, and had appeared before royalty abroad. Yet they were forced to face a smiling audience which was restrained from laughing only by the sheer musical beauty of the selections.

The negro has progressed as much as the white man has allowed him to. But the white man denied him even the privilege of the institution of the family until fifty-nine years ago. Before 1865, no negro father could look upon his child and say with certainty, "I'll rear you to be a fine lad". Since given that right, the negro has developed a wonderful home life, as he has developed in education and profession once they were opened to him. President Hope told of a graduate of Morehouse College, who, sponsored by a southern philanthropist, was graduated from the Rochester Theological Seminary with honors. His benefactor wanted to send the young Negro abroad, but he refused in order to take up a pastorate at Oberlin, Ohio. Such progress surely demands our admiration.

Adopt a Friendly Attitude

"If you must have an attitude," Dr. Hope continued, "don't adopt a giggley one. Let it be a friendly one!" For only through friendship will come understanding between the white man and the millions of negros in our country.

Morehouse College, of which Dr. Hope is president, is located at Atlanta, Ga. Its student body numbers between seven and eight hundred Negroes. President Hope received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Bucknell University in 1924.

Engineers, Notice

An illustrated lecture on Warrenite bitulithic roads will be given on Monday, March 15, at 7:00 P. Everyone is welcome.

ERROR

The oration on "Compulsory Chapel" given in the elimination contest Tuesday evening, March 2, was delivered by Ernest B. Decker, '27, instead of by Leon Bird, as stated in last week's Bucknellian.

Every Day, Every Way Our "Sem" Gets Better

Seniors Make 46 Percent Average For Health Week; Frosh Next; Other Classes Feed 'Em

For four weeks the principal concern of the women students has been their health, this coming before the movies and exam exams in importance. During this time bed-time "feeds" were abolished, the burning of midnight oil was taboo, outdoor exercise was very much in vogue, and the drinking of at least six glasses of water each day was the aim of every "Semite."

Wednesday, March 3, marked the end of the health program drawn up by the Women's Student Government Association at the suggestion of Professor John W. Rice and adopted by the students four weeks ago.

The senior class, with a score of 46%, took the honors. The freshmen class came next with 40%. These two classes, having achieved the highest percentages, will be entertained at an informal party in the gym sometime in the near future. The sophomores and juniors will do the entertaining, as they were lowest, having scores of 36% and 24% respectively. The faculty score has not yet been determined.

The scores were figured on a basis of perfection. Otherwise the larger classes would have had an advantage over the smaller ones. As it was, the smallest class had the highest percentage. There are only 35 seniors.

Of the 242 girls taking part in the program, only one achieved the distinction of having a perfect score for the four weeks. This was Grace Milbeus, '27. A number of others came within a few points of having perfect scores.

A great many fell by the wayside during the second and third weeks. Evidently the requirements for these weeks were the hardest to live up to. During the second week there was to be no eating between meals, no heavy food after 9 P. M., and three regular meals a day. The college girl's chief weakness, then, seems to be in the matter of getting up for breakfast every morning, and in abstaining from eating between meals. Many of them seemed to have difficulty in finding time for the outdoor exercise, which was the requirement for the third week.

Miss Ruhl, nurse at the Women's College, when asked if she thought there had been any perceptible improvement in the health of the girls during the four weeks, said that the time was too short for any such a change to become apparent.

"However," she said, "I do think that the observation of these health rules has helped to ward off much possible illness. February is always a bad month from the standpoint of health, and the health program undoubtedly helped many of the girls to get through it safely.

"The true test of such a program would be to have it extend over a period of at least three months. Then

New Faculty Folks Attend Tea At "Sem"

A tea in honor of the new members of the Bucknell University faculty was given by the Women's College faculty on Friday afternoon, March 5, from 3:30 to 5:30. This is the second year that such a reception has been held; however, last year the tea was given to the new faculty members only by those who had been newcomers in the Bucknell faculty the preceding year.

The tea was held in the parlors of the Women's College. In the receiving line were Dean Amelia E. Clark, Miss Grace Jenkins, and Miss Charlotte G. Armstrong. Mrs. R. H. Rivenburg and Mrs. Jennie D. Phillips served tea, assisted by Mrs. J. H. Manning, Miss Katherine Bergstresser, and Miss Lulu Coe. The entertainment of the afternoon consisted of violin and piano solos by Rebecen Rentschler, '28, and Marguerite Mayers, '26.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Smith, Miss Helen Bartol, Mrs. W. N. Lowry, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Molter, Miss Mildred Grigsby, Miss Elizabeth Stalford, and Miss Lillian Wilson.

JUDGE FERRIS TO SPEAK

The Hon. Howard Ferris, of Yorktown, Virginia, will speak to the students and faculty in Commencement Hall, Friday evening, March 12, at 7:00 o'clock. Judge Ferris has had a rich experience in the legal profession and in public life, and has kept in close touch with college students since his own college days. He will speak of "Forces That Win." It will be well worth while for all of us to hear him.

BAPTIST SINGERS GIVE FINE CONCERT

Benefit For Evangelical Home Brings Program So Pleasing It May Be Repeated

The Lewisburg Baptist Church choir, under the direction of Professor Paul Stolz, gave a benefit concert for the Lewisburg Evangelical Home in the Baptist church on Monday evening, March 8.

An unusually well-selected program was presented consisting of chorus selections, vocal solos, and a violin solo. The choir was accompanied by Miss Josephine Lawshe at the organ and Lewis B. Kesler, '28, at the piano.

Many Classics Given

The program was opened by that old and famous classic, "The Lost Chord" which was followed by Liszt's "Dream of Love". Mrs. Wilcox pleased the receptive audience with her singing of Tosti's "Mattinata", Mc. Fadden's "Lone Is the Wind" and del Riego's "Hayfields and Butterflies. "Russian Lament" by Leo Ornstein and "Now the Night in Starlight Splendor" were the choir's next selections.

Mr. Blood's violin solo received generous applaus. "In Old Madrid" and "Anchored" were the two beautiful classics which the choir then rendered. John Gilmour was at his best and received hearty applaus for his two solos, "Holy City" and "Somewhere a

Lybarger Triumphs In Oratorical Contest

Wins Big Honor For Bucknell In Competition With Men From 5 Other Colleges

Lee Francis Lybarger Jr., who last week was selected to represent Bucknell in the oratorical contest of the Eastern Pennsylvania Oratorical Union, returned from the contest held at Ursinus College last Friday evening, intercollegiate oratorical champion of the eastern part of the state, and with the commission to uphold the honor of the eastern section against the western section in a contest to be held at Grove City College Saturday evening, March 13.

"Organizing the World for Peace" was the subject of the oration which Lybarger used in winning the contest. He spoke of the need for an effort to train nations and peoples for peace rather than for war.

The other colleges represented in the contest were Muhlenberg, Franklin and Marshall, Ursinus, Albright, and Gettysburg. The speaker from Franklin and Marshall took second place in the contest and the one from Gettysburg took third. These men will again compete with Lybarger in the state elimination contest this Saturday evening.

DON'T CHARLESTON AT 'SEM'; YOU MIGHTN'T LIKE RESULT

Everyone had a good time at the last "tea-vic" dance given by the sophomore girls in the Women's College, February 22, except those who were on the first floor when the dancers were Charlestoning above them. Then there was great fear lest the floor give way. Because Main Building is so very old, Dean Clark advised the girls that hereafter, for reasons of safety only, no Charlestoning would be permitted in the Women's College. Dean Clark also believes, with the girls, that war whoops and smoking have no place at dances in the Women's College.

ENGINEERS' DANCE A HOWLING SUCCESS

Test Flooring With Their Feet, Microphone With Their Lungs, While World "Listens In"

WJBU'S new studio and the ball room of the Engineering building held their initial function in one operation on Saturday night when the Engineers held their ball in the room that will be the studio of the radio station and the radio bugs of the neighborhood were allowed to listen in on the merriment.

The dance itself was a howling success, literally, for many of the enthusiastic broadcasters felt that it was a part of the game to get directly under the microphone that was suspended from the ceiling and try to drown out the orchestra. However, Noble and his band were not to be so easily overcome and continued to make themselves heard throughout the room as well as all over the state of Pennsylvania.

Faculty Guests

The dance continued from eight to twelve with an intermission during which refreshments were served. Professor and Mrs. Burpee, Assistant Professor and Mrs. G. A. Irland, Registrar and Mrs. Holter, and Mr. C. W. Halligan were the engineers' guests. H. C. Miles, '26, and Mr. Halligan shared the announcing of the numbers for the station.

Bad Women Prisoners To Have No Mirrors

Dr. Mary Harris to Punish Them In New Manner at Alderson, Where She Heads Prison

"It's the little things that count in a woman's life," said Dr. Mary Harris, '94, in an interview printed by the Harrisburg Times, in discussing her plan to punish naughty women prisoners at the new Federal prison at Alderson, W. Va., by depriving them of the little vanities they usually enjoy.

The Times report follows:

What is it a woman hates most to do without? What is it whose absence is a real punishment?

An automobile? A servant? Love? No. It's a ragless room, a plain dress, and a mirror—when she's been used to them.

Having found that out from years of work in women's and girls' reformatories, Dr. Mary Harris, of the United States Department of Justice, will "punish" naughty women prisoners at the new Federal prison for women at Alderson, W. Va., mainly by depriving them of the little vanities they enjoyed when they were good.

Dr. Mary Harris To Have Charge

Dr. Harris is to be superintendant of the institution, ground for which has just been broken. It will be the only Federal prison for women in the country, will accommodate 500, and is materializing after 14,000 clubs had stormed Congress.

"It's the little things that count in a woman's life," declared Doctor Harris. "If she has been accustomed to a fair sized room with rugs and curtains and a mirror over her dresser, she will be sufficiently punished for bad conduct in the prison if she is moved to another room without these things."

The prison, which isn't called a prison at all but "The Federal Industrial Institution for women," is to be built on the cottage plan. There will be no walls, no cells with bars, no guards, and no drab uniforms.

Students Have Chance To See Europe Well

New Scheme of Conducting Tours Provides for Small Parties In Homes and Pensions

Undergraduates who contemplate a trip abroad next summer will for the first time be offered the opportunity to travel in parties for which European students will act as hosts and guides, under a new system of tours, conducted under the joint auspices of the undergraduate organizations of America and Europe.

American arrangements for the tours are going forward under the direction of the National Student Federation of America and an advisory committee headed by Dr. Stephen Duggan, president of the International Institute of Education, and including a number of college presidents and internationally known figures. In Europe the tours will be in the hands of the Confederation Internationale des Etudiants, while John Rothschild, president of the "Open Road," will act as the agent of all three bodies in caring for accommodations and determining itineraries.

Parties Will Be Small

Parties of twelve or fourteen students will travel under the direction of a leader carefully picked by the administration. A choice of twelve routes is offered, each to consume roughly three months and to cost between $500 and $700. Trips will cover England, France, Germany, northern Italy, Austria, and the Balkans, having as a universal feature a stay of some time at the student camp in Geneva, to give the members of the tours an opportunity to watch the workings of the League of Nations at close range.

The Plan is Novel

The radical departure from the time-worn method of "doing Europe" lies in the fact that almost without exception European students will accompany parties throughout their trip, providing the connecting link between the traveler and the country through which he goes, heretofore so conspicuously lacking. The plan of accommodations in Europe follows the same general scheme, keeping the undergraduate more closely in touch with the life around him than is possible if he stops at the more frequented hotels run for the benefit of Americans. As a consequence quarters in college dormitories, private homes, pensions, and the like have been provided, making possible the low cost of the tours.

Both Men and Women

Full details of the tours will shortly be in the hands of the representatives of the National Student Federation in the various colleges. The tours will be open to both men and women, in separate parties, adequate provision being made in each case for chaperoning the feminine contingent. Application to enroll as a member of one of the parties must be made before June 1, to permit necessary adjustments in personnel to be completed before the date of sailing.

Everything Is Ready For Soph Cotillion

All arrangements for the Sophomore Cotillion have been completed by the committee according to the statement of the chairman, Milton Frable. The big interest of the occasion at present centers on the presence or absence of the sophomore class president, Frank E. Johnston Jr.

A group of freshmen surrounded the Delta Sigma house last Monday evening in an attempt to catch Johnston but their effort was unsuccessful and since then the sophomore executive has been discreetly silent and absent. His presence or absence Saturday evening will be one of the things to be looked for at the Cotillion.

There has not been a freshman or sophomore dance in the memory of the present college generation at which the class president did not appear sooner or later. The present freshmen may be able to overcome this precedent but the sophomores look at the suggestion with scorn and the other students view it with considerable doubt.

A few tickets for the dance remain

BUCKNELL DEFEATS JUNIATA DEBATERS AT BEDFORD HIGH

Contestants Have Hot Struggle But Judges Are Unanimous In Awarding Decision

TEAMS ENTERTAINED BY BEDFORD HOTEL

Hardest Contest Yet To Come When B. U. Meets Bowdoin, Holder of Championship

Bucknell's affirmative debating team defeated Juniata on the League of Nations question at the contest held in the Bedford High School, Bedford, Pa., on Friday evening, March 5. It was the affirmative team's seventh debate, six of which have been won. The decision of the judges was unanimously in favor of Bucknell.

Both teams made the trip to Bedford by car from Huntington, the home of Juniata, and were entertained by the management of the Bedford Hotel. The debate was held under the auspices of the senior class of Bedford High School.

Although Bucknell won by a unanimous decision, the debate was one of the most spirited contests of the season, it being attended by an audience of 350.

Juniata, upholding the negative side of the question, maintained that the United States should not enter the league for three reasons. These were: first, the league was uninviting because it was a European affair; second, by entering the league the United States would break its policy of neutrality; third, the United States could do more good outside of the league than in it.

Bucknell argued, first, the need for international legislation; second, that the league was the best international legislative body known to man; third, that the league was the next step toward peace.

Members of the Bucknell team making the trip were: T. Burns Drum, '26, Bruce J. Miller, '27, Willis G. Snow, '28, and James G. Williams, '29.

The stiffest contest that faces Bucknell's affirmative team will be held on March 24 when the Bowdoin College team, of Bowdoin, Maine, appears here. Bowdoin College holds the northern championship for intercollegiate debating, having earned its title last season when it defeated Bates College.

GAMBLE AND CARSTATER WILL ATTEND THE I. N. A.

The conference of the third district of the Intercollegiate Newspaper Association of the Middle Atlantic States, of which the Bucknellian is a member, will be held at Gettysburg College this week-end with sessions on Friday evening and Saturday.

Editor Eugene Carstater and Business Manager Harold Gamble will attend the sessions of the conference representing the paper. The topics to be discussed at the meeting will be staff organization and methods of getting alumni subscriptions for college papers. Each editor attending the conference will be expected to speak for ten minutes on the first topic and each business manager for a like period on the second.

Let's Tell 'Em Who's Here

Would it not be a profitable idea to let tourists know that Bucknell University is situated at Lewisburg, by placing large signs on the highway at either entrance to town? Directions to the Hill might also be indicated in some way instead of having visitors find their own way to the college by tedious inquiry. Indeed, save for a small iron sign placed at the bridge, there is not a single indication advertising the fact that there is a university at Lewisburg.

EDITORIAL CONTEST
Closes March 16

Only five more days remain before the close of the Pi Delta Epsilon editorial contest. No articles postmarked later than 8 A. M. Tuesday, March 16, will be considered by the judges.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Phi Gamma Delta held a tea and bridge dance Saturday afternoon from two to five. Miss Clush chaperoned a happy crowd of about forty-five. Bridge was the first order of the program. The prizes were won by Blanche Thompson and Tom Hann; they were a box of Whitman's chocolates and a carton of cigarettes. Jack Dowd and Edward Hoffman were guests at the party. Lew Kesler, gave the piano a "goin' over", and entertained the dancers for more than an hour.

Lew Kesler, '28, was a guest at Dinner Sunday.

Bill Mertz, '28, was a guest at dinner Monday, March 1.

Brother Merle Edwards, '05, of Scranton, recently paid the chapter a visit while visiting his mother in Lewisburg.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Brinkerhof, of Pittsburgh, were luncheon guests at the house on Thursday, March 4.

Brother Hitchens entertained the boys at dinner last Friday evening with an excellent impersonation of the "Phantom of the Opera."

An impromptu bridge party was held at the house on Friday evening, March 5. The Misses Cunningham, Gochnaur, Myers, and Myerle were guests. Mother Miller chaperoned the party.

Miss Amelia Clark, dean of women, and Professor George B. Lawson and his two daughters, were dinner guests at the house on Sunday, March 7.

Mr. Thomas L. James, of Marhanoy City, was a guest at the house on Sunday, March 7.

KAPPA SIGMA

The Conclave of District III of Kappa Sigma was held here March 5 and 6. Delegates were present from Pennsylvania, Swarthmore, Dickinson, Lehigh, Lafayette, and Penn State.

Brother W. W. Wyckoff, the national head of the fraternity, and Brother Oliver J. Decker, '00, the district president, were present at the business sessions.

The delegates were entertained at a smoker on Friday evening. Among the guests present were, Brothers A. W. Johnson, Miller Johnson, C. A. Lindemann, B. W. Griffith, and representatives from the various fraternities on the campus. "Gene" Noble and his orchestra supplied the music.

The business session was turned into an inter-fraternity conference on Saturday afternoon, when we heard from President Hunt, of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, and Dean Rivenburg, of Phi Gamma Delta.

The Conclave next year will be held at State College.

In the recent football issue of the Caduceus (the fraternity publication), "Gus" Shorts was given a position on the All Kappa Sigma Team. "Pud" Hollinger was given honorable mention.

Among the week-end visitors were Brothers Beringer of Bloomsburg, and "Tenny" Steininger of town. Pledges Grazier, Cook, and Moser entertained their parents.

The chapter will entertain at a ten dance on Saturday afternoon, March 20. "Gus" Shorts has consented to pour.

August 'Bud' Riesmeyer has given the house a radio. With the exception of the local station the set has so far refused to connect with anything.

DELTA SIGMA

The members of the Ursinus debating squad were guests at the fraternity house Saturday.

Because of the victory of the freshman basketball team over the sophomore quintet the chapter enjoyd ice cream at the expense of the brothers of the sophomore class, Monday evening of last week.

Dr. George B. Lawson was the guest of the fraternity at dinner Thursday evening, March 4. Dr. Lawson was the speaker during the discussion hour held after the meal.

Plans are being made for the broadcasting hour, alloted to the fraternity, some time within the near future. Brothers Smith and Dilworth have charge of the program to be offered through WJBU.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Brother W. W. Wilcox, '25, visited the chapter during the week-end.

A tea dance was held at "the house on the hill" last Saturday afternoon.

Professor and Mrs. Frank E. Burpee were guests at the house Monday evening.

New rugs have been purchased for some of the rooms and greatly improve the appearance of the house.

The chapter is planning a formal "Sem" dinner dance for March 30 as well as an informal "town" dance for March 12.

The fraternity basketball team under the captaincy of "Bill" Marley, wound up its out-of-town season without having one defeat registered against it, when a Shamokin team went down before it last Saturday evening.

Karl Albig has been elected manager of the Kappa Delta Rho baseball team and has already arranged for the playing of a number of games out of town. "Bill" Marley is also captain of this team and expects to produce another winning aggregation.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

The fourteen pledges were given an informal hazing party on Thursday evening, March 4. A good time was enjoyed by all, and two A. M. approached much too quickly for the participants.

Six of the boys were bed-ridden last week with the grippe. Carl Hile, '26, and Jack Miller, '26, have not yet recovered, although their condition is now fair.

The Rev. H. F. Babcock was the leader in a discussion group Thursday evening, March 4. "The College Purpose" was the topic.

KAPPA GAMMA

Brother Harry Spranen, ex-'26, now of Susquehanna University, was a visitor at the house over the week-end.

The first "Discussion Group" was a huge success under the supervision of Professor Howes. The question, "How Radical Shall We Be," proved to be interesting to everyone.

The epidemic of La Grippe has hit Kappa Gamma rather hard. Five men have succumbed to the dreaded disease.

BETA KAPPA

"Group Morality" was the subject under discussion in the "Y" discussion meeting under the direction of Assistant Professor R. L. Matz, Thursday evening. The meeting became so interesting that the forty-five minute time period was soon exhausted and somewhat overrun.

"The first spring hike" for the pledges was held Friday evening.

Professor Glen V. Brown was a guest at dinner, Sunday, March 7.

The father of Pledge Howard Whiting, spent the week-end as the guest of Beta Kappa.

Clair G. Spangler, '25, was a visitor at the house Sunday.

PHI MU

The morning of March 4 found the Beta Kappa chapter of Phi Mu assembled at 6:30 for Founders' Day services. The seventy-fourth birthday of Phi Mu was ushered in with appropriate ceremony, and throughout the day Phi Mu girls wore their fraternity flower—the blush carnation.

In further celebration of the founding of Phi Mu, the chapter held a party for the suite on Friday evening, March 5. It was a surprise party, too, for each girl had kept secret the nature of her present, and when the surprise packages were opened there was a wonderful assortment of gifts—furniture, china, and silver. Then alumni, pledges, and actives adjourned to the living room to dance. During intermission, the pledges gave a little skit called, "Pledge Meeting As We Would Like It", and "Kitty" Hughes, '28, aimed a little fun at the future Phi Mus in a ballad, "Pledges." A buffet supper and "Many happy returns" brought Phi Mu's birthday to a close.

The hi Mu girls have invited two sorority sisters at Dickinson to be representatives at the Phi Mu dance, March 20.

Two Student Tours Announced; Both To German Universities

Two unusually fine study tours to Germany will be offered this summer, according to announcements recently received by Professor Rockwell.

The American Institute of Educational Travel is offering again the German Residence and Travel Tour, under the direction of Professor W. D. Zinnecker, of New York University. This tour, which includes visits to most of the important German cities, and a four-week stay in Munich, the South Germann art and musical center, will be given university credit in this country. The cost of the tour is $570.

The Institute for Foreigners of the University of Berlin has also arranged a study tour for American students, including six weeks' lectures at the University of Berlin, on German, Spanish, or Portuguese language, literature, and history. The cost of this tour, inclusive of steamer passage in "student cabin," railroad fare, room, board, and tuition for the six-week term, is $385.

German Department Expands—Rockwell

Advanced Courses Are Offered; More Equipment Is Added

Professor Leo I. Rockwell, head of the German department at Bucknell University, in a recent discussion concerning the work of the department, remarked that since the revival of German in art and literature all over the country, a corresponding increase has taken place in the number of students pursuing courses in German at Bucknell University. The number of students taking German at Bucknell has increased from 7 during the war to 84 at the present time.

The German department has been keeping pace with this increase of interest by introducing new courses into the curriculum and by supplying the class room with new equipment.

For the first time in several years, an advanced course dealing with the classical period, was given this term. Next year a course will be given on the nineteenth century period.

Probably the most interesting of the new courses which Professor Rockwell will teach, will be the study of German literature in English. This course will be somewhat similar to the course in Greek civilization taught by Professor Hamblin. Lectures will be given on the German contribution to world literature, and such poets as Goethe, Schiller, Heine, Nietzsche, Hauptmann, Mann, Wassermann, Werfel, and Teller, will be considered.

These courses in German are offered so that one may acquire a reading knowledge of German, and with a reading knowledge try to build up the ability to speak it. The advanced courses in German literature and civilization are given for those who are interested in the history of the language and the history of the country.

The German room has been equipped with new maps, a Victrola, on which German records are played, some of the principal German periodicals including the Frankfurter Zeitung and the Illustrierte Zeitung, a bulletin board, on which Professor Rockwell places illustrated material dealing with the geographical and historical aspects of the study.

Professor Rockwell expects to give some illustrated lectures in the near future.

INSTRUCTOR HARRIS ILL; VICTIM OF INFLUENZA

Instructor Robert E. Harris, of the English department, is another faculty "flu" victim. He was seized the latter part of last week and soon developed a considerable fever. He was in bed for several days. His father, Dr. C. E. Harris, of Bloomington, Ind., had also been ill; and finding it utterly impossible to rest, because of insistent calls from patients, boarded a train for Lewisburg and landed at the College Inn, where he found his son also ill. Dr. Harris will keep an eye on his son at the same time that he is getting his own rest. When this item was written, Mr. Harris was on the road to recovery and expected to return to his classes very soon.

SHOULD BE TRAINED

Wife—I don't think I approve of the movement to train young people for marriage.

Hubby—What! Ain't pugilists and soldiers and all other fighting people trained?

PISCATORIAL ARITHMETIC

"When the boys got home from their trip last week I suppose they divided the fish?"

"They did—and multiplied 'em, too."

UP AGAINST IT

Big Boxer—Hey, I didn't contract to go up against no six-armed champ

THE EXPLANATION

Wigg—I'm afraid, old man, you didn't think much of the speaking at the banquet last night. The fact is, a noted wit failed us.

Wagg—Ah, that accounts for your trying to get along with a couple of half-wits, eh?

QUITE ENOUGH

Physician—Let me feel your pulse, Patient—It has been felt about a hundred dollars' worth, already.

Let Them Know That You Saw Their "Ad" in The Bucknellian

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

PRINCETON MAXIMS

Each year, the graduating class at Princeton University formulates certain maxims of advice for the conduct of the incoming freshmen. Four years ago the seniors who will graduate this year were left with the following words of wisdom by the graduating seniors of that year:

"Emulate 1922; pipe down; respect and worship upperclassmen; grow up; get some dope; cultivate a taste in pipes; keep away from Trenton; tuck it in; remember who you are; keep away from the Gold Dust Twins—Hank and Frank; bop Historical Introduction; don't suck around; stay out of the Prov' Cat; Princeton is not a country club; take off those fur ent; beware of pull; go out for activi-ent'; beware of pull; go out for activities; grow up and stay home; keep away from the Dean and loose-conscience."

To the uninitiated, it should perhaps be explained that "pipe down" means to avoid freshness and self-assertiveness. "Tuck it in" is somewhat beyond us but we assume that it meant about the same as the doughboy's shout, "Suck 'em in!", which was translated as meaning to assume a military pose—accomplished by drawing in the stomach and throwing out the chest.

The graduating class of the present year is leaving for the edification of the freshmen, the following counsel: "Make friends; work; do not buy a soccer season ticket; do not take anything too seriously; pipe down; tuck it in; keep off the grass; trust in God and Hun's; burn the School of Science; go out for athletics; study; and spend week-ends in Princeton; walk straight ahead; avoid Historical Introduction and take Astronomy; don't be high hat; keep mouth closed; eyes open; study hard and obey rules; keep away from Trenton; keep the head up, but that chest down, down, down; don't drink in Princeton; keep out of the rain; look out for back-fires; emulate 1926; take a good look at a sophomore and then go pat yourself on the back; leave fur coats off and be less in evidence; be normal; if a sophomore smite thee on one cheek, punch his nose, but beware; avoid bridges; I always tell young men to work hard and behave themselves; don't paint numerals on McCosh Walk."

NON-SMOKING VASSAR GIRLS FIGHT NEW RULE

Vassar College is obscured by a smoke pall that has nothing to do with the use of anthracite coal substitutes, and the "old-fashioned girls" of the institution at Poughkeepsie are in revolt.

It all grows out of the ruling of the Students' Association allowing smoking in the council room where undergraduates entertain their visitors. Non-users of cigarettes are demanding a return to the old conditions. One of them painted this gloomy picture of things as they are under the new rule in a letter to the campus paper:

"Stale air like thick, blue ice; protruding feet of those parked in a pallid fringe along every wall; butt and ashes, spittoon-like receptacles. . . . From a pleasant, spacious room, the council room has been turned into a sink of ill-health, ugliness, and filth."

Until the recent action of the Students' Association, smoking was banned in all places where it was likely to give offense to non-smokers.

Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar, disclaims responsibility for the new smoking rule. Other college officials are said to oppose it.

STATE COLLEGE DOCTOR WARNS AGAINST COLDS

According to Dr. J. P. Ritenour, special precaution should be taken at this time of the year against dangers of contracting coughs and colds. At no time of the year is a person more susceptible to these illnesses and, at no time of the year, are they more dangerous.

Statistics taken from various colleges in the different sections of the United States show that out of an average sudent body of 2485 persons twenty-three percent have three or four colds a year; six percent, have two or three colds a year and only seventeen percent have either one cold or none at all. When it is realized how many very serious diseases develop from mere colds, these statistics are alarming.

Professor H. T. Moore, of Dartmouth, who has conducted a nation-wide survey of student views on social and economic questions, claims that the students at Columbia University are the most radical.

COLLEGE WASTES TIME

The current number of the Nebraska Alumnus carries an article over the signature of Emmett V. Maun, who gained an A. B. at the commencement last June, and who now, after six months' tackling of the world, tells his alma mater right to her face that she wasted four years of his life by teaching him things of no earthly use to him out in the world.

The editors printed the letter rather apologetically, saying they did so for the purpose of inviting a discussion of the usefulness of the education the State university gives to its graduates.

Maun says that some graduates land in a nice job kept for them in the family business circle, and others land on their face when they take a broad running jump into the world.

"I am one of those who landed on his face," he writes. "At the university they trained my mind by methods of study, they crammed it full of history, philosophy, theory, and facts, but left me untrained to meet the world and its problems."

Maun tells about his several unsuccessful efforts to find himself and that he is now confronted by a choice between two jobs, neither of which provides more than a living wage. He is without credit. He declares his college course was insufficient and left him unfitted. He concludes:

"Let the idealist use his philosophies. Let him say that money is not everything. But for everything that he tells me money will not buy I will tell him ten things that it will.

"Thus, my university has failed me. It taught me idealism when I needed realism. It taught me theory and I needed practice. It drew me in, a fisherman; it did not advise me and let me learn when it was too late and then turned me out—four years behind the man who did not go.

"If I criticise, I offer also a remedy. Discard a history, a philosophy, a Greek, a geography, a Latin and an economics instructor, and hire a $15,000-a-year man who has trained men and who knows men. Put him at the head of a vocational guidance department. Let him interview every freshman and every senior. Let him advise these men at all stages and finally get a job for the man who is suited for the job. If the head of the department is the right kind of a man, and if he creates the right kind of a department, he will save 100 years of wasted lives every year."

—New York World.

FACULTY TENPIN FIENDS

Forgetting for a time all sense of both dignity and duty, many of Penn State's class-worn professors have turned from their profession to the much more brawny pastime of competing in a tenpin tournament.

Anyone may remove all doubt by visiting the Blue and White alleys where these would-be bowlers can be seen "doing their stuff" almost any evening of the week. There, according to Professor P. T. Ziegler, they roll 'em hard and with a punch that counts. Professor Ziegler recommends this pastime above all others as a cure for somnambulance, indigestion, eight to ten o'clock P. M. blues, and bald-headedness.

Commenting on some of the contestants Professor Ziegler says, "Although many different systems of attack upon the wooden pins are being used, the method followed by Dean A. R. Warnock is the most unique of any. He wears sneakers and claims that aside from the fact that he can make a quicker get-away from his family, they aid him materially in stopping on the unpenalized side of the foul line."

—Penn State Collegian.

CHINESE FRATERNITIES

Fraternities exist and are, indeed, a vital element in Chinese college life as well as in American colleges. The fraternities go by names from the Chinese alphabet as contrasted to American Greek letter fraternities. They are more on the order of clubs during college days, and the members, in a measure, are much closer to one another than is true of the American fraternities. Instead of pledging freshmen each year, the active chapter consists of the same members throughout their lives. Its name on the campus is maintained by memorians or donations. Each member is assessed a fee of from $40 to $50 a year throughout life, and each is pledged to write a letter to the other members once a week during his active school life. When a social get-together is held, it takes the form of a feast instead of a dance, which is the usual form of diversion in American fraternities.

Distribution Costs Great World Problem

Prof. Matz Surveys Situation; Says Colleges Are Helping With Business Courses

During the past two generations, the great business problem has been to increase the production of goods. The ever-expanding national and world markets demanded more goods than our manufacturers could produce. It was a sellers' market. The middleman sought the seller and built the market structure to his very door.

This demand for more goods placed the emphasis on inventions; better organization of capital and labor; better processes. This insistent demand called the technical and engineering schools into being. These schools have done and are still doing magnificent work in training men to fill the highly technical and complex demands of modern productive industry.

Production as a result has caught up with and passed consumption. The big problem now is not to make goods but to sell it. The "Great Captains of Industry" are rapidly passing off the stage. The few apparent exceptions that remain are important because they have, to an unusual degree, solved the question of distribution of their own product.

The great economic problem of today is to lower the costs of distribution. We have revolutionized production but our methods of distribution are still essentially those of 75 and 100 years ago. In many lines like Christmas cards, distribution costs are about 125% of the costs of production; jewelry 70-100%; hardware about 50%; automobiles 45-55%; shoes 50%. It is safe to say that distribution costs average from 50-75% of production costs.

The economic prizes of this generation will go to the marketeer, the master salesman who introduces and develops scientific methods of distribution. The public no longer maligns the producer as a malefactor of great wealth but vents his wrath on the middleman. Even John Rockefeller is restored to respectability and Henry Ford is a national hero. In 1890 we tried by law to prevent combinations and consolidations; now we are trying by law to force our railroads to combine.

We have other and better evidence that the country's attention is being focused on the distributing end of our economic life. The colleges of the country are rapidly establishing schools of commerce and business administration and are turning out hundreds of men scientifically trained to tackle the "big job."

There are approximately 700 schools of collegiate rank in the United States. Of this number 120 are listed in the National Bureau of Education directory as having distinct schools or departments of commerce or business administration at the end of the school year of 1924.

An unpublished study made by the A. W. Shaw Co., publishers of business books, reveals the fact that 400 additional colleges offer representative business courses. "The growth is constantly toward a department of business administration." This same study revealed that during the year 1923-1924 200 colleges gave courses in salesmanship; 270 in business organization and management; 150 in business correspondence; 200 in merchandising; 120 in transportation; 200 in business finance; 120 in federal income taxes; 125 in office management; 250 in labor problems; 200 in advertising; 150 in personnel management; 200 in statistics; 200 in auditing; and 175 in investments.

In answer to an inquiry, the Ronald Press Company of New York, publishers of business books, replied, "We estimate that about 40% of these schools started to give instruction in business within the past five years."

In analyzing the 120 colleges that had distinct schools or departments of business in 1924, it was quite surprising to find that 36% of them were colleges of less than 1000 students. Mere size apparently has no direct relation to the question. Susquehanna had a department and Yale University did not.

In order to ascertain what universities and colleges the size of Bucknell and larger were doing, a list was made of the colleges with an enrolment of 1000 or more students. The number was 116. Of this number data were available on 105. Further analysis of the 105 proved that 65 had schools of commerce or business; 18 had departments of business administration and 22 had departments of economics. The 22 that had departments of economics included some of the largest universities of the country: Michigan, Cornell, Yale, and Iowa State. Others in this list were Arizona, Arkansas, Tufts, Vanderbilt, DePauw, Penn State, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Rutgers. An examination of their catalogs revealed the fact that many of them had elaborate groups of business subjects and are simply waiting for an endowment to open a school of business administration.

Actress Predicts Death of Drama

Jane Cowl, the actress, predicted at Harvard the other day that spoken drama would vanish from America within the next decade or so. For years motion pictures have been weaning patrons from the legitimate theaters. Where fifteen years ago there were 1,540 theaters available for productions on tour, today there are only 374. Many elements contribute to this condition: traveling expenses are higher; railway rates, actors' salaries, hotel bills, operating disbursements are almost double; long jumps must be made between cities. But other factors also enter in, factors attributable directly to the producers and managers. Second rate companies are sent on tour, billed as "the original Broadway cast." Extravagant claims are made for inferior productions. The public has become wary. But the theatrical men have made worse errors than these. Instead of improving their product and reducing their price, they have taken the opposite—and fatal—course of boosting price and lowering quality! And so we have what we have.

PROHIBITION RESULTS

Prohibition has brought about another horrible situation. Many of the imposing college clubs in New York City whose memberships are made up of alumni now located in the big city are having to cope with financial deficits that have resulted from the losses of the former juicy profits from the bars. If the object of higher education is a handsome club building in New York, the maintenance of which is normally made possible by a barroom, then prohibition is indeed a hardship on the college boys, a hardship that seems to be destined to continue indefinitely.

College Men Rated Worth $28 A Week

The value the business world puts on the services of the average American university student upon his graduation, as indicated by a list of positions which will be open to Yale graduates in June, is $28 a week.

This list, prepared by the Yale University Bureau of Appointments, reveals that prospective employers want the type of college man who, in his undergraduate years, was a leader of his fellow-students, who had an outstanding scholastic record and has strong personality. This type, prepared to go anywhere from South America to the Congo to start, may receive an initial salary in most cases ranging from $1,250 to $1,500.

Department Store Bid

One of the outstanding offers of the list is made by a New York department store. It wants one or two men "of the right type and caliber, who have evinced real qualities of leadership and who are interested in merchandising as a profession." This company is willing to pay an initial salary "as high as $2,500 a year."

Some of the opportunities follow:

One of the best known New York trust companies, with which many young Yale graduates have started a successful financial career, has an opening for a man of "outstanding prominence and experience" in self-support. He must be a leader, with good scholastic record and strong personality. The initial salary is $1,500 to $1,800 a year.

A New York bank has opportunities in either domestic or foreign departments for men of suitable qualifications. Only those with outstanding records will be considered. The initial salary is $1,500 to $1,800 a year.

An opportunity is offered by a New York firm, maintaining an extensive South American shipping and export business, to enter the foreign field. The organization's activities cover merchandising, steamship operation, banking, and trade branches through South America.

MRS. FRANK B. EMERY LEGION DINNER GUEST

Mrs. Frank B. Emery (Gertrude Roos, '00,) was a guest at a dinner recently given by Mrs. Henry B. Hicks to the officers and members making up the executive board of the Williamsport American Legion Auxiliary, at the home of the hostess, 765 West Fourth Street. A business meeting followed the dinner.

The third annual banquet of the Auxiliary will be held Monday evening, March 15, in the Lycoming, and Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96, will be one of the two speakers.

Education Department Gets Many New Books

Mrs. Ruth Steese, who is taking extension work at the University, recently gave the department of education the use of some thirty texts in Spanish, through the agency of department library.

The library of the education department, which is kept in the education office, is rapidly being enlarged, mainly through donations from various persons interested in the department and from book publishers who deal in school texts. A number of publishers distribute samples of their texts as soon as new editions leave the press.

This library now includes 25 texts in English, 25 in social science, 30 in mathematics, 16 in natural science, and 45 in foreign language.

Among the books in the library are several very old prints, a few of them ranging from fifty to a hundred and twenty-five years in age. Among these are "Pike's Arithmetic," published in 1804; "Goldsmith and Guy's Geography," 1821; "Comstock's Natural Philosophy," 1849, and H. G. Hollanti's "Life of Lincoln," 1866.

The text on geography contains a rather peculiar chapter on the origin of the earth, introduced by the following paragraphs:

"The earth was once in a confused and desolate state, but by divine providence, in the space of six days, it was reduced into a habitable world; clothed with trees, shrubs, plants, and flowers, and stocked with various kinds of animals.

"Sixteen hundred and fifty-six years after the earth was made and inhabited, it was overflowed and destroyed by a deluge; so that a general destruction and devastation were brought upon the earth, and all things in it, both man and beast, excepting Noah and his family, who, by the special care of God, were preserved in a certain ark or vessel, with such kinds of living creatures as he took with him."

From time to time books in the various high school subjects have come to the department from the following publishers:

Allyn and Bacon, Lippincott, the American Book Company, Scott Foresman and Company, Ginn and Company, Scribner's, D. C. Heath and Company, Newson and Company, and the Chicago University Press.

Frogs and the Weather

As long as frogs remain yellow in color nothing but fine weather may be expected. Should, however, their coats begin to assume a brown hue, it is a sign that bad weather will shortly arrive.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

A bit of copy struck our eye the other day and set us thinking again. Someone turned in an item about a fraternity basketball team being greeted in a neighboring town with the slogan of "Beat Bucknell!"

* * * *

Fraternity athletic teams in themselves are a good thing for they tend to draw a larger number of the students into athletic activities than would participate if there were no teams except the varsity.

* * * *

But the legitimate field of the fraternity team is in competition with the other fraternity teams of the college. The whole idea of the fraternity teams is to encourage intramural athletics and to serve as feeders for the varsity teams.

* * * *

The word intramural means within the walls. Thus the object of an intramural sport is necessarily local.

* * * *

The college coaches and trains and controls the men who go out to represent her as a varsity team. Every precaution is taken to make that team represent the best that Bucknell has to offer.

* * * *

Then the whole plan is interrupted by having a mediocre fraternity team, without coaching, without control, and without sanction, go out from the University, and in the eyes of the people outside, representing the University, put up an exhibition that is not worthy of a first class high school organization.

* * * *

Some of the fraternity basketball teams have been playing good ball against high school and other outside squads, but no matter how good the team may be, the principle is wrong. The public does not distinguish between the printed statements "Bucknell fraternity team," and "Bucknell varsity team," and very often the sports editor of a city paper makes the distinction more difficult by calling these barnstorming Greeks by the name of the "Bucknell passers" or the "young collegians" or some other such misleading catch name.

* * * *

If the fraternity men want to play games outside let them organize independent clubs just as our musicians organize independent orchestras, but leave the name of the University for the varsity to defend. It will receive much better treatment at their hands. Remember that the only official teams of the University are those recognized by the Athletic Council and that we should in no way bring disgrace upon the name of Bucknell's athletes by sending out an unsponsored team.

* * * *

Student Council might well consider this matter and pass upon it as a precedent for future councils and for the government of the baseball season which is about to open.

Never has progress seemed so swift

GRANDMOTHER'S girlhood would seem pathetically poor in comforts to us today. She never knew the convenience of electrically done housework; of time saved in cooking; of swift trips through the country by motor; of the world's best music in her home, out of the air.

A generation has changed the lives, comforts and habits of the world.

Tomorrow —new conveniences, new comforts will swiftly find their way into our lives.

The advertisements will herald their coming. Today a manufacturer will announce a new and better product. Tomorrow a million men and women will use it as an old friend.

An advertisement breaks down the barrier of distance and tells to all the world—in a day's time—the best and newest things the world has devised.

People who keep abreast with progress read the newspaper advertisements.

Newspaper advertising is a herald of better things.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Beta Kappa Helpless; Phi Psi Merciless

McCaskey, Tuck, and Hulick defeated the Beta Kappa team in a contest which turned into an utter rout Saturday afternoon. These three players filled in three positions for the Phi Kappa Psi team, but did the scoring for the whole quintet. McCaskey meshed the net for eight field goals, Hulick had nine two pointers, and Tuck registered seven. The final score was Phi Psi 62; Beta Kappa 8.

Fisher and Hetler enjoyed one field goal apiece for the only twin-counters which the Beta Kappas registered. The game little resembled a basketball tilt, and the ball was in one half of the court, in the possession of the Phi Psi eagers, most of the time each half. The summary:

Phi Kappa Psi	FG.	F.	T.

Non-frat Field Goals Finish Kappa Sigma

The Non-frat quintet nosed out the Kappa Sigma eagers in a fast battle last Wednesday evening. With the score tied at 22 all, a Non-frat courtman netted a free throw for a 23 to 22 victory for his team. The Non-frats led 13 to 10 at half time.

"Jimmy" Signorino and Stevens did most of the offensive work for the victors. Signorino caged one field goal and five fouls out of an equal number of chances for seven points, while Stevens, playing a center position, netted one basket and four out of seven free tries. Pierce, Kappa Sigma forward, played a brilliant game for the losers. His four field goals were all exceptionally hard tries. Shorts also showed up well for the Kappa Sigs. The summary:

Lambda Chi Lambasts Battling Beta Kappa

Lambda Chi Alpha ran wild against the Beta Kappa team in the second game played Monday evening, March 1, winning 45 to 13. The game was good to witness and although the Beta Kappa passers were weak on offense they threw up a defense which caused the Lambda Chi dribblers to register most of their counters from long range.

Wood, Bailey, and Karmilowicz played good basketball for the winners. Wood was high scorer with six field goals. Bailey and Karmilowicz each counted four times from the court. Knieriem and Young shone for the Beta Kappa quintet. The summary:

Important Statistics

A statistician has figured that the lumber used yearly in the United States would build and finish a double row of five-room houses, which, 100 feet apart, would reach from New York to Seattle, south to San Francisco, east to New Orleans and back to New York.

Cleans and Shines

A little kerosene in the water used washing linoleum or oilcloth will act as a fine cleaner and give a splendid gloss to the material.

3x3—9 AND THAT EQUALS HALICKI RECORD AS LEADER

When Edward Halicki attended Hanover High School before entering Bucknell, he was a three-sport captain. But this is not all! For three years he acted in this capacity, being captain in football, basketball, and baseball in 1922-23-24. Another fact which makes this achievement more significant is the size of the town from which "Eddie" comes. Hanover contains 25,000 inhabitants. This clearly shows that "Eddie" won his laurels fairly and had no "pull," characteristic of small-town schools. "Eddie" continued his practice of leading athletes after entering Bucknell, being honored by the captainey of the Freshman Varsity football team.

BUCKNELL FRESHMEN TO PLAY BELLEFONTE

The freshman basketball team will wind up its cage season in Tustin gymnasium Saturday afternoon, when it meets the Bellefonte Academy team in a return contest to the one played at Bellefonte last Friday evening.

The yearlings expect to close their season with another victory over the Snavely passers. Musser's first year men defeated the Bellefonte team in their previous encounter. The frosh will line up in their final game with Colestock and Klosterman at forwards, Captain Seiler at center, and Halicki and Woodring guards.

The game will probably be broadcast from WJBU, the Bucknell broadcasting station.

PROF. JOHN W. RICE GETS PLENTY OF SPACE

Professor John W. Rice will soon have room to accommodate his large Bible Class in the Lutheran Sunday School, as the spacious addition that is being built for that purpose is nearing completion.

Professor Rice's class numbers about three hundred members, and some time ago it became apparent that additional space was necessary.

The new part measures 30-70 feet and includes a spacious basement, a large room on the first floor, and a balcony that joins with the regular balcony of the present Sunday School room. There is also a large open stairway leading from the first floor vestibule on the Third street side.

The dedication exercises will take place about Easter time or shortly after.

Mark the Line

New lead pipe is expensive, and also expensive to lay, hence this little stunt may help you save some money. Where lead pipes are covered by a rough floor there is always the danger that the steamfitter may cut through the floor and through the pipe, but if the line of pipe is marked on the floor there will be little danger.

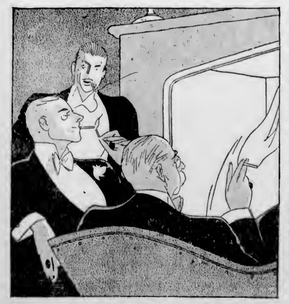
When old grads drop in—and around the fire experiences of then are fondly retold —have a Camel!



WHEN famed men return. And by dancing firelight they relate their stories of old—have a Camel!

For Camel helps all men who rise proudly to rise higher and more jauntily. Camels never harm or tire your taste, no matter how plentifully you smoke them. You'll never find more friendly flavor than you get in Camels.

So this night when those from long ago return to think of the roads that join. As you see in their past your future unfold, then zestfully taste the smoke that's prized by the world's experienced.

Have a Camel!

Into the making of this one cigarette goes all of the ability of the world's largest organization of expert tobacco men. Nothing is too good for Camels. The choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos. The most skilful blending. The most scientific package. No other cigarette made is like Camels. No better cigarette can be made. Camels are the overwhelming choice of experienced smokers.

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

Interest seems to be lacking in the interfraternity basketball series of late. The chief cause of this has been the postponement of several of the better games due to their conflicting with the varsity schedule.

LAFAYETTE STUDENTS 50-50 ON CHARLESTON

Half of them do and half of them don't do the Charleston in the senior class at Lafayette College, according to returns from the questionnaire just published by the Lafayette Lyre, college humorous publication. And only one in five owns a fur coat as a badge of his collegiateness.

Outside of these failures, the majority of the senior class measures up to the usual standard for being collegiate in matters of education, favoring football as a favorite sport, smoking, etc. The majority expect to marry, and would prefer an "L" to a Phi Beta key. Ray Griffith and Norma Shearer are named as favorite movie actors, and Will Rogers and Ethel Barrymore are favorite legitimate actors.

Theory And Practice Conflict In Teaching

The department of education and psychology of the Pennsylvania State College made a study last year of the subjects which college students prepare to teach as compared with the subjects which they actually do teach after graduation. Some of the results are printed in the Pennsylvania School Journal for March, 1926.

Of the 2538 Pennsylvania high school teachers answering the questionnaire sent out by the department, 1525 (60.1 percent.) were teaching exclusively the subjects in which they had majored or minored in college; whereas 1013 (39 percent.) were teaching subjects in which they had neither majored nor minored. And of this latter group 119 were teaching exclusively the subjects in which they had had no especial preparation.

A striking fact revealed by the questionnaires is that the combinations selected in college are seldom used in practice. Let us take English as a typical example. In college 37 prepared in English alone, 76 in English and ancient languages, 161 in English and modern languages, 35 in English and mathematics, 36 in English and sciences, and 230 in English and the social sciences. In practice 322 are teaching English alone, 57 English and ancient languages, 61 English and modern languages, 28 English and mathematics, 10 English and sciences, and 102 English and the social sciences.

The questionnaire suggests the relative demand for the different subjects in college and in high school:

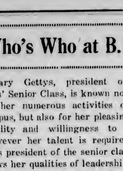
Subjects	Major Equivalents Studied in College	Equivalents Taught in High School
English	513	551
Social Sciences	450	449
Mathematics	316	425
Natural Sciences	393	401
Ancient Languages	223	229
Modern Languages	340	225
Commercial Branches	46	96
Home Economics	54	59
Physical Training	15	25
Manual Training	12	21
Agriculture	30	19
Music	12	13
Art	11	11

The discrepancies between preparation and actual teaching are not in many cases alarming, but an examination of the figures reveals the fact that altogether too many teachers are giving instruction exclusively in subjects to which they did not give their principal attention while in college. Only 352 of the 1400 teachers who are employed to teach exclusively one subject devoted the greater part of their time to that subject while they were in college.

Who's Who at B.U.

Mary Gettys, president of the Girls' Senior Class, is known not only for her numerous activities on the campus, but also for her pleasing personality and willingness to assist wherever her talent is required.

As president of the senior class, she shows her qualities of leadership. She is guiding the girls of '26 through a very successful year and her management shows a world of pep and executive ability which is hard to surpass.



Mary Gettys, '26

Mary is a member of Phi Mu fraternity and a particularly active home economics student. Those who were present at the "College Girls' Reception" will remember her success as chairman of the refreshment committee. She was re-elected house president of Main Building this semester, having proved her worth in that office during the first part of the year.

She served on both the Freshman Hop Committee and the Junior Prom Committee. During her junior year, she was a member of the Student Executive Board and performed the duties of this office with the same precision that marks all her other activities.

Whether she is amusing her friends by her excellent piano playing, an accomplishment in itself, serving on one of her numberless committees, or presiding over some organization, Mary is loved and admired by her fellow students. She is the kind of a girl who accepts responsibilty and proves equal to the occasion.

OUR LIVES LIKE A CAR, SAYS DEAN A. E. CLARK

Dean Amelia E. Clark addressed the students of the Milton High School at their chapel exercises in the High school auditorium on Wednesday, March 3, and gave some high-lights on life on the Hill.

She began her address with the thought that it was a good thing to have an educational institution on a hill. It makes one puff to climb a hill and requires an effort to reach the top.

Our lives are much like a car, and there is a difference in the method of how we get to the top. Some cars scarcely get started, stall on the hill, and stop. Others get a good start and take the hill easily. The start constitutes half the battle, whether it is the beginning of a new class, a new subject, a new year, or the beginning of life. It has been said that if a man keeps going straight for thirty years, he will surely reach the top in good form.

Let us look at ourselves. A car needs gas to go, so do we, but our gas is nothing more than enthusiasm—the fruit of wanting to accomplish definite aims, with vim, vitality, and pep. A car needs oil. Let us use the oil of gladness, be more pleasant, and enjoy the trip, and our path will be smooth.

There are some drawbacks, too. These are like carbon in the cylinders of a car, and the biggest one is grouch, a big handicap that will retard our progress by being intolerant of the other person. Most of us have to be tolerated, so let us not be too free with criticism of others. Let us consider the tires. They are like courage and perseverance. But beware! There may be blowouts, and these may be caused by misery or misfortune, so keep your tires in good condition.

And now we come to the finish of the car—it is probably highly polished. The polish does not make the car go, it lends dignity to it. Try to be polished, for this gives the stamp of finish to a gentleman or lady. The car must have brakes, too. This is sometimes our temper. Hold it in control, for it has a lot to do with "getting there." The way in which we run our car has a big bearing on our goal. We must go carefully, and use the courtesy of the road, or we may have a "smash-up", and thus impede our progress.

Miss Clark stated that if our lives were equipped with all these things there is no reason why we cannot make the hill of life. And we do not need to stall or stop, but we can sail right through "on high."

The report of the talk was taken from the Milton Evening Standard.

Bucknell's Arctic Explorers

BY RAY H. EDWARDS, '26

The rescue of the Fiala-Ziegler expedition to the Arctic in 1905, in which the devoted friendship between two Bucknell men was tested, has been recalled to memory by a recent story in The Public Ledger, which tells how the crew of a stranded Danish schooner, the Dagny, was saved from starvation by finding a store of provisions, cached twenty years previously, by the first Ziegler expedition.

The principals in this remarkable story of friendship are Dr. George Shorkley, Bucknell '92, who acted as surgeon on the Fiala-Ziegler expedition, and Dr. M. Frederick Mount, ex-'97, who served in a similar capacity on the relief expedition that rescued the Fiala party. Their friendship dates back to the days when both were students together at Bucknell.

Though not in the same class, the two men belonged to the same fraternity, Phi Kappa Psi, and a very strong attachment sprang up between them that lasted through their college days and grew stronger during the years that followed. The test of their friendship came when Dr. Mount joined the daring rescue party in search of his lost companion of college days.

The first Ziegler expedition, known as the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition, has little to do with the story of these two Bucknellians, except that when the party became stranded, Dr. Shorkley got his first touch of Arctic adventure, for he sailed with the relief ship, in search of that lost party. Under Williams S. Champ, as leader, he sailed on the Frithjof, as surgeon. The party started for the Pole in July, 1901. This relief party came back in September, 1902.

On the return of the Baldwin-Ziegler Arctic expedition, the late William Ziegler, who had so liberally financed it, resolved to send a second in search of the North Pole. It was not until December of that year, that a leader was chosen. Mr. Ziegler then gave the command to Anthony Fiala with instructions to sail North the following spring.

The first taste of arctic life seems only to have whetted Dr. Shorkley's appetite for adventure, and when the expedition left Tromso, Norway, on the America, in July, 1903, Dr. Shorkley was aboard as surgeon.

In describing the ship, Fiala wrote that, "The America was anything but a pleasure yacht. Crowded with thirty-nine men, two hundred and eighteen dogs, and thirty ponies, we had more the appearance of an overloaded freighter or cattle steamer, with every available inch of deck space packed with cargo. Hard, manual labor was the portion of all alike."

Early in the morning of August 31, the America made her farthest north, which was just beyond the 82nd parallel of latitude. The ship was then relieved of its cargo and the party made preparations to remain on Teplitz Bay for the winter. A large tent was built for dogs and ponies and a hut for the men. Some of the ponies, in their wild desire for freedom, broke loose and were lost in crevasses, and a number of young dogs floated away on broken ice in a gale.

The storms on the bay were many and severe. Storms and crashing ice crushed the America and one night in December she disappeared beneath the ice, never more to be seen. With no means of effecting their escape from the frozen North, the explorers could only hope for relief. They were forced to settle down for the winter. In the following spring they moved with their dog sleds toward Cape Flora and set up a camp, where they might watch for a relief ship.

Several attempts were made to reach the Pole by small groups with sleds but proved fruitless. Fiala at last gave up and was ready to return homeward as soon as relief came. The party had been in the Arctic region for two full years before the second relief expedition reached it, the first having failed.

It was in connection with these two relief expeditions that Dr. Mount comes into the story. While Dr. Shorkley was in the Arctic regions, Dr. Mount was practicing in Hot Springs, Ark. He had been watching with intense interest the fate of his old college chum, and when it became necessary to send out a relief party, Mount was one of the first to volunteer.

Dr. Mount did not give up on account of the hardships of this first voyage. On the contrary, he was more than ever determined to aid in the rescue of his old chum. Though he had married Miss Laura Pue, of Washington, D. C., only a little while before Relief Expedition No. 3 was to start, he left his bride, returned to Norway, and sailed once more for the frozen North. The party left Tromso on June 14, 1904, after which time absolutely no word was received from it until August, 1905, when a cablegram announced the success of the expedition and the good health that prevailed among the members of the rescued party. One story is that Dr. Shirkley was rambling around the ice gorges in desperation, when his old college chum came from behind a large block of ice leading a group of Norwegians.

Such is the story of a friendship between two Bucknell men—a friendship so devoted that it led a man to give up a flourishing medical practice and a newly wedded wife, and face the dangers of the far North and even death, to rescue his college chum.

Dr. Shorkley was born at Lewisburg, November 21, 1871, and was consequently only 35 years of age at the time of the expedition. In 1892 he graduated from Bucknell with the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy. Immediately after his graduation Shorkley became assistant engineer and quartermaster of the Hemenway expedition, sent out by Harvard University, to Copan, Honduras, for the purpose of making casts of the ancient temple at Copan, for the Harvard Archeological Exhibit at the World's Fair at Chicago.

After serving throughout the war, he returned to Hahnemann, from which he graduated in 1899. He at once moved to Camden, Maine, where he built up a fine practice and married Miss Alice McLaughlin, of Old Point, Me.

Dr. M. F. Mount was born in Trenton, N. J., September 6, 1870. After leaving high school he was for a time a page in Congress. Later he entered Bucknell, where he joined the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity in 1891, the year before Dr. Shorkley graduated. He played end on the football team and was remarkable for his athletic prowess.

Like Dr. Shorkley, he attended Hahnemann Medical College and received the degree of M. D. Shortly after he settled down to practice at Hot Springs, Ark., where he acquired a fine business.

But though he was far away from Bucknell and his old friends, he did not forget them. Perhaps he was the exception that proved the rule that "out of sight is out of mind."

Like A Good Play? See Frill And Frown

"The Goose Hangs High," by Lewis Beach, is the title of the three-act play to be given by Frill and Frown, women's dramatic society, in Bucknell Hall on Friday evening, March 26.

It is a comedy of family loyalty and affection, bringing the younger generation face to face with the older. The earlier scenes portray a family in which the parents are indulgent and the children willful. The "Paterfamilias" revolts, and as a result the family faces the prospect of poverty. The children rise to the occasion and prove their real worth.

Comedy and pathos are delightfully interwoven in the course of the play, which has been enthusiastically praised by critics.

The cast of characters is as follows: the flapper daughter, Florence Utt, '26; the mother, Edna Watson, '27; the grandmother, Mildred Fox, '27; the maid, Helen Williams, '28; the next-door neighbor, Helen Durkin, '28; the elder brother's sweetheart, Cornelia Trowbridge, '28.

The male characters were chosen for the most part from Cap and Dagger, and will include Arthur Harris, '29; Dem Mase, '27; Frederick Davies, '26; Stewart Rankin, '26; Frank Johnston, '28; Barton Dakin, '27, and Abram Gaskill, '28.

Try-outs for the girls' parts were held on Wednesday evening, March 3, in the Women's College. The judges were Instructor and Mrs. C. W. Smith.

The first practice was held in Bucknell Hall on Friday afternoon, March 5.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT GIVES ANOTHER TEA

A tea for sophomores majoring in English was given by the English department on Friday afternoon, March 5, from 4:30 to 5:30 in B 34. This is the second of the teas given by the department in an effort to bring the instructors into closer contact with the students. The first student tea was held the preceding Friday for seniors and juniors whose major is English.

Professors H. W. Robbins, L. L. Rockwell and W. H. Coleman, Assistant Professor H. R. Warfel and Mr. R. E. Harris received the students. Mrs. Robbins officiated at the tea-table, assisted by Mrs. Warfel, Mrs. Smith, and Mrs. Harris.

In speaking of the teas, Dr. Robbins, of the English department, said that he was pleased with their success and hoped that this year would set a precedent for future social gatherings of the English faculty and students.

PROF. FRANK BURPEE PRESIDES AT LUNCHEON

Professor F. E. Burpee and several engineering students attended a meeting of the Central Pennsylvania section of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers which was held in Williamsport on Monday, March 6.

Professor Burpee presided at the luncheon which was held by the society at the Lycoming hotel and which was followed by an address on the topic "Engineering at the Bureau of Standards," given by Dr. D. K. Burgess, director of the United States Bureau of Standards.

During the morning the members of the organization inspected the C. A. Reed Manufacturing Company plant and the Lycoming Manufacturing Company plants in the city.

The Central Section has a membership of about 1000 men. The National Organization includes about 10,000 members.

B. U. EXTENSION WORK PROVES VERY POPULAR

Approximately fifteen teachers who are candidates for A. B., B. S., and A. M. degrees in various colleges and universities have urged Dr. N. P. Benson, city superintendent of schools, to continue his course in contemporary literature given during the first semester, under the auspices of the Extension Department of Bucknell University. The course will begin Thursday evening, March 11, at 7 o'clock at the High school, and will be "Student's in Contemporary Prose;" "The Essay" and "The Short Story."

The two hour courses just completed in the extension work were: "Educational Psychology," by Principal A. M. Weaver, of the Williamsport High school; "Teaching Appreciation of American Literature," by Professors Whyte, Coleman, Robbins, Rivenburg, Rockwell, Warfel, and Lawson, of the Bucknell University faculty; "Contemporary British and American Poetry," Dr. Benson. Over one hundred teachers and students took the course.

Church Holds Forum About Denominations

The second of a series of open forum meetings conducted by the Baptist Church was held Sunday evening under the direction of Professor C. M. Bond, of the department of Religious education. The question for discussion was, "What Shall We Do with Our Denominations?"

The Rev. Dr. R. M. West introduced the subject in a short talk in which he pointed out the elements of theory, fact, enthusiasm, and human nature that have been the foundation of denominationalism. At first responses were slow in coming and Professor Bond's appeals were becoming specific. However, a number of students and others spoke briefly on the subject before the summation was made by Dr. West. Among these speakers were Professor W. G. Owens, '80, Anna Stephens, '26, Caryl Dutton, '27, Margarida Reno, '27, and E. D. Carstater, '27.

A number of students also took part in the formal service. R. H. Edwards, '26, read the scripture lesson; John C. Gilmour, '27, sang a tenor solo, "The New Jerusalem;" and Dorothy Gilbert, '27, led in prayer.

DEBATERS AND EDITORS TO GET CREDIT HOURS

The faculty at its meeting held March 3, 1926, passed the following motion on the recommendation of the committee on curriculum and courses:

"That opportunity be offered to members of the college debating teams and the editor-in-chief, the managing editor, and the news editor of the Bucknellian for supervised practice in debating and journalism, for which credit will be allowed, upon the approval of the professor in charge, upon the following basis:

"Speaker in one debate or alternate in three or more,—one semester hour; speaker in three debates,—two semester hours; speaker in four or more debates,—three semester hours.

"News editor, on hour each semester; managing editor, two hours each semester; editor-in-chief, three hours each semester.

"That the maximum credit allowed a student during his college course may not exceed twelve hours for both activities, or ten hours in either of the two.

"That this action be retroactive to September 1925."

MAYOR AND MANICURE MADE GOOD IMPRESSION

The cast of the Cap and Dagger play, "The Mayor and The Manicure," visited Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, February 27, and presented the play under the auspices of the Green Room Club, Franklin and Marshall's dramatic club.

The play was well received by the Lancaster audience and a great deal of comment was made in the Lancaster papers on the presentation.

The students who took part in the performance were Eleanor Dakin, '26, Edna Watson, '27, Kenneth Shifer, '26, and Frank E. Johnston, '28. Fred B. Davies, '26, was stage manager and Assistant Professor Harry R. Warfel directed the play.

Let the B. U. A. B. Help You

All persons desiring the aid of the University appointment bureau of the department of education in securing positions should register at once if they have not already done so.

It is important that all registrants should turn in their pictures to the bureau immediately. Five small pictures should be filed by each registrant.

The appointment bureau will be appreciative of any reports of vacancies in teaching positions. Any person knowing of such a vacancy should leave a note of the vacancy at the education office in East Wing.

Easy to Give Up

It is as a rule, far easier to sacrifice self—to give up, that is, our moral existence to the first one who chooses to take it—than to fulfill our spiritual destiny, to accomplish, right to the end, the task for which we were created.—Masterlinck.

BAPTIST SINGERS GIVE FINE CONCERT

The choir includes many students in its membership as well as instructors from the School of Music. Professor Stolz, Mrs. Wilcox, Miss Coe, and Mr. Hartz from the teaching staff and Albert Weidensaul, '29, Robert Dilworth, '27, Rolland Dutton, '26, John Gilmour, '27, H. H. Pierson, '28, Fred Davies, '26, B. E. Evans, '29, S. Githins, '29, Inez Robison, '29, Elizabeth Siegfried, '29, Grace Pheifer, '26, and Grace Mihous, '27, of the students were the Bucknell representatives in the concert.

In preparation for this concert the choir has spent many hours of hard drilling, as one might guess from the excellence of the program Monday night. In view of the favorable reception of this program, Dr. R. M. West announces that it will probably be repeated at an early date.

Novel programs made up in blueprint paper were a feature of the dance. The hall was decorated in orange and blue drapes with many of the fraternity banners decorating the walls. As twelve o'clock drew near confetti showered down on the dancers and lent its bright spots of color to the scene.

The committee in charge of the affair for the upper class engineers was "Fred" Evans, "Tom" Hann, "E. C." Shaffer, "Si" Carll, and "Rules" Bailey, all of the class of '26.

PROFESSOR NELSON DAVIS RECOVERING FROM THE 'FLU'

Professor Nelson E. Davis, head of the biology department, has been seriously ill with the "flu" for the past week or ten days. He has been under the care of Dr. Harry Thornton. He was so much improved by the early part of this week that Mrs. Davis said he fully expected he would be out of bed by Wednesday or Thursday, and would soon be able to return to his classes.

PINS!

Pins have always been either useful or ornamental,—sometimes both.

* * * *

We've always used them and it seems that we always shall.

* * * *

We're particularly susceptible to pins, in college,—there's a real point to the matter.

* * * *

Some people get them to get rid of them, and others rid of them to get them.

* * * *

It's surprising how smoothly the cycle works—when an expert is behind the wheel,—or we should say, pin.

* * * *

It's all in the knowing how!—so they say.

* * * *

Some pins float around from one person to another with little or no effort,—or effect.

* * * *

Just a little game of put and take—and where does the luck stand in such cases?—we ask you.

* * * *

Other pins are solid as a rock,—at least the manly hearts on which they rest seem hard enough to be called hearts of stone.

* * * *

Such hearts are like flint—just wait—some day they may flash a spark,—

* * * *

Then watch out,—better run for shelter for the pin will land somewhere.

Where? That's the question, or should we say point?

* * * *

Quite a few pins have strayed away this winter—and yet—spring must have its traditional spree.

* * * *

We doubt if any one will be immune then! But, of course there will always be some who will not give way.

* * * *

We wouldn't expect them to, but then sometimes the unexpected happens. Who knows?

THE BELLE HOP DANCE MARCH 27 AT THE ARMORY

VOLUME XXIX LEWISBURG, PA., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 17, 1920 NUMBER 24

SOPH COTILLION DRAWS BIG CROWD THAT FILLS HALL

Dance Room Lavishly Decorated With Balloons and Banners Hung From Ceiling

SUBSTITUTE ORCHESTRA PLAYS SNAPPY MUSIC

Soph President Evades Freshmen Crawls From Hiding Place. Joins Smiling Dancers.

Attended by a crowd of more than 130 couples, that comfortably filled the Armory, the Class of 1928 had its annual spree last Saturday evening, March 13, when the Sophomore Cotillion was held.

Balloons were the principle accessory used in the decorating scheme, and they were arranged in a manner that was very pleasing to the early arrivals. Some were strung on wires stretching from one corner to another, and others hung in clusters on the lights and rafters. The couples that arrived a little late, however, were not able to appreciate this fully for the souvenir hunters made an early raid on the decorations. Fraternity banners adorned the walls.

The orchestra, which was the Pennsylvania Ramblers, from Gettysburg, instead of the one that had been announced previously, left very little to be desired in the matter of Terpsichorean inspiration and everybody was "pepped up" to the point where, whether it was Charleston or the the plainest dancing, it was done with the fullest of spirit. They had the crowd with them from start to finish, being repeatedly encored and greeted with Texan yells.

Dean Rivenburg and Clark Present

Dean Rivenburg, Dean Clark, and Miss Margaret Lawson were the chaperones of the dance, and although none of them participated in the dancing, their conversation added to the success of the evening.

Neat programs from the University Print Shop and punch from Wainies completed the details of the first-class first class function of the year.

The success of the dance is due to Milton F. "Bud" Frable and his committee, P. V. Arow, S. P. Bernhaut, S. C. Braucher, A. F. Buffington, C. H. Drum, O. E.Daemler, D. E. Gring, R. R. Hitchens, N. A. Karmilowicz, D. L. Nicholson, Catherine O. Cunningham, Elizabeth A. James, Catherine A. Marshall, and Yolanda E. Frank, all of whom worked faithfully to "put it over."

Johnson Outwits Frosh

College tradition remained unbroken when Frank E. Johnston, sophomore president, attended the Sophomore Cotillion, despite the ambitious attempts of the freshmen to prevent his appearance. At 8:15 "Tubby" crawled out of a small cupboard on the second floor of the Armory, and made his way to the dance floor where he was greeted by the dancers.

Johnston had cut classes since Monday, in order to elude the Frosh. On Monday evening, March 8, fifteen freshmen searched the "Demie" house, but were unable to discover the portly gentleman who was hiding in one of the rooms. Soon after the baffled searchers had departed, "Tubby" made

Y. W. C. A. Gives Pageant

"New Lamps for Old," a beautiful little allegory, telling in song how different countries light their lamps at the lamp of the spirit of the Y. W. C. A., was presented by the Y. W. C. A. in Bucknell Hall on Thursday evening, March 11, just before the third of Dr. Edith Hale Swift's Lectures.

The little pageant was introduced by Martha Morrow, '26. Eleanor Dakin, '26, took the part of the spirit of the Y. W. Very attractive costumes were worn by the players.

JULY 7 OR 8 WILL BE LEAGUES' MATTY DAY

The total receipts from a game to be played between the New York "Giants" and the Washington "Senators" on July 7, at the Polo Grounds in New York, will be given to the University for a memorial. This will be "Matty" Day for the big leagues.

Sigma Chi Reunion A Notable Gathering

Judges Ferris and R. T. Osborne, Col. Sharp, and Rush Kress Among Prominent Guests.

The week-end of March 13 was devoted by Kappa chapter of Sigma Chi to the entertainment of its alumni, preparing for them a re-union that brought Bucknell men from all sections of the country to visit their Alma Mater, and talk again with fraternity brothers from whom they had been separated for years.

The homecoming began with a talk by Hon. John Howard Ferris, Mu chapter, Denison University, '76, on "The Forces that Win", delivered in before an enthusiastic and appreciative audience of students. A smoker was held after the lecture, and the "Sigs" enjoyed an additional two hours of humorous and serious tales incident to college and fraternity life.

The banquet held at the Cameron House Saturday night capped a pleasant week-end with the alumni, which was especially appreciated by the active men, who were more than ever brought to realize the significance of the fraternal and college life they are leading.

President Hunt a Guest

President Emory W. Hunt, Dean R. H. Rivenburg, and Dr. J. S. Swartz, president of the Board of Trustees of Bucknell, were the guests of the Sigs, and each, in response to the toasts of Rush H. Kress, gave short talks on college days when Bucknell was beginning to make a name for itself.

Judge John Howard Ferris, former mayor of Cincinnati, and a man deeply interested in fraternal life, showed to the banqueters the way in which practical application of "The Forces That Win" could be used towards success.

Judge Roy T. Osborne, of New York, president of the general fraternity, and Colonel Alex A. Sharp, chairman of the executive committee of Sigma Chi, drew from their stock of experiences in fraternity work and reviewed for the men many principles of social conduct important in every walk of life.

It is to Rush H. Kress, Kappa, '00, prominent alumnus and trustee of the University that the "Sigs" are indebted for the honor of hearing men who mean so much to Bucknell and to Sigma Chi.

University To Have Suitable Infirmary

Entering Students and Athletes To Have Physical Examination Says President E. W. Hunt.

President Hunt informed a Bucknellian reporter recently that the establishment of an infirmary will be recommended to the Board of Trustees in June.

"It is hoped that next fall there will be an infirmary that will give adequate care to any student who needs it," said Dr. Hunt. "The purpose also will be to see that every student going in for athletics and every member of the entering class shall have a competent medical examination."

The problem of caring for the sick students at the University has long been one of the things that has caused uneasiness to everybody connected with the institution. During the present epidemic of grippe and "flu" that is causing so many students and instructor to "cut" classes, a dispensary was established in the Biology Building under the direction of Professor Rice, of the biology department, and Miss Ruhl, nurse at the Woman's College. The materials given out here were helpful but medicine alone is not adequate protection for the students entrusted to the University.

If the board acts favorably on the recommendation a University dream of long standing will come true.

DON'T GET THE "FLU!"

At the present time a number of the Hill students are victims of this "epidemic of academic illness" which has been so prevelant these last few weeks, and which has afforid us many a "cut" on the professor's part.

A university is a college with a campus.

ENGINEERS' SMOKER A GREAT SUCCESS

Big Four Watch Athletic Trials And Have General Good Time. Burpee Throws Goals.

Eats, though diverting, were not the outstanding entertainment of the program of the Big Four smoker, held Thursday evening, March 11, in the Tustin Gym, at which more than 150 of our engineers gathered for an informal get-together to be amused largely, and largely amused, by the talent of the A. Bs. arranged for by the committee in charge.

After a "Come Bucknell Warriors," the floor was taken by "Rules" Bailey, who conducted the program of the evening. In a few words Assistant Professor D. M. Griffith expressed his appreciation of the new organization and his pride in its success.

Athletic Events Featured

Athletic bouts then acorded entertainment. " Red" Groover and Grier Riemer threw a five-minute mat tussle which was somewhat hard on Riemer's neck. "Benny" Reese and Felix McCormick then bore to in a lively three-round glove battle which ended like a modern movie, the fighters holding a reeking scene at the finish, quite unbecoming to pugilists. As no gym smoker is complete without "Gus" Shorts on the mat, so he and "Gundy"

Frosh Paint Walks, Then Clean 'Em Up

Steel March on Sleeping Sophs: But Latter Hold Roll Call. Make Freshmen Scrub.

Much artistic skill was wasted on Saturday morning, March 13, when the freshmen painted the town "red" with flaming "29s" and "Go to Hell, Sophs," but their efforts came to naught when the energetic sophs called a roll call and made the first year boys erase all evidence which would tend to show that the class of '28 did not merit a "clean" day for its Sophomore Cotillion.

Between the "we sma' hours" of two and four, a gang of would-be-artists covered a lot of territory with paint and brush. The sidewalk to the entrance of every fraternity house was daubed with a large '29. Even the principal street corners of the town were "touched up" with large numerals, and several Fords about town did not escape treatment. "Ad" Behling's roadster was given a lot of "lizzie" labels, which were removed only by a liberal application of turpentine. "Bunny" Learn's old chariot received a "Ray '28" and a "Go to Hell, Sophs," but a black coat of paint removed these signs and made the Ford look as good as new.

Sophs Have Roll Call

Saturday morning dawned as mornings have a habit of doing, and the poor Sophs blinked and winked to see all those '29s staring them in the face. "Mel" Shuttlesworth, vice-president, got busy and called a freshman roll call at ten A. M. Sixty frosh responded. They were divided into gangs, and were set to work with scrub brushes, brooms, paint brushes, and paint remover. Several frosh were sent to cover two large "Go to Hell, Sophs," signs on the Reading railroad bridge at St. George street; the remaining yearlings traveled about town and removed all traces of their early morning toil. Thus the Sophs thought their assumed superiority to be fully vindicated. At any rate, the spirit aroused was worth the effort.

BELLE HOP DANCE

The Belle Hop dance which is to be held at the Armory, March 27, promises to be something more than a promise. The tickets are selling sufficiently well to satisfy the expectations of the staff, who feel sure that with Noble and his Orchestra on the syncopation, the assembled "studes" will find the occasion a ripping success.

However the staff wishes to give notice that tickets numbered 297, 298, 299, and 300 will not be honored at the door, these tickets having been stolen from the Print Shop.

DR. EDITH SWIFT TALKS TO CO-EDS

Says Students Should Be Shown Truths of Life As They Are. Experience Best Teacher.

"Theoretically, coeducation is a splendid institution, but practically it may be precarious," said Dr. Edith Swift in an interview with a Bucknellian reporter on March 12 at Women's College. Dr. Swift, who is a graduate of Radcliffe College and of Johns Hopkins Medical School in the class of '05, went on to say that it is not the student body that affects the practical development of such an educational system, but that the coeducational organization is at fault. However, coeducation is an ideal plan for it teaches one discriminations. Education is the development of the powers of discrimination.

We Should Know the Truth

"Girls and boys should be taught the truths of life. They should be shown that the government falls short of its ideal, that religion does not play the part in everyday life that it should, and that members of the opposite sex are not all Florence Nightingales or King Arthurs.

"Coeducation helps us to see things as they really are, without any false delusions about all things being ideal. In this way we distinguish between

Music Lovers Like Students' Recital

Performers Give Varied Program, Both Vocal and Instrumental. Miss Mary Graham Assists.

Music lovers were again privileged to hear Mary G. Graham, contralto, in a recital presented by the students of the Bucknell University School of Music in Bucknell Hall on Thursday evening, March 11. Miss Graham, who was graduated from the School of Music in 1925, sang a charming group of songs supplementing a well-selected program of vocal, piano, and violin solos by the students.

The program was opened with a piano solo, "Moto Perpetuo," by Dorothy E. Showalter. Paul K. Stolz, with the aid of his violin, charmed the audience with Neurda's "Slav Berceuse." This was followed by two vocal solos, "On the Road to Mandalay," sung by Carl J. Geiser, and Foster's "I Love Thee," sung by Anna-reba Low.

Strickland's "Spring Idyl," played by Mary Hite, preceded a baritone solo, "In a Persian Garden," by Melvin C. Shuttlesworth. "A Resolve," by Fontenaille, was sung by Ruth C. Marion in the composer's native tongue, and was followed by a violin solo by E. Daniel Moll, the "Mazurka" of Wieniaski.

Miss Graham's group of songs included "My Desire" and "Recompense." Rendered in her usual pleasing manner, the songs delighted Miss Graham's audience. The concluding number of the program was by Lewis Kesler, whose rendition of Rachmaninoff's "Polichinelle" left a lasting impression of ease and skill in performing a difficult selection.

BATTERY MEN PLENTIFUL

Coach Walter Blair will be blessed with a wealth of veteran battery material when he takes charge of the Bucknell diamond squad. With three veteran pitchers and an equal number of experienced catchers reporting for the team, the new coach should have no worries about this department.

"Tom" Murphy, righthander, and Neal Blaisdell, clever portsider, should be the mainstays of the Orange and Blue boxmen and the brunt of the hurling burden will probably fall on these two. Phil Martin will likely get his share of relief work for Murphy and Blaisdell.

"Gus" Shorts, relinble backstop of several seasons, is being counted upon to assume full responsibility for the way the catching department is handled. In addition "Mose" Quinn, and "Johnny" Gilmour will probably give any other candidates for the job of alternating with Shorts, plenty of competition. Quinn is also an outfielder and will likely be used in the outer garden when not receiving the hurler's slants.

Alaskans Never Walk, They 'Mush'--Baldwin

Engineer Who Helped Run Line Between Canada and Alaska Describes Latter Land.

"Our Northwestern Territory is generally considered as a vast area of snow and ice, but it is really a region highly favored by nature," was the statement of Asa C. Baldwin in his lecture on "Alaska" at the Baptist church, Thursday evening, March 4. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Education Club.

The speaker devoted the first part of his addres to describing the general character of Alaska, its people, and its resources. "It is interesting to know," he said, "that although the territory east the United States only $7,200,000 when it was bought from Russia, it has already returned to us more than $1,000,000,000 worth of trade, and the remaining resources can hardly be estimated. Only the surface has been touched.

Alaskans Never Walk; They "Mush"

"Alaska is one-fifth as large as the United States, and has a population, including both whites and natives, of fifty thousand. These people are peculiar in that they never walk. They can not walk; they 'mush.' That term derived its meaning from the French Canadians who early settled in the region and whose commands to their dogs were 'Marchons; marchons;' sounding to English ears like 'Mush on, mush on,' and was adopted as such."

Baldwin Mushed 700 Miles

While serving as head of the International Boundary Commission in surveying the Alaska-Canada line, Mr. Baldwin "mushed" more than seven hundred miles from the southern part of Alaska to the Arctic Ocean. The survey was made in order to carry out the provisions of a treaty between the United States and the British Empire, providing that the boundary between the Dominion and Alaska be definitely marked.

The speaker gave a brief history of the territory, explaining that in the days following the discovery of the peninsula, there was a great deal of struggle for its possession among Russia, France, and England.

Russia Claimed Everything

"Russia then claimed that everything in the North Pacific belonged

New York Area Raises Full Endowment Sum

W. W. Kelchner's Gift of $1000 Secures Conditional Pledges Assuring $125,000 Fund

President Hunt received word Monday night from Creighton M. Konkle, '01, chairman of the endowment drive for the New York area, that the last thousand dollars for the fulfilling of that district's $125,000 quota had been subscribed by W. W. Kelchner '86. Mr. Kelchner's subscription was made contribution, when he learned that the in addition to a previous generous goal was so near.

When the drive was first started in the New York area, James S. Swartz, chairman of the board of Trustees since 1917, Rush H. Kress, '00, C. W. Lotte, '14, and T. J. Foley, ex-'13, made a special pledge that, in addition to what they had already given, they would complete the quota of the area if the other alumni of New York and the vicinity would raise a certain amount. The amount just subscribed by Mr. Kelchner brings the subscription of the other alumni to this amount and the total for the whole area is thus insured.

The completion of the campaign in New York is the final assurance of the complete success of the drive. The news was announced by President Hunt at assembly Tuesday morning.

MISS HUNT A FLU VICTIM

Miss Carolyn Hunt, '25, has been confined to her bed for several days on account of a severe attack of the grippe. Miss Hunt was not feeling well Sunday but insisted on performing her usual duties with the choir of the Baptist Church. Monday the physician ordered her to bed. Wednesday he said that he expected her to be able to go out again by Friday.

'SHOULD BE PROUD OF OLD BUCKNELL' JUDGE H. FERRIS

Visitor Says Our Small Colleges Produce Many Notable Men Because of Individuality

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER BASIS OF EDUCATION

Names Prominent Bucknellians Whose Success Illustrates Truth of This Story

"Education must be based on a genuine Christian character," said Judge Howard Ferris, of Yorktown, Virginia, scholar, educator, mayor, judge, and business man, in a talk on "Forces That Win," before an audience of about 150 in Commencement Hall, Friday evening, March 12.

Citing as examples Bucknellians who have, in the past and in the present, won places of prominence in their chosen fields by their unseen forces of personality, Judge Ferris emphasized the utter importance of a gentlemanly attitude toward one's fellow-men, clean speech and actions, and a neat appearance, as the forces in determining a man's success.

Notable Bucknell Men

Theodore A. K. Gesler, '64, was one of these men, asserted Judge Ferris. A lawyer of signal success, Mr. Gesler was a real student with a real personality. Alfred Taylor, '66, and Freeman G. Teed, '73, were also men of broad learning and forceful character, as was Dr. S. Lewis Ziegler, '80, whose recent death saddened the hearts of a multitude of friends. Judge Ferris cited many other men as examples of Bucknell ideals, among them being Dr. James S. Swartz, chairman of the Board of Trustees, and Rush H. Kress, '00.

Praises Small Colleges

Judge Ferris defended the cause of the small college. Being himself a graduate of Denison, the Judge was well fitted to maintain his position. "Many great men are graduates of the small college," he stated, "among them being Charles Evans Hughes, a graduate of Brown, Elihu Root, who received his education at Union, and Samuel Wadsworth Longfellow, who immortalized his Colby days in one of his beautiful poems. The majority of the best thinkers, the greatest lawyers, the ablest leaders, are graduates of small colleges. A small college is known by the kind of men it sends out. Never feel ashamed of the fact that you come from a small college. Its individuality is the cause of its success."

President Hunt Presides

Judge Ferris was introduced by President Emory W. Hunt, who reminisced by telling interesting stories of his former connections with this interesting man. The Judge reciprocated by relating stories of his student days at Denison, and of his later friendship with Dr. Hunt.

Before the address, Mrs. W. W. Wilcox entertained the gathering crowd with two songs, "Spring Song," and, "If Flowers Could Speak." She was accompanied by Lewis Kesler. Both the speech and the vocal numbers were broadcast by WJBU.

Father of Five Bucknellians Dies

Morton I. Sprout, father of five Bucknellians and probable grandfather of others, died at his home in Picture Rocks on March 13. A teacher and business man, he sent all his children to college and the result is that Carl, '08, is now managing editor of the Harrisburg Patriot; Lee, '10, will take charge of his father's business; Donald A. ex-'14, is a commercial artist; Clinton E. '17, is a teacher in the Peddie School; and Marjorie, '21, has been a successful teacher.

Consider the postage stamp, my son. It secures success through its ability to stick to one thing till it gets there.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI KAPPA PSI

Brother Edmund P. Coe, '23, and Charles T. Bunting, '23, were recent visitors at the house.

Brother "Stan" McCaskey has been honored with the captaincy of basketball for next year.

Brother Joe Wood stopped in for a few moments on Friday before leaving for Williamsport.

Brother Hackenburg entertained the boys at the Manufacturer's Club, Milton.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

The March edition of the Phi Gamma Delta magazine published a picture of Christy Mathewson Jr., '27, in connection with the announcement of his recent appointment as a director in the Boston National League baseball club.

"Coz" Seeman, '19, Sigma Chi, was a guest at supper on Thursday.

Mrs. Thomas of Nanticoke, Veta Davis, and Blanche Thompson were guests at dinner on Sunday.

"Speed" Reed, '22, was a guest at dinner Sunday.

Brother Harold L. Shimer, '21, of Milton, was a guest at dinner Thursday evening, March 11.

The Phi Gamma Delta basketball team is facing a strenuous week beginning March 15. It meets three of the strongest teams in the league, T. U. O., S. A. E., and Delta Sigma. "Norm" Davies has been warming up his men for the past week and expects to lead them through victorious. Don Rigg has a weak knee, due to the last varsity game, but he expects to be in good shape for the three games.

Five members of the Bellefonte Academy basketball team were guests at dinner on Saturday.

Headmaster Hughes of Bellefonte Academy was a visitor Saturday.

KAPPA SIGMA

Pledge J. H. Gracler, '29, entertained the other pledges at dinner at the Cameron House Wednesday night, March 10.

The Rev. J. T. Heistand, of Lewisburg, led the discussion group at the house Thursday evening, March 11. The discussion question was, "How radical shall we be?" It was one that aroused a great deal of comment.

Miss Beatrice Weatherill, of Williamsport, and Miss Margaret Aumiller of Lewisburg, were dinner guests at the chapter house on Sunday.

Brothers Crego, '27, Nicholson, '28, and Yates, '28, Kappa Sigma members of Theta Delta Tau, attended the convention of the Druids Fraternity held at Penn State, March 13.

Brother "Pinky" Jones, '23, visited the boys at the chapter house on Sunday.

DELTA SIGMA

Professor H. W. Coleman was a guest at dinner Thursday evening, after which he led the weekly discussion group. The group discussed professionalism in athletics in colleges.

The members of the chapter attended the morning service of the First Presbyterian Church, Sunday, March 14, to hear Brother William H. Sugden, '22, preach.

The program to be broadcast Wednesday evening will consist of the following numbers:

School and Fraternity Songs
Short History of D. S. .... A. T. Purks
Baritone solo ..... Robert Dilworth
Violin duet .... Robert Smith and Paul Stolz.
Reading ..... Gilbert McCune
Fraternity song.
Violin solo ..... Paul Stolz
Quartet ..... Harry Pierson, Robert Dilworth, Paul Stolz
Piano solo ..... Philip Murray
Baritone solo with violin obligato .... Robert Dilworth and Robert Smith.
Fraternity song and Alma Mater

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Professor Burpee and family were guests at the house Monday evening.

Brother William Evans, '25, and his wife (Polly Biery, ex-'28) visited the chapter during the week-end.

A town dance was held at the chapter house on Friday evening. The house was beautifully decorated and Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders furnished the syncopation from a specially constructed platform.

The dance committee went to Williamsport on Saturday to select programs and favors for the "Sem" formal to be held March 31.

The basketball team will go to Muncy Saturday evening to play a second game with the team of that town.

Miss Marion Crago visited her brother Paul, '29, at the house last Saturday.

ALPHA CHI MU

Professor C. M. Bond, of the religious education department, was the leader in a "Y" discussion group held last Thursday evening at the house. The subject was "College Fraternities," and the discussion brought out many practical suggestions as to what should constitute a real college fraternity.

Gordon Goodyear and Paul Richie represented the fraternity at the funeral of Mrs. Roy Metzler, sister of Gilbert Bennett, '27, held at his home in Port Matilda, Penna.

E. Daniel Moll, of Shamokin, was a guest of the fraternity at dinner on March 11.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

Mrs. W. P. Carnely and Miss Gertrude Richards, both of Madora, Pa. were Saturday visitors.

The postponed dance of March 12 will be held on March 26, when Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders will entertain.

The "fitchews" are to be given their first degree on Tuesday evening, March 16.

KAPPA GAMMA

During the cook's illness last week, the fellows were confronted with the problem of having to get meals in town without funds. Many refused to worry and slept through the meal hours.

Several brothers visited Susquehanna University last Sunday and returned, resolved to remain at Bucknell in the future.

BETA KAPPA

Professor L. L. Rockwell led a discussion on fraternity politics at the house on Thursday evening, March 11.

A "Sem" dance will be held at the Lewisburg club Saturday evening.

"Coze" Seeman, agent for the Balfour Co., fraternity jewelers, made quite a haul at the house last Thursday evening. Favors for the June dance were ordered.

THETA DELTA TAU

Theta Delta Tau, Bucknell's honorary sophomore fraternity, wishes to announce that its petition to the Druids, a national honorary, has been accepted. The installation will take place Saturday night, March 20.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The first and third Sundays in each month, Eta chapter of Alpha Chi Omega plans to have "open house" in the fraternity's suite in Wolfe House. The first of these teas was given on March 7, from 3:00 to 5:00 o'clock.

The guests were friends of members of the fraternity, with Dean Clark as the honored guest. Lively conversation and music filled the rooms with cheer and friendliness. Catharine Frederick, '26, presided over the tea table.

The next open house will be held for as many members of the faculty of the college as the size of the fraternity's rooms will permit.

HOW FRATERNITY CHAPTERS ARE DISTRIBUTED IN U. S. A.

An interesting chart of the distribution by fraternities and states of forty-seven national fraternities appears in the October Purple Green and Gold of Lambda Chi Alpha. It is accompanied by an article giving an exhaustive analysis of the chart. The states with the most chapters are Pennsylvania, 180; New York, 157, (exclusive of fraternities in which Jewish members predominate); Ohio, 112; Illinois, 98; California, 75; Massachusetts, 74; Indiana, 72; and Virginia, 71. The states showing the least number of chapters are: New Mexico, 3; Mississippi, 4; Wyoming, 4; Delaware, 5; South Dakota, 5; Utah, 7; North Dakota, 7; Arizona, Arkansas, Montana, and Nevada, 8; Idaho, 9.—B. K. Journal.

"SEM'S" COMMITTEE OF TEN HAS IT'S EYE ON MERE MEN

Wonder if the spring house-cleaning idea has taken hold of the "Student Ex?" It holds so many meetings nowadays. Woe unto the girl who commits the heinous crime of talking to her escort at five minutes after ten. If she doesn't flee as the clock strikes ten, (not the town clock), she will indeed be a modern Cinderella, whose parishment will be not to have her beautiful clothes turn to rags, but who will be brought before the "Committee of Ten" where rigorous sentence is certain.

Professor: "I shall give a test tomorrow and don't be surprised if I ask for dates."

Miss Popularity: "Don't think you can get one from me."

Recreation School For College Alumni

A national recreation school will open its doors to college graduates next autumn. It will be located in New York City.

This training center, which the Playground and Recreation Association of America will conduct, has come into being because of a demand for professional training in recreation leadership from all parts of the United States. More than 700 cities have organized community recreation programs involving athletics, playgrounds, swimming pools, community centers, municipal golf courses, community dramatics, music, and numerous other activities. The supply of trained leaders to direct these leisure time programs is inadequate. Outstanding men of character, resourcefulness, leadership, and training are needed. The opening class will be limited to fifty persons.

Ablest Instructors Obtainable

The spirit and method of the school will be non-academic. Instructors selected from the ablest recreation leaders of the country will be of the stimulating and inspiring type that makes work with them a pleasure, not a chore. Discussion, demonstration, practice, action—these are the heart of the school's method. Direct contact of the school with the Playground and Recreation Association of America, with its twenty years' experience and abundance of field reports, assures the practical quality of the instruction. Among the students, moreover, will be recreation executives from whom much may be learned. The salaries of recreation superintendents ranges from $2,200 to $6,500. Those who begin work as assistants or a directors of activities receive less.

The course is covered in three sessions from September through June. The school is non-commercial. For the first year tuition will be waived. For details write to T. E. Rivers, of the Playground and Recreation Association of America, 315 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

Why Sounds Go Upward

A famous scientist who made many experiments on the audibility of sound at various heights from the ground as he ascended in a balloon gives us the following information: A man's shout was heard at 1,600 feet; the sharp note of the mole cricket at 2,500 feet; the croaking of frogs in a marsh at 3,000 feet; the roll of drums and music of an orchestra at 4,500 feet; the crowing of cocks and notes of church bells at 5,000 feet; the report of a rifle and the barking of a dog at 5,000 feet; the notes of a railway train in motion at 8,200 feet, and the whistle of a locomotive at 10,000 feet.

Why Noses Are Flat

Eskimos and coast African tribesmen have broad, flat noses. This is due to the fact that the mothers of these races carry their babies snuggled against the shoulder or breast at the time when the nose is in its most plastic state, the frequent pressure making the nose a rather shapeless blob.

"Do you love me?"
"Madly."
"Would you die for me?"
"Er—no. Mine is an undying love."

Reading Coal Train Tears Nearby Track

The front trucks of a loaded coal car played a leading part in a freak wreck on the Reading railroad Thursday morning, March 11. Fortunately the unorthodox behavior of the derailed car did not result seriously, and Bucknell students were deprived of the "thrill" which comes but once in a lifetime from seeing a big freight "pile-up."

A long coal train was traveling at a fast clip from Shamokin to Newberry. Near Tustin Gymnasium a broken flange caused the front trucks of a car near the middle of the train to leave the tracks. The weight of the coal kept the rear trucks on the rails, the front trucks continued to ride the ties until the train was stopped with the derailed car within twenty feet of Market street.

Considerable damage was done to the road-bed by the car on its wayward journey. Hundreds of bolts were clipped off, spikes were battered, tie plates were sheared, and wooden ties were shattered. The University avenue crossing was dug up, and three switches were ripped out near the Reading freight station. The West Milton wrecking crew cleared the track within a short time, and traffic was resumed without serious delay.

Mrs. Walter Rhoads Entertains

Mrs. Walter K. Rhoads, of South Fourth street, delightfully entertained a number of her friends at a card party at her home on Wednesday, March 10, the following being present: Mrs. Harry E. Stein, Mrs. Clarence B. Comstock, Mrs. Jesse C. Higgins, Mrs. W. N. Lowry, Mrs. H. W. Holter, Mrs. I. E. Cramer, Mrs. H. F. Stover, and Miss Gundy Pawling.

Let Them Know That You Saw Their "Ad" in The Bucknellian

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

ALUMNI ADVISERS

Brown University is launching a movement which gives promise of bringing alumni and undergraduates into closer touch, to the benefit of both. . . .

The idea is this: Each freshman, not living in Providence or its immediate neighborhood, now has a responsible alumnus on whom he may call for advice and consultation whenever problems pertaining to college and out side life arise. Many freshmen—there are about 280 of them with advisers—have already availed themselves of the privilege; and their advisers are enthusiastic over the opportunity of meeting them and discussing with them questions of the moment. . . .

After the list (of advisers, about ninety in all) was prepared, each alumnus adviser received a letter giving him the names of his freshmen, together with their home and college addresses and their particular interests. Each freshman also got a letter with the name, address, and telephone number of his adviser. The letter pointed out that "a loyal Brown alumnus is always ready to talk over with you problems relating not only to college life but outside life as well. It means also that this alumnus wants to meet you and get acquainted with you. And this pleasant contact, once established, no doubt will continue all through your college career, and may prove at times to be a inestimable value."

—The Boston Evening Transcript.

WESLEYAN GLEE CLUB WINS

Carnegie Hall, New York, was packed on Saturday evening, March 8, when two hundred college men participated in the tenth Annual Intercollegiate Glee Club Contest. Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut, a newcomer in the contest, won first place. Second place was taken by Princeton, third by Kansas University. Three victories are necessary for permanent possession of the "Challenge Cup," a 15-inch silver piece. Yale won in '24 and '25. Dartmouth and Harvard each won once.

In all, fifteen clubs were represented. Seven had taken part in regional conferences and came as representatives of regions. Wesleyan came as winner of the New England contest; University of Syracuse of New York State; Ohio Wesleyan, of the Ohio State contest; North Carolina and Furman University, South Carolina, respective champions of the North and South Carolina contests.

Harvard's flag was draped conspicuously over a lower box, but no Harvard singers participated. Because Horatio Parker's Lamp of the West was one of the songs selected the Crimson Club refused to compete, objecting to it as "sentimental slush."

—The New Student.

COLLEGES EXCHANGE PLAYERS

Two Ohio schools have devised an intercollegiate contest that is different. Ohio Wesleyan and Western Reserve University recently exchanged dramatic clubs. The Wesleyan Players performed at Reserve and the Reserve members of Sock and Buskin at Wesleyan.

The Goose Hangs High, a popular play among the collegians this year, was given by the Wesleyan group; Martin Flavin's Children of the Moon by the Wesleyans. The visiting actors brought no scenery with them but used the home club's property.

—The New Student.

Purdue, Too, Bans Autos

Two thirds of the one hundred and eighty students who had automobiles at Purdue last year received one or more conditions in their studies. This fact resulted in a recent ruling prohibiting students from having cars "unless it be necessary or will make it more convenient and really assist a student in getting his university work done."

The New Holy Cross College library is the richer for a shipment of books which just arrived from England. This shipment included a number of books notable for their antiquity.

As a gift on his seventieth birthday, President Thompson of Ohio State, received a cake, seven feet in diameter and forty-three inches in depth.

Ursinus College has a unique record among American Colleges. Of 966 who have graduated at Ursinus in the past 55 years, 740 became teachers or preachers.

The German scientist, Einstein, famous exponent of the theory that bars his name, will join the faculty of California Tech in Pasadena, next year.

FRESHMAN WEEK

In the old days it was supposed that every freshman had an inherent propensity to be fresh, and that to prevent this calamity he must be sat upon, shown his place, by the community generally and by sophomores in particular. A better way has apparently been found. The old idea was to make the freshman seem small; the new way is to make other things seem big. Under the new system a freshman can enjoy a considerable amount of self-respect, and yet, in the presence of the great and good things unfolded to him, possess the grace of humility. The new freshman at the end of this first (freshman) week may feel overwhelmed by the attentions he receives,—but he does not feel fresh.

The new method of dealing with freshmen is not merely a contrivance of his elders, imposed upon him from above; it is the only method which is suitable to the new kind of freshman. For the new freshman, like his fellow students of other classes, and like modern youth generally, has a mind of his own, and insists upon having the fact recognized.

—The Harvard Alumni Bulletin.

Laying Off The Swelled Head

You fellows have the schooling; you have a front start; upon you rests the responsibility. Remember, however, that you have just begun. Attack your problem with due modesty, with honesty, with imagination, and with a sense of humor. Don't forget that a lot of big things have been done by men who had no schooling at all. The country has lots of those fellows who by sheer will and determination have laid the world by the heels. Look out that some of them without schooling, but with a punch, don't beat you in the race.—Charles E. Brinley, President of the American Pulley Company, in the Pennsylvania Gazette.

A new rule is in vogue at the University of California. Instead of midnight study the present system prescribes that the period for preparing assignments is from 4 A. M. to 7 A. M.

The University of California holds first place for the number of full-time students enrolled. This great Western university fosters 16,290 students, whereas Columbia is second with an enrollment of 11,700.

"Let women smoke, if they can do it gracefully," was the opinion advanced by the students of the University of Iowa, when interviewed in regard to the right and wrong of co-ed's smoking.

Penn State dropped 98 students at the end of the first semester because of the new 50 per cent. rule.

Plans for a 25-year endowment fund of $50,000 are being discussed by the present senior class of Holy Cross.

Retrospect

In looking backward over life I sometimes see much of sadness, and feel life to be a rather sorrowful thing; but far, far oftener it is the laughter that I hear, and it is smiling faces that look into mine. Even men who were hateful, even the memories of merciless drivers, are softened for the reason that time effaces their evil, bringing out more and more whatever of pleasantness they had in them. There were very, very few indeed who meant the evil. At any rate, time shall give them the benefit of the doubt.

Judgment is a poor thing as from man toward man, isn't it? Though I have known human devils, for whom in my heart I can find no respect or love, perhaps the Almighty can. I do not doubt that such is the case, and to Him I will leave the judgments. —Bill Adams in Adventure Magazine.

That Kind of a Mind

Mark Twain hated to have his work edited. On one occasion he sat down to write to a man who had criticized his work. He was first inclined to think, "the idea: This long-eared animal, this literary kangaroo, this illiterate hostler, with his skull full of axle grease," etc., but restrained himself and pointed out to the man his errors "in gentleness and in the unwounding language of persuasion." "It is discouraging to try to penetrate a mind like yours," he finally wrote. "You ought to get it out and dance on it. That would take some of the rigidity out of it. And you ought to use it sometimes. That would help. If you had done this every now and then through life, it wouldn't have petrified."—Pathfinder.

Applied Logic

"Did you ever know that bread was the mother of the sewing machine?" asked friend husband at dinner one night. "Bless me!" exclaimed his wife, "how do you make that out?" Why, can't you see it?" returned the husband. "Bread is a necessity and the sewing machine is an invention."

Prizes Worth $5,000 Open To Our Bucknell Orators

The Intercollegiate Oratorical Contest on the Constitution now being conducted by the Better America Federation is receiving gratifying responses from presidents of colleges, distinguished educators, the American Bar Association, and students throughout the United States. Heartiest approval has been given this program as a most valuable medium in stimulating study of the principles of our Government and arousing a new interest in the art of public speaking.

All students desiring to participate in the contest should file their applications at once. Each college must finish selecting its spokesmen for the semifinals by April 15.

Prizes in cash totalling $5,000 will be paid to the seven successful contestants at the national finals in Los Angeles, June 25.

Orations must be on the subject of the Constitution or the relation thereto of Washington, Hamilton, Jefferson, Franklin, Marshall, Madison, Webster, or Lincoln,—must be original and require not more than ten minutes for delivery.

Reports from various States indicate a large enrolment in the initial contest within individual colleges. It is the desire of the Federation that the largest possible number of students participate.

Full information concerning the contest as it will be conducted at Bucknell and in this district can be obtained from T. Burns Drum, manager of debating, or from James P. Whyte, professor of oral English. Those interested in this line of work should get in touch with one of these people at once.

How Come

"Do you know," observed an oil stock salesman after unloading several hundred dollars' worth of worthless stock, "I feel sort of righteous today."

"You? Righteous?" snorted his partner. "How's that?"

"The guy I sold that stock to was going to buy a used car with the money."—American Legion Weekly.

Carstater and Gamble Attend I.N.A. Meeting

The meeting of the representatives of the colleges of the third district of the Intercollegiate Newspaper Association held at Gettysburg last Friday and Saturday, was attended by Carstater and Gamble for Bucknell, and by representatives from Dickinson, Susquehanna, Franklin and Marshall, Albright, and Gettysburg.

The first meeting of the sectional convention was a dinner at which President Henry W. A. Hanson, of Gettysburg College, and M. P. Steinmetz, editor of the Harrisburg Telegraph, were the speakers. President Hanson, who was given the degree LL. D. by Bucknell, last commencement, welcomed the delegates and talked on the importance and purpose of the college newspaper of today. Mr. Steinmetz, who has gained his present position as editor of the Telegraph after years of work on the staff and without attending any college, told the young editors what he would do if he suddenly found himself in charge of a college paper. His suggestions were to get the support of the administration and the faculty in giving credit for he work done, to enlist the help of the alumni in making the paper financially successful, and to run the paper independently without allowing any group to dictate the editorial policy.

The regular business meetings of the convention were held Saturday morning in Gettysburg College's fine Y. M. C. A. building. Professor Kline of the English department of Gettysburg addressed the opening session on the choice of material with special reference to the selection of material on which to write editorials. Editor Troutman of the Franklin and Marshall Student Weekly also spoke on the writing of fighting editorials.

After this the business managers of the papers and the editors went into separate sessions for the discussion of their own specific problems. Harold Gamble talked to the business managers of the association papers on building up circulation among the alumni. A general discussion on circulation management and solicitation of advertising both local and national followed.

In the conference of the editors Carstater spoke on staff organization. The other problems discussed were the writing of editorials, and the attitude that the paper should take toward sensationalism in college news as it is now being played up in discussions of curricula, faculty, etc. in various colleges.

EDUCATION OR A DEGREE?

What sort of an education are we getting? Are we taking a scientific attitude in our studies, or are we merely doing the work required by the instructor in order to get the required number of hours and credits to obtain a degree?

What standards do our instructors use in making their assignments? Do they give work that will be interesting and useful, or do they merely assign studies and research that will give a justification for granting the credit which the catalog says the course will give? Two hours of outside work are supposed to be supplementary to every hour of class work. It seems sometimes that the filling of this period is the only objective of the professor in making his assignments, e. g. bibliographies that are used only to fill note books and not for any further reference on the part of the student, the preparation of outlines on outside readings, assigned reading of material that is remotely connected with the subject being taken, etc.

Without wishing to dictate to the faculty as to how they should conduct their classes, we wish to suggest that a greater degree of interest in work will be shown when the work is made to have some close and apparent connection with the object of the course, and when the course is made to have some real purpose in the object of education. To use a technical term, many of our courses lack motivation.

The results of the manner of instruction are seen in many places. One professor requires that the student read for one hour each week in certain work supposedly correlated to the course. There are various more or less honest ways in which an hour's "reading" may be accomplished, but in the mind of the student the hour becomes the big thing and all he gets out of what he reads is a scanty page of notes which will satisfy the professor but which will be useless for any other purpose.

Another instructor requires that bibliographies be drawn up on certain subjects, probably with the theory in mind that a person in drawing up a bibliography, will become acquainted with the material over which he is working. If that is his theory he has neglected to take into consideration the manner in which students make up required bibliographies. The part of the scheme that makes the work appear all the more foolish is the fact that the lists are not used for any other purpose during the year. There may be some ulterior motive on the part of the professor in doing this kind of work, but if that be true, he is committing a fraud on the students, and certainly he is not giving them the benefit that is their due in a regular course.

Students come to college for an education and usually they study,—for the first year. After that whether they study or bluff depends on the character of the person and on the character of the instruction. We believe that there are too many bluffers here. Some of them are not conscious of the fact that they are bluffing but they are doing it, nevertheless.

The general attitude is not one of studiousness but rather of putting in the time, like a worker who watches the clock or listens for the whistle. We want to get our education off of the time basis and put it on a basis of accomplishment, regardless of time spent, either in class or in preparation. Neither students alone nor faculty alone can accomplish this change, but one starting it can ask the cooperation of the other. Which will be the one to start?

If you don't agree with us on this, or if you have something to add, we'd like to hear from you. There's a lot more that can be said, and if someone else doesn't say it, we shall.

from Denison he taught law for a number of years in Cincinnati. From this position he became solicitor for Cincinnati and later mayor. After an honorable record at the head of that great city, he was given a judgeship in Ohio, in which field he worked for seventeen years. After his retirement from law, he became president of numerous corporations, and so has been able to settle down after a life of service to his country.

At present he lives in Yorktown, Virginia, owning and living on the very land on which Cornwallis surrendered to Washington. He farms 4000 acres of Virginia land, and is building a 308-room hotel. He is a pioneer member of the Sigma Chi Fraternity.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

The letter form an alumnus of the college that appears in this issue comes up for attention here.

* * * *

I do not think it fitting that the Bucknellian should either favor or oppose the establishment of new fraternities on the campus under the present conditions.

* * * *

But I do feel free to discuss the matter in a friendly fashion in this column. Here goes.

* * * *

Being a fraternity member I view the facts stated in the latter from a slightly different angle from that of our correspondent.

* * * *

However I feel that the truth of the statements, in general, is to be admitted.

* * * *

But here are some additional facts:

In 1917 there were six national and two local fraternities on the campus. Since then one of the locals has become national, five other locals have formed and three of these have already become national.

* * * *

The number of fraternity men in Bucknell has practically doubled, just as the student enrolment has practically doubled in those nine years.

* * * *

Fraternities will not grow out of the mere desire for organization. That desire must be accompanied by a spirit of brotherhood. The very name and nature of the organization make this property requisite.

* * * *

Not all college men are fraternity men. There are many who feel themselves better off without the influence, either helpful or deterrent, of their fellows. It is impossible, therefore, to spread the Greek influence over the whole campus.

* * * *

The basic factor in the foundation of a fraternity is the desire for fellowship, friendship, mutual responsibility, and a sort of sacred right to have and share a secret with some kindred spirit. Where that is present the fraternity will form without intervention from any official or artificial source. Where it is absent the outside influence will serve only to build up another sham in the throng of useless near-organizations that crowd the life of students in the typical American college of today.

* * * *

New fraternities are welcome here at Bucknell and will be received in democratic equality with those that are already established whenever they form and make their presence in the fraternity world noticable. But new fraternities are not forming, chiefly, I believe, because the fraternity material is very closely used up by those fraternities that already exist.

* * * *

But the establishment of new fraternities will not settle the problem of the returning alumnus for he will be as far away from the new fraternity as he was from the old. It has long been the custom for all fraternities to hold open house for alumni whenever they return. The fraternities are doing what they can to keep the alumni interested in the college.

One other possibility remains about which we shall have something to say later. That is the formation of a commons club.

* * * *

We'd like to hear from others on this problem, alumni, students, faculty, or anyone else that is interested. Your communications will be given the freedom of the publication. What do you think about it?

Lybarger Is Second In All-State Contest

Second place in the order of college orators of the state was the distinction attained by L. Francis Lybarger Jr., '28, in the intersectional contest held at Grove City College, Grove city, Pa., last Friday evening. Robert Young of the University of Pittsburgh was awarded first honors and the right to represent the state in an interstate contest to be held in Kentucky, by a margin of two points. Toth, of Franklin and Marshall, who placed second in the meet held at Ursinus College the previous week when Lybarger won the Eastern Pennsylvania championship, retained the same relative position in the state meet by taking the third place.

Lybarger's oration was the same as that used in the former contest: "Organizing the World for Peace." Young, the winner, chose for his topic, "America's Indictment." Other colleges represented in the contest were Washington and Jefferson, Geneva, Franklin and Marshall, and Gettysburg.

Letter Box

Harrisburg, Pa., March 6, 1926.

Dear Editor:—

I'm going to write you a few rambling lines. I read the Bucknellian every week and often notice little editorial comments. Here's a subject for one, and its good for lots of arguments, pro and con. I'll look for yours on it.

Bucknell is growing fast. We have not put up any new dorms in recent years. Where do they stay? In "frat" houses, of course, and in private homes, naturally. Well here's my argument.

We don't have enough fraternities at Bucknell. There are lots of good non-frat men; lots, enough for several good fraternities. These fellows are missing part of their college life. I know now because I've graduated.

They miss those get-together smokers, canal parties, dances, etc. They miss forming many good friendships.

Here's the sad part. After graduation they return for the big game. They see it, but have to leave right away. They have no old frat house to which they can return, no chance of meeting old friends or making new ones. The old grad has to run a chance of seeing his friends in the pool room or on the street. The result is that he is disappointed and does not return again, and gradually loses interest in B. U.

There are probably lots of arguments to this, pro and con, but I think it would be wonderful if all the boys could belong to fraternities. It is a help to them afterwards also in the business world.

I honestly believe B. U. could stand two or three more fraternities. How about an editorial on starting some of them?

I'm not writing this because I'm a sorehead for not being a fraternity man. My folks wouldn't allow me to join when in college and now I can see how much more I would have enjoyed my college life if I had been a fraternity man.

Bucknelly yours,
An Alumnus of '17

Never has progress seemed so swift

GRANDMOTHER'S girlhood would seem pathetically poor in comforts to us today. She never knew the convenience of electrically done housework; of time saved in cooking; of swift trips through the country by motor; of the world's best music in her home, out of the air.

A generation has changed the lives, comforts and habits of the world.

Tomorrow —new conveniences, new comforts will swiftly find their way into our lives.

The advertisements will herald their coming. Today a manufacturer will announce a new and better product. Tomorrow a million men and women will use it as an old friend.

An advertisement breaks down the barrier of distance and tells to all the world—in a day's time—the best and newest things the world has devised.

People who keep abreast with progress read the newspaper advertisements.

Newspaper advertising is a herald of better things.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Semites Overwhelm Faculty Opponents

The snappy "Sem" quintet, with Elizabeth Bauman, '29, as high scorer, completely outplayed the Faculty five in a game which brought out almost the entire Women's College and a number of faculty women, in the Tustin gmynasium on Tuesday evening, March 9. The score was 23-2.

Twelve of the college girls' points were scored by Miss Bauman, who had six field goals to her credit. Grace Milhous, '27, played an excellent defensive game. The lone faculty score resulted from a field goal by Caryl Dutton, '27, who helped to fill up the faculty ranks. Mrs. Frank A. Sprague, captain of the faculty five, played a very good game.

Semites Score First

The "Sem" girls drew first blood, when Miss Bauman dropped a field goal through the basket shortly after the game opened. On the next play the faculty rushed the ball down the floor and scored a field goal. The "Semites" managed to hold them scoreless during the remainder of the game, although they came back strong at the beginning of the second half.

There was some spirited cheering among the "Sem" followers, led by Margaret Krebs, '28, which occasionally brought a response from the faculty side of the bleachers.

The game was sponsored by the Y. W. C. A. The proceeds are to go to the Student Friendship Fund. The score:

Faculty	FG.	F.	T.

Theta Upsilon Beats Delta Sigma Passers

The Delta Sigma cagers lost to a faster Theta Upsilon Omega five, 29-14, in the second game played last Wednesday evening. The contest was a real court tilt from start to finish, but the foul shooting of the "Demies" lessened the scoring power of their team. The losing quintet made good on only four out of seventeen chances from the fifteen-foot mark.

Vastine, Bradley, and Wisa showed up well for the "T. U. O." five. Wisa was much in evidence in meshing the ball from underneath the basket. Ted Mitchell also did good work until eliminated by the personal foul route.

Frable and Howard played best for Delta Sigma. The summary:

Delta Sigma	FG.	F.	T.

Frosh Basketballers Clean Up Bellefonte

The Bucknell freshman basketball quintet scored a rather easy victory over the Bellefonte Academy five in Tustin gym last Saturday afternoon. The final score was B. U. frosh 34, Bellefonte 22.

"Archie" Seiler was the big gun in the offensive of the yearlings. The frosh leader netted seven field goals and one foul. Wisa and Woodring also showed up well.

Captain Rankin of the visitors was their best bet. He played a neat floor game and revealed a knowledge of the use of the dribble in getting down the court. The summary:

B. U. Frosh	FG.	F.	T.
Wisa	3	2	8

BASKETBALL TOSSERS ELECT STANLEY McCASKEY CAPTAIN

Stanley McCaskey, '27, star forward of the varsity quintet during the cage season just passed was elected to the captaincy of the five for the next year, last Friday afternoon at a meeting of the squad in the office of the graduate manager. The election was unanimous, Kirker, the other nominee named in the first ballot, withdrawing before the vote was taken.

Stearns E. Warner, '28, and H. Montgomery Marah, '28, were elected manager and assistant manager at the same meeting.

The new captain has been a member of the Bucknell basketball team for the past two years and played an excellent brand of the cage game in all contests this season. He will be the first Bucknell captain under the new Plant regime.

When the straight-8 blows a shoe

BEFORE you even look for the jack or tire-tools, tuck a neat wad of Prince Albert into the muzzle of your jimmy-pipe. Light up . . . and get yourself in the frame of mind where a flat tire is "all in the day's work." Talk about a gloom-chaser!

P. A. simply knocks troubles for a row of planished-steel mudguards. Its cool, soothing smoke percolates into your system, the sun crashes through the clouds, and everything is hotsy-totsy. Yes indeed, Fellows, Prince Albert is great tobacco.

And paste this in the fly-leaf of your thesaurus: P. A. can't bite your tongue or parch your throat, no matter how hard you hit it up. The Prince Albert process flunked Bite and Parch on their first examination. Get a tidy red tin of P. A. now and see.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

HILLTOP BRIEFS

"Gene" Mirarchi, '29, spent the week-end of March 7 at his home in Kulpmont.

* * * *

Mary Elizabeth Furry, '28, spent the week-end of March 12 at her home in Johnstown, Pa.

* * * *

Margaret Tennant, '26, returned from her home in Palmerton, Pa., on Wednesday, March 10.

* * * *

Irene Bell, '26, spent several days last week in the infirmary nursing a bad attack of the grippe.

* * * *

Dr. Swift spent several mornings studying objects of interest in Professor Stewart's laboratory.

* * * *

Professor R. F. Howes cut his classes on Thursday March 11. Another victim added to the gripe's toll.

* * * *

Harry H. Pierson, '28, spent the week-end of March 6-7 with "Joe" Williams, '28, at the latter's home in Berwick.

* * * *

Professor W. G. Owens spoke in Beaver Memorial Methodist church Sunday morning, March 7, and made an appeal for the "Near East Relief."

* * * *

Professor O. S. Groner and Assistant Professor V. B. Hall were unable to meet their classes during the early days of last week because of sickness.

* * * *

Dorothy F. Riker, '28, who was obliged to go to her home in East Orange, N. J., because of sickness, returned to school on Tuesday, March 9.

* * * *

Dick Merwin, '26, after struggling with a bad cold for several days, finally sought the comfort of his bed to recuperate from the ravages of the grippe.

* * * *

All the pre-medical chemistry students will attend a convention of the superintendents' March 19, when both Professor Groner and Mr. Wright were absent from the Chemistry Laboratory.

* * * *

Professor John Rice and Miss E. Ruhl have opened a dispensary in the Biology building. The purpose is to treat young men students suffering from colds, grippe, etc.

* * * *

Barton Dakin, '27, spent Sunday, March 7, with his parents at their home in Brooklyn, N. Y. Barton went down on the excursion, and after enjoying the day in the big city, returned via the same route.

* * * *

"Eddie" Ramsdell, '27, spent the greater part of Saturday and Sunday in "house-cleaning" and fixing up his room. He announces that he is "at home" to all comers again, provided they call when he is there.

* * * *

Interest in the interfraternity league basketball games has been at high pitch during the past week. Most of the games played have had an important bearing in determining what teams will grace the semi-finals.

* * * *

Edward Colestock, '29, spent the first part of last week in bed being one of the victims of the prevalent spring colds. "Ed" has been playing a great deal of basketball and he believes that this is where he picked up the germ.

* * * *

Mr. L. S. Warren, representative of a large publishing house in Philadelphia, was here Wednesday and Thursday, March 3 and 4, and succeeded in inveigling several Bucknell boys into promising to sell Bibles during the coming summer.

Professor Frank G. Davis went to Washington, D. C., recently to attend a convention of the superintendent's section of the National Educational Association. While there he heard several speakers of national prominence, including President Coolidge and Herbert Hoover.

* * * *

Robert D. Smink had a feast in store for the "Demie" seniors at his home, Friday evening, March 5. Seventy-five percent. of those of '26,—that is, all who could possibly attend—were present, and beguiled the time very rapidly in brain-testing pastimes and epicurean activity.

* * * *

President Emory W. Hunt and Dean R. H. Rivenburg met with the residents of the first two floors of West College in the "Y" hut on Wednesday evening March 10 at 9 P. M. These occupants had previously presented a petition against making an infirmary of the first floor of West College. The authorities felt that the epidemic had passed its peak, and it is believed that an infirmary need not be established in West College at this time.

* * * *

"Frankie" Saul, '29, has been confined to the infirmary, due to the grippe.

* * * *

Barbara Reifsnyder, '28, left for her home at Norristown on account of illness.

Mary Foust, '27, spent the week-end of March 6 and 7 in Williamsport with her grandmother.

* * * *

"Tarp" Coleman, Jack Gardner, and "Bill" Miller, all of '26, have recovered from the grippe which had attacked them simultaneously.

* * * *

Dr. John Hope, president of Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga., who spoke in chapel Tuesday, March 9, was the guest of Professor N. H. Stewart while in Lewisburg.

* * * *

Dorothy Rex, of Mauch Chunk, and Elizabeth Thompson, ex-'27, of Pitman, N. J., visited Gladys Roberts, '26, and Ruth Miller, '26, during the week-end of March 6.

* * * *

Numerous cases of bad colds and grippe have been reported upon the hill. Professor J. W. Rice's new dispensary will aid greatly in healing a sick student body.

* * * *

Dorothy Thurlby, '29, Nancy Kennedy, '28, Mildred Spencer, '28, Mary Elias, '27, Elizabeth Montgomery, '29, Mildred Mosser, '29, and Ruth Lefevre, '29, attended the Sophomore Hop at Penn State on Saturday, March 6.

* * * *

"Semites" who spent the week-end of March 6 and 7 at their homes were: Edythe Evans, '29, Hannah Metcalf, '26, Naomi Brace, '29, "Peg" Tennant, '26, "Betty" Siegfried, '29, "Jo" Behmey, '28, Rebecca Rentschler, '28, Edna Wolfe, '29, and Yolanda Frank, '28.

* * * *

Mr. Frye, '28, a student at Gettysburg, visited Bucknell Wednesday, March 3, in preparation for his work of the coming year. He expects to take up the work as field manager of a large sales organization, and came here to see how work of that sort is being taught here.

Riding home on the train from the Juniata debate, T. Burns Drum, '26, and Willis G. Snow, '28, were amusing themselves by pitching pennies against the car door, when the conductor came around and threatened to arrest them. However the culprits averted arrest and arrived safely in Lewisburg.

* * * *

Frank E. Johnston Jr., '28, began his Easter holiday a trifle early. He retired to quiet seclusion on March 8 in order to evade the pesky frosh who were endeavoring to prevent his appearance at the Sophomore Cotillion, Saturday, March 13. Last year both the sophomore and the freshman class presidents attended their respective class dances.

* * * *

The Bucknell-Juniata debate on Friday evening, March 5, provided some sport as well as wisdom for the audience at Bedford. After B. J. Miller, '27, of Bucknell had made an excellent rebuttal speech, Bow, '27, of Juniata, arose and said, "If we are counting facts in this debate, the last speaker you have just listened to has said nothing." Miller, with great difficulty restrained his emotion, and the impending prize-fight was averted.

It was left to Paul G. Schmidt, known to his many friends as "Schmitty", to pull a surprise both to himself and the large crowd of students that witnessed the Non-frat—Phi Gamma Delta basketball game Monday night, March 8, when this light-haired youth, playing with the Non-frat team, scored two sensational field goals and a foul against his opponents. "Schmitty's" spectacular playing brought forth howls of delight from the crowd.

Professor H. S. Everett took a lesson in "Heating and Ventilating" one day last week, but not in the mechanical engineering department. He had complained to "Sam" Crabb, S. O. S., that the Observatory was suffering a chronic "cold," and declared that said condition must be remedied immediately. Mr. Crabb walked into the room while a class was in session and calmly adjusted the valve at one end of the radiator. The object lesson was successful, and no further difficulties have been reported.

Successful Season For Debating Teams

Still Has Important Contests Bowdoin and U. of Richmond

The debating teams of the University are nearing the end of one of the most successful seasons our debaters have ever seen at Bucknell. Only three debates out of the thirteen engaged in by the four teams representing the college have resulted in victories for the opponents. Two debates, the most important ones of the season, remain. In them the Bucknell men will oppose teams from Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine, and the University of Richmond, Virginia.

Handicapped at the beginning of the year by the loss of capable men from last year's squad, there was little hope of establishing a record. The debating council was also undergoing a reorganization. Out of this situation, with the guidance of Professor Roy F. Howes, of the political science department, and Professor W. H. Coleman, of the English department, were developed teams that accomplished the unusual in debating, teams that won on both sides of the question.

The men's affirmative team has won five out of six contests; the negative three out of four, and the women's teams two out of three.

The records follow:

Men's Affirmative

Opponents	Score
Lafayette	2-1
Dickinson	3-0
Ursinus	3-0
Rutgers	1-2
Temple	3-0
Juniata	3-0

Men's Negative

Franklin and Marshall	1-2
Juniata	2-1
Penn State	3-0
Ursinus	3-0

Women's Teams

Temple	3-0
Ursinus	3-0
Ursinus	1-2

The debates with Bowdoin and Richmond will take place on March 24 and April 15 respectively. These teams are the cream of the debating teams of the East. Each holds the first place in the section which it represents. Bowdoin wrested the debating championship of the New England states from Bates College last year. Richmond is the mistress of the South.

Southwick Will Give "The Cardinal King"

In bringing Henry Lawrence Southwick to Lewisburg to give his interpretative recital, "The Cardinal King" at the Baptist church next Tuesday evening, the Dramatic and Literary Board is responding to the enthusiastic appreciation with which he has been received on two previous recitals here. This time there will be two additional incentives for students to attend the recital; it is the best in his repertory, and admission is free to students.

At the present time president of the Emerson Schools of Oratory of Boston, Mass., Dr. Southwick is a prominent and brilliant figure on the Lyceum platform. His personality instantly commands the interest of his audiences. His work possesses the attractiveness and force that win public favor, together with the literary finish and artistic beauty which command the praise of scholars.

The recital will be the chief literary event at Bucknell University this year. It will begin late so as not to interfere with other meetings and it is hoped that the fraternity meetings will not be allowed to interfere with the recital.

Final "English" Tea Friday

The final English tea for the year will be held Friday at 4:30 at the English Seminar room in the Biology Annex. Members of the faculty are especially invited, and students are welcome.

Bucknell Man Injured By Fall Off Trestle

Clarence B. Comstock, '06, of 1110 West Market street, a member of the firm of Kunkle & Comstock, coal dealers, sustained serious injuries last Thursday morning, March 11, when he accidentally fell through an open trapdoor on a coal trestle in the rear of the firm's coal yard.

In his fall from the twelve-foot trestle into the empty coal bin, Mr. Comstock landed head foremost on the frozen ground, breaking his collar bone in two places and receiving severe gashes on the head and face. He was immediately rushed to the Geisinger Memorial Hospital in the community ambulance, driven by Benton Herrold, of the Union Motor Company, accompanied by Mrs. Comstock and Dr. M. L. Focht.

The accident occurred when Mr. Comstock was opening the coal traps preparatory to dumping into the bin a load of coal from a car which was just being backed on the siding. How he happened to fall through the train cannot be ascertained, though it is supposed that he either became dizzy or slipped on a piece of ice when he was lifting the trap cover.

As he fell, his cries attracted the attention of several men working in the coal yard who ran to his aid. Still conscious, though in great pain, Mr. Comstock was carried to the Company's office nearby, where the ambulance was summoned.

After graduating from Bucknell University, Mr. Comstock obtained a position as a teller in the Lewisburg Trust and Safe Deposit Company, where he remained for eleven years. In 1920 he became a partner with his father-in-law, J. M. Kunkle, in the coal business under the firm name of Kunkle and Comstock.

Word received from Mrs. Comstock Sunday afternoon indicated that Mr. Comstock's condition is more favorable than previously.

TWO BUCKNELL MEDICAL MEN SPEAK AT DOCTORS' DINNER

Drs. Lee M. Goodman, '01, of Jersey Shore and Charles A. Lehman, ex-'03, of Williamsport, attended the March meeting of the Lycoming County Medical Society in Williamsport, on March 12, and were prominent in the discussion that followed the address of the evening, made by Dr. James P. Mann of Philadelphia.

Albert W. Johnson, '96

"Fashionable men and women of today indulge in drinking liquor and smoking cigarettes and think it is modernism. Their views on the subject will not change the minds of sensible men," said Federal Judge A. W. Johnson in Scranton before imposing sentence on two Scranton hotel proprietors for violation of the Volstead Act.

Judge Johnson severely criticized society women of today for smoking and drinking. He dwelt on the subject after prohibition raiders testified that young women were smoking and drinking in the hotels.

Robert W. Thompson, '04

Robert W. Thompson, '04, and Mrs. Thompson of Lewisburg, were called to Pittsburgh recently to attend the funeral of Mr. Thompson's brother, who was killed in an accident.

Mr. Thompson has long been an ardent supporter of athletics at Bucknell, and has served for years on the Athletic Council.

The Rev. W. H. Sugden, '22

The Rev. William H. Sugden, '22, spoke at the morning services in the Presbyterian church last Sunday. Mr. Sugden, who has spent nine months in Europe, spoke on the subject "Religious Conditions in Europe."

Eugene P. Bertin, '17

Eugene P. Bertin, '17, of the Muncy High School faculty, spoke to the Andrew Jackson Parent-Teacher Association of Williamsport on Friday, March 12. His subject was "The Human Problem."

How He Tells Time

Sniff—What time is it, old boy? Or haven't you your watch with you?

Billfuzz—It's 11:45 a. m.; but I never carry a watch.

Sniff—Then how do you know what time it is?

Billfuzz—I shave at 7:30 every morning and I can tell what time it is, day or night, by feeling how much my beard has grown.—Philadelphia Record.

Today's little thought: Most women are so vain that they don't even let their noses shine in society.

The Mistress of The Manse

By Mary J. Harrar

The reception line was long and the hall was warm, as I passed down that never-ending row of men and women, all of whom were at least twice my age. I had dreaded to attend this formal and important affair, but it was father's wish that I go with him. I hated to have him go alone, so I promised to attend, and, except for the knowledge of his pleasure in having me with him, regretted the affair from the first "good-evening" to the last "good-night."

The one thing that really did the most to spoil my evening was an introduction to the only person who appeared to be anywhere near my own age. The prospect was good; the time could not be better; the man himself was a fair speciman; but the incident ended in tragedy. Dr. B—, a friend of father's, introduced us formally, yet with no explanation of what relationship I had with Dad. The young man had just met father and seemed quite impressed with him, so that he turned with a deferential bow and acknowledged the introduction with the words, "Oh, Doctor J—'s sister, I presume." He started to speak of the splendid work that father was doing, showing plainly that he thought of me as "Doctor J—'s sister, and nothing more."

"Sistership" Becomes Family Joke

This was at the beginning of my life as Mistress of the Manse. More than once or twice since that time, I have been asked the same question, until now it is a standard joke in the family. However, the duties and responsibilities of the position were not so much of a joke, for it was necessary for me to "fill the place" of one who had had years of experience.

Naturally, I took the duties of Mistress of the Manse seriously. I received visitors, and listened with gravity to the "sob stories" of the "dear parishioners." Even tho I was aching to laugh, pat them on the back, and tell them to "cheer up" or "forget it," I usually managed to keep a tight hold on my dignity and sympathetic attitude, and, when necessary, give some advice.

One experience taught me tact, as well as giving me a good joke to tell father at night, when he came home tired, as he usually was after a long day of calls. One of the "dear sisters" lamented to me the willfulness of her small daughter, and asked me what I, (a girl of eighteen) would advise. The "little dear" had always been a pest to our group of girls, so I said, "spank her." The shocked expression never left the woman's face the remainder of the visit. Such cruelty from a "minister's daughter!" Unheard of!

I Become a True Helper

I had a lovely time at the end of the day, imitating the callers for the benefit of Dad and Brother. Later, I learned to enjoy the ones who called, and as I came to understand more and more the problems that each one had, I began to think of ways to help them, until I came to be a helper instead of a "Traveler along" to father. My dignity became more sincere and the people came to rely on me, in spite of my rather inadequate years. I became reliable and able to help along almost any line that was touched upon. Such ability seemed to be expected of the Mistress of the Manse, and it was my nature never to shirk what came before me, so I did it all.

The short visits in the afternoons and evenings, by members of church and community, were the easiest kinds of visits that we had to count on. The ones that tried my patience were the ones of "members of former churches" (just members, not friends). There was one man who came time and time again, and used our place as a hotel whenever he was in the vicinity of the town. He would settle in the most comfortable chair in the house and then borrow all of the articles he could think of, from a fountain pen to a volume of sermons which he wished to use in making one up for his own use. I may have been "entertaining angels unawares" at the time, but I very much doubt if that were the case—I came to know him too well to believe that of him.

Some Visitors are Parasites

However, not all the visitors that we had were like that, and the fellowship with some of the greatest missionaries of the present day, and with men and women of other callings who spent part of their time at our home made entertaining enjoyable for the most part. It gave me a broader idea of life and the work that others were doing. I was treated as an equal, which in such circumstances was not at all against my desires, for it helped me to "grow up" more rapidly, a development which I needed more as responsibilities were added. My place as Mistress of the Manse ceased to be unusual or difficult, as far as others' opinions were concerned, and I took my place in the community as such.

This acceptance of my place gave me a feeling of security and dignity that aided me many times, as odd situations arose to try me out. Tact, persistance, ingenuity, and patience were the lessons that I learned then. Oh, yes, there was great value in it all for me. I know now all the things a minister's wife has to contend with, although I was not the wife of the minister, but merely "his daughter" who took the place of the Lady of the House. I came to know types of people and could read characters easily, and could answer their questions and problems. It gave me experience in all lines of church and community work, as well as the knowledge of how to go about doing all manner of "odds-and-ends" affairs. It may have been the "school of hard knocks and slams" for a while, but it became a beloved alma mater, as I left it for my college life. It put an "old head on young shoulders" but the shoulders learned to bear the weight of it and "carry on."

B. U. Girls Glee Club To Give Dual Concert

The Bucknell Girls' Glee Club is planning to give a concert in the Northumberland High School for the benefit of the Northumberland Fire Company, Thursday, March 25. Other concerts will be given in Lewisburg, Milton, and at Devitt's Camp, shortly after the Easter recess.

Three events of the Northumberland concert will be a recitative by Edna Watson, a solo by Mary Graham, and selections by the Girls' Quartet. The Girls' Glee Club of the Northumberland High School, which is under the direction of Miss Mary Graham, '25, plans to sing one selection with the Bucknell Glee Club.

Both the men's and girls' glee clubs are planning to have a picnic at Wolfland sometime after Easter, just by way of diversion and reward for their season's work.

Snakes That Burrow

There is a class of snakes known as burrowing snakes which live underground. They have a cylindrical rigid body covered with generally smooth and polished scales; a short, strong tail; a short rounded or pointed head with narrow mouth. Some species of snakes bury themselves in the ground and hibernate throughout the winter.

Frosh Scale Ladder; Come Down—Quick!

Think They'll Get Pres. Johnson, Overlook Armed Watchman, Reconsider When He Shoots.

Trying to keep the president of the sophomore class from the Cotillion on Saturday night was a good deal of fun to most of the freshmen, but to two "frosh" in particular it was no joke. Two pairs of "skinned" legs and a few other bruises tell the story of the two determined "president seekers."

Since the main entrance to the Armory was guarded by Policeman John Murtha, and the rear door was watched by an armed employee of the Armory, the two daring freshmen decided to enter the rendezvous of the president by means of a ladder to an upper window. What glory would be theirs when they led the "soph" president out of the front door!

A ladder was found, raised to the nearest window, and then the boys began their ascent. But they had neglected to take the armed employee into consideration. When he saw the dark forms climbing the ladder, he fired two shots in the air. The startled freshmen released their holds instantly, bumped their separate ways to the ground, and fled into the darkness amid the loud laughter of the watchman.

ALPHA CHIS GIVE PROGRAM FOR EVANGELICAL GUESTS

Old men and women with silvery white hair, with feeble, tottering steps, and shaky hands were entertained by the Alpha Chi Omega sorority on Sunday afternoon, March 14, from three o'clock to four, at the Evangelical Home.

It is the custom of the girls to give a service at the home once each year to these dear old people. Because it is the Easter season, the program was made to conform somewhat. Jane Shrum, '27, had charge of the service. Mildred Fox, '27, accompanied by Doris Worrell, '27, sang a solo; Eleanor Miller, '28, and Margaret Brick, '27, read Easter stories; a quartet composed of Mildred Fox, Kathryn Bosler, '28, "Jo" Roberts, '29, and Doris Worrell, accompanied by Louise Matthews, '26, sang several beautiful selections; and Mary Foust, '27, played a piano solo.

After the service the girls went among the elderly people, meeting and shaking hands with them. They were very appreciative, and one old lady, with tears in her blue eyes said, "Oh, you can't know how much we enjoy people coming in like this."

Alpha Chi Omega entertained Dr. Edith Swift, who lectured to the women students, in the fraternity suite after her lecture on Thursday evening, March 11. The girls gathered around her, comfortably seated on cushions and chairs, as they enjoyed a friendly, informal chat.

PHI MU ALPHA SINFONIA TO GIVE EVENING CONCERT

An interesting program is offered for the opening concert of the Phi Mu Alpha, Sinfonia fraternity which is to be given in the Baptist church, March 29. The full list of the numbers that will be offered has not yet been completed but it will include selections by the choice male talent of the University. The fraternity draws its membership from all the musical organizations on the campus as well as from the students of the School of Music.

Some of the numbers that are assured will be a flute solo by Ramsdell, an instrumental duet by Noble and Corson, an organ solo by Kesler, and several vocal numbers including one quartet selection in which Gilmour, McCaskey, Shuttlesworth, and Kushell will take part.

The concert will be open to all students free of charge although a silver offering will be taken.

NOTICE

Non-Fraternity Men Attention

The Non-fraternity Organization will hold a meeting in Room 1, Old Main, from 7:30 to 8:00 on Tuesday evening, March 23. Among the business matters to be discussed and acted upon are questions of policy, election of a vice-president and organization of a track team. President Billman called the meeting and will occupy the chair. Non-fraternity men who have not previously put in an appearance at the meetings will be welcomed and are urged to come around. All men who have any track possibilities are particularly requested to attend.

to her exclusively, a claim which, of course, aroused a great storm of protest. Finally, in 1825, the controversy became a boundary dispute between England and Russia alone. The two countries agreed to fix a boundary line, but before this could be done the United States bought Alaska from Russia. She agreed to carry out the treaty concerning the fixing of the line.

"Delegates from the two nations decided that, beginning at the one hundred forty-first meridian, the boundary should follow the summits of the ridges south and west to the ocean, and that, to the north, it should be a straight line on the meridian to the Arctic."

It was while engaged in this undertaking that Baldwin had many of his experiences.

Big Problem Was Transportation

"The biggest problem we had to face was that of transportation," said he, "for there were practically no trails or bridges where we found it necessary to go in surveying. We used boats to some extent in moving our belongings, and packed things on our backs when there were no streams along our path."

In this connection Mr. Baldwin took time to correct the impression that dog-teams are the only method of transportation in Alaska. They are used quite extensively, but they are being supplanted by railroads, airplanes, and other modern developments, and never were they the sole method of conveyance.

Most Bears Are Harmless

He also diverged a bit on the thieving and other propensities of bears and the qualities of the Alaska mosquitoes. With reference to the bears he said, "Nine out of ten of them were just as much afraid of us as we were of them, but the difficulty was in telling, at a distance, just which was the tenth bear. Personally I was always cautious and gave the bear the benefit of the doubt." Then he told of his experience in meeting the "tenth" bear one time this particular bruin being a mother whose cubs happened to be in the direction which Mr. Baldwin chose for his line of flight. The combination of circumstances made matters very interesting for Mr. Baldwin and very amusing for the audience.

Mr. Baldwin next took up the life of the people, saying that the natives of the interior are still rather primitive in their habits of life, although those nearer the towns are gradually adopting the customs of the whites. "The interior natives get much of their meat from the caribou, animals that travel in herds of several thousand. After a number of them have been killed the squaws are sent out with the dogs to cut up the animals and bring in the meat. A dog is supposed to carry about forty pounds and a squaw is expected to carry about twice that much."

Party Travels By Night

The most interesting experience of the survey occurred at the southern end of the boundary where the completion of the work involved the ascent of Mt. St. Elias. The first step in this undertaking was the crossing of the great Logan glacier. It was soon found to be impossible to make any progress with the sleds here in the day because the snow was too soft then, so the party adopted the method of breaking the trail by day and hauling the sleds at night. After weeks of travel and danger the party approached Mt. St. Elias, and, although the work of the boundary fixing did not require it, the party was commissioned to attempt to reach the top of the peak.

At an altitude of 15,000 feet, three of the men were overcome by mountain sickness. They were taken back a distance and the three others in the party continued the climb. However one of the terrific snow storms peculiar to high altitudes set in and they were forced to turn back for a time. After forty-eight hours the attempt was made again but another storm was encountered and as provisions were getting short the attempt was given up.

Deep Crevasse Stops Them

Mr. Baldwin reports that in the descent from the peak, the party encountered a crevasse in the ice which, on the ascent, had been only a few inches wide, but had since grown to about twelve feet. "We couldn't tell how deep it was for we could see only about five hundred feet, and below that, depth was swallowed up in darkness."

It was finally decided to attempt a jump across the crevasse and in the drawing of lots it fell to Baldwin to make the first attempt. One end of a rope was tied around his waist, the other being held by the remaining five men. Then, with a long running start, he took off. He said that he closed his eyes as he jumped, and did not know whether he was going across or down until, after what seemed minutes, he felt himself strike the snow on the opposite side.

Baldwin Makes Big Jump

"I don't know how far I jumped," he said, "but afterward my companions told me that I took all the slack out of our hundred-foot rope.

"Glaciers are to be found only in the southern part of Alaska," continued the speaker. "They are not spread all over the country, as some people believe.

"Although Alaska is very rich in material goods, her greatest wealth is in her scenic beauty."

Mr. Baldwin concluded by quoting Robert W. Service's poem, "Spell of the North," his recital being accompanied by dozens of appropriate stereopticon pictures. Slides were used throughout the lecture and silently bore out the speaker's statement that Alaska's scenic beauty can hrdly be surpassed.

that which is good and that which is best.

Experience The Best Teacher

"Education will attain perfection when it makes it possible for people to pass their experience on to the succeeding generation; so that the new group will not make the same mistakes as its predecessors. Thus each young generation will have a head start on these that preceded."

Dr. Swift was a student at Hopkins in the time of the great Sir William Osler and she recommends Harvey Cushing's biography of that unexcelled physician to those who wish to gain by the experience of another.

Dr. Swift was sent here by the American Social Hygiene Society. Bucknell was one of 126 colleges on her lecture schedule and the women appreciated the opportunity of hearing her talks.

Dr. Edith Hale Swift, physician, of the American Social Hygiene Association, lectured to the students of the Women's College on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, March 9, 10, 11, and 12, in Bucknell Hall.

Bucknell women felt very fortunate in being able to hear Dr. Swift, who is lecturing to women college students all over the United States, having come to Bucknell from Wellesley college.

All of the meetings had "full houses," Women's College turning out en masse.

The girls of the senior class entertained Dr. Swift, who gave a series of lectures to the women students, in the Women's College parlors on Thursday, March 11, from four-thirty to six o'clock. Vera Elster, '26, played a piano solo, and Hannah Metcalf, '26, sang. Sandwiches were served.

SOPH COTILLION DRAWS BIG CROWD

a quick dash to the home of Professor M. L. Drum on Water street.

The freshmen became suspicious of a light on the third floor of the Drum home, and their efforts redoubled. Deciding that the trail was becoming too hot, the Soph president sought new quarters on Wednesday afternoon, and once more went into hiding. This time at "Bob" Smidt's home near the Armory.

Frosh "Death Watch" Broken Up

The next task was to get into the Armory without being seen by the vigilant freshmen. The outlook was poor, for the frosh had set up a "death" watch around the building on Friday. However, the owner of the property chased the watchguard from the Armory at three o'clock Saturday morning, and the coast was clear for a free entrance, an entrance which was accomplished at six A. M. Johnston was then in the Armory, where he had a thirteen hour wait, before he could make his "debut." Of course it was a help to the dancers to have the head of the organization that was acting as host present at the class function.

Vesper Service Popular

Vesper serices to be held at half past four in the afternoon are replacing the regular evening services at the Presbyterian church. The vesper services will be held each Sunday afternoon until Easter.

The services are an hour in length, and they are proving popular and helpful. The regular meeting of the Young People is held at 6:30 as usual.

Strickler, a Penn State lad, gave a little exhibition of heavy-weight wrestling. "Art" Hirt then mimicked several of the campus celebrities, the representations being instantly recognized and loudly applauded.

Burpee Tells 'em About It.

Professor Burpee, having arrived by this time, gave a brief history of the engineering department at Bucknell and noted the advances made in the last few years. He spoke also of the proposed engineering courses available under the new appropriations, and of the possibility of advancing the engineering work through the Big Four organization.

Music was provided by the Four Monkeys, namely "Diaz" Dietz, "Jack" Gardner, "Art" Harris, and Fred Rudisill. To their sweet strainings Barlow, Dietz, Doyle, and Harris in turn gave nimble exhibitions of the Charleston and solo dancing.

Those Goals Were a Fluke

The star performance of the evening was a foul throwing contest by representatives of the four divisions of engineering. They were Professor Burpee for the Mechanicals, Professor Lindemann for the Electricals, Professor Brown for the Chemicals, and Assistant Professor Griffith for the Civils. Professor Burpee showed great promise as a basketball player by caging three of his five shots, Griffith came second, for out of five mighty heaves the ball managed to find the basket once. Professors Brown and Lindemann brought up in a tie for third place, with a score of 0-0. Rivalry entered at this point for Lindemann made a wager that Burpee could not repeat his score, and won his wager.

The remainder of the evening was spent in consuming pretzels, ice cream, and punch. The not too numerous cigars but plentiful cigarettes had been used earlier to give a truly philosophical haze to the evening.

Baptists Have 'Fun and Feeding,' With Song and Recitation, At Annual 'Get-together'

DR. EDWARD POLLARD MAKES BRIEF SPEECH

Students Show Their Gratitude For Work of Church Women By Unanimous Vote

The annual dinner social for Bucknell juniors and seniors took place in the Lewisburg Baptist church Friday evening, March 19, with Dr. Edward B. Pollard, of Crozer Theological Seminary, as the speaker of the evening, and Lewis K. Davis, '27, acting as toastmaster. The diners were entertained by an attractive program of music and reading, and the ladies of the church saw to it that no one went away hungry.

"The true essentials of a feast are only fun and feeding" said Oliver Wendell Holmes, and it is safe to say that all of the seventy-five or eighty present at the junior-senior banquet would have agreed that the definition applied. At any rate, the rising vote of appreciation for the work of the church ladies was unanimous, and the only reason that the Alma Mater at the close was not sung with more gusto was because of the handicap of gastronomic repletion.

Students Entertain Diners

"Johnny" Gilmour responded to Davis' introduction by singing "Roses of Memory," followed by a popular encore. Two readings by "Eddie" Watson evoked enthusiastic applause, which expressed but poorly the enjoyment derived by those entertained; and her contribution was followed by a pleasant surprise in the singing of two solos by "Midge" Fox, whose name had not appeared on the program. Paul Stolz then played "Negro Chant" on his faithful fiddle, and responded to the applause with an encore which was equally well received. As a fifth number on the program of entertainment Miss Grace Pheifer, '27, sang the soprano solo, "The Call of Springtime."

Dr. E. B. Pollard Speaks

Dr. Pollard, who is professor of practical theology at Crozer, supplemented the toastmaster's introduction by saying that he felt very much at home in a Bucknell group. President Milton G. Evans, of Crozer, he said, is an alumnus of Bucknell University, and is at present on the board of trustees. Reciprocally, our own Dr. Hunt is an alumnus of Crozer Seminary, and many Bucknellians have pursued their graduate study there. Furthermore, Bucknell Glee Club has made the Seminary "dorms" its headquarters during the stay in Chester on four successive Eastern trips, so the two institutions are closely inter-related.

Limiting the time of his address to fifteen minutes, Dr. Pollard gave the students several provocative thoughts for their consideration. He emphasized the development of personality along the most helpful lines, and declared that the four years in college offer the richest opportunity for the cultivation of traits which will prove of life-long helpfulness.

NOTICE

In connection with the regular second semester courses in astronomy the Observatory will, as usual, be open each Thursday evening through the semester, provided the sky is clear enough for observation.

While this opportunity is primarily arranged for the members of the class in Descriptive Astronomy, others can be accommodated. College women are requested to come at 7:30 and college men at 8:15. Constellations will be pointed out and the ten-inch telescope used.

Prof. H. S. Everett.

NOTICE

The Frill and Frown play, "The Goose Hangs High," which was previously announced for March 26, has been postponed and will be presented on April 30.

Bucknellians To Help In Lewisburg Drive

Aid to Be Asked For Ambulance, Community Nurse, Boy Scouts

Several Bucknellians will have a hand in the coming community chest drive by which it is hoped to raise $3150 to assist a number of Lewisburg's civic activities, such as the community nurse, the community ambulance, the Boy Scouts, the Lewisburg Band, the Parent-Teacher milk fund, and the municipal tourist camp. The drive will take place during the week beginning April 26.

The Rev. Dr. John T. Judd, treasurer of the University, is chairman of the executive council of the Lewisburg Welfare Federation, which is promoting the drive. Professor C. A. Lindemann is also a member of the council, and Professor L. E. Theiss is assisting in the work. Other Bucknellians interested are: Mrs. M. L. Drum, Mrs. Harry Bourne, Mrs. Frank Simpson, the Hon. James F. McClure, Miller A. Johnson, Esq., and Eugene E. Kerstetter.

This will be the third campaign for a community chest that has been made in Lewisburg. All of the activities to be aided this year were included in last year's budget except the community tourists' camp. Heretofore this has been supported by the town merchants. It is felt that the town itself should look after the camp, and it has been added to the list.

A special effort is to be made this year to put the Boy Scouts on a better basis. Both the ambulance and the community nurse have proved so useful that enthusiastic support was accorded them at the Council meeting.

Baptists Entertained At Dinner And Social

The dinner social given by the Baptist Church to the freshmen and sophomores brought a large group of young people together for an evening of feasting, music, and talks last Thursday, March 18.

The guests first met in the auditorium, there making themselves sociable to one another until the ladies who served the dinner announced that they were ready to encounter whetted appetites. The next hour was devoted to the all important process of self-nourishment, with lulls when all joined in singing.

Dining gave way to the second half of the entertainment planed for the social. This consisted of readings by "Sally Porter, '29; short talks given by Dean A. E. Clark, Professor W. G. Owens, and Dr. R. M. West; a solo by Robert Dilworth, '27; violin solos by Paul Stolz, '28, and an address, "Let's Fool 'Em," by the Rev. A. W. Mayer, minister of the First Baptist Church, Williamsport; Paul M. Humphreys, '28, was toastmaster.

The Rev. Mr. Mayer, in his talk, "Let's Fool 'Em," defended the cause of the younger generation. Pointing out that we young people are not in the process of decline, as many older folks will have it, he urged us to belie the notoriety we have gained. The speaker made it clear that the removal of the stigma would not come with our assuming a supercilious attitude. "Rather," he said, "we need only to let the mute evidence of our associations, our straight living, and our acceptance of God champion the younger generation's cause."

Mrs. Ruth M. Steese Member Pepper Campaign Committee

Mrs. Ruth M. Steese, of Mifflinburg, who is taking work at the University, was recently named as a member from Union County of the Pepper State campaign committee.

Mrs. Steese is a graduate of Irving College. For four years she was assistant principal of the Mifflinburg High school. She served two terms as president of the American Legion Auxiliary of Mifflinburg and is at present vice-president of the Five County Council of that organization. She was the first president of Union County Council No. 2 of Republican Women.

THE REV. DICE TO STAY

The Reverend W. J. Dice, the popular and able pastor of the Lewisburg Evangelical church, has again been assigned to the local charge by the Evangelical Conference held at Jersey Shore the week of March 14.

CAMPUS CLUB TOLD OF SPANISH LIVING

Mrs. Barras Tells of Life Among Nicaraguans After Travels Through the Country

The Campus Club met at the home of Mrs. N. H. Stewart Tuesday evening, March 16.

Mrs. J. M. Barras, the speaker of the evening, was introduced by Mrs. F. G. Davis.

Mrs. Barras, who has many relatives and friends in Lewisburg, has been the editor of a woman's page in a newspaper in Lynn, Massachusetts. She made her experiences while traveling in Nicaragua with her husband the subject of her address.

Mr. and Mrs. Barras stopped at one of the hotels in Leon, where they were given personal servants, as is the custom there. These servants are either Indians or half-breeds. They look after the general welfare of the guests, and, among their numerous duties, one is to take care of the washing. They are genial, accommodating, and honest in everything except the wash, but the clothes were usually delayed two weeks and were often worn during the interval.

Sees Spanish Courtship

During her stay in Leon, Mrs. Barras became acquainted with several fine Spanish families, and was frequently entertained at their homes. While at a dance in one of the palatial homes, she witnessed a typical Spanish courtship. The gentleman and the lady drew their chairs to the middle of the ballroom, and sat there conversing, about fifteen feet apart, oblivious of the guests around them.

Mrs. Barras did not see the wedding of this couple, but she saw one several months later. The family and friends of the bride assembled at her home, while the friends of the groom gathered at his. The two processions, every member of which bore a tall, lighted taper, marched solemnly through the city streets, at nine o'clock, where they enteredt ogether.

They Drink Tea for Medicine

Mrs. Barras thought to repay the kindness of her Spanish hostesses by entertaining at tea. She learned afterwards, much to her 'dismay, that the Spanish ladies drink tea only as a medicine.

Mr. and Mrs. Barras visited a coffee plantation one hundred and twenty miles inland. Although Nicaragua is the size of New York State, there are only one hundred and fifty miles of railroad in the entire country. Mules are used for transportation because of their steady gait.

The party stayed at a cattle ranch the first night. They were advised to remain in their saddles until their hammocks had been hung. The hammocks were hung straight and high, and in the cattle sheds because of the sanitary conditions existing in the houses.

Visits Coffee Plantation

The coffee plantation, viewed from a mountain, was a beautiful thing. The coffee bush grows from five to six feet tall and when the coffee is ripe, the bush is covered with brilliant red berries.

The house on the plantation was typically Spanish on the exterior, and typically English in the interior. The lady of the house had succeeded in making a beautiful home not only for her own children,b ut also for the English and American engineers from the gold mines thirty miles away.

Mrs. Barras said that the Christmas celebration impressed her almost as much as the Passion Play at Oberammergau. On Christmas night, everyone in the village gathered at the church for mass. Immediately after the services were over, the priest slipped away to carry the image of the Christ Child into some home. The people had prepared their homes according to their means. In one home, rice had been scattered on dampened matting. It covered the floor with a carpet of green. A path of flowers led to the cradle. But the image of Christ was not in one of the elaborate homes, it was found in the humble cottage of a poor widow, who had lost her only child.

At the close of the address, forty ladies gathered in front of the fireplace and were served with dainty refreshments.

TURN H. E. "LAB" INTO WONDERLAND

Alices and March Hares at 'Sem' Have Tea With Mad Hatter, But Food Was Very Real

" 'O Oyster,' said the Carpenter,
'You've had a pleasant run!
Shall we be trotting home again?
But answer came there none—
And this was scarcely odd, because They'd eaten every one."

It was the eighteenth of March by the Mad Hatter's watch. The home economics laboratories at the Women's College were transformed into Wonderland, and Alice, the Red and White Queens, the March Have, the Mad Hatter, and the Dormouse were once more gathered around the tea table.

It wasn't a mad tea-party this time, but a four-course dinner prepared by the students of the home economics department. The decorative scheme, in green and white, carried out the idea of card land. The guests entered through a rabbit hole made of brown paper.

A large looking glass occupied one end of the table, and before it was constructed a house of cards. The invitations and place cards were written buckwards, as is proper in looking glass land.

The menus were cleverely written, with a speech on each one. Each guest made an inappropriate speech, such as an oration on the subject of oysters while the ice cream was being served, etc. These speeches provided plenty of merriment, so that the Hare and the Hatter did not even attempt to put the Dormouse into the teapot.

The menu consisted of fruit cup, rolls, crown roast, potato roses and peas, cheese salad, vanilla wafers, angel food cake, ice cream, coffee, and mints.

G. MERRILL LENOX, '24 HEADS UNUSUAL CHURCH

Professor L. Foster Wod, formerly professor of religious education and instructor in sociology at Bucknell, and at present professor of Christian sociology at the Rochester Theological Seminary, recently wrote a letter to one of his former students here enclosing a clipping concerning the work of G. Merrill Lenox, '24. Professor Wood desired to be remembered to his former students and other friends here.

The clipping from the Rochester Times-Union of March 13, follows:

That a small rural church can successfully operate a fairly complete program of activities has been proved by the South Lima Presbyterian Church. This church of 46 resident members of the Rochester Theological Seminary, has been the center of religious and social activities for the entire comunity in which it is located.

The average attendance at the regular morning worship service is larger than the church membership, and is half composed of children and young people. The church school is well attended, well graded, and, in some departments has reached every available child in the community. The pastor meets all the children of the church in a Junior Christian Endeavor service at 2:30. The young people themselves take charge of the meetings and participate freely in a program varied from Sunday to Sunday sufficiently to create interest. This church maintains a Christian Endeavor Society which attracts a larger attendance than any other society in the county. Stereopticon lectures, discussion groups, candle light services, special speakers and visitation from other societies all aid to make the program varied and interesting.

The church is aided greatly in many of its projects by a live women's organization known as the "Willing Workers," headed by Mrs. David Neff. The church cooperates with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the community directed by Mrs. John Porter as president. A remarkable spirit of cooperation exists between the different members and organizations of the church and community as they work in a unified program. The financial budget adopted by the church this year was pledged in full and is being raised. A large

Sinfonia Fraternity To Give Big Concert

To Present Public Performance In Baptist Church, March 29

The first public concert of Phi Mu Alpha, Sinfonia, musical fraternity, will be given in the Baptist Church Monday evening, March 29, and promises to be one of the most interesting musical entertainments of the season. In addition to feature numbers including a brass duet, a piano and organ duet, and vocal numbers by the fraternity quartet, there will be a violin solo by Leo Weisenfluh, a flute solo by Edward Ramsdell, an organ solo by Lewis Kesler, and vocal solos by Albert Weidensaul, John Gilmour, and Melvin Shuttlesworth.

All of the students who will have part in the program are members of the fraternity, which chooses its men on the grounds of interest and attainment in the field of music. The fraternity has been planning the program for several weeks and especially during the past two weeks, under the direction of Instructor Norris and Mr. Hartz, who is the president of the organization, the plans have been materializing in practices and rehearsals.

The program to be given Monday evening will be followed by another to be given in May, and it is probable that programs of this nature will be given three or four times each year hereafter.

Mu Phi Epsilon, the women's musical fraternity, will be the guests of Phi Mu Alpha at this concert. The public is also invited to attend. No admission will be charged but an offering will be received.

Who Took The Wraps At Soph Cotillion?

Almost all of the social activities of the school have been held at Miller's Garage or what is now known as the armory. These activities, usually about five or six a year, are managed in a very orderly manner. However, there has been one evil steadily growing which has caused a great deal of inconvenience to the people concerned. This evil is the habit somebody has of borrowing hats and wearing apparel from the checkroom and failing to return them.

The thief evidently has a taste for good clothes, for he usually picks out the best. One student lost a Stetson hat and a scarf at the Cotillion, several students were relieved of their possessions at the Alumni Dance. Something ought to be considered which would insure the safety of the articles entrusted to the men in charge. Perhaps in some cases it has been a mistake, but this can hardly be true in all instances. Most students aren't fortunate enough to be able to afford such expensive enjoyment.

Bison Baseball Men Face Hard Situation

The first four games of the Bucknell University baseball schedule will undoubtedly be the most difficult diamond problems that Coach Blair and his charges will face during the entire season. Practice began Monday. But this leaves only one week of workouts before the opener at Washington, D. C., against Georgetown on March 29. Weather conditons kept the diamond men from any practice until that time.

The opening southern trip embraces a quartet of games. Georgetown, the first, is followed by clashes with Catholic University in Washington on March 30, Navy at Annapolis on March 31, and the Quantico Marines at Quantico, Va., on April 1.

The Memorial Stadium field is still rather soft and the old diamond on Loomis Field has not been marked out. Coach Blair is attempting little except explaining his technique to his men. Some forty candidates are reporting for the varsity squad. W. F. Wagner is the manager.

Co: "Can a girl live on love?"
Ed: "Yes, if she stays single."

Naturally. No woman is so angelic as to prefer a halo to a hat.

PRES. SOUTHWICK CHARMS AUDIENCE IN LYTTON DRAMA

Head of Emerson Oratory Schools Gives "The Cardinal King" In Baptist Church

ONE OF OLDEST PLAYS ON STAGE RECENTLY

Presentation Given Significance Thru Interpretative Insight And Dramatic Quality

Dr. Henry Lawrence Southwick, president of the Emerson Schools of Oratory of Boston, gave his interpretive recital, "The Cardinal King," in the Lewisburg Baptist church Tuesday evening, March 23, under the auspices of the Bucknell Dramatic and Literary Board.

It was Dr. Southwick's third appearance before a Lewisburg-Bucknell audience, and "The Cardinal King" is known to be the best reading in his ample repertoire. Because of these facts, together with free admission to students, the church auditorium was well filled with an appreciative group of hearers.

Play Almost Century Old

After responding to what he termed the "gracious and graceful" introduction by Professor James P. Whyte, Dr. Southwick prefaced his reading of the play by a brief historical sketch. He said that there are only three plays of century vintage that are now being produced on the American stage. "The Cardinal King," which first appeared nearly one hundred years ago, was written by Bulwer-Lytton, and has been staged by the Booths, Mantell, Southern, and other actors of note.

Speaker Has Rare Skill

Dr. Southwick's recital was marked by the literary finish and artistic beauty so characteristic of all his work. He has the rare insight and interpretive skill requisite in the finished dramatist, and is able at the same time to convey thought and feeling with great expressiveness. His voice is one of remarkably fine quality and carrying power, and his personality and general mode of presentation has been such as to gain for him great prominence on the Lyceum platform. His snow-white hair and stately bearing make his stage presence very impressive.

"The Cardinal King" is based on a theme taken from French history. The time of the play is fixed at 1632 and in it is featured the statecraft and political influence of the Cardinal de Richelieu during the regime of King Louis. Arranged as a tragedy in five acts, this work of the great Bulwer-Lytton pictures to us very vividly the intrigues and nefarious schemes which characterized international relations in Europe during this period.

Richard H. Harvey, ex-'28, Marries Miss Helen White

Miss Helen Clark White, daughter of Mrs. Alpine White, of Lock Haven, became the bride of Richard H. Harvey, ex-'27, on Saturday, March 20. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lewis Nichols, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, at Lock Haven. The wedding took place at the bride's home. The young couple will live in Harrisburg. Mr. Harvey is a graduate of the Lock Haven High School and attended Bucknell for two years.

Chas. F. Bidelspacher, '01, To Run Again For Assembly

Petitions have been completed and will be filed soon which will secure places for the candidates running on the Prohibition party ticket. Among the candidates is Charles F. Bidelspacher, '01, who is running for re-election as an assemblyman.

NOTICE

Students going East or West on the Pennsylvania Railroad at the beginning of the Easter vacation will be given the advantage of special arrangements similar to those made before the Christmas vacation. Specific announcements will appear on the bulletin board when the arrangements are completed.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI KAPPA PSI

Plans are being completed for the erection of a new chapter house. The down-town corner is to be deserted after many years of continuous service.

The actives entertained the pledges at a little party held at the Buffalo Creek bridge. In the course of events "Cherry" Wood was mistaken for a freshman and remembrances of last year were recalled vividly to his mind.

Everything is set for the pledge dance that is to be held March 26. A special appointment has been made with "Jan Garber" for that evening.

Johnson is training the boys for the broadcasting hour that is to be held soon.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Brother Jack Davis, '23, of Williamsport, was a week-end visitor.

Brothers Gaskill and Mathewson were initiated into the Druids on Saturday night.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Founders' Day, March 9, was celebrated with the Dickinson chapter of the fraternity, at Harrisburg. A successful banquet was held at the Penn-Harris Hotel. The principal speakers of the evening were Mr. O. K. Quivey, of Baltimore, eminent deputy supreme archon of the fraternity, and Registrar H. W. Holter, '24, of Bucknell. Dr. Arthur E. Brown, of Harrisburg Academy, was toastmaster.

A tea dance was held at the house on Saturday afternoon, March 13. Jack Gardner, "Red" Hitchens, and Fred Rudisill furnished music for the party, which was a peppy affair.

Professor and Mrs. W. H. Coleman, and Mrs. I. E. Baker, of Milton, were guests at dinner on Wednesday evening, March 17.

On Thursday evening, March 18, Professor W. H. Coleman led the discussion group at the house. Cooperation between faculty and students was discussed.

Professor and Mrs. H. W. Robbins were entertained at bridge on Friday evening, March 19.

Brothers "Tef" White, '24, and "Ducky" Davies, '25, who are now teaching at "Kiskie" Prep, visited the boys last week-end.

Professor and Mrs. I. E. Theiss, "Ted" Keebler, '28, and Ruth Keebler, '25, were guests at dinner on Sunday, March 21.

DELTA SIGMA

Professor John W. Rice had charge of the discussion group on Thursday, March 18. "Practical Religion" was the topic.

The radio program given on Wednesday, March 17, by the fraternity was successfully broadcast except for the last third of the Alma Mater which was cut off when the tubes of the sending apparatus blew out.

Much excitement was caused recently when "Al" Parks, '26, passed a box of cigars around. It was discovered later, however, that the cigars were a gift of a recent guest at the house, who had insisted on leaving them in return for the hospitality of the boys.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Final arrangements are being made for the "Sem" formal to be held March 30.

The fraternity basketball team played the last out-of-town game on its schedule at Muncy last Saturday evening. The Muncy team won, thus registering the first defeat for the hill-top boys in all of the games played out of town this year. A dinner was given in honor of the team after the game.

ALPHA CHI MU

Professor Lewis E. Theiss was the leader in a "Y" discussion group held last Thursday evening, March 18, at the house. The subject for discussion was "What Are We In College For?"

Mr. and Mrs. John Parsons, and Mr. and Mrs. John Froehlich, all of Kingston, were the guests of the fraternity at dinner on Sunday, March 21.

BETA KAPPA

Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders furnished the music for the "Sem" dance held at the Lewisburg Club last Saturday evening. The hall was decorated in the St. Patrick's motif with green streamers running from all sides of the room to a drop in the middle. Miss Lulu Coe and Mr. Ralph F. Hartz chaperoned. Several men from Penn State, who were here to install the local chapter of the Druids, were guests.

The discussion group last Thursday evening was led by Professor George B. Lawson. The subject under discussion was the sex problem for college men.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

The Gamma chapter of Phi Lambda Theta takes pleasure in announcing the pledging of J. C. Russin, '28.

Brother "Mississippi" Elizey migrated still further north over the week-end, to visit Brother "Lewie" Hausser and other friends at Jersey Shore.

Charles Stump and Brother H. Engolf Knudson, ex-'28, of Susquehanna University, spent the week-end at the house.

Brother Penrose Wallace expects to spend Easter vacation in Boston. He says that he wishes to write a thesis on "The Origin of Baked Beans," but at the same time we warn him to keep shy of the cod in the bay.

The pledges gave the active and honorary members a unique "St. Patty's Day" smoker at the house on Friday evening. Progressive five hundred was played, in which Brother Walter Hufnagle was lucky enough to win the prize.

The annual Founder's Day banquet of the fraternity will be held at the Cameron House on Saturday evening, March 27.

MU PHI EPSILON

A short program, but one in keeping with St. Patrick's Day, was given by Mu Phi Epsilon in its initial spring recital on March 15, 1926, in the Women's College. Evelyn Brubaker sang three little Irish songs, and Mary Hite played two Irish piano numbers. Phoebe Reinhart gave an Irish reading. The program was

Mu Phi Epsilon Song, "The Triangle"
Reading ..... Phoebe Reinhart
My Love's an Arbutus ..... Graves
When Love is Kind ..... J. Moore
Last Rose of Summer ..... Old Irish
Evelyn Brubaker
Spring Idyl ..... Strickland
Donnybrook Fair ..... Scott
Mary Hite

Mu Phi Epsilon is pleased to announce the bidding of Josephine Evelyn Behney, '28.

PHI MU

Phi Mu held an "Automobile Dance" at the Kapa Sigma house Saturday evening, March 20. The house was appropriately decorated with all kinds of signs ordinarily found by the tourist, including parking, danger, detour, and roadhouse signs. One sign even denoted a license bureau for automobiles, dogs, and marriages.

A prize was offered in a special reverse dance to the couple that could do the best dancing with the girl leading. In this "lucky seventh" Marian Eisenhauer and Earl Hartman were awarded the prizes by the chaperones. The prizes were toy automobiles.

Even half of the chaperones conformed with the automobile dance idea, for one was Miss Stalford. The other was Mrs. Jennie D. Phillips. The music was furnished by the Blue Band. Clever programs designated the chaperones as "accessories," the pledges as "nuts and bolts," and the orchestra as furnishing the rattles.

Miss Elizabeth Grove, '24, visited her Phi Mu sisters during the week-end and attended the dance Saturday evening.

TO RAISE SCHOLARSHIP FUND

The Phi Beta Kappa society will attempt in the near future to raise a fund of $1,000,000 "to restore teaching and scholarship to their rightful places."

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a member of the society, announced plans for a nation-wide drive.

Part of the fund will be used for construction of a memorial building in southern colonial style at William and Mary College, in honor of the fifty founders of Phi Beta Kappa. The balance will be used to award an annual grand prize of $10,000 for distinction in teaching, and several grants of $2,000 each in aid of scholarship, teaching, and research.

JAZZ IS GIVEN BODY BLOW BY FAMOUS BANDMASTER

Now will jazz behave? Captain Patrick Conway, noted bandmaster, definitely, laconically, and forcefully announced that jazz would find no place on his programs during his three week's engagement with the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia, June 1 to December 1.

"Jazz is parlor and theatre music," he says. "The brass band is the great music of the outdoors. Jazz has never equalled such numbers as Flotow's Martha Overture and William Tell. The great crowds which attend band concerts appreciate music of this kind. In that respect they are like soldiers. No one would think of leading soldiers into battle with jazz."

Many a girl is single today because she couldn't stay awake while a man talked about himself.—Ex.

Old Theta Alpha Phi Revived By Dramatists

The Theta Alpha Phi dramatic fraternity was revived here last Thursday evening, March 11, after a period of several years during which no initiations were held. Seven pledges were initiated at the first meeting and three others were added the following Tuesday.

Pennsylvania of Theta Alpha Phi initiated seven pledges into active chapter membership Thursday evening, March 11 at nine o'clock. The ceremonies were held at the home of Miss Carolyn Hunt.

Following the ritualistic services, a business meeting was conducted and officers were elected. The newly elected officials then assumed charge of the meeting. They are: president, Kenneth W. Slifer, '26; secretary-treasurer, Florence R. Utt, '26.

The following were initiated: M. Eleanor Dakin, '26; Florence R. Utt, '26; Kenneth W. Slifer, '26; Stewart L. Rankin, 26; Frederic B. Davies, '26; Gilbert G. McCune, '27; and Albert B. Lauderbaugh, '28.

These members of Theta Alpha Phi assembled at the home of Assistant Professor Harry R. Warfel, on Brown street, Tuesday evening, March 16, at nine o'clock, to initiate three pledges into the local chapter. Those initiated were: Marion H. Higgins, '28; Edna M. Watson, '27; Abram J. Gaskill, '28.

Following a short business meeting Professor and Mrs. Warfel entertained the chapter, and during the social hour tea and sandwiches were served. The "Semites" and "Dorm" dwellers enjoyed the cheery warmth of the home-like fireside.

The local chapter now has fourteen active members on the campus. Professor James P. Whyte, Assistant Professor Harry R. Warfel, and Instructor Robert E. Harris, represent the faculty. Miss Carolyn Hunt is also a member of the local chapter.

Treasure Buried On Campus.
Free To All Who Unearth It

Did you ever realize that there is buried treasure on the campus of Bucknell? No; it isn't, in the form of Spanish doubloons, pieces of eight, or golden nuggets—the kind of treasure that Captain Kidd and his cut-throat crew of mustached murderers were wont to accumulate in their piratical excursions over the seas. The exact location of this treasure is known to all, and is free to everyone who will come and partake of it. The treasure of which I speak is buried in books in the library, and is of far greater value than all of Kidd's coin put together. The library is truly a veritable treasure, and he who fails to dig out his share of the priceless treasure buried therein is missing a wonderful opportunity to enrich himself in the thought and wisdom of the ages past, is failing to make the most of his college course.

Every book is a jewel; there are thousands of jewels in the library. Go, help yourself to the jewels.

We are the posterity our forefathers prayed for—can you blame them?
—Evansville Courier.

Professor: "I'm tempted to give this class a test."
Stude: "Yield not to temptation."

Was Flirting With Other Fellow's Girl

He was a gallant post office clerk and for the moment business was slack. Presently to his joy a pretty girl entered the office.

"What can I do for you?" he asked with unusual affability.

"I want a 2-cent stamp," said the girl. "And would you mind weighing this letter for me as I'm afraid it may be a little too heavy."

Mind? He was delighted and chatted glibly about the weather while he executed her order. He even volunteered to affix the stamp for her—a courtesy she accepted with a dainty blush.

Just as he was placing the stamp on the envelope, however, she stopped him.

"Put it upside down," she requested.

"Why?" he asked.

"Oh," she replied, "that means something to Charlie!"

And the clerk's interest vanished as the clouds of monotony once more gathered on his horizon.

Here's One Writer Has Good Word for Spider

The predaceous habits of spiders make them most useful to man. Our selfish interests should preserve and protect them, except where they annoy the housewife by building dust-catching and unsightly webs indoors. Even then they might be given a place. All forms are diligent producers of their kind, and were it not for their numerous enemies there would be enough spiders to alter considerably the overproduction of noxious insects. In comparison to the insects there are few spiders, both of species and of individuals. Considering the number of eggs spiders lay and the protective care they give their eggs, this seems surprising. But when we observe the ceaseless activity of birds, shrews, toads, snakes, lizards, robberflies, certain parasitic insects and, most particularly, mud dauber and digger wasps, it is more surprising that spiders exist at all.

Dogs Seldom Mad

When dogs bite people in the summer time, they're seldom "mad," except in the sense in which normal human beings often get mad. They're surly and grouchy, perhaps, because they are affected by the heat like human folk, and have less ability to help themselves.

Suppose, on a hot, sultry day, when you were fairly stewing in the heat, and the flies were biting you, you couldn't find a cool spot to lie down and, worse than that, couldn't find a bit of cool water to drink. And suppose every person you approached hopefully was surly and ill-natured and gave you a kick or an ugly look instead of something to moderate the heat. Wouldn't you feel like snapping at somebody's calves?

Dogs probably don't run amuck in hot weather any more than people do, though with more provocation.—Kokomo Dispatch.

"The Cup That Cheers"

On September 25 occurred the two hundred sixty-fifth anniversary of the day when Samuel Pepys had his first "dish of tea."

Only 27 years earlier the very first cup of tea ever drank in England is recorded as having been prepared at Arlington house, which then occupied the site on which Buckingham palace now stands.

The earl of Arlington bought the tea in Holland and gave 60 shillings a pound for it, a sum which today would be represented by at least 20 pounds.

The drink that was a curiosity less than 300 years ago is now our chief beverage.—London Answers.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

Univ. of Wash. May Require News-Knowledge of Seniors

In deciding to ask the University of Washington faculty to make a knowledge of national and world affairs of today a requirement for graduation, the World Court committee has outlined a program which is really constructive. Washington may be the pioneer in a field of educational values which has been overlooked by nearly every university in the nation,—a nation which is attempting to train men and women for citizenship by gleanings from the dusty past.

Careful and intelligent reading of the daily news and the periodicals devoted to current events is becoming a lost art in these United States. The hodgepodge of murders and divorces which makes up the bulk of front-page news today has been brought about by this lack of discriminating readers. The great journals which cater to thinking men and women exclude crime news from their columns and devote their entire space to events of national significance. But the average college student of today is less selective in his reading than the uneducated laborer. Both are more interested in the sports sheet and the comic section than in affairs of moment. For both classes of individuals, forming one unenlightened class of readers, the newspapers put the scandal of the day in screaming headlines and bury the news of world significance.

For at least three quarters just prior to his leaving the university, the student should be trained in the reading of newspapers and helped to follow the trend of world affairs. If such a program is put into effect in the University of Washington, its graduates will be far better educated and their influence far more weighty in the body of citizens of which they have become members.—The University of Washington Daily.

Dartmouth To Show Students Object of College Courses

The best time to give an alumnus an intelligent interest in his college is before he becomes an alumnus. There is a course on "College Education," offered as an elective at Dartmouth, which is aimed at this objective. The catalogue defines the course as follows:

"The purpose of this course is to make clear the present objectives of college education, as shown in the historical development of the American college, with a view to a more understanding participation by the undergraduate in the intellectual life of the institution and a more intelligent participation by future alumni in the control and support of their alma mater. The European background of American colleges will be studied briefly, especially the English universities, after which will be taken up the founding of the nine colonial colleges. Their development as to support, control, curriculum, entrance, and graduation requirements, faculty, etc. will be traced. Dartmouth College forming the central theme, with ample supplementary material from the histories of other institutions. Open to juniors and seniors. No prerequisites."

THE EXCEPTIONAL STUDENT AND "ACTIVITIES"

There are dissipations and dissipations in the life of the college student, but perhaps the most pathetic is the dissipation of the abilities of the exceptional individual in a maze of petty but engrossing undergraduate activities. . . .

He becomes a member of half a dozen clubs and societies, he connects himself with the better organizations, he plunges into the undergraduate swirl, not necessarily because he is imbued with the desire to be a social lion, but because he feels it his duty to appear and to be seen about. He develops poise, ease, grace. He can engage in conversation with professor or chaperone without embarrassment to himself or to these appendages of his education. He carries out well enough whatever is intrusted to him, but he never does so with distinction or with more than a flash of ability.

In other words, he develops a facile cleverness so that he does everything well but nothing thoroughly. And, worst of all, this is markedly true of his classroom work. He turns in at the end of his university career an average record,—one of which he need not be at all ashamed if he were only an averge individual. But the man of whom we speak is capable of far more and is therefore guilty of gross perversion of his abilities.

CHURCHILL IS LIONIZED BY BELFAST STUDENTS

Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, received the honorary degree of doctor of laws from Belfast University on March 2. The students gave him a riotous reception, with the usual good-natured ragging, and presented him with a hat with a clay pipe stuck in the band and a shilelagh.

Rival bands of students, dressed as Hibernians and Ulster volunteers, escorted the Chancellor to the famous Ulster Hall, which he vainly endeavored to enter on his visit fourteen years ago, when demonstrations against his home-rule policy caused rioting.

In a speech at the hall he said he cherished the hope that some day all Ireland would be loyal and, because it was loyal, would be united with itself and united to the British Empire. "It is my belief that the Irish question has entered a stable phase," he said.

Yale To Study Her Students In Answer To Questionnaire

Yale plans to study her own students. A committee of undergraduates is to conduct intensive research in the personnel of the classes, putting frank questions concerning the motive of the individual in coming to college, his guiding ambitions, his suggestions for making the college courses more interesting and more profitable to those for whom they are designed. In addition, the home environment and the previous educational background will be included in the questionnaire. Very different is this attitude from the regime that prevailed when Yale was founded, when the teachers and the taught were strangers to one another outside the classroom, when there was slight consideration for the triumphs or the tribulations of the students one by one, and at commencement time the candidates for a degree were pilloried in a room and compelled orally to defend a chosen thesis against the attack of any passer-by. College today recognizes a student not simply as an entry on the catalog, a name on a classroom list or a lodger in a dormitory, but as an articulate human being making ready for a place in mature society.

Lafayette and Lehigh Form Local League of Nations

Lafayette College and Lehigh University have formed their own "League of Nations" to preserve the peace of the Lehigh Valley, through an agreement last week for the establishment of a permanent joint committee, do away with the annual football "pep" war and to bring about an interchange of ideas on current college problems.

Each year during the week prior to the Lafayette-Lehigh football game, gangs from each institution have been in the habit of sallying to the campus of the opposition and painting up the buildings with victory slogans. Frequent pitched battles resulted.

This tendency was decried in a set of resolutions drawn up at a meeting of committees from the Lafayette Student Self-Government Council and the Lehigh Areadia. The committees further agreed to a regular joint committee for the purpose of throttling this competition and to provide for an interchange of ideas on current college problems.

Obtains 10,000 Objects of Antiquity

Ten thousand objects of antiquity, including more than 900 unbroken pieces of ancient pottery, are the University of Michigan's contribution to archeology as the result of a recent scientific expedition to the Philippine Islands. Much of the pottery belonged to the Ming dynasty in China.

Princetonians May Travel In Pullman For Instruction

A plan is afoot at Princeton to organize "the first university course ever given on wheels." It is the intention of the Princeton authorities so to equip a Pullman car that it will accommodate twenty-two persons, including students and professors, on a journey of 10,000 miles. The purpose of the trip is, essentially, to further the study of geology and to investigate the natural resources of the United States. Niagara Falls, the Columbia River, the Yosemite, the Grand Canyon, and many other places of interest and importance, are included in the itinerary of these ambitious men.

A questionnaire was recently sent to each of 1,000 graduates of the University of Michigan, and the results of these revealed the fact that the average annual income of the men approached, is approximately $9,000.

The football team of Notre Dame has set up possibly the most enviable collegiate record of all by having kept its home slate clean since October 21, 1905.

German Litt. Course Changed To 3 Hours

"German Literature in English," the new course to be offered next semester by Professor Rockwell, will be a three-hour course instead of a two-hour course, as announced in the catalog. The change is made to fit the new fifteen-hour program and to permit a more extensive survey of the field.

The course will consist of lectures on the German writers of world significance, illustrated by selections from their works read in English translation. It is intended to give those students who are anxious to secure a general background in literature a general knowledge of the German contribution to world literature. No knowledge of German is necessary for election of the course.

A rapid survey of the earlier literature, including the great folk-epic of the Niebelungen and the Middle High German epic and lyric poets, will be followed by the consideration of the eighteenth century classic authors, Lessing, Goethe, and Schiller.

Then the chief literary movements of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries from Romanticism to post-expressionism will be reviewed, the figures of universal significance in each being considered.

Finally, the outstanding contemporary authors, including Hauptmann, Fritz von Unruh, Werfel, Toller, Wassermann, Thomas, and Heinrich Mann, will be regarded, and an effort made to appraise the value of the post-war tendencies toward revival and revolt.

BIG PAUL BUNYAN REVIVED

Paul Bunyan is a monstrous and mythical lumberman who romps through a hundred legends current in the forests of the Northwest. Such a gigantic tent housed Paul Bunyan's men that when the wind rippled the canvas, flocks of duck, mistaking it for a lake, dashed themselves upon it from a nearby mountain.

When the School of Forestry at the University of Montana planned its twelfth annual Foresters' ball a Bunyan motif was appropriately chosen. Hugh prints 30 inches long, 13 inches wide, showed the students that Paul himself had walked across the campus to the men's gymnasium where the dance was held. The students attended in foresters' costumes (hobnails however, were forbidden). They entered the hall by sliding down the logging chute which Paul is reported to have carried about under his arm wherever he went.

At the recent Bates-George Washington debate there was an audience of only sixty people, but there were six hundred present at the Junior Prom. "All of which forms," concludes the G. W. Hatchet, "an interesting sidelight on the interests of the modern collegiate."

Recently a debate, conducted entirely in French, was held under the auspices of the French Academy at Boston College. The subject was concerned with France's ability to pay her debt to the United States.

The League of Masonic Clubs has pledged itself to contribute the desired one hundred thousand dollars necessary for the erection of a School of Foreign Service, at George Washington, next fall.

A "Longfellows Club" has recently been organized in a western city. Its purpose is not to honor Henry W. Longfellow, but rather to foster comradeship among the tall men of the city.

The sales of candy and cigarettes at the college store of the University of Detroit have shown a marked decrease since the commencement of Lent.

From all accounts much interest and enthusiasm are evinced in the activities of the Knights of Columbus at Catholic University.

WYOMING VALLEY ALUMNI ORGANZE UNIVERSITY CLUB

Students from Wyoming Valley will be interested to know that a University Club has been organized in Wilkes-Barre by alumni from various colleges and universities. The club will give its first social function on the night of April 7, 1926, a dance to be held at the Irem Temple, Wilkes-Barre. Students who will be in that vicinity at that time are cordially invited to attend.

John Is Most Common Among Campus Names

Statistics Show Eighty-One Men Are Johns; Williams Follow Second; Charles Third

John is the most popular name among the boys at Bucknell. There are, by actual count, eighty-one of them—eight among the seniors, seventeen among the juniors, and twenty-eight in each of the other classes. The name is of Hebrew origin and means "The gracious gift of God." Isn't it strange that most of the Johns seldom retain their dignified names, but usually become Jacks on the campus?

William, a German name, holds next place. There are thirteen among the seniors, seventeen in the junior class, twenty-eight among the sophomores, and nineteen in the freshman class, making seventy-seven in all. The name means "Helmet of defense, or resolution."

Charles, also a German name, meaning "strong, manly, or noble-spirited," ranks third with forty-one. There are also forty-one Janeses. The name means "a supplanter" and has the same origin as Jacob.

George, "a land-owner," is quite popular among the freshman class. There are thirty-six Georges in Bucknell and half of them are found in the class of '29.

Edward is a good old Anglo-Saxon name meaning "Guardian of the property." It stands in grace with the class of '28, while there are thirty-one in the school.

Paul, Harold, Thomas, and Henry rank next. Paul means "little" and is of Latin derivation. Harold is an Anglo-Saxon name and means "general of an army." Thomas "Atwin" is of Hebrew origin, and Henry means "the head of the house."

Eugene means "noble," Guy, "A leader," Alfred "illustrious," Arthur is a Celtic name and means "noble." Donald is also Celtic and means "proud chief." Alan is of Slavic origin and means "harmony."

All this may have something to do with the fact that:

"Names of great men all remind us,
We can pass away the time,
And departing, leave behind us
Note books other fellows sign.

Frosh: "Why is there so much electricity in my hair?"

Soph: "Because it is attached to a dry cell."

DO YOU HAVE AN IDEA?

DARE YOU EXPRESS IT?

In response to our editorial of last week we received the one letter that is printed on this page. We are convinced, however, that there should be more response than this. Our correspondent has gone just as far as we have in suggesting a symposium on the matter of educational values and methods, with the addition that his plan will make it necessary for the editor to solicit opinions on the subject. This we hesitate to do for, by directing our inquiries, it would be entirely possible to make the result of the symposium very much one-sided. We very much prefer voluntary contributions and it is our desire that they come from any person interested in the University; senior or freshman, alumni, trustees, or faculty.

That the members of the faculty are not dead to the question, we have found in conversation. The students, too, have shown some appreciation of our attempt to rouse thought, but so far their response has been only conversational. There seems to be a fear of committing one's thoughts to paper, or else a false modesty in thinking that one's reactions will be useless when viewed along with those of some mythical superior being such as an "A" student or an instructor.

Let us say here that there is no such superiority. The "A" student is frequently one of those "swallowers-whole and regurgitators of professorial opinion" mentioned by "Jonathan," and one of the very type which we are now trying to reform. And our instructors can not be credited with omniscience. Their experience in teaching may have given them new viewpoints on the problems that are a part of the process of education, but most of them will readily admit that the student should have a part in his own education. The scientific student wants to air his ideas and to subject them to the acid test of criticism. It is only the one who wants to be comfortable in his own narrow self-righteousness who says vaguely that there is something wrong, that he knows the remedy, but that there is no use telling the world about it. These poor unappreciated geniuses, martyrs to their own self-consciousness, are born to blush unseen and leave the world no better than they found it.

If we students are to accomplish anything in the reformation of the modes of instruction here at Bucknell, it must be done through the medium of pen and ink. Conversation is a great aid to the crystallization of ideas, and is often provocative of the finest thoughts, but the chance to express them is gone before they have become formulated into words and sentences. We tend to stray too readily to the side issues, forgetting the main path of progress. Our experience in conversational efforts on the subject we are now treating has been that an instructor and a student talking together will eternally qualify the statements of each other, vieing for an advantage in expression or stressing a change in viewpoint, while the big problem which must be approached from both sides on a plane of sympathetic understanding goes neglected. Each has the problem perfectly settled in his own mind and will not allow the possibility of any other solution, not even the expression of another theory.

In the final analysis the expression of an idea through the newspaper, or in any place where it will become the subject of criticism, is a question of courage, based on conviction. Do Bucknell students, the members of the faculty, the trustees, have the nerve to give their ideas expression before the whole University?

Mrs. Geo. W. Sale, dietitian at the Women's College, saw to it that St. Patrick's Day was celebrated by the Co-eds. The Wednesday evening dinner on March 17 was quite a creation. Green bouillon, green peas, green snakes and shamrocks of Erin's hue decorated the tables. The girls, hearing about the preparations beforehand, played up well. Each one who had a bit of green ribbon, or a verdant dress put it on. All the greens made the place look very spring-like.

Paul Schmidt, '25, is straining at the leash, impatient for the balmy breezes of spring and a new cinder season. Our "Nurmi" no longer "slings hash" at Braucht's, as he says he needs more time during the remainder of his last semester here to "go to college right," and not simply attend classes. He is, incidentally, working for a master's degree in philosophy.

Read the Bucknellian.

Letter Box

Lewisburg, March 22, 1926.

Editor, The Bucknellian:

Your editorial of this week appeals to me as opening the way for a really valuable discussion of our college education as it is found at Bucknell. Can we not have a faculty-student symposium on what is really worth while in our teaching?

The other evening I heard the statement made that of all elements connected with a college, (trustees faculty, alumni, and students,) a senior in his second semester is probably best able to render an intelligent judgment of the value of our present educational methods. The point was made that the trustees get their information second-hand; the faculty are narrowed by their special interests; the alumni know things as they were rather than as they are; but the mature student has a comparative, direct knowledge of conditions as they are.

Perhaps the statment needs some qualification; certainly a man who has had expert training for his calling and years of experience in meeting the problems of education should not have his opinion unduly discounted; and certainly the younger alumni at least have the advantage of having discovered the pragmatic value of their education. But, even granting all that, the opinion of the seniors has great value; the Dartmouth report proves that.

Now cannot THE BUCKNELLIAN induce some of the students who are really interested in an education rather than a degree to give us all the benefit of their views? Can they not report to us what they have found most valuable in their college course, and why they consider it of value.

Even such definite criticism of specific methods as that contained in your editorial should be admitted. An honest statement by students of the actual working of such devices is of immense value to a teacher, whether or not he changes the method. The student may, perhaps, fail to get the full appreciation of the value of any specific device at the time, and later come to a realization of it. On the other hand, a teacher may be employing it with a blind faith that it is accomplishing a purpose which it utterly fails of realizing. So far then as such criticism can be made without being unpleasantly personal, it should be admitted.

And to make the discussion four-square, should not faculty members, alumni, and trustees be invited to express their views also? Open-minded teachers will always welcome honest, objective criticism of their methods, but they may wish to explain those methods or to protest when they feel that the criticism is not valid. And others, graduates or trustees, may want to stick in an ear.

There is hardly a doubt that we should all profit by a symposium of criticism of this nature. It would not only improve teaching at Bucknell by forcing us all to a reexamination of our materials and methods, but beyond that, it would be vastly useful in arousing among some of the submerged tenth (or seven-tenths) of our students, the bluffers, the time-servers and clock-watchers, the "don't let your studies interfere with your college course" nuisances, and the docile swallowers-whole and regurgitators of professorial opinions, an idea or at least a query as to what college is really all about.

Of course there is always the danger that such a series may degenerate into a knock-fest; and the chronic sore-head may use it as a cowardly means of "getting-back;" but in my judgment criticism of that type is always self-revealed and recoils on the critic. And certainly we should not pussy-foot ourselves out of the benefit of real constructive criticism because we fear the whimperings of the unfit.

When within that period of a few days the ALUMNI MONTHLY prints an editorial such as "Quantity or Quality, Which?" and the Bucknellian another like "Education or a Degree" the time seems to have arrived for a general discussion of education at Bucknell.

I am, Sir,
Very respectfully yours,
JONATHAN.

Evangelical Homes,
Lewisburg, Pa.
March 17, 1926

To the Editor of the Bucknellian:

Sunday afternoon, March 14, 1926, Alpha Chi Omega girls of Bucknell College made their first visit as an organization to the Evangelical Homes for the Aged.

About twenty girls were in the group. Jane E. Shrum very ably presided at the service, reading the familiar Easter lesson from St. John, and also extracts from an excellent sermon on "Youth and Age," following with an earnest prayer. Several hymns were sung in which "youth" and "age" joined. Their quartette, consisting of Doris Worrell, Josephine Roberts, Kathryn Bosler, and Mildred Fox sang two fine selections. Eleanor Miller and Margaret Brick each read appropriate selections, wonderfully interpreting their message to us. Mildred Fox sang a veryt ouching solo and Mary Foust delighted us with a beautiful piano selection.

After the inspiring hour spent with us, we are sure the girls realize something of the truth of the following lines:

"Thou shalt be served, thyself, by every sense of service which thou rendereest."

A FRIEND.

The Rev. Heistand Elected Rector, Bloomsburg Church

The Reverend J. Thomas Heistand, chaplain to the Episcopal students of Bucknell University, and a World War veteran, was elected March 19 as rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Bloomsburg, to succeed the Reverend Robert R. Morgan, who has resigned, his resignation to become effective at Easter. The Reverend Mr. Heistand will take up his duties the first Sunday in May.

At the outbreak of the World War he enlisted with the Canadians in the "Princess Pats" and served throughout the entire war, being one of the three men of his company to return, and one out of 643 in the entire division of 10,000 men. When America entered the war he enlisted with the American troops and completed his service with them. He entered the service as a private and was discharged as a major.

The Reverend Mr. Heistand is a graduate of Columbia University and the General Theological Seminary. He has resided in Lewisburg for several years.

Moses and the Bulrushes

The bulrushes in the story of Moses were probably papyrus. This plant is a kind of perennial rush which grows in swampy places, has a small triangular stem and reaches a height of 6 to 10 feet. It was formerly found on the banks of the Nile and still is found in Syria.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Track And Field Men Start Practice Soon

Bison track candidates for the 1926 team have not been able to start their training on the cinder path in the Memorial Stadium on account of the adverse ground conditions. In place of the outdoor work the men are reporting daily to Coach Ingerton in the old Tustin Gymnasium where the indoor track, setting up exercises, and work with weights on the mat, are used to get the men in condition. George Kling, long the trainer of Bucknell athletes, is also working the stiff muscles of the track men into shape.

With the cinder path in shape early next week, as is expected, the headquarters of the track team will be moved to the stadium. Both varsity and freshman teams will be under the coaching and direction of Rhodes Ingerton. Several dual meets have been scheduled for April and May.

With Captain "Micky" Walter in the mile and all of the regulars of last year except Captain Dale Wagner, Paul Schmidt, "Wally" Foster, Francis Haskett, and Lyle Krebs, who were lost by graduation, the team will retain its former strength.

"Sid" Goodwin, Lloyd Trimmer, Mose Quinn, "Slim" Bach, "Johnny" Peifer, "Jim" Davis, "Dom" Mare, "Red" Hitchins, "Mike" McClune, "Bud" Frahle, "Ace" Eaton, Fred Davies, and "Bill" Hetler are the remaining veterans of track and field.

Prospects for another successful year on the track and field at Bucknell University are very bright with six letter men of last year's team in school this year. Coach Rhodes Ingerton will give his call for Bucknell candidates as soon as the weather conditions permit.

Trimmer, Walter, Davis, Frabel, Peifer, and Hitchins all succeeded in winning the "B" in track athletics last season. Krebs, Foster, and Schmidt, who won many points for the Orange and Blue in meets last year, will be lost to the squad. Last season Krebs broke the Bucknell quarter mile record in Memorial Stadium and also took place in the javelin and discus events. Trimmer excelled in the high hurdles, Walter in the broad jump, Davis in the half mile, Frabel in the pole vault and javelin throw, and Hitchins in the dashes. Davis was also a member of the Bucknell relay team.

Ingerton's men will have an excellent record to maintain this year. Last season's aggregation won the Public Ledger trophy, a handsome silver loving cup by winning the Central Pennsylvania track championship in a meet at Harrisburg.

BASEBALL SEASON LOOMS WITH SEVEN HOME GAMES

March 29 will mark the opening of the season for the tossers and they have not yet been able to get on the ground.

The schedule, in general, follows the lines that are traditional in Bucknell baseball history, opening with a trip into the South near Easter time, including two practice games with professional teams, and meeting the college teams within easy reach of Lewisburg. Seven of the sixteen games scheduled will be played at Lewisburg.

The freshman schedule is not yet fully developed but it will probably include games with Wyoming Seminary, Danville High School, Bellefonte Academy, and Mansfield Normal.

YEARLINGS TO PLAY BALL AS FIRST FRESHMAN TEAM

As in football and basketball, Bucknell will this year be represented in sport by her first yearling baseball team. Among the former high school stars who will try out for the first year nine are "Eddie" Halicki, Louis Woodring, "Ted" Mitchell, and Philip Murray. Michener, Jones, and August are future pitchers along with a number of others of the first year class who have not been uncovered as yet.

The frosh training period will be run along with that of the varsity, and although their schedule has not been announced as yet, it is expected that they will undertake about an eight game card. Fred Evans of Kingston is the manager of the first year team.

Ancient American Race

The Toltecs were a people that dwelt in Mexico and Central America, prior to the Aztecs. According to tradition, they came from the North about the Eighth century after Christ and established their capital at Tula, north of the Mexican valley. The Toltecs were a mild, peaceful people, devoted to agriculture and the arts, and especially skilled in architecture.—Kansas City Star.

Delta Sigma Beaten By Phi Gamma Delta

The Phi Gamma Delta quintet doubled the score on the Delta Sigma five last Wednesday evening, handing them a 36 to 18 trimming.

"Arch" Seiler did most of the scoring for the "Fijis." The big frosh center counted seven times from the court, and netted five fouls out of the same number of attempts, for nineteen points. Rigg also played well for the winners. Frable showed up best for the Delta Sigma combination. The summary:

Old English Tradition

Who has heard of the "church in the wood" in the village of Hollington? Regarded as one of the quaintest churches in England, it is situated in the heart of a wood. There is a tradition that the foundations were originally laid in the village, but the devil disagreed with the site and moved the stone to its present position.—London Tit-Bits.

French Literary Feat

Peter of Riga, a noted French churchman of the Twelfth century, made a summary of the Bible in 15,000 verses, divided into 23 sections, in each of which he eliminated one letter of the alphabet.

G. MERRILL LENOX, '24 HEADS UNUSUAL CHURCH

apportionment of this will serve for religious instruction.

The church holds social events to which it invites the entire community. People of all faiths join in these events with whole-hearted enthusiasm and pleasure. The church recently held a special Sunday service at which 22 new members were admitted into the church. Most of them were young people. Dr. James L. Jewell, executive secretary of the Presbytery of Rochester, conducted the services on that Sunday. Before that time this busy rural church had only 24 resident members.

WANT A CIGARETTE, LADY? BETTER TAKE A LONG WALK

Would some B. U. co-eds walk a mile for a camel? It is believed that a few of them would do even worse, —possibly walk five. If they feel they must suck these "nails" why don't they "wise up?" Surely they realize that to smoke in their rooms in the "Sem" is inviting detection. So, why don't they prove to themselves that they would be willing to walk a mile for a "cig" by trying it?

In the first place their walk would take them beyond the range of the eagle eyes of faculty and student-ex. However, a greater benefit of their walk would be a transformation within themselves. Their walk would be brisk, so as to fulfill the requirements quickly and satisfy their craving. This unusual exercise would call for a greater amount of blood from the heart, which in turn would be the ridding of the old narcotic poisons in their lungs and replacing with fresh invigorating ozone. To make a long story short, at the end of their walk their cigarette is forgotten or the craving for it has been overshadowed by that heavenly feeling which one experiences when one's lungs are devoid of narcotic poisons and filled with real country air. And so all ye co-eds walk a mile for a camel—and you won't want it.

Gave Name to Fur

Mandel fur is a trade name used in the fur industry. In reality it is the pelt of a species of Asiatic sheep. This fur was first put on the market by a man named Mandel, and has retained its name.

When you and spring are thrilling to the opening game of the year—and your favorite player drives out a homer—as the stands rock with cheering —have a Camel!

WHEN the first ball game is here. And the heavy hitter cracks the ball shrieking into deep center for a home run—have a Camel!

For Camel adds the magic of its own fragrance to life's most festive days. Camels are of such choice tobaccos that they never tire the taste or leave a cigaretty aftertaste. You'll get more contentment, more pleasure out of Camels than any other cigarette.

So this fair spring day as a redoubtable batter lofts out one that it seems will never stop flying—oh, then, taste the smoke that means completed enchantment.

Have a Camel!

Into the making of this one cigarette goes all of the ability of the world's largest organization of expert tobacco men. Nothing is too good for Camels. The choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos. The most skilful blending. The most scientific package. No other cigarette made is like Camels. No better cigarette can be made. Camels are the overwhelming choice of experienced smokers.

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

HILLTOP BRIEFS

John W. Fisher, '26, spent the week-end at his home.

* * * *

Irene Colvin spent March 13 and 14 in Philadelphia.

* * * *

Anna Van Dine, '20, spent March 13 and 14 in Allenwood.

* * * *

Marjorie Jones, '28, spent March 13 and 14 with friends in Sunbury.

* * * *

Fred Farnsworth, '27, spent the week-end of March 13 at his home in Bloomsburg, Pa.

* * * *

"High" Hulick and "Tom" Lesher have made plans for a trip to South America this summer.

* * * *

Instructor William T. Johnson was unable to meet his classes in history 101 Monday, March 16.

* * * *

"Eddie" Halicki, '29, who was very ill at the S. A. E. House, has now completely recovered.

* * * *

Instructor I. E. Norris, is planning to spend the Easter vacation with his fraternity brother, H. C. Marshall, '26.

* * * *

Irene Bell, '26, returned to college Sunday after having spent several days at home on account of sickness.

* * * *

Donald Catlin, '27, and Lewis Dorsett, '29, spent the week-end of March 13 in Bellefonte and State College.

* * * *

Edwin Davies, '25, president of last year's senior class and student council, was a visitor on the campus during the week-end.

* * * *

Arthur Eschenlauer, '29, "bummed" to his home in Woodcliff, New Jersey, recently. He had no unusual adventures on the way.

* * * *

"Harrisburg played in luck again on the week-end of March 13-14. Mary Gettys, '26, spent those two days there visiting friends."

* * * *

Morgan S. Davies, '26, left "the heart of the Keystone State" last Friday and went down to the Pretzel City to visit his friends and family.

* * * *

Spring has come and George Strahan, '29, has his camera busy again. George may be found "snapping" anything from squirrels to 'Semites."

* * * *

Professor F. G. Ballentine returned to his classroom Wednesday afternoon of last week after having given "cuts" since the preceding Friday.

* * * *

J. Roy Goodlander, '29, has developed into a mean Charleston kicker. Roy shakes quite an efficient leg and the best part of it all is that he gets plenty of fun out of his work.

* * * *

Roland Banks, '28, visited his home in Kingston during the week-end of March 14. "Rolly" decided to apply for a job early this year after a sad happening last summer.

* * * *

Mother Miller, of the S. A. E. fraternity, certainly has been busy during the past two weeks. Many of the boys have been ill and she has been nurse to every one of them.

* * * *

The Misses Lulu and Marian Coe motored to their home at Factoryville on Saturday, March 13, with their brother, Edmund Coe, '23. Mr. Coe is teaching at Mercersburg Academy.

* * * *

Ernest C. Shaffer, '26, received word Saturday of the death of both of his grandmothers. He left for Latrobe Sunday morning with his brother Clarence, '24, who motored from Schenectady, N. Y.

* * * *

J. Wallace Foster, '25, now teaching history in Vandergrift High School, spent the week-end of March 13-14 in Lewisburg. "Mike" is spending much of his spare time refereeing basketball games in the Pittsburgh district.

* * * *

Rae Young, '28, made a recent trip to his home in Pittsburg in the record time of ten hours by the 'burning" route but it took him two days to do it. He started early one evening, but had gotten only part way to Montgomery at ten o'clock. So he "hopped" a truck coming this way and returned to the Hill. Better luck awaited him next day. He tried another route. Rides were plentiful but delays were few and he reached home within ten hours of the time he started.

* * * *

"Charley" Farrow, '26, left Friday, March 19, for a week-end business trip to Philadelphia.

* * * *

Barbara Reifsnyder, '28, returned to college Tuesday, March 16, fully recovered from an attack of the grippe.

* * * *

Felix McCormick, '28, had a slight case of the flu, causing him to depart from the daily grind for a few days.

* * * *

Barbara Reifsnyder, '28, returned from her home in Norristown, where she was convalescing from a recent illness.

* * * *

Ray Johnson, '29, and Paul Johnston, '28, visited some friends at Bloomsburg State Normal School on a recent Saturday.

* * * *

Miss Kathryn Q. Clush, '24, instructor in the home economics department, spent the week-end, beginning March 18, in New York City.

* * * *

C. I. Carpenter, '27, has returned to the hill and the Kappa Delta Rho house after a long period of illness spent at Devitt's Camp.

* * * *

Bill Samuel and Jim Mabee saw the Nanticoke passers defeat an East Stroudsburg team by a 48 to 18 score while visiting Nanticoke during the week-end.

* * * *

Leonard J. Coates, '26, and T. Burns Drum, '26, left Wednesday evening, March 17, for Providence, R. I. They represented their fraternity at a conference there.

* * * *

Helen Mathias, Millie Kerr, Margaret Moore and Dorothy Ritter, '29, of Milton, were guests at the Beta Kappa fraternity house on Sunday afternoon, March 14.

* * * *

"Dick" Mecum, '26, can't let the doughnuts alone. After recovering from the grippe, Dick ate a couple of holeless doughnuts, and now his digestive order is in disorder.

* * * *

Wallace Wilkinson, '29, has been confined by sickness to his home in Williamsport, where he is under the care of his mother, Mrs. Walter V. Wilkinson of that city.

* * * *

Gilbert Bennett, '27, advertising manager of the Bucknellian accompanied Professor Lewis E. Theiss on a visit to the newspaper plant of the Williamsport Sun, on Saturday, March 20.

* * * *

Professor C. R. Johnson returned to college and began meeting his classes Tuesday, March 16. He is meeting his classes in the chemistry building until his strength is built up a little more.

* * * *

Lorinne Martin, '28, left on Thursday, March 18, for her home in Pittston, to remain until after she has recovered from the grippe. Miss Martin was in the infirmary for a week before going home.

* * * *

The Y. W. C. A. cabinet was entertained after the usual meeting Wednesday evening, March 17, by the Phi Mu girls of the Cabinet, Grace Pheifer '27, Martha Thomas, '28, and Polly Ware, '28, who served refreshments in honor of St. Patrick's Day.

* * * *

Mrs. Benjamin Stillwagon, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wolfe, left Thursday, March 18, to join her husband at Washington, D. C., where they will make their future home. Mr. Wolfe was formerly a professor and later registrar of the University.

* * * *

Judge Howard Ferris was rather surprised to find two men, at the banquet that was part of the Sigma Chi Homecoming, who have been members of Sigma Chi for a longer period than he has. They were John Wingert, '72, and William C. Walls, '73, both of Lewisburg. Both of them were initiated into Sigma Chi in 1869.

* * * *

W. Harold Sloan, '26, spoke in the Methodist church in Johnson City, Pa., on March 14 at the morning church service. At the evening service he addressed a joint meeting of the Shamokin Council No. 306, of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics and also the Anthracite Council 153, of the Daughters of America.

* * * *

Darwin Weishaupt spent the week-end in Wilkes-Barre.

* * * *

"Bozo" Phillips spent the week-end at his home in Bloomsburg.

* * * *

Tom Murphy, '26, made his customary trip to Wilkes-Barre during the week-end.

* * * *

Dr. Edith Swift visited most of the Sorority suites on Thursday evening, March 11.

* * * *

The mother of Eloise Bailey, '29, visited her daughter during the week-end of March 12.

* * * *

Edward Colestock, '29, is able to be back in the class room after his long attack of the grippe.

* * * *

Irene Bell, '26, went to her home in Nanticoke on Monday, March 15, to recover from the grippe.

* * * *

S. Cober Braucher, '28, visited Ardmore and other points in and around Philadelphia last week-end.

* * * *

Betty Cooper, ex-'26, visited Dorothy Corle, '28, at the Women's College on Tuesday, March 16.

* * * *

Alton Roth, '29, was confined to his room in East College on St. Patrick's Day with a light touch of the 'flu."

* * * *

Assistant Professor Gold is not meeting his classes this week on account of a severe case of the grippe.

* * * *

Elizabeth Haslam, '27, has been ordered on for appendicitis and is getting along nicely at her home in Palmerton, Pa.

* * * *

"Mose" Wilshach, '26, set a nice style precedent when he appeared nattily dressed in a costume of white knickers to referee basketball games in Tustin Gymnasium, March 17.

* * * *

"Al" Brenner, '28, made a little pocket money by using the training acquired in the news writing class. "Al" received $1.50 for covering a story for the Lewisburg Saturday News.

* * * *

"Ted" Mitchell, '29, wore a green ribbon on his jersey, and "Harp" Bradley, '27, wore an orange sweater in Tustin gymnasium in a Saint Patrick's Day basketball game. No wonder the T. U. Os. lost.

* * * *

The Y. W. C. A. is planning to hold early morning services from 7:40 A. M. to 8:00 A. M. during Passion Week, March 24 to 30. Dean Amelia E. Clark will have charge of the service on Sunday morning, March 28.

* * * *

Paul Schmidt, '25, added another feather to his hat when he joined the ranks of referees by officiating in the Phi Psi-Kappa Gamma tussle March 17. "Schmitty" had to call time out once to decide a perplexing problem.

* * * *

Arthur Harris, '29, fell for the girls in true romantic style last Tuesday evening. While playfully running after some members of the fair sex, he slipped and so turned his ankle that the aid of a crutch was needed the following day.

* * * *

A large brown dog was the cynosure of all eyes in the hall of old Main Thursday, March 18. The poor animal seemed to have a broken leg, for he whined when kind hearted students attempted to pet him. It's tough to be a dog.

* * * *

"Wink" Coulter, '28, holds quite a record for spending time in the Chemical Laboratory. On Saturday, March 13, he spent ten hours and on Monday night, March 15, he spent six hours in the laboratory. "Bill" Hoy, '28, is running "Wink" a close second.

* * * *

That it is the little things in life that count is demonstrated by the fact that the small section of the "Chem Lab" path that is muddy, just below the Biology building, makes the whole distance seem a precarious path, making us forget the dryness of the remainder.

* * * *

Professor H. S. Everett "cut" his classes Monday and Tuesday while working on a knotty problem for next year's students. That is to say he was arranging the schedule for next year. Now is the time for all good seniors to rejoice that they will no longer be a bother to the schedule makers.

It's perpetual hard times for the fellow who waits for soft snaps.

The short skirt has also revealed the fact that not all family skeletons are kept in closets.

Rules and Regulations

"You can't keep a good man down," so they say. It seems to be the same with the rest of the race, too.

* * * *

The nurse at the "Sem" couldn't be kept down after they found out her value on the Hill;she didn't have a chance to be kept down.

* * * *

They just took her up—and a new clinic was established for the men in "Jack" Rice's kingdom. There she —Queen Esther—Ruhls supreme.

* * * *

A throat culture—fidgety pulse—soaring temperature, or temper—all have no terrors now that Miss Ruhl is on the job. She Ruhls and regulates them at a great rate—

* * * *

Her scepter is the little white "stick" and the verdict is read from it with decision. The record is kept and the victim is assured of a speedy recovery from all that bothers him.

* * * *

Then, after the hour is over, and the boys are all dosed up for that, Miss Ruhl hurries back to the "Sem" to fix up the trays for the "infirm inmates."

* * * *

Those trays! "Soft diet" for this one—and another across the way in the nearest bed gets the more advanced tray of steak and baked potato. Cruelty!

* * * *

A good-natured scrap about which one got the favorite coffee, cocoa, or tea pot. Bets before hand and many speculations as to "What it will be this time." Foolish—but good for one's temper—or rather good nature.

* * * *

And the flowers—each patient as she leaves wills the remaining flowers that she received to —the next one in line, so that it is a continuous performance.

* * * *

Some of the "dea—r people" who sent flowers this year didn't know how many girls would profit by them.

* * * *

Another regulation of the infirmary is, "No one in unless allowed by Miss Ruhl." How often have some been caught just entering or leaving. It's chronic with a few.

* * * *

But then—they MUST deliver the latest news about various persons and events and how could they do it without coming in? Impossible, of course.

* * * *

All of which gives Miss Ruhl much information and throws an interesting sidelight for her—on the college girls.

* * * *

She won't need a Who's Who of the College by the end of the year. It is shown to her every day.

* * * *

What aches and ills she does banish —the Infirmary girls hear her many times a day saying the same type of thing, "Now take these cold tablets every hour and if your cough isn't better just go down to the doctor's place."

* * * *

Then the infirmary inmates crane their necks and strain their ears to find out who in the Seminary is getting the grippe this time.

* * * *

Oh, yes, the grippe is the popular mode of entrance into the "Hospital. ity" these days. It's the high sign, in fact,—high temperatures.

* * * *

New inmates are greeted with—"Advance and give the countersign" —usual reply—a high-pitched, low-pitched, or a regular growl of a cough —and the new one is installed as part of the royal order of inmates.

* * * *

This royal order is however a shifter's organization—rarely the same for very long. It's a good thing, for the organization would then overrun its quarters.

* * * *

But—though the girls move out and new ones enter—Miss Ruhl can say of the Ruhls and Regulations:

Girls may come and
Girls may go;
But Ruhl's on duty
Ever.

Fragrant Lives

The purest lives I have known have not been those carefully screened from the world, but which, coming up in it, have kept themselves unspotted. The sweetest and truest have grown and ripened under conditions, you would say, most hostile, but which have been wrought into the means of a grandly elevated faith and life.—J. F. W. Ware.

DR. RAYMOND M. WEST MAKES THREE SPEECHES

Dr. Raymond M. West, '89, was one of the principal speakers at the seventh annual banquet of the patients and staff of Devitt's Camp, Allenwood, Pa., which was held in the recreation hall of the camp on St. Patrick's Day, March 17. Dr. West responded to the toast, "To the United States."

On Saturday, March 13, he also addressed the Union County Teachers' Association meeting in Lewisburg on "The Child's Problem."

That the world must be the horizon of each individual if world peace is to be obtained was the declaration of Dr. West, in an address to the students of the Bloomsburg Normal School on the morning of March 19 on the subject, "The Size of Your World."

Dr. West made a plea that the vision of each one be made larger in order that all persons might be taken in and world peace be secured.

The address was the closing one of a series of four which have been delivered by Dr. West during the term at the normal school.

Anne Galbraith, '07

The third of a series of vocational talks was given to the girls of Williamsport High School by Miss Anne Galbraith, of the Williamsport High School faculty on the subject of "Journalism." She said, "It is possible to start in with merely a high school education, but a college education is preferable, especially if the course includes the study of journalism, for then the practical is combined with the theoretical."

The speaker said that there is a wide field for women in newspaper work. "First, there is the editorial department, then the woman's page, the children's page, and finally regular reporting. All papers have women on the staff, no matter how small the staff is."

Harry S. Everett, '12

Professor Harry S. Everett, '12, gave an illustrated lecture on "Selected Topics in Elementary Mathematics" to the Union County Teachers' Association on Saturday, March 13. He traced the development of numbers. The first numbers were made of positive integers; then positive fractions were necessary; irrational numbers followed next. Negative numbers were introduced about 1400 A. D. and were necessary because of subtraction.

Charles Hunter, '85

Charles Hunter, '85, returned to Lewisburg for the first time in forty years to attend the Sigma Chi Homecoming during the week-end of March 13-14. The place looked very different to him from the way it did the last time he saw it in 1886. He assured everybody that it will not be another forty years before he revisits the place.

Herbert C. Grice, '18

Mr. Herbert C. Grice, 1918, of the Lewisburg Trust Company, and Mrs. Grice entertained a number of friends at their home on Brown street, on Monday, March 15, to celebrate Mrs. Grice's birthday. Dinner was served at 6:30 P. M., and the evening was passed in card games.

Benjamin K. Focht

Benjamin K. Focht, who attended the Bucknell Academy, was the speaker of the evening at the first annual banquet of the Lewisburg Camp, P. O. S. of A., held in the dining hall of the Evangelical church of Lewisburg, on March 12.

Dr. W. L. Gerhart, ex-'86

Dr. and Mrs. Weber L. Gerhart entertained the Lewisburg physicians and their wives at a turkey dinner at the Gerhart home on South Third street on the evening of Tuesday, March 16. President and Mrs. Emory W. Hunt were also guests.

Emory O. Bickel, '05

Emory O. Bickel, '05, president of the Union County Teachers' Association, conducted the meeting of the Association in the Lewisburg High School auditorium on Saturday, March 13.

Harry E. Stover, '20

Harry E. Stover, '20, principal of the Lewisburg High School, led the devotional exercises of the Union County Teachers' Association meeting in the auditorium of the high school, Saturday, March 13.

Albert W. Johnson, '96

Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96, has been chosen as speaker for the 1926 commencement exercises at Albright College.

Sylvester B. Dunlap, '03

Sylvester B. Dunlap, '03, who for the past four years has been county superintendent of schools in Lycoming County, is now a candidate for reelection to that office and thus far has no opposition.

Evidence of his good work in the past is shown by the comment of the Williamsport Sun concerning the position . "Paraphrasing an old adage for applicaton to the experience of Sylvester B. Dunlap, county superintendent of schools, it may be said that one good term deserves another."

PIGS, EXPLORING CAMPUS, SCURRY AWAY FROM T-BONE

"Pigs is pigs," so T-Bone must have thought Saturday morning, although we doubt that he has ever read Ellis Parker Butler. "Pigs is pigs, and they certainly have no place at a refined educational institution such as Bucknell!" Thereupon, he dashed across the Quadrangle, barking an indignant protest, and put to flight the marauders.

There were great pigs and little pigs; mothers, fathers, sons, and daughters. Squealing and grunting, a score or more invaded the Quadrangle about eleven o'clock on Saturday morning, March 13, and viewed the college buildings with wonderment. Not for long, however, for suddenly, as they made their way toward the Library, there was an attack from two sides. Their guardian, a small boy, with the aid of a stick, assaulted them from the rear. But it was T-Bone's mad, head-long dash that did the job. Completely subdued, the pigs went back to their pen without an education. T-Bone once more lords it over the Quadrangle, a conquering hero.

HOW—

MOON CAME INTO BEING, AS A SCIENTIST THINKS.—

The earth is the parent of the moon in more than a poetic sense, in the opinion of Dr. R. H. Rastall, lecturer in economic geology at the University of Cambridge, who recently announced a theory that our satellite is made of material that was once part of the earth's crust.

Doctor Rastall's theory, however, differs from that of Sir George Darwin and others who have previously made similar suggestions, for he thinks that a layer of the earth's crust, about 41 miles thick and covering about two-thirds of its total area, was peeled off by the attraction of the sun. This tidal action of the sun was effective while the crust was still in a plastic state, and the moon's own gravitational attraction caused it to roll up into a ball of the form that we now see in the sky. The crustal area left on the earth formed the continents.

This theory also accounts for the fact that, while, according to generally accepted ideas, masses of lighter density such as make up the earthly continents should cover the entire surface of the globe, they actually cover only about a third, the missing two-thirds consisting of the moon. Measurements of the moon's density by its effect on the earth show that it is about three and a half times as heavy as an equal volume of water. This is more dense than the average for the continental land masses, but Doctor Rastall assumes that at the time of the disruption some of the heavier underlying material was also torn away.

The new theory also fits in with the ideas recently set forth by a German geologist, Prof. Alfred Wengener, who believes the American continent was originally united with Europe and Africa, and that it floated away to its present place. This would not have been possible, so long as the entire earth was covered with such a crust, but after the moon had been torn away it was possible for the continents to separate from their long embrace.

WHY—

People Attach Value to "Bits of Stone"

What is the most valuable jewel?

What effect has fashion on the price and cutting of gems?

What stones need the most care?

How should people take care of their jewels and will water harm them?

How may a pearl be restored to its original luster and shape?

These are questions often asked of experts, writes H. Clifford Black in an article in Popular Science Monthly in which he tells of a number of facts about jewels astonishing to the layman.

Just what causes people to attach such value to gems is one of the mysteries of human nature. Money has changed during the centuries, but the value of jewels has remained fairly constant. In times of uncertainty fortunes sometimes are saved by converting money into jewels.

Nine persons in ten, if asked to name the most valuable jewel, would say "diamond." The fact is, though, that in a table ranking gems in the order of their value, carat for carat, the diamond has fourth place. Both emeralds and rubies are much more valuable, while the pearl, because of the difficulty in matching, is far above all others.

Increased demands for precious stones and changes in the mode of dress influence both the price and cut of gems. At present the style is to cut in the square or emerald shape. Twenty-five years ago, when curves were fashionable, round jewels were most popular.

Pearls need far more care than any other gem, for they are an animal product and easily destroyed. The opal also requires great care. Made of silica and water, it is very fragile. It was probably because of this that the superstition of bad luck is associated with it.

Water as a rule does not injure precious stones. Diamonds, rubies and sapphires can pass through fire without injury. It is comparatively easy, though, to destroy both diamonds and emeralds. They will shatter to bits if struck sharply. Face powder is bad for pearls. It clogs up the pores of the pearl's skin, just as it does those of the human skin. One should never wear pearls when sleeping, either. At night the largest percentage of acid is thrown off the body and this dissolves the pearls.

Pearls are restored to their former luster and shape by a process known as peeling. A pearl is made in layers, like an onion, and these outer layers can be removed until the pearl has become round again. The peeling process is a most delicate task. It is done with the fingernails and a sharp knife, and only a few men in the world know how to do it.

Why Nature Has Made Difference in Ankles

Why is an elephant's ankle so thick, and a mouse's so slender? The answer is bound up with the same facts that would make it impossible for a human giant 60 feet tall to take two steps without breaking both his legs. Explanations of some of the riddles of size and proportion in animals were set forth by Dr. J. B. S. Haldane, one of the most famous of English scientists, and author of the well known book of scientific prophecy, "Daedalus," addressing the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

The 60-foot giant imagined by Doctor Aldane would weigh about a thousand times as much as an ordinary man—say, ten tons—while the space on his thigh bone where muscles could be attached would be increased only a hundred times. The poor ogre would thus be vastly too heavy for his legs, and would infallibly collapse from sheer overweight. So that when we have a really heavy animal, like an elephant or a rhinoceros, he must have his bones and joints greatly thickened and strengthened to support his weight.—Science Service.

Do It Now

Chinese Try To Fool Gods That Chase 'Em

Throw Money Away to Stop 'Em, Dodge Around Moving Cars. And Try Other Schemes

"The Chinese believe in evil gods and practice all sorts of schemes to get away from their influence. One way to get away from them is to throw a handful of money into the air. When it comes down, it is supposed by the Chinese, the gods will kneel to pick up the fallen money, and the one who is being pursued by these bad gods may then escape."

This statement was made recently by Chester R. Leaber, '19, in an interview he gave to a reporter for the Williamsport Grit. Mr. Leaber is in the employ of the International Banking Corporation of New York City, and has been stationed for some months at Shanghai, China. He is now in America on a nine-months' vacation, and is staying at his home, at 53 Ross street, Williamsport.

Mr. Leaber says that Americans would have great difficulty in understanding Chinese religious superstitions. The Chinese are mainly followers of Confucius, Buddha, or Mohammed. They build their temples in glades noted for their beauty, and surrounded by trees and streams. But the Chinese have no respect for either their gods or their temples. In the temples they smoke, spit on the floors, and do no tremove their hats. They do not credit their gods with having very much intelligence.

Shake Off Evil Spirits

"They try to fool their gods in many ways," said Mr. Leaber. "Jinrikshaw coolies, on occasions when they feel they are being followed by a bad god, will cavort unsteadily, endangering the lives of passengers they are hauling in their carriages. A coolie will sometimes dart directly in front of a street car, believing that he can escape to the other side of the street in safety, whereas the bad god will be killed by the car.

The same thing is true of pilots of ships on the waters, whereon much of the country's commerce is transcted, says Leaber. Frequently a Chinese sailing vessel or other type of small boat will cross directly in front of large ships to shake off the evil spirits.

"At funerals Chinese will beat drums and pans furiously. This is done in case a bad god is hovering over the body of the dead man. The noise is intended to frighten away such a god."

Shanghai a Modern City

Mr. Leaber pictures Shanghai as a modern city. He says that were it not for the Chinese people on the streets, one might be made to believe that it is a city of western civilization, unless he knew otherwise. Many buildings are from eight to ten stories high. They are built, architecturally, similar to those in many of our own.

The life of foreigners in Shanghai is pleasant, as there is a foreign section where those of the white race live and meet in social affairs. This same thing is true throughout the country, says Mr. Leaber, with the exception of Peking and one or two other places, where there are no foreign quarters. In these latter places, one gets the best idea of Chinese life and customs.

Wheelbarrows Laden With Money

In referring to the banking business as conducted by Americans in China, Mr. Leaber says it is entirely different from domestic banking in the United States. Virtually every American connected with banks in China is concerned mainly with exchange work and foreign work and foreign commerce. Each has his own department, the detail work being done by Chinese clerks.

Domestic banks in China are conducted by native-born Asiatics. There are no clearing houses to settle interbank differences at the end of each day. Instead, coolies of the wheelbarrow guild will wheel loads of taels to banks in whose debt they may happen to be. These coolies go from bank to bank with huge sums of money, always being unguarded. It is their proud boast that in the years they have served the banks in this way, no money has been lost or stolen.

"Some day, though," says Mr. Leaber, "some one's going to make a big haul by holding up those fellows."

Brother "Fred" Dixon, '26, visited Bloomsburg Normal School over Friday and Saturday, incidentally seeing the finals of the district basketball championships.

The Phi Mu Sorority held a "Sem" dance at the house Saturday, March 20.

Brothers "Lonny" Kittle and "Ed." Servic from State, were visitors at the chapter house over the week-end.

Brother "Eb" Williams, '25, was a recent visitor over the week-end.

Brother Fairheller was a recent week-end visitor.

An informal tea dance will be held at the house on Saturday, March 27, from two to five.

He: "You are a singular sort of girl!"

She: "Well, that's easily altered."

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Frederick Rudisill, '28, was a guest at dinner, Friday, March 12.

Dinner guests on Sunday, March 14 included: Miss Getz, of Bloomsburg; Miss Frances Aumiller, '28; J. E. Hollek, '27; and Vernon Tuck, '27.

Discussion group meetings will be started in a week or so. They will consist of forty-five minute discussions led by various professors.

The new orthophonic victrola, a Credenza model, which was purchased recently is kept going continually. Many of the brothers have bene talking of a "Vic" dance for the near future.

Delta Zeta Chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha announces a week-end party for May 7 and 8. Plans are being laid to make the affair the best in the history of the fraternity. As yet the final arrangements for an orchestra have not been made.

Maybe the magazines one finds in the dentist's office waiting room are put there to indicate the length of time he has been practicing.

MANY BUCKNELL MEN AT LEAGUE BANQUET IN WILLIAMSPORT

John D. Plant, Physical Director, Urges Clean Sportsmanship As Preparation for Life

THEN LEAGUE PRESIDENT GIVES PLANT FINE PEN

Dining Hall Richly Decorated With Elaborate Streamers Of Orange and Blue

There is more call for he-men citizens than ever before in the history of the country, according to John Plant, of Peddie School, Hightstown, N. J., who is soon to become athletic supervisor at Bucknell University, Lewisburg.

Mr. Plant was the chief speaker at the first annual banquet of the Williamsport City Basketball League, which was held at the Park hotel, with a number of guests of honor and all of the officers, managers, and members of the various league teams present. Prof. J. Fred McMurray presided as toastmaster. Six trophies were presented, including a beautiful cup to the president of the league, J. Mark Good, as a token of appreciation of his work in behalf of the organization.

Appropriate Decorations

The ball room, where the banquet was held, was beautifully decorated with streamers of orange and blue—a peculiarly appropriate adornment on account of the presence among the guests of honor of Dr. Emory W. Hunt, president, and several other members of the faculty of Bucknell University. Orange and blue are the Bucknell colors. An excellent menu built around roast spring chicken was served, after which the toastmaster congratulated the young men of the league and remarked that never within his recollection had he seen so much enthusiasm manifested in basketball as during the season recently closed. "I am glad to congratulate you in the name of the city of Williamsport for what you have done," he said.

He then introduced President Hunt, of Bucknell, who expressed his appreciation of basketball and what the banquet signified. Basketball calls for quickness, accuracy, and team work, and these also, are requisites for the successful playing of the game of life.

Prof. Benjamin Griffith, of Bucknell, said he was impressed by the increasing importance of sports in our national life. Last year in the United States $150,000,000 was spent for amateur sports alone—"and we feel that it was worth the money," he said. "Our sports represent a clean page."

Drives From New York

A. G. Stoughton, alumni secretary and publicity director of Bucknell, who drove all of the previous night, coming from New York city, in order to be present at the banquet, brought the regrets of Mal Musser and E. J. Halligan, who were unable, on account of injuries, to be present. He paid a high compliment to John Plant.

Rhondes Ingerton, assistant football and track coach at Bucknell, a former Center College athlete, said that athletics are on a higher plane now than at any time in the history of sports.

Mr. Plant, in his address, complimented the members of the various teams, and paid high tribute to J. Mark Good, president of the league, for the manner in which he had conducted the affairs of the league and for the really big way in which he put over the crowning event of the season—last night's banquet. The country, he said, needs more staunch citizens of the type of Lincoln and Roosevelt. There is a more urgent call for real he-men than ever before. There is need for more organizations like the Williamsport City Basketball League. We must set our ideals high, so that we will have to battle to reach them. He urged clean sportsmanship. The boy who learns to play basketball fairly will be better fitted to play the game of life successfully. In conclusion he paid glowing tribute to the city of Williamsport and the spirit of fellowship which he found manifested on every side.

"I Come to Serve You," John Plant Tells Us

Urges Co-operation of Students To Develop All Physically

Bucknell greeted John Plant with open arms when he made his first appearance before the student body, in upper-class chapel, Thursday, April 8. As he confessed, in this, his first speech before a college audience, that he had lost his "notes," Bucknell realized that a man with a great ideal, an ideal of service to all, is assuming the reins of athletic supervision at the University.

After 5 years at Peddie School, where he turned out championship basketball teams, Plant comes to Lewisburg to further his ideal of "he-man," clean, and gentlemanly sportsmanship.

"I want to come among you as a friend," he continued. "I am coming to Bucknell because I believe it is a position for a real he-man's work, a work which I hope will prove a great benefit to every student in the University. I urge the hearty co-operation of every man, for we must not only develop men in one sport, but in all sports."

"There is a great need for teachers who can coach scholastic athletic teams," he added. "There are three Bucknellian faculty members at Peddie, and I know that their greatest regret is that they did not participate to a greater extent in athletics while at college. Every man should be given an opportunity to indulge in the sport or sports that he likes."

Prize Essay Contest Announced For Girls

The list of subjects for essays that will be used in determining the winners of the Bucknell prizes for women has just been announced by Professor Coleman of the department of English. The prizes are four in number and are to be awarded through a gift of $2000 by William Bucknell. Accoring to the announcement of the catalog these prizes are to be awarded the person in each of the senior, junior, sophomore, and freshman classes who, "being excellent in scholarship during the year, shall prepare the best essay.

"Themes for the Bucknell Essay Prizes will be drawn from works which will be announced by the professor of English each year."

The list of subjects announced by Professor Colemnn is as follows:

1. Bacon: A Pioneer in Scientific Research.
2. What the American College Student Expects of His College.
3. The Influence of Mencken on American Life.
4. The Lost Art of Reading.
5. The Obligations of America to the World.
6. The Three Most Significant American Writers of the Day.
7. Fascism: the New World Issue.
8. The Growth of the Little Theatre Movement, in American Colleges.
9. Finding a Balanced Educational Ration.
10. Training in Journalism as a Prerequisite to Authorship.

Contestants should observe the following regulations:

1. Essays should be approximately 1200 words in length.
2. A bibliography of sources consulted should accompany essay.
3. Pages should be carefully numbered.
4. A sealed envelope containing name of writer should be attached to essay. In no case should name appear on essay.
5. Essays should be submitted in typewritten form.
6. Essays are due on or before May 20, 1926.
7. Essays should be submitted to Professor W. H. Coleman, B: 31.

By the unanimous vote of the congregation of the Presbyterian Church the paid pew system was abandoned at the annual meeting last Wednesday night. It was felt that the system of renting pews that has been in vogue up to the present time may have prevented students and other visitors from attending the services. Although the church has always welcomed visitors the congregation wished to remove all possibility for sensitiveness in this matter and from now on all of the pews will be free.

APPOINTMENTS MADE TO FACULTY STAFF

Bucknell Will Have Infirmary With Dr. Fowle In Charge

A special meeting of the Board of Trustees was held in Philadelphia Friday, April 9, at which action was taken which will be of special interest to the student body.

S. C. Ogburn Jr., was appointed professor of chemical engineering from September 1926. Professor Ogburn was graduated from the University of North Carolina, took his master's degree at Washington and Lee University, and the degree Doctor of Philosophy at the University of North Carolina this spring. He has been instructor and assistant professor at Washington and Lee the last five years, and he hasbeen invited to return there. He has the highest enlorsement from those with whom he has worked at both institutions. He has also had practical work in industrial chemistry in different lines, and with some of the leading industrial concerns of the South and East. He has been a contributor to the Journal of the American Chemical Society, and has membership in that society, in the American Association, the Virginia Academy, and Alpha Chi Sigma.

The appointment of a man of his qualifications may be taken as assurance that the Board intends no weakening of our work in any line of engineering.

New Teacher of History

The overcrowded condition of classes in history has made it necessary to afford help in that department. The Board has appointed Oliver W. Elsbree, now at Columbia University, associate professor of history. Mr. Elsbree is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and of Crozer Seminary, has had several years of teaching experience, and completes his work for the doctorate at Columbia this spring. He was invited to an instructorship in Columbia, but prefers to come to Bucknell.

B. U. To Have Infirmary

The Board authorized the establishment of an infirmary this fall with a resident physician who will devote himself to the health and physical welfare of our students, and appointed Dr. L. P. Fowle to this position. Dr. Fowle took two years of college work at Bucknell, and graduated from the Medical School of the University of Pennsylvania. He has had valuable experience at Gelsinger Hospital and has won the confidence of the community in Lewisburg. His general patients will regret his being appropriated to the needs of the stu-

"Dramatic Interludes" To Be Presented Here

Mr. V. L. Granville of the Devereux Players, an organization that has made several appearances on the Bucknell Campus, will be presented in a series of "Dramatic Interludes" under the auspices of the Dramatic and Literary Board next Monday evening at eight fifteen.

Mr. Granville will assume the roles of several different characters in this series, using costume to heighten the effect he wishes to produce.

College audiences everywhere have greeted "Dramatic Interludes" with enthusiasm, and the Dramatic and Literary Board unreservedly recommends Mr. Granville to all patrons of dramatics as well as to those who have an interest in the vital interpretation of literature.

Tickets are being sold for fifty cents to members of the student body by students in the classes in English and public speaking. Other persons must pay the regular price of the tickets, one dollar. Tickets may also be secured at the door on Monday evening but the full price will be charged to all at that time.

Deceptive Grades

The Los Angeles chamber of commerce says that the grade at the Magnetic hill near Hollywood is an optical delusion. While it appears that it is an upgrade, it is in reality a 2 per cent down grade. Such cases of deceptive grade are common in mountainous country. Irrigation ditches viewed from a distance some times appear to run up hill. '

EXTRA HOUR CHARGE RULED BY TRUSTEES

Will Be A Fee of Eight Dollars For Each Additional Credit

The Bucknell Board of Trustees, at the Easter vacation meeting in Philadelphia, passed a regulation to the effect that, beginning next year, extra hours of study will be charged for at the regular rate of eight dollars a semester hour, as in the past; but instead of charging only for those extra hours needed for graduation, all extra hours will be charged for.

Since the University constantly finances the prescribed amount of instruction at a loss, there has been a heavy drain on its resources to provide for the large number of extra hours of instruction given to students without charge. Because of this condition, the Board of Trustees felt that it was only just that students who take extra hours of instruction beyond the prescribed amount should pay toward the increased cost of providing that instruction.

Each student in each American college pays far less tuition than it actually costs the college to educate him. For example, according to figures published about two years ago, the cost to the college of educating each student at Brown was $350, at Rutgers $550, at Yale $835.

In the Bryn Mawr college catalogue the following statement appears:

"The average cost of teaching each undergraduate student in 1923-24 was $803.49 and is estimated for 1924-25 to be about $810. The tuition fee has been fixed at three hundred dollars in order not to exclude those unable to pay the entire amount, but the difference between the actual cost and the price of tuition must be met from the small endowment funds of the college and from outside gifts."

According to the reports of the Treasurer and the Registrar of Bucknell, there was expended last year $402.78 per student to run the University. Toward this amount each student paid, not including room rent in the case of men or room rent and board in the case of women, which would have had to be paid elsewhere at equal rates if not furnished by the college, tuition fees of $250, leaving a balance of $152.78, which it cost the University per student more than the tuition fees received.

In the above no account has been taken of interest on the more than $2,000,000 of property and equipment belonging to the University, which, if included, would mean an additional amount of at least $100 a year per student contributed by the University.

Junior Class All Set For the Anuual Prom

Mazetti's White Fleet Orchestra To Play From Eight to One

Plans for the Junior Prom are nearing completion as the night for the event draws near. Friday evening, April 16, is the date when the class of '27 will do the honors for the college by staging the one formal all college dance of the year. Dancing will be from eight to one in the morning.

The decorations had to be among the last details to be arranged on account of the conditions at the armory, but the Elco Company of Williamsport, which had charge of the decorations for the event last year, is expected to produce a novel design. A novel lighting effect is also being worked upon with the object of softening the prosaic atmosphere of the ball room.

Charles Mazetti's Great White Fleet orchestra is the final word in the assurance that the dance will be a success. As usual, due to the size of the floor, the attendance will be limited. The subscription is $5.00.

Tickets may be secured from the members of the committee: Blanche Thompson, Sara Pentz, Ruth Marion, Edith Freed, Amy Halderman, Barton Dakin, Horace Gardner, Clayton Hollinger, Gordon Goodyear, William Davis, Stanley McCaskey, Richard Devitt, Samuel Convery, Richard Vastine, Earl McClane, Milton Endres, and Kenneth McGinnis.

Victor Records Song By Men's Glee Club

The men's glee club sang what will probably be their last concert for the year at the First Baptist church in Reading, last Sunday morning, and returned to the college Sunday evening after a six-day tour through southern New Jersey and south-eastern Pennsylvania.

The club met at Norristown for the first concert of the trip, on the Monday after Easter, singing in the Baptist church there that evening. Tuesday evening the club sang in Camden, New Jersey.

The high hopes of some of the members of the club were realized the next morning when the organization visited the plant of the Victor Talking Machine Company at that place and added the experience of recording to that of broadcasting. The song selected for the club to use in making the record was Dudley Buck's "On the Sea." The record will be released for local circulation under the management of the club within a short time. They will sell for a dollar and a half each. Persons desiring to order them in advance should communicate with Mr. R. F. Hartz, director of the club.

On Wednesday evening the Nicetown Baptist Church of Germantown heard the audience that came to hear the boys sing. The feature of this concert was a solo by Lorenzo Scotti, ex-'27, who was formerly tenor soloist with the club and who is a member of that church.

Thursday the club took its annual boat ride from Philadelphia to Penn Grove, New Jersey, where a concert was given for the senior class of the high school in the Broad Theatre. The club sang for the senior class of the high school at Penns Grove last year also and in both cases the class was well pleased with the results. From advertising on the specially printed programs and the sale of tickets this class cleared more than two hundred dollars on the event.

As it had rained Thursday when the boat ride was taken, the same conveyance was used in the return to Philadelphia on the way to Haddonfield, where the concert was given in the Methodist church Friday evening. On Saturday the club moved to Reading, where it was greeted by the Rev. Dr. J. R. Wood, former assistant to the president of Bucknell, who has recently accepted the pastorate of the First Baptist Church there. This church has been one of the regular stopping places of the club for the last three years. A large audience greeted the singers at the regular concert on Saturday evening, and another large group filled the church at the

L'Agenda Ready May 1 Says Editor-in-Chief

L'Agenda of 1927 will be ready for distribution on May 1 without fail, according to the statement of Editor C. I. Carpenter on Tuesday. The work on the year book is almost completed and distribution will be held up only until the juniors shall have made arrangements for buying their individual "cuts."

The Bucknellian office in West Wing will be open for this purpose on Friday from 10 A. M. to 3:30 P. M.

Editor Carpenter also said that the cuts for the organization will be delivered promptly and asks that they be paid for as soon as possible.

In producing the book the editor wishes to thank Professors Theiss and Drum for their assistance and advice. A word of appreciation is also due the art staff, headed by R. L. Bower. Those who assisted with the art work of the annual were Yau Wai Wong, Paul Crago, Ralph Feick, and Samuel Feaster.

The members of the staff will be awarded keys, as has been the custom in other years, at the banquet of the staff which will be held shortly after the distribution of the books.

CARPENTER NOW "Y" HEAD

Charles I. Carpenter, '27, was elected president of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet for next year in the elections held Wednesday, April 14, in Main Building.

The other officers elected are: Paul G. Webster, '27, vice president; Frank B. Loper, '29, secretary; and Paul M. Humphreys, '28, treasurer.

THREE-ACT COMEDY "THE DOVER ROAD" TO BE PRESENTED

Will Be Given Under Auspices Of Cap and Dagger, Marking Twentieth Anniversary

WON BROADWAY SUCCESS DURING SEASON OF 1922-23

Cast Plans Play's Presentation On Two Consecutive Nights; Baker's Selling Tickets

"The Dover Road," a comedy in three acts, will be presented in Bucknell Hall, Thursday, April 22 and Friday, April 23, by "Cap and Dagger," men's dramatic society of the University. The production will be staged to mark the twentieth anniversary of the organization' founding on January 18, 1906.

The play itself was one of the outstanding Broadway successes of 1922 and '23. Its author, A. A. Milne, has a number of delightful plays to his credit, among them, "Mr. Pim Passes By," and "Wurzel-Flummery," a one-act play which was presented at last year's Senior Reception. Locally, "The Dover Road" has been marked by a persistent "hoodoo" that "Cap and Dagger" is hoping to overcome. Originally selected as Senior Class play in 1924, it was dropped because of illness in the cast. Last year, "Cap and Dagger" adopted it and was holding rehearsals for presentation in Commencement Hall, when the state five inspectors descended and all dramatic activity ceased.

Finer Than Ordinary Farce

The repeated attempts at production are merely indicative of the charm of the play itself. It is a finer type of stagecraft than ordinary farce—brilliantly written—with dialogue that is sparkling and whimsical. The situations are decidedly ingenious and unusual. In fact, the author himself terms it, "an absurd comedy, in three acts."

The plot in substance—Mr. Latimer, a wealthy bachelor, maintains an unusual establishment, on the Dover road, along which runaway couples pass, on their way to the sea coast. He contrives to divert some of them into his house and show each to the other in the most unromantic light—with complications that are highly amusing.

Frill and Frown To Assist

Miss Margaret Brick and Miss Kitty Cunningham, of "Frill and Frown," are assisting the men of the cast, Albert Lauderbaugh, Frederic Davies, Kenneth Slifer, Robert Dilworth, Henry Coleman, and Victor Meyer. Lauderbaugh has a splendid part that rather suggests the role in which he scored such a notable success with the production of "Duley" in 1924. He is cast opposite Miss Cunningham as Ehstasia, "a nice little thing." Moreover—but you will want to see for yourselves.

An entire new set of scenery is being built for the production by the stage manager Rolland Dutton and there will be special music between the acts. Every detail will be as complete as circumstances permit.

Because of an unfortunate conflict in dates that seemed almost unavoidable, the concert of the Girls' Glee Club, scheduled for Thursday evening, will begin at 7:30 in order that "The Dover Road" may follow at 8:45. Friday's performance will commence at the usual hour—8:15.

Seats are going on sale at once at Baker's Drug Store. General Admission 50c, Reserved Seats 75c for either evening.

Today's little thought: Most women are so vain that they don't even let their noses shine in society.

NOTICE

In order to avoid conflict with "Cap and Dagger" production of "The Dover Road," the concert of the Girls' Glee Club, scheduled for April 22, in the Baptist Church, will begin at 7:30, the play following at 8:45.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI KAPPA PSI

Mu Phi Epsilon, honorary musical sorority, has been granted use of the house for its spring dance, April 24.

The fraternity announces the pledging of William Hartman, '29.

Wayne Battin, Harold Marshall and Vernon Tuck will attend the Spring dance at Merion Cricket Club this week-end.

Steve Mengel, '23, has presented the house with a new orthophonic Victrola.

Professor Norris spent a pleasant Easter vacation as the guest of Harold Marshall of South Brownsville.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Miss Hortense Cassel, and Mr. Vernon Robinson, of Millville, N. J., were guests at the house on Monday, March 29.

Miss Kathryn Clush and Miss Margaret Rhoades, '28, Brothers Grant Painter, '16, of Williamsport, and Clarence Porter, '28, of Penn State, and John Dickel, '29, of Dartmouth College, were dinner guests on Tuesday, March 30.

Mr. Earl N. Hathaway, of Danbury, Connecticut, father of Pledge Brother Hathaway, '29, was a visitor at the house on Thursday, April 8.

KAPPA SIGMA

"Dave" Arnold, '25, of Oyster Bay, L. I., "Dick" Shelfer, '25, of Sunbury, and "Berny" Berninger, '22, of Lancaster visited the chapter during the week-end.

A "Sen" dance will be held at the house, Saturday, April 17.

During the Easter vacation our bridge team defeated the Kappa Delta Rho team.

The tennis court is being put into shape, preparatory to the coming varsity tennis matches.

DELTA SIGMA

Richard Maroney of New Orleans, La., visited his friends, "Ken" Rhone and "Jack" Hubbard, at the house Friday and was a guest at dinner.

The tennis court in the rear of the house has been rolled, repaired, and placed in proper playing condition and is being used considerably by those brothers who enjoy tennis.

Lawrence Warren of Philadelphia was a guest over the week-end of April 9.

ALPHA CHI MU

"How Honest Shall We Be?" was the question under query in a "Y" discussion under the leadership of Professor O. S. Groner at the house on the evening of March 25.

Dean Amelia E. Clark, Elizabeth Hettinger, '28, Lois Lee, '28, and Florence Beyer, of Lewisburg, were guests of the fraternity at dinner, Sunday, March 28.

A considerable section of plaster in the hallway of the house suddenly fell with a loud crash, Thursday noon, March 25. Just what caused it to fall cannot be ascertained, though it is likely that several of the brothers have been practicing the irresistible Charleston on the upper floor.

Wesley Smith, a student at Hamilton College, N. Y., was a visitor at the house during the week-end of March 27-28.

Emil Kontz, '28, was a guest of the fraternity at dinner on Friday, March 26.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

The Bucknell Blue Band has been engaged to play for the Saturday night dance of April 17 to bring to a close the spring week-end party, which has been arranged for the Prom-goers.

The second floor hall was entirely renovated during Easter vacation.

Ralph Mucher, '25, returned to our midst as an insurance salesman. Ralph also has been trying to enlist voters at the house to vote for the Dauphin County gubernatorial candidate, Beidleman.

KAPPA GAMMA

Brother Harry Spranca, ex-'26, visited his brothers on Saturday.

The pledges defeated the active men in an exciting baseball game on Saturday, April 10. The game was featured by the daring base-running of "speed" Kernan.

BETA KAPPA

The fraternity is planning a dance for the evening of Friday, April 30, which will be a week-end celebration of the anniversary of the installation of the chapter.

The newly elected officers for the year 1926-27 were installed at the regular meeting Tuesday evening. Brother Warren G. Knieriem is now head of the chapter and will be the representative in Student Council.

Brother Phillip C. Campbell of Danville was a recent visitor at the house.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

A dance will be held at the house on Friday evening, April 23.

Brother Daniel J. Calvert, ex-'27, who is employed at Fenelton, Pa., spent the week-end with his brothers at the house.

Brothers Clyde Elizey, '27, and David Malick, '26, aroused considerable excitement when they sprung treats on the house a few days back. Things were further mystified when "Dave" failed to produce his pin for the boys.

Brother Penrose Wallace, '26, spent several days during vacation near Newark, visiting brothers Grundy, Bernhaut, and Cox.

Brother Herbert R. Grundy, '27, returned from vacation with a mascot, a pet fox, "Bozo," which is furnishing much entertainment for the boys.

PI BETA PHI

Pi Beta Phi held an informal dance in the Phi Gamma Delta house, on April 10. Noble and his orchestra furnished the music. Guests at the dance included Professor and Mrs. Coleman, Mrs. Phillips, Miss Helen Bartol, Miss Kathryn Clush, and Miss Caroline Hunt.

"Tommy" Ruhl, ex-'27, who has affiliated with the Cornell chapter, was at home for the Easter vacation, and attended the dance on Saturday evening.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Delta Delta Delta announces with pleasure the initiation of Mary Elizabeth Furry, '28, of Johnstown.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The yearly formal dance of Eta chapter of Alpha Chi Omega was held in the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house on March 30, the day before vacation. The idea of spring and Easter was carried out in the decorations and refreshments. Bunches of wisteria hung from the lights, dimmed with orchid and pink crepe paper, and streamers of orchid and pink, coming from a dainty parasol hung in the hall, went out to the corners of the room. During intermission, pledges and their partners served meringues, filled with pistachio and pineapple ice cream, and decorated with orchid ribbons, and mints of all the spring colors. Fresh fruit punch quenched the thirst of the dancers during the evening.

A feature of the evening was the Lucky Number dance, when each couple that happened to be dancing together at the time was given a number. As "Doug" Mackenzie called out numbers, those called were obliged to leave the floor. The lucky number was 23, and was held by Don Everitt, a sophomore from Princeton, and Mary Foust, who were rewarded with a pair of frosted-silver cuff links and a silver bracelet.

The "Campus Serenaders" played for the dance. Dean Clark, Miss Kathryn Clush, and Professor and Mrs. Coleman were guests at the dance.

Formal inspection of the sorority was made by the national inspector, Mrs. H. M. Baker, who arrived in Lewisburg early Saturday morning, April 10. Private conferences occupied the morning.

A tea in honor of Mrs. Baker was given in the Women's College parlors on Saturday afternoon. Patronnesses and representatives from the other sororities were guests. Carnations, roses, (the gift of the local Pan Hellenic Association), and daffodils brightened up the rooms. A trio, Doris Worrell, Catharine Bossler, and Mildred Fox, accompanied by Mary Foust, sang two selections. Edythe Evans, Catharine Bossler, and Mary Foust played the piano softly during the greater part of the afternoon. Patty Milliken, '26, presided at the tea urn.

After a formal meeting of the chapter on Sunday afternoon, supper was served in the fraternity suite in Wolfe House. There was a great deal of fun and anxiety connected with the preparation of the meal, for facilities for cooking are quite limited. Grills and chafing dishes were gathered in, and mishaps were remarkably few. Mrs. Baker returned to her home Sunday evening.

"COME OUT!"

The glint of the sun on purple hills-
The sheen of the sky's diaphanous blue-
The rippling laugh that the river spills-
The lure of the road with its dust-brown hue-
And the glorious wind that shouts with glee
As it tosses the last brown leaves about,
Bending the boughs of each tree-
They are calling, "O Earth-child, come out! Come out!"

—Mildred Fox.

Not an Easy Job to Get Python to Eat

When kept in captivity, pythons often refuse food and go on a prolonged "hunger-strike," which frequently results in death.

To obviate this it is necessary to feed the big snakes by forcible means, and a writer in the Wide World Magazine gives a very interesting description of how this is done.

"It is a very simple process," he says. "Our python was carried out to a small grassy lawn. One man held the snake's tail, a second bestrode its middle, while a third gripped its head and forced open its jaws. Ivyorka squatted in front and, taking a pound of meat, gently thrust it into the snake's capacious throat, and with a smooth, round stick, about a foot in length, pressed the meat into the reptile's gullet. It was now the second man's job to caress the meat and massage it a yard down the long red lane. No. 3 then took charge and carefully worked the lump down to the pocket where the stomach is located."

Tree That Owns Itself

One of the most famous trees in the country now stands in Athens. It is unique because it is the only tree in the world that owns itself. A few feet of ground surrounding the tree is marked off and the land is deeded to the tree.

There was another well-known tree that stood on the University of Georgia campus until a few years ago when destroyed by lightning. It was called the Toombs oak—for there Robert Toombs, as a student, meeting with the ire of the faculty upon the eve of his graduation, delivered his commencement oration. It is said that so many left the chapel that Toombs had a larger audience listening to his address than the audience on the inside of the chapel.—Carey J. Williams, in the Greensboro (Ga.) Herald-Journal.

Waterfalls and Rivers

The greatest and grandest waterfall in the world is the Victoria falls, Rhodesia, the second being Niagara, partly in Canada and partly in the United States. These, however, are far exceeded in height by mountain cataracts in Europe and America, the highest being the Yosemite, in California. In Europe the highest are in Norway and the Alps. The water power of some of these is of great commercial value. Some authorities claim that the Mississippi is the longest river in the world, but part of the Missouri river has to be taken in to make the claim correct. Whitaker's Almanack gives the names of the six longest rivers as follows: Amazon, 4,000 miles; Nile, 3,900; Yangtse, 3,400; Yenisei, 3,200; Mississippi, 3,100; Missouri, 3,000.

Beehives of the Ocean

Sponges are the beehives of the sea. This curious discovery has been reported to the United States bureau of fisheries by Dr. Charles J. Fish of the scientific staff of the New York Zoological society's steamer Arcturus, just returned from tropical waters. The bees which Doctor Fish found inhabiting the canals of sponges were whole colonies of tiny snapping shrimp alpheus. These gregarious shrimps, he discovered, swim freely about, but always return to the individual sponge which is their hive-like home. One sponge-hive with its homing-shrimps was secured and placed in an aquarium aboard the ship, where the colony continued to flourish.—Grit.

Insects Numerous

There are about a half million different sorts of living creatures on earth and more than three-quarters of these are kinds of insects.

Why Needles Disappear Explained by Detroiter

The mysterious disappearance of millions of needles every year is partially explained by a Detroiter who just returned from his old family homestead upstate.

Among other things, he found an ancient pincushion, about eight inches square, white exploring an attic filled with miscellaneous junk. With his wife, he ripped open the cushion and spread the sawdust filler on a newspaper. One by one they uncovered 112 needles as bright and shiny as the day they were bought. They estimated that the cushion was at least 150 years old, as it was brought to Michigan from New England shortly after the Revolutionary war. The cushion had not been in use for more than 20 years.—Detroit Free Press.

Why Platinum Is High

The present position of platinum in the industrial and in the commercial world is a peculiar one. It has always been a rare metal, and our modern inventors have made it quite an essential, in perhaps minute quantities, in many lines of industry. The demand thus created has sent it to the top of precious metals—its recent price ranging at four or five times that of gold.

The enormous price has created an abnormal demand among persons fond of display. The United States now "consumes" more platinum than all the other countries of the world combined, and by far the greatest amount of the metal goes into jewelry. For this purpose the demand increased from 2,000 ounces in 1819 to 100,000 ounces in 1923, while the total world output in 1924 was only about 88,000 ounces.—Compressed Air Magazine.

Why Termed "Dowager"

Strictly speaking, every widow in receipt of a dower, is a dowager—"dower" implying property which was either brought by a bride to her husband and reverts on his death to her own use, or which has been legally settled by the husband to his widow's use. In practice, however, all widows so situated are not called dowagers, but only those whom it is necessary to distinguish from the "reigning" wife of the same name and, even then, the word is confined chiefly to ladies of high rank. Thus in a titled family we may hear of the duchess and the "dowager duchess," the latter, by the way, very often living in the "dower house," a small establishment near the big mansion put aside for the use of the widow by the late lord.

Why Rings Are Worn

The finger ring dates from ancient times. In the early days when the art of writing was known to but very few it was the custom for men to wear rings on which some distinguishing sign or badge was engraved so that they could use them as seals for letters and other important documents. As a pledge of good faith, a promise and as a symbol of authority finger rings were in use before the Christian era.

Why Compass Changes

A perfect and accurate compass today will not be scientifically reliable 40 years from now. It is maintained, because a compass point is constantly changing as direction. When observations were made in 1580 "north" was in reality 10 degrees east of north. A hundred years ago it had moved over to 24 degrees west of north, and in 1924 the needle moved or varied one-fifth of a degree.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

Lafayette Raises Big Fund For "Lafayette in Persia"

In order to further educational work at Teheran, Persia, in the American College, usually known as "Lafayette In Persia," the students of Lafayette College just finished a successful campaign to raise $1500. The amount was oversubscribed by $112.

The campaign has become an annual event at the college on account of the work of Lafayette graduates in founding and maintaining the college. At the present time there are five Lafayette alumni at its head. On the teaching staff, beside these men, are two other Americans and fifteen Persians. The student enrollment is 700.

Lafayette's contribution to the Persian school was formerly budgeted under the college Y. M. C. A. expenses, but with the increasing importance of the work it became necessary to handle it separately. The first campaign was held two years ago, when sufficient money was raised to send Walter A. Groves, '19, at that time instructor of Bible at Lafayette, to Teheran. Last year's campaign virtually paid off the college's pledge to provide money for Mr. Groves's expenses and salary for two years.

Proceeds from the present drive will be used to send a member of the present senior or junior class to Persia, as more Americans are needed in the faculty.

According to a detailed report issued by Manager William N. Finley, '27, of Baltimore, Md., approximately 400 students gave a total of $616; the faculty contributed $311; Student Council and the Brainerd Society each subscribed $50, and gifts from the alumni and others outside of the college added $585. Four fraternities, Sigma Chi, Zeta Psi, Theta Delta Chi, and Delta Sigma, subscribed to the campaign 100 per cent.

Army of American Students Will Go Abroad This Summer

Fifty to 60,000 American students are coming to Europe this spring and summer, according to forecasts made by the Paris offices of the United States, White Star, Cunard, French United American, and North German Lloyd Steamship Lines.

All these companies plan to convert their regular third-class accommodations into special tourist third-cabin services, as they did last year. The United States Lines have even provided a special third-cabin dance floor in the reconditioned Republic, and six college orchestras, two Princeton and one each from Harvard, Yale, New York University, and the University of Pennsylvania, will furnish jazz for its liners.

The Cunard Line announces that its Havre services will be available to tourist students from the sailing of the Lancastria May 1. The White Star Line reports that nearly all its tourist class accommodations have already been reserved.

Cornell University To Get Famous Tank Named America

The battle-scarred tank "America," famed British land ship of the World War, is aboard the freighter Varzilia en route to the campus of Cornell University as a permanent war memorial. The freighter is due here next week.

The tank, built in England, was presented to the British Army through subscription by Americans. It was sent to the western front in 1918, where it made history for itself. It recently was presented to Cornell, which furnished 6850 men during the war, of whom 220 were killed in action and 162 were decorated for bravery. Public Ledger.

Lafayette and Lehigh Agree Not to Use Paint and Brush

No more daubing up Bethlehem and Easton in paint with slogans such as "Beat Lafayette" and "Smash Lehigh" on the eve of the big football classic between these traditional rivals.

The warring factions decided to bury the hatchet and eliminate the paint and brush, when students representing the governing bodies of both institutions met in Bethlehem and adopted a resolution condemning such action.

The resolution also provides for the creation of a permanent committee for the purpose of fostering friendly relations between the two institutions. —Public Ledger.

'Scholastic Aptitude' Test Latest Fad In Education

All candidates for admission to the University of Pennsylvania, hereafter, will be required to take a psychology test, according to an announcement yesterday by Dr. George Wm. McClelland, Vice Provost and Director of Admissions at the University. In addition, presentation of the usual school records and certificates will be required.

The scholastic aptitude test, as the psychological examination conducted by the College Entrance Examination Board will be called, already has demonstrated its value in affording evidence of mental alertness and general background, Dr. McClelland said.

"With rapid increase in the number of candidates for admission, and the decision to reduce the quotas of freshmen in the different undergraduate schools beginning next September, it is advisable to get all possible evidence bearing upon a candidate's fitness to take up college work with fair prospect of success.

"The candidate's general mental ability and the quality of his preparation in school are important factors, but they do not tell the entire story. Much depends, also, upon the boy's earnestness and ambition, upon his integrity and his interest in the opportunities for broader development that a college education brings."

Will Add The Charleston To Ancient Roman Comedy

Terrence's ancient Roman comedy "The Young Lady From Andros," was the vehicle chosen by Dr. John R. Crawford, professor of classics at Lafayette College, to show that the ancients were very much alive. Dressed up in modern idiom and trapped out with a Charleston chorus and a couple of modern novelty dances, the annual production of the Latin Players closed a successful three nights' run in the Little Theatre on the campus last evening. Last year's production of the Players had a short run in Greenwich Village, New York, and there is every indication that the production this week also will go to New York.

The play was translated into the American argot by Prof. Crawford; the futuristic stage setting was designed by Paul Morrison, of Altoona, Pa.; and costumes were designed by Mrs. Crawford.

George Williams, of Morristown, N. J., and Vincent Natelli, of Easton, composed two modern songs entitled "Father's Lament" and "Misunderstood," which were sung as entr'actes. A Charleston chorus composed of Joe Voight, Newark, N. J.; John Campbell, Omaha, Neb.; Vincent Chimenti, Clifford, N. J.; Richard Dowling, Pennsgrove, N. J.; Robert Hastings, New York; William McBroom, Genesco, Ill., and Robert McLanahan, Tyrone, Pa., scored a hit with its numbers. Lynne Warren and Edward Kitzmiller, both of Pittsburgh, presented several novelty dance numbers.

Mississippi Colleges Allowed To Have Fraternities Again

Greeks are no longer taboo in Mississippi. Twenty years ago the State was the premier field, the happy hunting ground for fraternities. Then there were scandals, followed in 1912 by the Lee Russell law prohibiting fraternities in the colleges of Mississippi. Since that time the Inter-fraternity Council has worked hard. Last week its efforts were successful. The law was repealed, and chapters will be installed under control of a faculty committee. But for five years no chapter will be allowed to own a house.

Two fraternities have been reported as running subrosa for some time. The five year provision is designed to place all fraternities on an equal footing.

DARTMOUTH VOLUNTARY CHAPEL IS SUCCESSFUL

The Rev. Roy B. Chamberlain, Dartmouth chapel director, has expressed himself as feeling satisfied with the entirely new spirit which has come with the abolition of compulsory chapel, which was instituted at Dartmouth in the spring of 1924.

In the opinion of Dr. Chamberlain, "satisfactory religion and compulsion do not go together. Compulsion drives away the interest. Of course we want the best system, but none better than voluntary chapel is yet in sight."

Susquehanna University To Seek $625,000 Fund

At a recent executive committee meeting it was announced that Susquehanna University, will soon launch a drive for additional funds.

Appeal will be made to the people of Selinsgrove in particular and the Lutheran church in general.

The drive provides for the raising of $125,000 for a library, $100,000 to liquidate indebtedness incurred in recent extensive improvements and $400,000 for increase of the endowments.

National Council Work On Religion Four-Fold

The work of the National Council on Religion in Higher Education should be of especial interest to Bucknellians in view of the fact that two of the fifty-one persons who have received fellowships and taken advantage of the graduate training facilities, one an alumnus, the other a member of the faculty, are well known in Bucknell circles.

Edwin E. Aubrey, who graduated from Bucknell as a bachelor of philosophy in 1917, is now associate professor and acting head of the department of sociology at Miami University. During his undergraduate activity, Mr. Aubrey was editor of D'Agenda, president of the student Y. M. C. A., captain of the tennis team, and prominent in debating and dramatics. Leaving Bucknell with summa cum laude standing, he continued his preparation in Cambridge University, the Chicago Graduate Divinity School, and Chicago University.

Professor Charles M. Bond, a recipient of the coveted Phi Beta Kappa key, received his A. B. degree from Colgate University in 1917, graduating there at the head of his class. He took his graduate work at Crozer Theological Seminary, the University of Pennsylvania, and the University of Chicago, and that training, together with his experience as a Y. M. C. A. secretary during the World War, pastor of the Wilkes-Barre Baptist Tabernacle, and University pastor and director of the School of Religion at Ohio State University, has made him well qualified to assume the responsibility as head of the department of religious education at Bucknell.

"No machinery of organization, no system of stated services, or formal instruction can take the place of vital teaching and personal relationships." Upon such a conviction was founded in 1922, the National Council on Religion in Higher Education by the late Charles Foster Kent, Woolsey professor of Biblical literature at Yale, for the purpose of increasing the number of men and women of highest ability and spiritual insight to act as teachers, counsellors, and administrators.

Specifically, the purpose of this Council is four-fold. First, it maintains national fellowships to aid in training college and university graduates to teach religion or render similar service. Second, it co-operates with faculties of colleges, universities, and seminaries in develoing their religious activities. Third, it assists in surveys of moral and religious conditions in institutions of higher learning. Fourth, it seeks to awaken in the American public an appreciation of the importance of religion in student life.

Denver University Boasts Nine Co-eds Never Kissed

The annual orgy of true confessions by senior classes in now on. From Yale to Denver University statistics are being gathered on the number of seniors who prefer their grapefruit with sugar; the average length of senior shoestrings and the most popular movie actress. In some colleges the votes have been taken, in others editors are typing earnest editorials demanding that such a census be instituted next year.

For the benefit of science let it be known that nine Denver University co-eds are unkissed; that the typical co-ed reads the American Magazine as her favorite.

Yale's typical senior would prefer Phi Beta Kappa to a major "Y." He would be an Episcopalian, a Presbyterian or a Congregationalist, and he would vote the Republican ticket. He would hold Mussolini the greatest world figure today and would consider English his most valuable course and Psychology his least.

At the University of Rochester the student paper finds it interesting to note that of the professional careers chosen by seniors, chemistry, insurance agencies and bond salesmen work are the most attractive.

University of Illinois Puts Many Students on Probation

Forty-three students at the University of Illinois have been placed on probation for the remainder of the college year for participation in a spring celebration, during which property was damaged to the extent of $500. In addition they will be denied any further unexcused cuts from classes. Eighteen of the youths punished were from Chicago.

Two thousand students formed the parade in the university district for the march downtown. Police were called to halt the storming of the theaters, and during the frolic four students and four officers were injured.

She—"What a shame that all handsome men are conceited."
Senior—"I am not."

20 AMERICAN STUDENTS WILL TRAVEL IN RUSSIA

The American Student Delegation to Russia reports some definite progress in its plans. The Russian Society for Cultural Relations has cabled from Moscow to the New York Evening World that American students will be admitted to Soviet Russia this summer to study conditions. The cable was the result of a request in behalf of the American students made by Dr. Stephen P. Duggan of the International Institute of Education. Many students, professors and interested persons have written to apply for membership in the delegation.

In order that the group may be in actual contact with conditions in Russia as long as possible, the delegation will sail early in June. Delegates should plan to give practically the whole summer to the trip.

The cost of the entire trip from New York City is estimated at approximately $400 per person. This is based on minimum estimates: third class travel, inexpensive food and lodging, etc.

To allow the members of the delegation to scrutinize, as thoroughly as the limited time will allow, the aspects of the new scheme in which they are most interested, it is planned to break the delegation up into small groups. The smaller group would be a more workable size—could work out its own method and travel independently. (This was done last year by the English and German delegations of students.) Some of the projects they might study are agricultural and industrial conditions, education, art, village life, etc.

The delegation is limited to twenty wide-awake, open minded graduate and undergraduate students of American colleges, labor colleges, universities, and professional schools. A few outstanding individuals—professors, instructors, or persons who although not actually in the student world, have the student point of view and would bring a valuable equipment to the enterprise—are also eligible.

There is to be no line drawn on the basis of race, color, or creed.

For application blanks and information write to: The American Student Delegation to Soviet Russia, 47The New Student, 2929 Broadway, New York City.

Points About the College

The Editor's Personal Reactions on Events in the Week's News.

We were in the library the other day and while there had a certain fact called to our attention, a fact that wasn't exactly pleasant.

We were informed that some person has begun to take liberties with periodicals which are left in accessible places in the library.

To be a little more specific some person thought that he could get more benefit out of a certain article in the March issue of the Atlantic Monthly than all of the rest of the students of the University together would get from it if it were left in its proper place. Accordingly there are four pages of that magazine missing.

Some one else, or it may have been the same one, felt that he needed in his particular business a certain article that appeared in the American Mercury for April, and, as a result, the other students are deprived of the use of this material.

We don't know who the young barbarian is and we aren't particularly anxious to make his acquaintance. He evidently has not yet come to the state of civilization that is necessary to the proper functioning of a college such as ours, where the library, at least, is run on rather liberal principles.

Miss Martin informs us that a room such as our periodical room, in which magazines are left open for the use of the students without having someone constantly on watch, is unknown in any other library. In the past periodicals thus left open to the students have been used properly and with the same consideration as any other books in the library. This is the first case of the kind that has occurred.

It's generally considered bad taste to call anybody a fool, but we feel that actions such as this can be perpetrated only through the agency of a person to whom that appellation might be fittingly applied. There is absolutely no reason for taking anything from the library in such fashion as this. The magazines are never destroyed, but are always stacked away, and can always be obtained by the students through the regular channels. The work was, then, a piece of wanton selfishness showing the least possible regard for the other fellow. Here are some of the consequences that should have been considered.

The copy of the magazine is ruined for any filing purpose and a new number must be purchased.

The other students are placed at a disadvantage by not having the articles thus monopolized.

If the practice continues it will be necessary for the librarian to lock up all material that is not under direct surveillance of attendants and release it only on signed cards. This would cause a lot of extra work and expense for the library and would make more bother for the students.

One really worthy Bucknell tradition will be broken if the freedom of the side rooms in the library is violated.

We don't care who the culprit is in this case, but if he's a man (we wouldn't suspect a woman of such an action) he'll make good the damage done by replacing the issues, and if he's a gentleman, he'll apologize to the librarian for the vexation he has caused.

Chess Team Defeats State by One Point

The Bucknell Chess Team defeated the State College Chess Team 3½ to 2½, at State College, Saturday evening, April 10, 1926.

After a stirring and speedy free for all game, R. W. Banks finished first, drawing with H. B. De Vare and scoring ½ point for Bucknell. This draw was the real deciding factor in the final score, for without it Bucknell would have been able only to draw. Before one hour of play had been finished the outcome of the match was no longer in doubt, Keyser, Ross, and Young all having a decided advantage in their games. Ross was the first to win his game. As a reward he was entitled to ride in the front seat of the bus on the way home. Laning lost his game next, while Young won a short time afterward. Riffe was the last to finish, and altho he played better chess in the beginning than his opponent, he was outclassed in the end. The score is as follows:

1. M. L. Keyser-1 — N. R. Adams-0
2. H. R. Young-1 — R. S. Leach-0
3. D. H. Ross-1 — L. R. Platts-0
4. H. M. Riffe-0 — J. R. Musser-1
5. W. A. Laning-0, L. Mathewson-1
6. R. W. Banks-½, H. D. DeVare-½

D. K. Botts, '19, To Lead Boys' Military Band Concert

Under the leadership of Dewitt K. Botts, '19, the band, composed of about twenty-six boys from the St. John's private military academy at Manlius, N. Y., will give a concert on Friday evening, April 23, in the Milton High School auditorium.

Mr. Botts, who is also a graduate of the Bucknell School of Music in 1919, holds the rank of captain at St. John's. Coming from Manlius on Thursday, April 22, the boys will give a concert in the Lutheran church in Muncy on that evening.

Last year the band made its first appearance in Milton and was quite favorably received so that those who heard them are looking forward to this year's entertainment.

Guy Payne Now Has Another Lunch Room

But This One Travels On Wheels Yet Stays In Williamsport

You can't keep a good man down. That's why Guy Payne is no longer seen about the College Inn. He's running an eating place in Williamsport, and all Bucknellians will be just as welcome at Guy's new stand as they have always been at the College Inn.

The new stand is at Fourth and Market. It's one of those restaurant cars, that can go from place to place, if necessary. But Guy is getting so much trade that it won't be necessary for him to move on. The car itself is a most attractive affair, with many marvels in the way of equipment.

Like any other car, it is long and narrow. A counter runs the length of it, with the waiters on one side of it and the customers on the other. The cooking arrangements are the last word in convenience and completeness. Automatic lighters start a gas flame quicker than you can wink your eye—and a hot flame it is, too. Electric ventilating fans suck out every particle of the odor of cooking. A customer sitting four feet away from a broiling bit of hamburger steak can hardly tell that anything is being cooked. The refrigerators, food closets, dish washing arrangements, etc., all are equally clever.

Those who have eaten at the College Inn don't need to be told that the food is good. Prices are reasonable, too. Expenses are relatively low, overhead is small, and the customers get the benefit.

But perhaps the most interesting thing about this new restaurant on wheels is the way Guy happens to be managing it. Restaurant cars of this type are made by Jerry O'Mahoney, of Lancaster. And the company that builds them also runs them. A car is constructed, stocked, shipped to a given city, and set up. A manager is selected to work on the percentage basis. Throughout the West the Mahoney company has many of these cars. They are very successful. The company is now invading the East. Practically always an experienced man is taken from an old car and put in charge of a new one. In this case the company made an exception to its rule. Instead of selecting one of its own men, the company chose Guy Payne to run the car.

That's why Guy has been missing from the College Inn for the past two or three weeks. The Inn will go on as ever. Mrs. Payne will look after it, and Guy will slip down for an occasional glimpse at the place. But for the immediate future, at least, Williamsport will claim him. Guy reports that business is building up fast, and he expects soon to be feeling capacity crowds.

LIBRARY NOTES

President E. W. Hunt has presented to the library a rubbing print reproduction of the inscription on the headstone of Shakespears' grave, at Stratford-on-Avon, England. The inscription is traditionally attributed to Shakespeare. It reads:

"Good freind for Iesus sake forbeare
To digg the dust enclosed heare;
Bleste be the man that spares thes stones,
But curst be he that moves my bones."

The Tradition of Distance

Carter Goodrich in The New Republic Educational Supplement of April 14, describes some of the interesting attempts being made to break down the age-old barrier of hostility and distrust that exists between teacher and student.

No doubt, says Dr. Goodrich, student suspicion and indifference and the absorption of students in the outside activities which they make their own do much to intensify both the shyness of the real scholar and the stilted dignity of the professor who is conscious only of social prestige beyond his income.

It was one of the more significant of the achievements of the Meiklejohn years at Amherst that the conventional attitude toward "leg-pulling" was replaced by an atmosphere in which active cooperation was taken almost for granted and in which an instructor thought of an invitation to the student book club as a coveted honor and not as an opportunity for condescension.

Floating University To Be S.S. "Ryndam"

The University Travel Association announces that the steamer "Ryndam" has been selected for the University Trip Around the World, which is to start from New York, September 18 next, for eight months visiting over thirty foreign countries with four hundred and fifty American students enrolled from all parts of the country, and a faculty of fifty.

The president of the faculty is Dr. Charles F. Thwing, president emeritus of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, and twenty-two universities will be represented on the faculty.

Most of the foreign governments have extended official invitations to the students to visit their countries.

Honorable Henry J. Allen of Wichita, Kansas will be in charge of journalism and will write the history of the receptions in the foreign countries.

Dean George E. Howes of William College and Dean Albert K. Heckel of the University of Missouri will be in charge of the students.

The physical education department will be under Mr. Daniel Chase, and some form of sport will be obligatory with all students. Several intercollegiate baseball and football matches have already been arranged for with students in the foreign universities.

Stanford University President Says We Must Limit Students

With an increasing population, the highest educational opportunities can not be granted to all, says President Ray Lyman Wilbur in a special symposium on Remaking the College published as a supplement to The New Republic of April 14. The variability in human qualities is great, and high enough to expect that many will profit by advanced university work. The development of the junior college, permitting a stopping point for students at the end of the sophomore year of college work, will take care of the largest burden of students. Universities will more and more come to limit themselves to students beyond that period and to exact a higher quality of work from them.

The Ox Woman

On an East Indian farm, where the crop is tea, a wooden plow turns up the rich black soil. A woman drives, another woman pulls—and a black ox pulls beside her.

Six hours under a tropical sun, a bowl of cold rice—and six hours more. Then the woman goes to her bed of rushes, and the beast to his mud stall. Tomorrow will be the same.

The American home has many conveniences. But many American women often work as hard as their Oriental sisters. They toil at the washtub, they carry water, they churn by hand—all tasks which electricity can do for them at small cost, in half the time.

The labor-saving possibilities of electricity are constantly becoming more widely recognized. And the social significance of the release of the American woman from physical drudgery, through the increasing use of electricity in and about the home, will appeal instantly to every college man and woman.

The electric light, the electric iron, the vacuum cleaner—the use of electricity on the farm for pumping water, for milking, and for the cream separator—are helping to make life happier. General Electric research and engineering have aided in making these conveniences possible.

A new series of G-E advertisements showing what electricity is doing in many fields will be sent on request. Ask for booklet GEK-18.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Bison Tossers Lose First Three Games

Bucknell University opened its baseball season taking its annual southern tour. Three games were lost and the fourth, which was with Navy, was cancelled on account of rain. The players were handicapped, due to the fact that they were able to get only three days outside practice before leaving Lewisburg. The teams which were met on the trip have had several weeks' practice and the Quantico Marine nine spent several weeks at Paris Island, North Carolina, in preparation for the coming games.

Coach Blair is not a bit discouraged with the showing of the team. Now, after several weeks' practice, the men are prepared to display a good brand of ball.

The team traveled by bus, leaving Lewisburg at 10:30 o'clock on Sunday March 27, arriving in Washington at 6:30 o'clock that evening. After the game with Catholic University, the players journeyed to Annapolis where they remained until Thursday morning, when they left for Quantico. This part of the trip was made by rail, due to the poor condition of the Jefferson-Davis Highway.

Georgetown Game

In this game Bucknell scored first, in the second inning, when Murphy tripled and was driven home on a single by Blaisdell. Georgetown showed the advantage of early training. Kostos turned in the fielding feature of this game by making a beautiful catch in short right field.

Bucknell Track Men Working to Win Meet

Coach Rhoades Ingerton of the Bucknell University track squad will work hard this week to get his men in shape for their first meet of the season with Dickinson this Saturday afternoon at Biddle Field, Carlisle, Pa., the Dickinson athletic field. The Orange and Blue track and field men have been training hard the past two weeks in preparation for the first dual encounter.

Ingerton will probably take the following men with him to Dickinson and enter them in the events: Trimmer, high hurdles; Peiffer and Davies, low hurdles; Hoy, Davis, Hetler, Throne, and Ware, in the distance events; Waller, Mare, Gittins, 100-yard dash; Waller and Goodwin, broadjump; Hitchins and Spence, high jump; Diehl and McClune, shotput; Diehl and McClune, discus; Stevens, McClune, and Frable, javelin throw; Frable, pole vault.

In addition to these men the Bucknell coach will have to select several other candidates that the team may be well represented in each event.

Musser Is Solution Of Scouts' Problem

Malcolm Musser, '18, coach of the basketball team during the past winter, is the big hope of the Welfare Federation in its effort to put the Boy Scout Movement on its feet through the Community Chest drive late this month. Heretofore it has not been possible to secure a well qualified man to take charge of the Scouts who could give the necessary time to the work. Musser is regarded as an ideal man for the job. If he will take the place, the Federation believes its problem will be solved.

In planning to continue the Boy Scouts on the budget, the Welfare Federation feels that the best way to insure good citizenship in the future is to look after the young men and boys of to-day. The Scout Movement is not, as many folks fancy, merely an organization to give boys a good time. The good times are merely incidental. The real object is to keep the boys healthfully and wholesomely employed and to teach them useful accomplishments and high ideals. In earlier days the boys on the frontier or on the farms were busy every minute with useful tasks. Each did his share—often a man's share—in the work of developing the country and running the farms. The change from rural to urban life has affected boys seriously by taking away so many of these useful activities. Scouting work keeps boys wholesomely busy, and it is felt that Musser would make an ideal leader for the Lewisburg boys.

Syracuse Tennis Men To Meet Us Tuesday

The Bucknell varsity tennis team will play its first matches of the season when it meets the strong Syracuse University team on the Bucknell courts next Tuesday afternoon.

Several veterans of last season will undoubtedly make their appearance on the Bucknell team. Among these are "Stan" McCaskey, "Dick" Horter, and "Bill" Gardner, although these men may be supplanted by new men. Fred Rudisill, former Army and Carnegie Tech star, will likely fill one position. The rule established at the beginning of the year barring freshmen from varsity athletic competition undoubtedly will not be adhered to in tennis, the rule applying only to the three major sports of baseball, football, and basketball. Among the freshmen who will put in strong bids for positions are Colestock, Frost, and Ballentine.

As usual, four single and two double matches will be played. Professor F. G. Ballentine is coaching the Orange and Blue racqueteers. Few of the local courts are in proper playing condition and they will have to be repaired extensively before the matches.

FAR-SIGHTED

The Meanest Man was married the other day. He bought his bride a ten cent bag of candy for a wedding present and took her for a honeymoon trip on a trolley. When they alighted from the car a couple of pieces of candy still remained in the bag.

"What shall we do with it, dear?" she asked.

"Better not eat it all," he advised prudently. "Let's save some for the children."

"What happens when an irresistible woman meets an immovable man?"

"She never does."—Life.

Freshman Candidates Report for Baseball

The first call for the Bucknell University freshman baseball candidates was issued last Friday afternoon by Fred Evans, frosh diamond manager, with over twenty-five ambitious yearlings responding. If as many men report for practice within the next few weeks, Coach Walter Blair will have an abundance of material from which to choose his first frosh combination. The list of those who reported included many who have made good in high school and prep school teams.

The unfavorable weather prevented actual practice for the afternoon and the candidates gathered in Tustin gymnasium where manager Evans discussed the diamond possibilities with them, outlining the proposed schedule.

Blair Not Discouraged

In spite of the reverses suffered by the Orange and Blue varsity combination on the recent trip south, Blair's tossers are not discouraged and are working hard in preparation for the first home contest.

The freshman baseball team will journey to Kingston, Pa., this Saturday afternoon where the Wyoming Seminary nine will be met in the first game of the season for the yearling nine. There will doubtless be great rivalry between the two teams as it will be remembered that the football game played last fall resulted in a 7-7 tie.

Halicki Showing Up Well

Halicki, football and basketball star, and former hurler for the Hanover Township High School team, will probably start in the box for the yearlings. He has shown up best among the pitching candidates to date.

Other candidates have also been revealing excellent form for early season practice. Blazes, former Kiski player, apparently has the first-base job to himself. "Chuck" Jones has been cavorting around shortstop in a first class manner and Convery has been playing well in the sunfield. Coach Walter Blair has not decided on the men who will make the trip Saturday.

THOUGHTS OF HOME

"Yes," droned the guide, "this is the scene of some primeval upheaval. Great rocks were tossed about by a giant hand. Streams were hurled from their beds. As you see, confusion reigns everywhere."

"I'll bet the apartment we sublet to strangers looks worse," sighed the tourist.

Reason for More Time

Counsel on both sides had been allowed 15 minutes each for argument. Accordingly the counsel for the plaintiff took a long breath, puffed on his chest, and began: "At the fall of Babylon—"

"Just a minute," interposed the judge. "If you are going to start as far back as that, perhaps I had better allow you 20 minutes."

It seems she absent-mindedly
Gave him a better seat.

Famous French Palace

The Louvre is a famous palace in Paris, originally the residence of French kings, but since the French revolution used as a museum of art and antiques. The Louvre derives its name from an ancient hunting chateau that stood on the site of the present palace, in the midst of a forest infested with wolves and known as the Louverie. It is said to have been a royal residence in the time of Dagobert (628). The foundation of the present building was laid by Francis I in 1541, and the structure was enlarged and adorned by successive kings, particularly Henry IV and Louis XIV, the latter being the last king to live in it. The work of uniting the Louvre and the Tuileries in one structure was completed in 1857; and the combined Louvre and Tuileries covers an area of 48 acres.—Kansas City Times.

MANY BUCKNELL MEN AT LEAGUE BANQUET

On behalf of the league, President Good presented to Mr. Plant a beautiful fountain pen and an Eversharp pencil, both in a neat case. Singing of the famed Kiwanis quartet, a solo by W. Clyde Harer, singing "by everybody" led by Ralph Grammer, and introduction of guests by Oliver J. Decker, Esq., were preliminary features of the post prandial.

Those at the speakers' table were Dr. Emory W. Hunt, Prof. J. Fred McMurray, John Plant, J. Mark Good, A. G. Stoughton, Sol Wolfe, Prof. Benjamin Griffith, Rhoades Ingerton, Edgar H. Maitland, Dr. John W. Long, Walter Blair, and Elmer L. Schuyler.

—have a Camel!

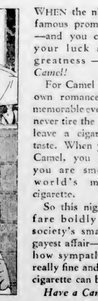
WHEN the night of the famous prom has come—and you contemplate your luck and your greatness—have a Camel!

For Camel adds of its own romance to every memorable event. Camels never tire the taste, never leave a cigarette aftertaste. When you light a Camel, you may know you are smoking the world's mellowest cigarette.

So this night, as you fare boldly forth to society's smartest and gayest affair—learn then how sympathetic, how really fine and friendly a cigarette can be.

Have a Camel!

Into the making of this one cigarette goes all of the ability of the world's largest organization of expert tobacco men. Nothing is too good for Camels. The choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos. The most skilful blending. The most scientific package. No other cigarette made is like Camels. No better cigarette can be made. Camels are the overwhelming choice of experienced smokers.



Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

"Tommie" Ruhl, ex-'27, visited her Pi Phi sisters, while home for her Easter vacation from Columbia University.

* * * *

Frank Hammell, '29, of Trenton, N. J., "bummed" his way home on March 30. For the sake of expediency, details will be omitted.

* * * *

Mrs. S. O. Bell, of Nanticoke, visited her two daughters, Irene Bell, '26, and Marjorie Bell, '28, during the week-end of March 26.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Furry, of Johnstown, Pa., spent the week-end of March 28 visiting their daughter, Mary Elizabeth Furry, '28.

* * * *

Mary Fritz, '28, went to her home in Reading, Pa., for the Easter vacation, where she learned a little more about home economics.

* * * *

Elizabeth Haslam, '27, who underwent an operation for appendicitis three weeks before Easter, returned to college after vacation.

* * * *

During vacation, "Tex" Walls, '29, "hiked" to Binghamton and Buffalo. "Tex" had a wonderful time and would not have missed the experience for anything.

* * * *

After reading the article in a recent Bucknellian concerning girls smoking, the girls at the "Sem" concluded that only a man would be foolish enough to walk a mile for a Camel.

* * * *

LeRoy Horton, '27, spent Easter at his new home in Chicago. This was the first vacation "Roy" has spent in the "Windy City" and he pronounces it an ideal place for a good time.

* * * *

Marian Heims, of Pittsburgh, was the guest of Jane Foust at the Alpha Chi Omega sorority dance, which was held at the Lambda Chi Alpha house on Tuesday evening, March 30.

* * * *

John W. Fisher, '26, of Tamaqua, Pa., returned to college on Thursday to attend a class in physics. Since this was the only class he had, he returned to his home on Friday morning.

* * * *

Professor H. T. Colestock, Professor C. M. Bond, Instructor R. E. Harris, and Mrs. Jennie D. Phillips were spectators at the Sigma Chi-Lambda Chi Alpha basketball game on Friday, March 2 .

* * * *

"Big Bad" McKinney, '28, from the western wilds of Detroit, Michigan, is having a streak of hard luck. It has been many a moon since "Mac" has emerged victorious from a pool game. Better luck next time, old boy!

* * * *

Betty Davis, '28, had a very pleasant experience awaiting her in Pittsburgh when she went home for the holidays—a new little niece, just three weeks old. And little Marion gave her aunt a fine big Easter egg!

* * * *

Betty Slifer, '28, and "Kit" Ballet, '28, were among the "Semites" who attended the dance at the new Lambda Chi house at State College, Saturday, March 27. All of the guests agree that the new house sure is "hotsy totsy."

Wanda Nicol, '25, visited her Phi Mu sisters the week-end of March 27.

* * * *

Richard H. Beatty, '29, has been compelled to discontinue his college course, due to the illness of his mother. "Dick" returned to college on Wednesday, but left for his home in Beatty, Pa., on Thursday noon, April 8.

* * * *

"Len" Coates, '26, accompanied his uncle, John D. Plant, the new athletic supervisor at Bucknell, to Williamsport last Thursday, April 8, where the latter was the principal speaker at a banquet of the Williamsport Cage league.

* * * *

Kenneth E. McGinnis, '27, was unable to leave for his home in Pittsville, Pa., until Saturday, April 3, on the Easter vacation. "Mickey" intended to leave on Thursday, but was delayed when he broke a spring in his "Chevy."

* * * *

Willard Hetler, '27, and Paul M. Johnston, '28, hold the speed record for hiking. On their return to college on Wednesday, April 7, "Bill" and "Pete" got off of the train at Bellefonte and began to hike to Lewisburg. They arrived here about an hour before the train.

* * * *

"Gus" Shorts, and "Hob" and "Ed" Zortman journeyed to Williamsport, Saturday, March 27, to witness the finals of the boxing tournament, held by the Eastern Region of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Shorts and "Rags" Madera, of Penn State, officiated as judges of the bouts.

* * * *

George Strahan, '29, and "Shorty" Porter, of Penn State, returned from vacation via the "flivver" route. The boys left Montclair, N. J., at 8 in the morning and arrived in Lewisburg at 5:30 in the afternoon. The Ford was in excellent spirits and clicked off the miles in great shape.

* * * *

Charles Farrow, 26, Chester Renn, '28, and Edwin Dolbey, '28, went to jail on Sunday, March 28. But it was only a temperary visit to the Northumberland County prison, in the interest of their work in sociology. They remained at the prison all day, taking pictures and talking with the prisoners.

Quite a few Nanticoke people stopped over at Bucknell on their way home from State College where the basketball team of Nanticoke High School won the state championship. Among the people who visited here were Mrs. Jack Thomas, Ruth James, Byron James, Mr. and Mrs. David Gervan, Sara Morgan, Louis Morgan, and Phillip Buckley.

* * * *

"Tubby" Johnston, '28, who spent his Easter vacation in Brooklyn, N. Y., at the home of his roommate, Willis Snow, '28, is generous in his praise of the "City of Churches." Brooklyn actually made "Tubby" sit up and take notice. It may safely be said that our honorable sophomore president will never forget the good time he had there.

* * * *

Paul Webster, '27, returned to his home in Buffalo, N. Y. during the Easter holidays in his "Yellow Peril." He reported fair traveling—"considering." Sunday afternoon he spent a considerable length of time in untieing the "Phantom" from the hitching stone on St. George street opposite the "Seminary," where several thoughtful fellow students had anchored the car.

* * * *

Lewisburg is not such a bad place during vacation, after all, the "town" boys and girls decided, when Mrs. H. T. Colestock entertained at her home April 3, in honor of the Misses Goble, of White Plains, New York. An egg hunt was the feature of the evening, but there was much trouble in determining the winner, as most of the "jelly-beans" were eaten as soon as they were found.

* * * *

Several Bucknellians contributed to the success of the April meeting of Shikellimo Chapter, D. A. R., which was held on April 5, at the home of the Misses Lawshe. Miss Carolyn Hunt, '25, sang "Ashes of Roses," "Homing," and "Snowdrop." Professor Paul G. Stolz also sang. Mrs. Benjamin W. Griffith played several piano solos. Miss Louise Lawshe, Mus. '00, sang in one of the choruses.

* * * *

Edna Whitaker, '28, entertained eleven friends at a card party, Monday evening, April 5.

* * * *

Mrs. Christy Mathewson stopped in Lewisburg recently on her way home from Florida to visit her mother, Mrs. Frank Stoughton, before going to her home at Saranac Lake, N. Y.

* * * *

Assistant Professor Harold Shaffer left Lewisburg on Wednesday, March 31, with Professor and Mrs. H. W. Robbins on an automobile trip to Richmond , Va. They visited many other points of interest.

* * * *

Mrs. James Primrose Whyte, who succeeded Miss Agnes MacCann as physical director at the Seminary, expects to attend the national D. A. R. congress which meets in Washington, April 19. Mrs. Whyte was selected by the local chapter of the D. A. R. as an alternate for Mrs. H. P. Glover, regent of the local chapter, but Mrs. Glover will be unable to attend the Washington meeting and Mrs. Whyte will go in her place.

DICKINSONIAN EDITORS RESENT CREDIT LOSSES

The faculty of Dickinson College has recently voted that no credit will be given for participation in extra-curricular activities in the future. This ruling takes away one credit hour per year from the debaters and editors of the college. The Dickinsonian, in an editorial calling attention to the injustice of the action, states that the motion was not made known to the staff of the paper and that the reporter who tried to ferret out the reasons for the action was given no satisfaction. The following excerpt from the editorial shows the attitude which the Dickinsonian takes toward the matter which is certainly one that is broader than merely asking for credit.

"If college is to be merely the cramming into the cranium of a number of dry facts, or the learning to rely upon and become responsible to a "boss" who shall each day say, "This is to be done today," then the action of the faculty is within reason. But if college is to train one to accept the responsibilities of life, to work at times other than when there is one to punish when the work is not done, to foster initiative, then the action of the faculty is without reason. If the faculty desires to discourage those who show an interest in "outside activities," or if they consider of no value the services of those who spend many thankless hours in this work, let them say it directly and the doors of these activities will close. The importance of the class work should not be underestimated, but there is no reason in an attempt to raise its position by discouraging extra-curriculum activities. These activities have their place in college and in most instances the training received in these activities is found to be of greater value to the student than is the class room work."

HARVARD STUDENTS FEEL UNIVERSITY IS TOO BIG

Following the lead of Dartmouth, Bowdoin, and other colleges, the undergraduates of Harvard University have through their student council, drawn up a report on education. The report calls the university too large, and recommends that it be broken up into at least six smaller colleges, preferably of about 300 students each, and that the students of each be housed in dormitories by themselves. This, it said, would result in great social developments on the part of the average student and social progress that would greatly excell that which Harvard students now gain.

The council further declared itself in favor of limitation of freshmen and keeping down the number of "unassimilable" students to ten per cent. of the entire student body. It also urges that the college lay more stress on the cultural development of the undergraduates rather than on "mere wisdom."

The student council adopted this plan for the changing of the entire educational system at Harvard after a five months' study on the part of a committee of ten undergraduates who talked with faculty members and students both of their own and other colleges as well as with prominent educational authorities.

As the recommendations have just been presented officially to the university trustees it may be a month or two before any decision is reached on them.

Recreation School Opens in New York

The industrial town will be one important field of work for graduates of the National Recreation School opening in New York City this fall, according to the Playground and Recreation Association of America, which will conduct this one-year course for college men and women. The value of organized recreation in promoting the happiness and efficiency of industrial workers is increasingly recognized.

Eight hour work days give more hours of leisure time. The routine operations of the modern factory and office tend to stifle self-expression in work. Most commercial recreation is passive, thousands of spectators watching a few people perform. These and other factors make a program of athletics, community music and drama, social gatherings, water sports, etc. essential to the community where workers can make a life as well as a living.

Fifty college graduates of character, resourcefulness and leadership will be chosen for the first student body of the school. The course is covered in three sessions from September through June. For the first year tuition will be waived.

During the past twenty years the number of cities having public recreation under leadership have grown from 41 to 748. Last year about nineteen million dollars was spent by cities for recreation spaces, equipment and leadership. This nation-wide development has created a demand for professional recreation organizers which has exceeded the supply.

The salaries of recreation superintendents range from $2,200 to $6,500. Those who begin work as assistants or as directors of activities receive less. During 1925, 262 cities asked the Playground and Recreation Association of America to help find recreation workers for 386 jobs.

Practice, discussion and demonstration, rather than theory, will be the method of the school. The instructors will be national and local recreation executives of long experience, authorities in their various fields. These will be supplemented by special lecturers available in New York City. The many practical problems constantly coming to the Playground and Recreation Association of America, as well as the reports, studies, and programs the association receives from more than 700 cities, will furnish valuable fresh material for training purposes. Students will also have practice work in the field.

For details concerning the school write to T. E. Rivers of the Playground and Recreation Association of America, 315 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

Alumni Notes

Prof. William G. Owens, '80

Professor William G. Owens, '80, who is a leading Sunday school worker, urges greater cooperation among local Sunday school folks in the conduct of the camps for Sunday school scholars this coming summer. There will be two of these. Near at hand will be a camp on Spruce Creek, in Centre County. Another camp will be at Lake Erie.

The Union County Sunday School Executive Committee, of which Professor Owens is a member, recently outlined its program for district Sunday school conventions in the different townsRipa. The schedule is as follows: Mifflinburg, May 2; Lewis, May 2; Gregg, May 9; Kelly and Buffalo, May 16; Lewisburg and White Deer, May 23; New Berlin and Hartley, June 6.

Errol H. Derby, '20

"No book is complete without an index or table of contents. Is a newspaper,"

This is the question asked by Errol H. Derby, '20, city editor of the Greensburg, Pa., Daily Tribune, in an article published in the April 3 issue of the Editor and Publisher. Mr. Errol points out that as newspapers grow in size, and their contents become more voluminous, it is necessary to help readers by listing the contents. He mentions the growing tendency among papers to use tables of contents. The article also suggests an easy way to prepare such indexes.

Dr. Robert F. Trainer, ex-'96

Dr. Robert F. Trainer, Williamsport health officer, at the urging of many Williamsporters, has made application to the board of managers of the Williamsport Hospital for the position of superintendent, made vacant by the resignation of Dr. Rush E. Castelaw.

Dr. Trainer during the World War had an administrative experience in hospital work. He is thoroughly conversant with health work, and in many other ways fully qualified for superintendent of a hospital.

It is expected that a decision will be made by the board of managers of the hospital in about a week.

Reuben W. Shrum, '08

Lieutenant Commander Reuben W. Shrum, '08, chaplain of the presidential yacht, the Mayflower, spoke twice on Sunday, April 11, in St. Mark's Lutheran church, of Williamsport.

Commander Shrum and the pastor of the church, the Rev. Paul L. Yount, D. D., were boyhood friends, and the first appearance of Commander Shrum in Williamsport won for him many friends. At that time, he spoke briefly at a Kiwanis dinner dance in Trinity house and later delivered a lecture in St. Mark's.

Commander Shrum is a brother of Jane Shrum, '27.

Professor James P. Whyte

Professor James P. Whyte, of the Bucknell University faculty and a member of the Lewisburg Rotary Club, spoke at the regular meeting of the Williamsport Rotary Club on April 5, at the Lycoming.

Speaking on the subject, "Self Before Rotary," Professor Whyte said, "A standard to which a man attains should not be limited as to personality and service of others. Each man should be the best that man himself can give."

Norman R. Hill, ex-'17

Norman R. Hill, ex-'17, now of the Northwestern Life Insurance Co., is to address the annual banquet of the New York Life Underwriters' Association upon the subject "Sales and Service." The gist of his talk will be that one is master of one's own situation, that time is one's greatest asset, and that common sense and good judgment should be silent partners.

Albert W. Johnston Jr. '25

Albert W. Johnson Jr., '25, son of Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96, who is studying law at Harvard University, is recovering from a recent attack of pneumonia. He was seriously ill, and his father spent a recent week-end with him at Harvard.

Judge A. W. Johnson, '96

Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96, will address the World Fellowship Committee of the Y. W. C. A. at a dinner in the association building of the Y. W. C. A. in Williamsport on April 15.

Mrs. Mary Stoner Gretzinger, Inst., '87, recently visited her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William English, at Newark, N. J.

Decker Carries Thru Lions' Big Program

Oliver J. Decker, Esq., '99, who was the first president and practically the founder of the Williamsport Lions Club, scored a great success last winter, when, as chairman of the club's music committee, he organized the club's Celebrated Artists' Course and not only "put it over" but made a very handsome profit for the club. The fame of this achievement has spread abroad, and in its issue for April 6, The Musical Digest comments upon the matter as follows:

Williamsport, Pa., is not a large city. In fact, its population is rated at less than 50,000 people. But these people evidently feel the need of hearing good music, for Williamsport is at present supporting and even making profit out of a Celebrated Artists' Concert Course whose features would do credit to a much more populous city.

How did the idea of having a concert series of its own originate in Williamsport? Well, the Lions Club looked around and took stock of the situation. Here were a sufficient number of people eager to hear the best in the line of music. Here was the nearest large city, Philadelphia, over two hundred miles away. In order to gratify their musical instincts, townspeople had to suffer a considerable loss in time and money. There could be no doubt but that they were willing to pay for the privilege of being made comfortable.

So the Lions Club, of which Oliver J. Decker is chairman of the Music Committee, inaugurated the Celebrated Artists' Concert Course this season and found it good. Among those heard during the winter, under its management, were Reinald Werrenrath, Paul Whiteman and his Orchestra, The Russian Symphonic Choir, Josef Hofmann, and Anna Case. For next season they already have a list which includes The English Singers from London, Albert Spalding, Richard Crooks, The New York Symphony Orchestra under Walter Damrosch, and Dusolina Giannini.

Although this year's course, in addition to the expense of the theatre, the advertising, and the printing bills, cost nearly $10,000, the Lions Club found that it cleared a profit of over $1,000. This too, in spite of the disadvantage of a small house, seating less than 1,300 people.

Incidentally, whatever profits result are delegated to some worthy charity. The Williamsport Hospital Building Fund was the recipient this year. It is planned to devote next year's surplus to work for the blind.

Seventy-five Wardens Meet At Call off Forester Winter

District Forester Raymond B. Winter, who was a student at Bucknell in the days of the S. A. T. C., and who is now in charge of the Bald Eagle Forest, recently called a meeting of all his wardens at Mifflinburg. Seventy-five men were present. The purpose of the meeting was to bring together all the wardens of the district, so that they might become better acquainted and make plans for closer cooperation in fighting forest fires and handling other emergency situations in the district.

Forester Winter is one of the outstanding men in the forestry work in Pennsylvania. He has been unusually successful in keeping fire from his section of the forest and in extinguishing quickly the fires that started. The Sand Mountain fire tower in Lewis Township, Union Co., was erected in the summer of 1917 under the supervision of Mr. Winter. It is one of the two sixty-foot steel towers erected at that time to test the practicability of this kind of structure. This is the tower that stands on top of the mountain not far from the cabin of Professor Nelson F. Davis. Many Bucknell students have climbed this tower. A wonderful view is to be had from it.

So outstanding has been the work of Mr. Winter that more and more forest land has been intrusted to his keeping, until at present he has under his supervision more than 100,000 acres of forest land, an area greater than that controlled by any other forester in Pennsylvania.

I'M THE GINK

I'm the gink that knows my fraternity is the best in the world, and believe me I tell everybody about it. Whenever I get in a mixed group I always have something to say regarding my fraternity. It's my chief topic of conversation. Anyone who doesn't happen to be honored by being a member of my fraternity isn't quite as good as I am. I strut around the campus and never fail to display my pin, I know I must be regarded as being kind of foolish, but I don't care, I belong to such and such fraternity anyway.

KDKA To Broadcast Bucknell Alumni Ball

Arrangements have been made with the Westinghouse radio station, KDKA at East Pittsburgh, to broadcast music from the inaugural ball of the Bucknell Alumni Association of Western Pennsylvania at the Morrowfield Hotel, Pittsburgh, on Friday night, April 16. This was announced on Saturday, April 3, by George Hadfield Jones, general chairman of the dance. The broadcasting will take place from 11 o'clock to 1 A. M., with the Floridans Orchestra of Pittsburgh furnishing a program of novelty music.

Dr. Nelson F. Davis, head of the biological department of Bucknell University, will be the principal speaker at the dinner, which will be served from 7 o'clock to 9 o'clock, and dancing will be continous from 9 o'clock to 1 A. M. Preparations are being made to care for 300 graduates of the university.

The following committees have the affair in charge: Tickets, R. J. Haberseh, S. L. Seeman, C. D. Loveland, Earl Morton, T. J. Foley, Dr. M. F. Goldsmith, A. C. Bowser; publicity and program, Harold G. Florin, E. L. Worthington, John T. Shirley, Roy G. Bostwick, George Ikeler, William Mahaffey, Nicholas Rosenberg; decorations, Emily A. Lane, Mrs. R. G. Bostwick, Mrs. E. W. Pogue; music, Frank S. Turner Jr., H. A. Larson, B. R. Seeman.

Officers of the Bucknell Alumni Association of Western Pennsylvania are: H. G. Florin, president; S. L. Seeman, vice-president; E. L. Worthington, secretary; R. J. Baberstroh, treasurer, and Miss Emily Lane, assistant secretary-treasurer.

How Sounds on Steel Can Now Be Recorded

A man sitting in an office in Berlin, Cape Town, or Peking may soon be able to dictate a letter that will be heard and taken down instantly by a shorthand writer in an office in London.

This is one of the startling results of an invitation perfected in a Berlin laboratory. The invention, which has taken 18 years to perfect, consists of recording and storing sounds on steel. The sounds are recorded on a steel wire by electro-magnetic means, so that the wire bears no surface markings of any kind and can at any time be "emptied" of its sound contents in readiness to receive others.

The wire can be connected with any telegraphic cable, which conveys the sounds further. It is predicted that within a short time every newspaper correspondent in the world will be able to dictate his articles direct to his office.

To empty the wire is a very simple matter: one simply reverses the process and re-transforms the magnetic waves into ordinary sound-waves.

Instead of being "emptied" for further use, says a writer in Science, the charged wire may be disconnected and stored up, when it will, on being reconnected, repeat its sound contents as often as desired. The life of such a sound wire, unlike that of a phonographic plate, is limitless.

Misery?

"I like the springtime."
"Why?"
"Well, you see, I don't care for work at any time, but it is only in the spring that the attitude gets any sympathy."

NOT SO WONDERFUL

"Don't you think it's wonderful to see a man with a wooden leg dance?"
"Not when you see so many men with wooden heads doing it."

Disappointing

The pumpkin is most fair to see,
For yellow luster you can't beat it;
Perhaps that's why it seems to be
A "gold brick" when you try to eat it.

Horrors

"No, I told you I don't care for any coffee. That was the cause of my father's death."
"Coffee killing anyone, how comic?"
"Five hundred pounds fell on his head."—Colgate Banter.

H. S. Debating Teams Try Out For Trophy

The Central Pennsylvania High School Debating League, sponsored by Bucknell University, began the competition for the "Lee Francis Lybarger Debating Trophy," on Friday evening, April 9, when twelve high schools met in four triangular debates to determine the four winning teams which would meet in the semi-final debates. Lewisburg, Mifflinburg, Williamsport, and Mount Carmel survived the first round.

On Friday evening, April 16, Lewisburg will meet Mifflinburg, and Mount Carmel will debate Williamsport in two dual debates, which will decide the finalists, who will meet on April 23. The winning team will be presented with a silver loving cup, given by L. F. Lybarger, Esq., of Mifflinburg, to Bucknell University. The presentation of this trophy to the team of the winning school will be made at a banquet given in their honor at the Cameron House at Lewisburg on Saturday evening, April 24.

Great Rivalry Develops

Intense rivalry marked the debates of Friday night. Large crowds were present at the various debating auditoriums to hear the high school teams debate the question: "Resolved, That the United States government should compel settlement by means of arbitration of all disputes in the fuel and transportation industries."

A Bucknell student presided at each debate, and most of the thirty-six judges were Bucknell professors. The presiding officers were: Lewisburg, A. F. Hirt; Montgomery, D. M. Bahr; Sunbury, R. H. Coleman; Mifflinburg, R. H. Edwards; Shamokin, E. E. Haller an; Watsontown, L. J. Coates; Williamsport, C. A. Hile; Milton, R. D. Smink; Northumberland, J. G. Williams; Mount Carmel; T. B. Drumbor Lock Haven, L. F. Lybarger Jr.; Bloomsburg, W. G. Snow.

Who Won the "Triangles"

The results of the various triangles were: Triangle number 1—Lewisburg-Montgomery, 3-0; Montgomery-Sunbury, 3-0; Sunbury-Lewisburg, 2-1 Winner, Lewisburg. Rating, Lewisburg 4; Montgomery 3; Sunbury 2.

Triangle number two—Shamokin-Mifflinburg, 1-2; Mifflinburg-Watsontown, 3-0; Watsontown-Shamokin, 2-1. Winner, Mifflinburg. Rating, Mifflinburg 5; Shamokin 2; Watsontown 2.

Triangle number three—Milton-Williamsport, 1-2; Williamsport-Northumberland, 2-1; Northumberland-Milton, 1-2. Winner, Williamsport. Rating, Williamsport 4; Milton 3; Northumberland 2.

Triangle number four—Bloomsburg-Mount Carmel, 0-3; Mount Carmel-Lock Haven, 2-1; Lock Haven-Bloomsburg, 2-1. Winner, Mount Carmel. Rating, Mount Carmel 5; Lock Haven 3; Bloomsburg 1.

Many Prizes Offered To Our Best Orators

The annual freshman contest in declamation will be held in Bucknell Hall on the evening of May 10 at 7:30. Two prizes are offered; one to the men, one to the women. Selections not to exceed ten minutes are to be taken from authors of recognized ability. Men are to choose prose and women poetry.

The annual sophomore contest in public speaking will be held in Bucknell Hall on the evening of May 14 at 7:30. Two prizes are offered; one to men, one to women. Speeches must be handed to Professor Whyte, not later than May 12.

The annual junior contest in oratory for the Gretzinger Prizes and the Junior Debate will be held on the evening of May 17 in Bucknell Hall at 7:30. One prize is given for the best oration and two prizes to the best debaters. Both men and women are eligible. Orations and debates must not exceed ten minutes. The debate will be conducted according to the open forum plan, each speaker presenting his own argument without consultation with the other debaters. The question for debate is, Resolved, that the United States should enter the League of Nations.

Students who decide to take part in these annual contests will please hand their names, titles of declamations, and subjects for speeches to Professor Whyte not later than April 20.

The decision of the judges in all contests will be announced and the awards presented at the Commencement exercises.

Youngsters Scramble For Eggs on Campus

The Bucknell campus was the scene of a lively egg hunt on the Monday after Easter, when the Kratzer-Dull post of the American Legion scattered 1700 eggs over the grounds, and scores of Lewisburg youngsters engaged in a scramble to gather them. Little "Billy" Johnson, five-year-old son of Judge Albert W. Johnson, found the egg that won the first prize for boys—a mammoth chocolate egg. The winner of the similar prize for girls got her big egg and slipped away so quietly that those in charge failed to get her name. There were 221 prizes in all, so that each contestant stood a good chance to draw something pleasing.

1700 Eggs on the Campus

The egg hunt was scheduled for the day before Easter, but pouring rains made it necessary to postpone the affair. So it was held on the following Monday. That portion of the grounds facing Bucknell Hall had been divided into four sections, the section markers being rows of flags. One section was for the smallest children, another for those a little older, and so on. The 1700 eggs had been evenly distributed among the different sections.

Lowering skies and the threat of rain kept many people away. Nevertheless there were scores of children and a goodly crowd of grown-ups on hand to share in the fun. Major S. B. Wolfe was master of ceremonies. Promptly at three o'clock he declared the game was on, and the eager children charged through the gates and began to scramble for eggs. Some of the youngsters had baskets and some had none. But almost every child got at least one egg.

Poor "Peggy" Got None

There was one exception. Professor F. G. Davis' "Peggy," a tot of five, failed to get an egg, and set up a heart broken wail. Professor F. G. Ballentine's little daughter, Ruth raised a laugh by saying, "Peggy didn't get any egg. I'm like to give her mine, but I've got only one and there's a girl over there with seventeen."

The town merchants had been so generous that there were prizes for the finders of 221 of the 1700 eggs. The prize-winning eggs were numbered. A score board kept by the management showed where the individuals who drew prizes could get them. In addition to these little gifts, the children got the flags that were used to stake off the different sections of the grounds. The Legion saw to it that there was a flag for each child. Altogether the egg hunt was a great success, and the campus proved to be an ideal place for the frolic.

DRUM WINS FIRST PLACE IN ORATORICAL CONTEST

T. Burns Drum, '26, has been selected to represent Bucknell in the National Constitutional Oratorical Contest, as the result of the elimination trial that took place in Bucknell Hall on Tuesday evening, April 13.

The only other contestant, J. G. Williams, '29, spoke well, too, though the judges did not feel that he equaled Drum. It was evident the speakers felt the lack of the response a larger audience would have supplied, for they had scarcely a dozen listeners to address.

It is probable that the next elimination step in the contest for this district will be held April 30 at Lewisburg. The winner here goes to Washington, and then the third jump is to Los Angeles, where the finals are to occur some time toward the latter part of June.

The judges for the elimination were Professors R. F. Howes, J. P. Whyte, and W. H. Coleman.

Install New Members Of Y.W.C.A. Cabinet

The new members of the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet were installed at the annual Y. W. Retreat on Saturday, April 10. Leaving Lewisburg at 11:15, they proceeded by train to Winfield, from where they hiked to the top of Blue Hill. A lunch of ham and eggs was cooked over the fire, and was augmented by potato chips, pickles, rolls, and oranges.

During the afternoon there were songs, and a talk by the retiring president, Anna VanDine, '26. The new officers were welcomed, and were informed of the duties of their offices by the old members.

The new officers and members of the cabinet are: president, Grace Pheifer, '27; vice-president, Ruth Bray, '28; secretary, Helen Steinhilper, '29; treasurer, Jessie Fielding, '29; finance, Elizabeth Sale, '29; social, Nancy Kennedy, '28; music, Grace Milhous, '27; employment, Dorothy Gilbert, '27; Bible, Pauline Ware, '28; publicity, Louise Westley, '28; social service, Elizabeth McCracken, '27; meetings, Helen Thomson, '27; world fellowship, Elizabeth Siegfried, '29. Anna Everitt, '28, was elected as delegate to the national Y. W. C. A. convention to be held in Milwaukee from April 17 to 28.

Dr. Stewart Heads Science Group

The Pennsylvania Academy of Science, holding a two-day session at Harrisburg the latter part of the last week, elected Dr. N. H. Stewart, of Bucknell University, president; and E. A. Ziegler, Mont Alto State Forest School, vice president.

The other officers elected are: secretary, T. L. Guyton, state department of agriculture; assistant secretary, W. E. Eddie, Dickinson College; treasurer, H. W. Thurston, State College; editor, R. W. Stone, state forestry department; member of executive committee, Walter A. McCubbin, state department of agriculture.

BUCKNELL DEBATE PUT "ON THE AIR"; RICHMOND BEATEN

Negative Debaters Meet Success In First Forensic Contest Broadcast From Here

NEGATIVE TEAM OF 1925-26 WINS 5 OUT OF 7 DEBATES

Southerners Thought To Be Best Orators Of Teams Appearing At Bucknell This Year

In the first debate ever broadcast from Bucknell University, Bucknell's negative team completed a successful season with a 2-1 victory over the University of Richmond's affirmative trio in a hotly contested debate in Bucknell Hall on Thursday evening, April 15. The negative team, in 1925-26, won five out of seven contests.

Despite a long and tiresome railroad journey from the South, the Richmond debaters were fresh for the battle, and it is safe to say, that for consistent performance, the Southerners were the best orators of any of the teams that visited Lewisburg this year The University of Richmond has but one debating team, the affirmative team, on which were two veterans who aided in Bucknell's defeat last spring in Richmond.

The affirmative argument was no new one to those who have heard previous debates on the question: Resolved, "That the United States should enter the League of Nations as it is now constituted." This argument is that the United States should join the League, for the League is the most effective instrument toward world peace—a world league. Eighty-five per cent of the world population has representation at the League capital, Geneva.

However well Richmond's team may have been prepared for the debate, they were baffled by the deceptive and unexpected attack launched by the Bison negative team. Bucknell's trio did not attack the League in any manner whatsoever, but shifted the question to "it is not a question of wanting to join the League, but it is impossible for United States to join, because of constitutional reasons." The United States would have to do away with the constitution itself, if we joined the League as it is now constituted.

The Richmond boys were unable to shift their plans to meet this argument. Having expected the negative to hammer away at the League itself, they were naturally surprised by the negative acceptance of the League idea, and consequently they were unable

New Belle Hop Editors Selected by Old Staff

At a regular meeting of the editorial staff of the Belle Hop Association on Tuesday, April 20, the members of the new staff for 1926-27 were elected. They will assume their new offices in time for the publication of the last issue of the magazine for the current school year.

The newly elected staff are as follows: Editor-in-chief, H. Willard Gardner; Associate Editors, Miss Yolanda Frank, Miss Doris Worrel, H. H. Pierson, and William G. Jones; Managing Editor, Milton C. Endres; Exchange Editor, Samuel Feaster; Business Manager, Douglas W. Anderson; Advertising Manager, J. A. Phillips; Circulation Manager S. C. Braucher; Art Staff, Rodney K. Barlow, Ralph Feick, Miss Bonnie Butler, and Pauline Belles; and the business assistants, C. E. Kimball, F. S. Hepp, K. C. Albig, and A. Abbott.

The retiring staff wishes the new staff the best of success and is sure that under the new management the paper will continue its steady growth among the alumni as well as among the student body.

Letters to the editor on any subject of interest to the students or other members of the University are welcome and will be published if they contain nothing that it is illegal or libellous to print.

Home Economic Girls To Get More Courses

Co-eds Will Be Offered Training In Household Administration

Although the number of students registering for home economics has been steadily increasing for the past few years, it has been found necessary for several reasons to cut down the work in this department to two courses in household administration, which are open to all students at the Women's College.

The department found that to care adequately for the growing number of students, it would have to expend a large sum of money for equipment, which is impossible at the present time. The fact that ther has never been a practice house at Bucknell for the home economics girls has also done a great deal to hold back the work of the department.

It is hoped that in the near future a more extensive course may be built up, and that the campus may contain a practice house for this practical and ever-popular course.

The current issue of the university catalog lists only one course, Home Economics 101 and 102. However, another course in household administration, Home Economics 103 and 104, will be offered.

A description of course 101 may be found in the catalog. Course 103 is as follows:

103. Household Administration. The home and its relation to the outside world; woman as homemaker and wage earner; the housing problem; dietetics and nutrition; art; textiles; dress; budgeting; family standards of living; child welfare; civic responsibility. All students. First semester. Two hours. Miss Douglass.

104. Continuation of 103. All students. Second semester. Two hours. Miss Douglass.

Description of Course

The woman and her place in the home, industry, etc. (in the world). Special fields. The housing problem; art in the home; the study of the fabrics and their uses; style; cash; clothing industry; the art of dressing correctly; study of food as in dietetics and nutrition; cost; value; markets; advertising; menues; feeding the child; budgets—continued; wife as producer; community and home problems—continued; standards of living; the economic problem; old age pensions; laws affecting workers.

Improvements Prove Spring Has Arrived

Improvements and changes are outstanding evidences of spring on the "Quadrangle." The poet, who devotes several lines to telling how "a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," entirely neglects to mention these more prosaic harbingers of warm weather.

The library was perhaps the first to undergo improvements. The doors of the history room were tightly closed, muffling the sounds of carpentry from within. When at length they were opened, they disclosed the fact that new shelves had been installed.

Recently, a new door-mat made its appearance just outside the threshold of the library, where it lies in wait for the multitude of muddy feet that pass that way so frequently.

The College Inn has been the scene of several changes. The former bookstore room has been turned into a cosy dining room. The clock has disappeared from its customary place on the pillar between the cash registers. Perhaps the idea is to deceive the patient diner about how swiftly the minutes are passing.

A mimeograph office has been built in West Wing, near the telephone booth.

Last, but by no means least, the Bucknellian office has been remodeled. Rough walls and floors may create a Bohemian atmosphere and inspire brilliant writing, but the newly finished walls of buff plaster and the varnished floor of the new office lend an air of quiet efficiency. New desks and chairs have been set in, while the lights have been arranged to give light at each desk. The office is now the headquarters for the summer session department as well as for the Bucknellian.

BUCKNELLIAN STAFF SELECTED FOR 1927

Milton C. Endres To Be Chief, Brenner, Managing Editor, McHail, News Editor

The new staff of editors who will conduct the Bucknellian during the coming year, was chosen at a meeting of the retiring board of editors held last Friday, April 16. The personnel of the new staff is as follows: Editor-in-chief, Milton C. Endres; Associate Editor, Clyde L. Roller; Managing Editor, Albert E. Brenner; Assistant Managing Editor, Albert M. Cooley; News Editor, Vincent W. McHail; Assistant News Editor, Harry H. Pierson; Women's College Editor, Charlotta Gilbert; Assistant Women's College Editor, Jane Beakley; Sporting Editor, J. Millard Shipman; Assistant Sporting Editor, John S. Seigh

It will be noticed that some change has been made in the various editorships. The feature editorship and the alumni editorship have been discontinued. Assistant editorships have been created to train new men for each editorship. Editors will serve for one semester instead of an entire year, in order to give more students editorial experience.

Bucknellian Doubled In Size

Three years ago the Bucknellian was a four page sheet, printing ten to twelve columns of news a week. Today it is an eight page paper that prints thirty columns of reading matter a week. Successfully to get out this enlarged paper under the loose editorial arrangement existing was next to impossible. The result has been delay in issuing the paper. The new plan, which has the approval of President Hunt and the unanimous endorsement of the retiring staff, is an attempt to coordinate the work better, and to make more effective use of the journalism students in conducting the paper.

No Change In Editorial Policy

It does not mean, however, any change in the policy of conducting the

Prom Memories Linger As Gay Dance Passes

Tuxedos were trite and gowns gorgeous at the Armory last Friday night when the Junior Promenade of the Class of 1927 became a thing of the past. The memories of the season's climax as held by the dancers are of a lively orchestra and the best decorations the Armory has ever known. However the memories of the committee are ones of worries lest the expenses of the affair should not be met, and backaches resulting from the moving of part of the "Semi", (meaning furniture) to the hall and back again.

Barton Dakin, chairman of the committee, was a very busy man superintending the work of his sub-committees and was fearful of every seemingly unnecessary expenditure, knowing that former affairs of the class had been financial failures.

Horace Gardner as chairman of the decoration committee created the greatest success of the evening in the form of a lounging room in one corner of the floor. Through the aid of Blanche Thompson and Mrs. Beatty a number of chairs, davenports, rugs and floor lamps were obtained. These put the finishing touches to the already well decorated hall. The Eleo Co. of Williamsport was engaged for the major decorations. Pecuniary persuasion brought us Mazetti's Great White Fleet Orchestra to give their syncopated selections.

Much appreciated praise on the success of the dance was received from the chaperones, Mrs. Rivenburg, and Professor and Mrs. Coleman. Even some of the blase seniors broke down under the strain of the success and admitted that it compared with the Prom of yesteryear.

Safety Note

When anything goes decidedly wrong in this old vale of tears and laughter, there must be a goat to blame it on, and the thing to do is so to live and work from day to day that they won't think of you first in this capacity when the necessity arises.—Ohio State Journal.

TRACK-FIELD MEET LOST TO DICKINSON

Trimmer Makes Record, Winning High Hurdles in 16 Seconds; Bucknell Weak In Races

Bucknell University opened its track season in the first meet of the year, with Dickinson, Saturday afternoon, April 17, at 2:30 P. M. on Biddle Field. Bucknell was defeated, by 74½ to 50½ points.

The participants had unfavorable weather to work in, but in spite of the cold weather a fairly good showing of rooters appeared to lend support to the different sides.

The Orange and Blue track and field men had been able to train for only one week in preparation for this encounter. The team was well represented in each event, Bucknell having entered twenty-four men for the various events.

Trimmer Makes A Record

Although Bucknell was forced down to defeat the team showed itself strong in field events, such as high and low hurdles, shotput, pole vault, and javelin throw. Outstanding men in these events were Trimmer, Diehl, and Frable. Trimmer won first place in the low hurdles and established a new track record of 16 seconds in high hurdles. Diehl won first place in the shot put. Frable won ten points in pole vault and javelin throw.

Bucknell was weak in all races, winning only three points in six races, 100 yd. dash, 220 yd. dash, 440 yd. dash, 880 yd. dash, mile and two mile runs. These three points were the work of J. Davis, who took second place in the quarter mile.

Good In Field Events

Others who won points were: Hitchens, who tied for first place in the high jump; McClune, who won second place in shotput and discus throw and third in javelin throw. Stevens, who won second place in javelin throw, F. Davies, who scored in the low hurdles, with Pifer taking third, and Walter winning second in the broad jump.

Baptist C. E. Features Negro Spiritual Songs

Beneath the light of a transplanted southern moon, and gathered about a glowing fire, the Baptist C. E. held an old-time negro spiritual service on Sunday evening, April 18. The service featured negro songs by the group and by soloists, and a talk by Mrs. F. G. Davis.

Soon after everyone had assembled, th lights were dimmed, and, with a large moon shining from the balcony, "Lew" Davis, '27, led the singing of "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder." Other songs followed, among them "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny." Miss Carolyn Hunt then sang, "Deep River," an old negro melody, and the group sang again. The Glee Club trio, composed of Alex Horoschak, '27, banjo, Robert Smith, '26, obligato violin, and Robert Dilworth, '27, baritone soloist, gave "My Old Kentucky Home," and "Old Black Joe," the audience joining in on the last verse and chorus of the latter.

The singing of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," was followed by the talk of the evening by Mrs. F. G. Davis, who spoke on conditions in the South as she knew them. Mrs. Davis was ably prepared to talk on this subjete, as she was born and raised in Arkansas, and was in daily contact with "darkies." She told many very interesting anecdotes about obi "Aunt Eliza," who took ten to twelve yards of cloth for a dress, and about other negro characters.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction, and by "taps," sounded by E. E. Halleran, '27.

CROCUSES APPEAR ON LAWN OF DR. JUDD EVERY YEAR

Have you seen the crocuses? This is a favorite query about the campus these days. The exquisite blooms, yellow and lavender and white, which dot the lawn of Dr. Judd's home on University Avenue, have attracted a great deal of attention. They were planted years ago by Dr. Judd, and each year they spring up during the first warm days to give the world the glad assurance that spring has come at last.

Town's Chest Drive To Start On Monday

Seven Activities To Be Helped; Dr. John T. Judd, Chairman

The drive to fill the Lewisburg Community Chest, which begins April 26 and will continue through the week, is a matter of interest to all Bucknellians for the double reason that a number of Bucknellians are taking part in this work and also because the drive will benefit the college just as it will help the town.

Several activities of a welfare nature are to be cared for this year by the chest. Those that directly concern the University are the community ambulance, the community nurse, and the health service. The ambulance is ready to serve both town and gown at a moment's notice, as is the nurse also. In fact, several students have been removed to hospitals in past months by the ambulance.

The funds from the Community Chest do not pay for either nurse or ambulance service, as many users have thought was the case. These funds make it possible for the town to have a nurse and an ambulance by making up the defecits that result in a town of this size in trying to maintain these helpful agencies. Service is supposed to be paid for if the user is able to make payment. The Community chest makes up any defecit in the necessary running funds.

This will be the third annual drive for a town chest. Seven activities are to be helped this year. In addition to the ambulance and the nurse, Professor Rice is to receive laboratory help in his milk and water inspection and in making physicians' tests, in the shape of a cleaner to wash tubes and dishes and prepare the same for experiments. After their unfortunate experience a year or so ago, when the town water supply became temporarily slightly polluted, the students will be glad to hear of this proposed help for Professor Rice. Only through constant analyses can the water supply be protected.

The town tourists' camp is to be aided, the milk fund for poor school children will be helped, the Boy Scouts and the town band will both be assisted.

Mr. Park Steininger is the director of the drive. Dr. John T. Judd, treasurer of the University, is chairman of the committee behind the drive, and a number of other Bucknellians are connected with it in one capacity or another.

New Schedule Lists 1:30 Classes at 2:00

The schedule for the first semester, 1926-27, contains certain outstanding innovations.

Departments offer their work in arts only at certain fixed hours through the day. Full use is made of Saturday morning. Afternoon appointments begin at two o'clock (excepting only full four-hour appointments which begin at 1:30 p. m.) It is expected that with such slight modifications as experience proves desirable this schedule will become permanent.

This schedule has been built to make it possible for the student to distribute his work through the day and the week. The fifteen hours of the arts student, for example, may be arranged so that three three-hour courses occur on Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and two on Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday, or vice versa.

The Student can and should so plan his electives in advance for the remaining years of his college course as to effect the widest distribution through the day and the week of his work for each semester.

Much time will be saved and much confusion avoided while registering if the student will himself select subjects and class sections on his trial schedule so that the desired distribution obtains.

The Interesting Emu

Among the indigenous birds of Queensland the emu rivals the ostrich for voracity. In the stomach of a specimen recently killed were found four pennies, nine nails, five marbles, one umbrella ferrule, key, a medal, a clock wheel and crockery.

DEVEREUX PLAYER ACTS OUT SCENES FROM MANY PLAYS

Takes Fifteen Character Roles, Presenting Each With Aid Of Costumes and Lights

MAKES COSTUME CHANGE IN VERY FEW SECONDS

Interludes From Plays Of Greek, French, Russian, and English Writers Of All Times

Before an audience that filled Bucknell Hall to its capacity Monday evening, April 19, the distinguished English actor, Mr. V. L. Granville, of the Devereux Players, took the role of fifteen principal characters in a series of "Dramatic Interludes," from early drama down to the present time.

Mr. Granville's presentation, which was heightened by costly costumes and make-up, stage setting, and spot lights, created a high degree of enthusiasm from the very first number. It was a real treat that the Dramatic and Literary Board afforded Bucknellians.

Mr. Granville carries with him his own stage manager and pianist. Owing to the absence of the latter, Monday evening, Lewis B. Kesler of the Music School, very ably accompanied the actor throughout the entire presentation.

Many Writers Represented

The program included interludes from such play writers as Sophocles, Euripides, Shakespeare, Moliere, Sheridan, and Tolstoy. It was divided into two parts. The first part included characterizations from the early Greek drama down to Shakespeare. The second part of the program was from Moliere down to the present day, the last interlude being from George du Maurier's "Trilby."

Incidental music from the works of Rachmaninoff, Schubert, Tschaikowsky, Mendelssohn, Heller, Bohm, Massenet, Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, Gregg, etc., was selected and arranged by Madame Martin, of New York City.

In his introductory remarks Mr. Granville said that dramatic literature includes all drama from "Oedipus" down through the ages to "Abie's Irish Rose." He continued, saying that the chief purpose of the play is to give the audience a larger sense of life through their emotions. Of this, characterization is the most interesting, says Mr. Granville.

He quoted Sir Herbert Tree, saying "that he was certain that the theatre will adways exercise its imagination over the people." On the axiom that all things are interesting, Mr. Gran-

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI KAPPA PSI

Brother Edmund P. Coe, '23, instructor at Mercersburg Academy, was a recent visitor at the house.

Brother Fred Evans is able to return to classes after being confined to his bed with la Grippe for a week.

Several of the brothers are leaving this week-end for Philadelphia where they expect to attend the Penn Relay Carnival.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Brother Jack Davis, '23, "Heinie" Schulz, '24, and Mrs. Shulz, of Pottstown; "Bill" Challis, '25, of Wilkes-Barre, Mr. McCall, Mr. Sterling, and Mr. Peterson, of Pittsburgh, were guests over the week-end. Brother "Bill" Malaffey, '25, of Oakmont, also visited the brothers over the week-end.

Dinner guests on Sunday included Professor and Mrs. Ballentine, Mrs. Kalp, of Lewisburg, and the Misses Helen McCormick, Sara Cover, Naomi Samuel, Isabel Tollon, Mary Buck, Madeline and Margaret Jones, Gladys Eley and Florence Upgraff.

The "Sem" dance held Saturday in the chapter house, Noble's Orchestra playing, was chaperoned by Professor and Mrs. Sprague. Guests for the dance were "Slim" Bach, Stanley McCaskey, "Bean" Springer, "Al" Weidensaul, Fred Evans, "Bill" McKenna, and Calvin Chamberlain. Purple and white decorations were used. Excitement reigned at intermission when the wood basket in the fire place ignited from a cigaret. It was quickly extinguished by Gardner and Samuel.

Mrs. Myra Fisher was presented with a beautifully jeweled Phi Gamma Delta badge after the chapter's return from Easter vacation. It is in recognition of Mrs. Fisher's many years of service as chief of the kitchen.

Extensive plans are being made for the Founder's Day banquet to be held April 30. Brother "Tom" Wood, '05, of Muncy, will act as toastmaster.

"Ah" Bihl, "Hi" Hullck, and "Slim" Bach were guests at dinner Sunday evening.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Brother Statton Rice, of Gettysburg, was a visitor at the house on Monday, April 12.

The boys gave Mother Miller a hearty welcome upon her return from Pittsburgh on Wednesday, April 14.

"Shorty" Parmley, ex-'24, drove up from Mahanoy City to visit the brothers on April 14.

On Wednesday evening, April 14, the chapter broadcast a program from station WJHU. The feature of the program was the singing of fraternity songs by the S. A. E. quartet, consisting of Brothers Fox, Gardner, Mackenzie, and McCormick. Other numbers included selections by the banjo quartet, piano solos by Brothers J. Gardner and Hitchens, the singing of popular songs by Brother Mackenzie, and a trombone solo by Brother K. Gardner.

Miss Uranus Writer, of Chicago, was a guest at the house on Saturday, April 17.

Brothers "Jack" Matthews and "Bill" Hassler, of Gettysburg, attended the Bucknell Junior Prom and spent the rest of the week-end with the chapter.

Plans have been completed for the province convention to be held at the house on Friday and Saturday, April 23 and 24. A banquet is to be held on Friday evening and a dance on Saturday. Gardner's "Campus Serenoders" will furnish the music for the convention dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel R. Goodlander, of Lock Haven, parents of Pledge Brother Goodlander, '29, were dinner guests on Sunday, April 18.

KAPPA SIGMA

The active chapter and the pledges were entertained by the caterer at a chicken waffle supper at Steininger's Cafe on Thursday evening, April 15.

Brother "Bob" Hayes, of Pittsburgh, visited the chapter over the week-end.

"Dave" Arnold, '25, has returned to Oyster Bay, L. I., after spending his vacation in this vicinity.

"Bill" Gray, '26, of State College visited the chapter on Sunday, April 17, while en route to school.

Paul Bieber, of Bethlehem was a house guest of "Sol" Hartman on Wednesday, April 14.

The house baseball team is rounding into shape, two practice games having been played.

DELTA SIGMA

Professor and Mrs. C. M. Bond were guests at dinner Sunday.

Brother P. A. Weaver, '22, and Brother C. F. White, '25, visited the chapter during the week-end of April 17.

The annual Parents' Day will be held Sunday, May 2.

Brother Frank Johnston, '28, says he intends to resurface the tennis court as soon as possible; that is, of course, with the help of the freshmen.

Brother "Charlie" White was a visitor over the week-end of April 17.

Brother Paul Weaver of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was a visitor at the house, Friday, April 16.

Brother Levi Hartman of Williamsport visited the chapter last Tuesday, April 13.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

F. Houher of Coudersport and Burt Ellor of Bloomsfield, New Jersey, were guests at the house the week of April 8.

The town dance on April 9 proved to be a huge success. As usual, when playing at the house, the Blue Band seemed to outdo itself, keeping the many couples busy whirling about the floor. During intermission light refreshments were served. About this time "Cy" Morgan dropped in, joining in to make the evening a success. The dance ended at the stroke of twelve.

Brother Rolf Langdon, of Boston University, dropped in for a few minutes Saturday, April 17 and met the boys.

Brothers Potter, Jackson, Nesbit, and Shovony of State College were guests at lunch Saturday evening, April 17.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

The K. D. R. baseball team is rounding into good shape by practicing nightly on the K. D. R. grounds.

Brother Donald Beidleman intends to spend the summer months in Europe.

Brother Oscar Priemer spent the week-end in Watsontown with friends.

Brother Geo. B. Nesline, of Sunbury, visited the boys on Tuesday evening. He entertained at the piano after dinner with a number of classical selections.

The Kappa Delta Rho indoor baseball team met the strong Kappa Sigma team Saturday afternoon on Loomis field. A double header was played, Kappa Delta Rho winning both games. The final scores were: 17-3 and 12-7.

Brother "Boots" Bower, ex-'27, drove here from Scranton to attend the Junior Prom and remained for a visit with the boys. From all accounts "Boots" has become an accomplished automobile salesman since he left us.

Brother "Jerry" Bates, '15, of Galeton, Pa. visited at the house over the week-end.

Milligan, who played first base on the Dickinson nine, remained Wednesday evening to visit his cousin, C. Irving Carpenter, '27.

Kappa Delta Rho announces the Installation of Nu Chapter at Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

The annual Spring Dance of Zeta Alpha chapter of Theta Upsilon Omega was held in the chapter house on Saturday, April 17, the day following the Junior Prom. Every room was decorated to the nth degree, midnight blue and gold streams of crepe paper were entwined and looped over the chandeliers in each room, producing a May pole effect, and an artistic archway cleverly concealed a blue box from which an orange fitchee, the pledge button design, flashed. The punch bowl stand was lighted by two crystal globes of midnight blue and gold, the light being reflected throuch colored chemical solutions.

The music by the Blue Band was great. The chaperones were Assistant Professor and Mrs. John S. Gold, and Miss Helen Bartol.

Sunday visitors were: Assistant Professor and Mrs. W. H. Schuyler, Annareba Low, Thelma Showalter, Miriam Stage, Oella Kisor, Mary Fritz, Nancy Kennedy, Kathryn Houtz, Wanda Nicol, '25, Mary Dwyer, and Margaret Gordiner, of Coudersport.

Theodore Costides, ex-'27, and George Long, '24, attended the Junior Prom and the Spring Dance on Friday and Saturday.

KAPPA GAMMA

Albert Kirchner of Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, was a guest at the house on Wednesday.

Brother Harry Spranca and Harry Dyckens, of Susquehanna University, visited the house before attending the Junior Prom on Friday.

The active men secured a tie in the series of baseball games, being played for the championship of the house, by defeating the pledges in a hard fought game on Saturday. "Herman" Riffe saved the game for the actives by his sensational playing on second base.

PI DELTA EPSILON

Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity, at a regular meeting, on Thursday night at the Phi Gamma Delta house, elected Douglas Anderson, '27, delegate, and Willard Gardner, '27, alternate, to the Pi Delta Epsilon national convention which will be held in Berkeley, California, September 8, 9, and 10 with the University of California chapter as host.

"Doug" expects to be in Chicago on Friday, September 3, where the delegates will depart from the Union Station of that city over the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul Railroad. The Pi Delta Epsilon train will be routed over the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul railroad, the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy; the Denver and Rio Grand; and the Western Pacific.

Stop-overs have been arranged at Colorado Springs, Colorado; and Salt Lake City, Utah. At Colorado Springs, Pike's Peak, Manitou, and the Garden of the Gods will be visited. The official route is one of the most scenic to California.

Forty-two chapters are members of Pi Delta Epsilon. Among the Pennsylvania colleges and universities, who are members: Allegheny College, Bucknell University, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Lehigh University, Lafayette College, Pennsylvania State College, Swarthmore College, Washington and Jefferson College.

Margarida Reno, '27, Spends Vacation Attending Meetings

The prize for the most strenuous Easter vacation ought to go to Margarida Reno, '27, who spent her time at Harrisburg, Chester, Philadelphia, and Camden, N. J. At Harrisburg, where she was entertained by Thelma Wager, '28, she attended the meeting of the State Academy of Science, of which Professor Norman Stewart has just been elected president. During the week-end she visited Jean Mathews, '29, at Chester, and spoke twice at the Baptist church at Upland. On Monday she attended an executive committee meeting of the Student Volunteer Association with Mary Harrar, '26, of Camden. The meeting was held in the Temple Lutheran Church, 52nd and Race streets, Philadelphia.

Miss Reno is secretary of the Student Volunteer Union of eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and Miss Harrar is alumni secretary. The members of the committee were guests of honor at a banquet given by the church to its students who were home for vacation. Dr. A. Pohlman, pastor of the church, was host.

The remainder of the vacation Miss Reno spent at the home of Beryl Sumerfield, '28, in Philadelphia, where she was initiated into the intricacies of dining in a Chinese restaurant.

"Nothing New Under the Sun"

History and literature prove that, truly, there is "nothing new under the sun."

Critics would have us think that "make-up," for instance, is a modern vice. We would like to remind them that the ladies of ancient Greece painted their faces with eyebrow, cheek, and lip pomade, crimped their hair, and wore numerous trinkets.

Permanent waving is thought of as a new discovery, but in reality, it was employed at least as far back as Queen Elizabeth's reign, for her own hair was treated by a baking process that kept it crimped for several months at a time.

Incidently, good Queen Bess did not scorn smoking. When Sir Walter Raleigh brought tobacco to England, she was among the first to inhale it's fragrant smoke. She announced that it "produced an uncommon delightful sensation." Ye critics, what more can you say?

Commends Our Work Helping H.S. Debates

In the following editorial, the Williamsport Sun of Tuesday, April 13, commends Bucknell for sponsoring the newly-formed interscholastic debating league, which held its initial debates in a dozen high schools in this region on the evening of Friday, April 9.

Some of the school activities of the present day have come in for considerable criticism on the basis that they are interfering with the regular studies.

There is one activity, however, that cannot be placed in this class and that is the inter-school debates now under way in which the Williamsport High School is taking an active part.

The first of the series of these debates, which are under the auspices of Bucknell University, were held last week in the form of elimination contests in triangular meets, with twelve schools taking part.

Williamsport was among the winners in this elimination contest, and as a result of this victory, the Cherry and White debaters will enter the semi-finals Friday evening, along with Lewisburg, Mifflinburg and Mt. Carmel.

The winners of the contests this week will meet in the finals the following week and the highest scorer will receive a cup donated by Lee Francis Lybarger, prominent Mifflinburg man.

The far-reaching effects of these debates can hardly be estimated. They are providing pupils with excellent training and are encouraging a close application to the subject in mind, while, in the schools taking part, a school spirit is being built up that will prove an excellent adjunct to every institution.

The debaters alone are not the only ones that will profit through the contest, as followers of each team, and these should include the entire school which the team represents, will become enlightened on subjects of vital interest today.

Bucknell University, which is sponsoring the contest, is deserving of much credit for its work in helping to build up a class of contests that have been frequently neglected in the past.

If properly conducted, such contests may eventually take rank with athletic contests in schools and would result in more good to a greater number than is possible through athletic meets.

The latter need not be crowded out by the former, but such debating meets ought to create enough interest in the schools to place them on an equal basis with those other activities which are claiming in some instances too much of the pupils' time.

Hungry Ratville Hunts Food And Eats Strings of Ukelele

Our idea of hard life in ratville is when provisions are so scarce that strings from ukeleles have to be sought out and consumed. During Easter vacation, the rats went forth from their homes in the Women's College in search of sustenance, and finding no crumbs left from numerous feeds, ate the gut strings from any instrument they could find, and even tore the wig off a little doll to eat the glue with which it was stuck on the head. Yep, pickin's must have been pretty lean.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

Geneva Summer Study To Be Repeated, 1926

The courses on international problems held in Geneva last summer are to be repeated during the coming season. The courses are now known as The Geneva School of International Studies, but are the same as those given last summer under the direction of Professor Alfred Zimmern.

The purpose of the school is to offer college students traveling abroad an opportunity for studying international affairs at first-hand and to facilitate meetings with students of other countries. Last summer the courses began in the middle of July and extended through August and September. Some six hundred students, representing over forty countries and one hundred and fifty different universities, attended them. While the courses were so arranged that students could arrive and leave practically at their own convenience, it was intended that they should stay at least two weeks, and in fact a great many remained for four, six, or eight weeks.

Under Distinguished Leaders

Professor Alfred Zimmern, noted writer and educator, who has lectured a number of times in this country and spent the year 1922-23 as exchange professor at Cornell University, is director of the school and responsible for its success. The work is sponsored by an American executive committee of which Mr. Owen D. Young is chairman.

Geneva was chosen as the location of the school in order to take advantage of the extraordinary opportunities it affords for the study of foreign affairs. Leading statesmen and experts from all countries are frequently in Geneva, and they willingly give of their time to the students. Professor Zimmern also arranges for educaters from many countries to give courses, and the secretariat of the League of Nations cooperates readily in the work.

Courses will begin the 12th of July and continue through the meetings of the League of Nations Assembly in September. Students may come at any time during the summer. There is one innovation however. Students who can stay for two weeks or more may be admitted to a special discussion group for the intensive study of particular problems. Those who cannot stay so long and all others interested in the courses, including faculty members, will attend the regular lectures and discussions.

A typical day at the school includes a lecture in French and one in English in the morning, the same in the afternoon, and a group discussion in the evening. Ample time is allowed for recreation, which includes trips to nearby mountain and lake resorts, as well as swimming, biking and tennis. The special features of the school are the informal character of the work, the opportunities afforded for fellowship among students and personal contacts with distinguished men.

Preliminary announcements of the courses are now being distributed throughout the colleges and universities of the country. Among the services offered is that of securing accomodations for students while they are in Geneva.

Booklets describing the school in detail may be secured by writing to the Secretary of The Geneva School of International Studies, 60 Broadway, New York City.

Mental Traffic of Students Needs Redirecting Says He

An interesting contrast between the freshman's world today and that of his nineteenth century predecessor is drawn by Ernest H. Wilkins in a special symposium on Remaking the College published as a supplement to The New Republic of April 14.

We drove our mental wagon along a country road—the youngsters are speeding through city traffic. The freshman of today faces a college, and beyond that a world, infinitely more complex than the college and the world of the older generation. So much more is known and there is so much more that we need to know! The "branches of knowledge" intertwine in a most amazing way; education is entangled as never before with the other activities of life. There is no isolation, by distance, by time, or by speech.

How shall we fit the student to see life whole in this ever more pressing and more difficult world. A recent and promising device for the partial meeting of this need is the orientation course. I refer to a special type of full-time course which instead of dealing with one particular departmental field seeks to survey and to link together the fundamental facts of life in its evolution and in its present human organization.

Plan Collegiate Tour To Europe, Low Rate

Art Crafts Guild, collaborating with the Canadian Pacific Steamships, Ltd., has just announced that it will operate inexpensive collegiate tours to England, Holland, Belgium, and France next June and July. The standard tour comprises 36 days, and at a total cost of $365.00, will reduce travelling, sight-seeing, hotel residence, motoring and first class meals, to a daily total of little more than $10.00. All the student tours will begin at Montreal. Then follows a short period aboard a Canadian Pacific steamer down the scenic St. Lawrence to the open sea. Only four days will be spent on the high seas before Liverpool is sighted.

The high spots in each standard tour will include a motor trip through the Shakespeare country and the lake-dotted land of Wordsworth and Shelley. At Oxford th student tourists will tarry two days, visiting the historic colleges of Magdalen, Brasenose, Christ Church, Balliol, and their sister halls of ancient memory. A short stay at Stoke Poges, where Grey wrote his Churchyard Elegy, will immediately precede London, where four days will be devoted to seeing the haunts of Dickens, the houses of Parliament, and other scenes peculiar to the world's metropolis.

After a brief sojourn in Holland, and others in the Belgian cities of Brussels, Ostend and Bruges, the collegians will proceed through the battle-torn districts of northern France before arriving in Paris. Four days will be spent in the French capital. Guides familiar with every nook and cranny of the Latin quarter and other picturesque sections will be provided for those who want them. The students will leave Paris for Cherbourg to embark on a Canadian Pacific steamship with its bow pointed toward Montreal.

In addition to the 36 day tours there will be two others, one of 23 days, another lasting 30 days. These will be at reduced prices. The management emphasizes that extensions can be arranged for short trips to Switzerland, Italy, and Germany.

The first student tour will leave Montreal June 18. Sailing dates for the others are June 25, July 2, July 9, and July 16. Information will be furnished by either the Canadian Pacific Railway, Steamship Department, 342 Madisen Avenue, New York City, or the Arts Crafts Guild, Chicago.

Corrupt Voting For Queen Stirs Two Indiana Colleges

When a hired orchestra blares forth the music for the Grand March a Queen of the Junior Prom steps forward to lead the procession, by ancient custom in many colleges. Unlike Queens in undemocratic countries, this soverign leads by a mandate of the majority. At two Indiana institutions attempts have been made to defeat the will of the people by "corrupt practices" in voting.

At the University of Indiana the voters must pass a property qualification; they must hold a pawn ticket. When the recent election was held it was discovered that there were more vots cast then pawn tickets held. Dean Agnes E. Wells immediately declared the election void. Subsequently the junior class decided it was less troublesome to abide by the results of the former election than to undergo the "excitement of a recount."

In checking up the election at Butler college similar discrepancies cropped up. The poll books revealed the 128 juniors had somehow cast 133 votes. As yet there is no further information on the affair.

Stanford Football Captains Merely Honorary In Future

Abolition of active football captains was effected at Stanford University by the Executive Committee of the student body. Hereafter the position will be honorary and only awarded at the end of the season. An active field captain will be appointed for each contest by the coaches.

Initiative for this move came from the coaches. They favor the plan because it will give them more freedom in the selection of men to play in each particular game.

The innovation receives the support of the Daily Palo Alto.

The method of choosing captains in advance has not worked out to the satisfaction of all. After a player is selected he may go into a slump. As a result, the team benefits little by his leadership, and in some cases actually suffers, due to the justifiable hesitation on the part of a coach to "bench" the captain of his squad.

Sight Not at Best Before Age of Six

A child does not attain his keenest eyesight until he is six years old or more. Small objects are not so well seen, the parts of the brain devoted to vision being incompletely developed. This is the statement of Dr. Edward Jackson, Denver specialist, who writes for Hygeia, popular health magazine published by the American Medical association, in an article on "The Baby's Eyes."

Abundant reason exists for using large type in primers, says Doctor Jackson. Fine stitching, beadwork and similar exercises, such as are sometimes expected of young children in kindergarten, may be quite harmful. Even when the object looked at is not small the young child must not be expected to look at it long at a time, but should be encouraged to turn the eyes away frequently to rest them. To "keep the eyes on the book" at times when they are tired does not help the child to learn and may be harmful.

Because they can hold things close to their eyes and still see them, and because they need larger images of what they look at to make up for the incomplete development of the eye, young children are liable to acquire the habit of holding things too near their eyes. As they grow older this should be corrected by encouraging them to try to see things at longer distances. Many children starting in school have eyestrain, or even inflammation about the eyes, merely because they hold their books too close to their eyes.

Newfoundland Is the Oldest British Colony

Newfoundland is often called "The Ancient Colony," because it is the oldest colony in the British empire. It was discovered by John Cabot, who sailed out of Bristol, England, in 1497. Cabot took possession of the island in the name of King Henry VII. Three years later the Portuguese under Gaspar Corte-Real explored portions of the coast. In 1583, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Sir Humphrey Gilbert renewed the claim of British possession, but his attempt to colonize was not a success, nor were the attempts made later by Lord Baltimore. During all these years the island was visited by fishing expeditions from England, France and Portugal, and the ownership of the island was a matter of dispute. It was finally settled by the Treaty of Utrecht of 1713, which brought to a close Queen Anne's war. By this treaty France acknowledged Britain's ownership of Newfoundland and ceded to Britain the region known as Acadia, now forming the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Adam's Suit?

Little Roger, spending a holiday on his grandfather's farm, was permitted to beguile the hours of a wet day by turning over the leaves of the family Bible.

Suddenly he looked up from the faded pages and quaint pictures, and called out:

"See what I've found, grannie!"

In his hand he had a leaf, old and dry, and after a few moment's reflection, he added:

"Do you think it belonged to Adam and Eve, grannie?"

The Planet Mercury

Mercury is the smallest planet and the nearest to the sun, its mean distance being about 36,000,000 miles. It completes a revolution of its orbit in 88 days, and its diameter is about 3,000 miles. Its mass is about one-eighteenth that of the earth, and its density the same as that of the earth. Mercury is difficult to see with the naked eye owing to its proximity to the sun. Telescopically it is of little interest. Paint marks can be seen on its surface, but all are indefinite.

"Smiths" in England

In England there are 330,000 persons of the name of Smith, and 204,000 of them have "J" for their first initial. The John Smiths number 41,000; the John W. Smith's, 30,000, and the John William Smith's, 5,000. It has been necessary to devise a mark for them to distinguish the produces they make or own. A monomark with symbols will designate just which Smith is referred to. It was necessary to include five symbols in the monomark.

OUR SYMPATHY

The Bucknellian staff, keenly aware of the sorrow that has come to the editor-in-chief, Eugene D. Carstater, whose father passed away at his home in Mill Hall last Friday, wishes to take this opportunity to tender its sympathy.

On the Setting in of a Cold Spell

Following the Annual March Thaw
The winds of March are howling through the trees;
The ground beneath is frozen hard and cold,
For spring is held in check by winter bold,
And falls of snow accompany the freeze.
As when from out the hive the busy bees
Do come to dust their feet in pollen gold,
So came the fair co-eds with stockings rolled,
But soon had to return, Jack Frost to please.
But cheer up, though "the worst is yet to come,"
And colder spells than this be on the way,
Yet winter will at last give way to spring.
The bull-frogs soon will croak their "jug-a-rum,"
The sun will shine with hot and hotter ray,
And catalogs of seed be on the wing!
—R. L. Lyon, '29

The Storm Will Cease

Upon the darkening day the storm cloud lowers,
The winds are howling, lightning flashes out
To light the scene the storm has brought about,
While to the earth the rain of heaven pours.
The tumbling waters dash upon the shores,
And then receding madly swirl about.
The elements are joined in one great shout,
As nature in her madness leaps and roars.
My soul, in turmoil like the raging storm,
Confused and stirred by trials it has met,
Cries out in anguish as around it form
Despairs which seem to crush it down—and yet,
Thank God that at His will the storm will cease,
And in His love my soul will find its peace.
—C. W. Cranford, '29

paper. It remains, as it has been, a student publication, with the students controlling its editorial policy. Any student in the University is free to try for a place on the staff, the sole restriction being that students desiring to work on the Bucknellian shall equip themselves by taking the course in news writing, which is an elective open to all sophomores and upper classmen.

The new staff will work for a time under the guidance of the retiring editors and will doubtless prepare the final issue or two for this year "on their own," taking full charge next fall. It is also planned to move the issue date next year to Thursday instead of Wednesday, which will facilitate the work.

The University of avia, in Italy, which is known as the oldest university in Europe, recently celebrated its eleventh centenary.

BUCKNELL DEBATE PUT "ON THE AIR"

effectively to smash down the so-called Bucknell constitutional argument against the League of Nations.

The debate was presided over by the Rev. R. M. West, who read the debaters' names before the debate commenced, so that there would be no delay in having speakers appear on the rostrum before the microphone of WJBU, which broadcast the two-hour forensic contest.

The first speaker, A. Stephanian, of Richmond, opened the discussion with a clear-cut description of the League of Nations and the need for such an organization. "Unless civilization ends war, war will end civilization" was the keynote of his address. He followed with a Utopian idea of the functioning of the League.

The second affirmative contended that United States should join the League, because in actual practice the League has functioned to avert six wars, and has aided in the suppression of white slave trade, opium and slave traffic, and has helped many other humane organizations.

The negative arguments may be summed up as follows: (1) The United States would have to surrender three major powers, those of declaring war, raising armies, and the passing of certain laws, if we joined the League as it is now constituted. (2) Our delegate would be a representative of the president and not of the people. America is essentially a government of delegation of powers. (3) The League is based on certain international policies to which America can not subscribe. The principal objection is the compulsory arbitration of all disputes, legal and non-legal.

(4) The League enforces its decrees by the thing it wished to abolish—war. (5) The League must immediately determine who the aggressor in a dispute is, a question that might be unanswered for years. (6) America would surrender her sovereignity in joining the League.

The teams as they lined up: University of Richmond: A. Stephen Stepanian, G. Cary White, and Harry M. Herman. Bucknell University: R. Henry Coleman, Carl A. Hile, Lee Francis Lybarger Jr., and D. M. Bahr, alternate.

T. Burns Drum, debating manager and captain of the affirmative team, gave a resume of the season during the five-minute interval given for the preparation of rebuttals. He praised highly Professors Coleman and Howes, faculty advisors of debating, for their efforts in making this the best debating season that Bucknell has ever had. With the exception of Hile and Drum, who graduate, the debating squad is left intact for next year.

The judges were H. Chester Hicks, Esq., Williamsport; Professor Reagan I. Hoch, Lock Haven, the Reverend H. H. Rupp, Lewisburg, Pa.

CAMPUS CLUB CELEBRATES THE ARRIVAL OF SPRING

The Campus Club celebrated the arrival of spring with a delightful program on The Poetry of Spring, at its monthly meeting in the living room of the Women's College, on Tuesday evening, April 20.

There was a short business meeting, at which Mrs. Frank Davis presided, in the absence of Mrs. Emory W. Hunt, the president.

The musical program consisted of piano selections by Miss Katherine Bergstresser and Miss Lulu Coe, and vocal numbers by Miss Carolyn Hunt and Mrs. Wilfred Wilcox. The girls' glee club quartet, consisting of Grace Pheifer, Kathryn Bossler, Inez Robison, and Edna Watson, also sang. Mrs. Roy F. Howes gave a very interesting talk on The Poetry of Spring.

POLICE USE TEAR BOMBS TO STOP LAFAYETTE MEN

Easton police last night used tear gas bombs in attempting to break up a rush by several hundred Lafayette college students on one of the local theaters. College freshmen and sophomores banded together and pushed their way past the ticket takers and into the theatre. Police answered a call from the theatre management and locked the doors on the students. The majority managed to escape through the side exits but seventeen were arrested and taken to city hall where they were held under $800 bail each, for hearing today.

Several hundred patrons of the theatre and spectators wept for an hour after police had made use of the tear gas.

Fighting between the freshmen and sophomore classes early in the day ended when the officers of the two classes agreed to stop hostilities and join together in a rush on the theatre, a custom which Lafayette students have observed for years.

Miriam Burns, '28 Leader Of Lutheran Girls For 1926

Miss Mathilde Pepper, Lutheran girls' secretary, of New York, paid her sixth annual visit to Bucknell on Wednesday and Thursday, April 21 and 22. She had interviews with the Lutheran girls, and at a combined meeting of all the girls, questions of organization and conferences were discussed. Miriam Burns, '28, was elected leader of the group for next year, succeeding Florence Utt, '26.

Dickinson Loses Game To Bison Nine, 13-1

Massacre and slaughter marked the initial home game of the 1926 Bison baseball team, when it hammered two Dickinson hurlers to all corners of the pasture. Murphy, on the mound for the Orange and Blue, had the visitors eating from the palm of his hand throughout the entire game. Smith, left-fielder for the losers, was the only one to pass first base. After being hit by a pitched ball, he was advanced to third by two infield outs and then scored the lone tally when Sweet singled to right.

The Bucknell nine played errorless ball behind the big Irishman, and this, coupled with superb pitching, showed to advantage. The pleasing feature of the game to the Bucknell rooters was the heavy hitting of Coach Blair's outfit. Tuck, with a triple, double, and single; W. Blaisdell, with two doubles and the same amount of singles; and McCleary, with a double and two singles, were the heavy artillery men of the fracas.

Three Baseball Games Scheduled This Week

Three contests are booked for Bucknell baseball teams this week with both the varsity and freshman nines swinging into action.

The Orange and Blue varsity is scheduled to open the home season for the Williamsport club, two-time champions of the New York-Pennsylvania League, in the new baseball park at Williamsport, Pa., this Wednesday afternoon. "Lefty" Neal Blaisdell is slated to be on the mound against the Billtowners, although Blair may start either Martin or Murphy and save the portsider for the contest with Juniata College, this Friday afternoon on the Memorial stadium diamond.

The freshman nine will play their second fracas of the season on their "eastern" trip to Danville where they will cross bats with the Danville High School combination. "Tom" Murphy, who is looking after the career of the yearlings, has talked serious baseball to his youngsters and a more formidable nine may be counted upon to represent the Bucknell Frosh. "Eddie" Halicki will likely be called upon to start the game on the hill for the first-year men, with "Teel" Mitchell, stocky backstop, receiving the Hanover Township boy's slants.

Red Indian Chemistry

The Indians are said to have been the first chemists in America. They had wonderful methods of making flint arrow heads, spears and knives by using a piece of bone scoured or soaked in ashes and water. They tanned hides, made glue from fish scales, waterproofed canoe seams with pitch, tempered clay for pottery and dyed clothing.

Named From Ancient Tribe

The name Britain is from the Latin Britannia, derived from the name of a tribe which inhabited the southwestern part of the island, the Celtic tribe known as the Brittani.

Wyoming Sem. Team Defeats Yearlings

Bucknell's yearling baseball team opened its season by submitting to a 13-0 drubbing administered by the Wyoming Seminary team last Saturday afternoon on the Wyoming diamond at Kingston, Pa. For an early season encounter however, the frosh did not put up such weak opposition as the score might indicate.

With Eddie Halicki, former Hanover Township ace, in the box, the first year men played neat baseball, holding their opponents to two runs and a few safe blows. The frosh "blew up" in the eighth and ninth innings, however, Wyoming scoring five runs in the eighth stanza and tallying six times in the final round. Halicki fanned five "Sem" batsmen and issued three free tickets to first. Ayre, the opposing twirler, struck out eight and walked four.

The seven hits which the Orange and Blue amassed were all one-base blows. Halicki had two of these to his credit. Edwards, Wyoming short fielder, led his mates in hitting, with three safe swats, one a two-ply smash.

A stiff wind was blowing in the Wyoming stadium where the game was played and the weather was suitable for anything but baseball. The frosh feel that with more practice and under proper playing conditions, a later season encounter with Wyoming would find the result of the issue reversed. The summaries:

OUR TENNIS PLAYERS BEATEN BY SYRACUSE

The Bucknell tennis team lost its first match of the season to Syracuse University, Tuesday afternoon, the visiting netmen copping two of the single matches and both of the doubles.

Rudisill and McCaskey battled hard for victories over their opponents. The Rudisill-Wall game and the McCaskey-Weinheimer tilt were the hardest fought and the most interesting contests of the day. The superiority of Syracuse was evident in the doubles, however, the visiting collegians winning quite easily.

The complete scores are as follows: Rudisill (B) vs. Wall (S) 6-1;4-6;6-1 McCaskey (B) vs. Weinheimer (S) 6-0; 13-11
Horter (B) vs. Kyckoff (S) 3-6; 3-6
Ballentine (B) vs. Smith (S) 0-6; 3-6
Rudisill and McCaskey (B) vs. Wall and Weinheimer (S) 2-6; 3-6

Playful Pup Dotes On Tennis But Wants To Keep The Ball

There is a young and playful pup named Bill who is going to be "ain't" soon if he doesn't learn that tennis balls are not meant to be chased and run off with. Bill has been around the tennis courts of the Women's College almost constantly since they were fixed up, and whenever the girls start to play, he leaps into the air after the served ball, sinks his teeth into it, and runs around in circles, with th players after him.

When the wet ball is finally extracted, Bill looks up eagerly into the provoked face above him, and wags his tail, thinking he has done a noble service, and is all ready for the next serve. Attempts to drag him from the courts are futile, for he only braces all fours, or lies down. And he doesn't seem to mind spankings with tennis racquets.

Bucknell has prospects of taking place in the Mid-Atlantic meet to be held at Lehigh, and also a chance to meet Dickinson again at Carlisle, Pa.

The team is now working in preparation for the next meet, with Gettysburg, May 1.

FOOTBALL ENDANGERED BY GAMBLERS' POOLS

President Ernest Martin Hopkins, of Dartmouth College, has disclosed that gamblers who bribed Chicago White Sox players also attempted to conduct big betting operations in college football.

Speaking to a group of business men here, President Hopkins defended intercollegiate athletics, however, as an essential part of college life, declaring that "unless these are maintained as by-products of colleges for the purpose of promoting team work, men will not go out into life with the co-operativeness they should have."

President Hopkins does not object to betting of an individual nature "if an undergraduate feels that his team needs the support of this financial nature," but he objects strenuously to the gambling pool. In this connection he pointed out that at one time there was posted at Hanover a statement that another college with whom Dartmouth was to play, had $15,000 to back its team. The statement concluded with the query "has Dartmouth any money?"

"We investigated and found, as we supposed," he said, "that the money did not come from the college nor from the undergraduates nor from the place where the college is located. It came from a group of professional gamblers. Two of the men a few weeks previously had tamperd with the Chicago White Sox, in the world series."

Frosh Track and Field Men Meet Lock Haven Saturday

The Bucknell freshman track and field squad will compete in their first dual meet of the season with the Lock Haven High School team at Lock Haven, Pa., this Saturday afternoon. Coach Rhoades Ingerton has not made any announcement as to the men who will make the northern trip, but several men have revealed such prowess in practice that they are practically sure of the jaunt.

Bachman, former Reading High School runner, is expected to cop a number of points in the half mile and quarter mile events. Farrow is showing up well in the mile and two mile, while Loper and Sposato are doing well in the sprints. Other men who will probably be entered in the meet are: Hubbard, high and low hurdles, javelin, and discus; Miller, quarter mile, Riemer, mile; and Walls discus and javelin.

Last week we told a woman she was as ugly as sin. Evidently she knew what sin was because she took it as a compliment and fell in love with us.

P. A. throws pipe-peeves for a loss

AND the bigger they are, the harder they fall, as Shakespeare or somebody said. You can prove this beyond question with a jimmy-pipe and a tidy red tin of Prince Albert. Any time. Anywhere. As a matter of fact, tackling pipe-grouches is P. A.'s regular business.

Cool and sweet and fragrant, P. A.'s wonderful smoke comes curling up the pipe-stem, filling your system with a new brand of pipe-pleasure. You smoke—and smile! For the first time in your life, you've found the one tobacco that scales to your blueprint of bliss.

Slow or fast, no matter how you feed it, P. A. never bites your tongue or parches your throat. Those important items were taken care of in the original plans by the Prince Albert process. Get yourself a tidy red tin of this friendly tobacco today.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

* * * *

Gilbert Bennett, '27, spent Sunday, April 19, in Jamison City, where he preached twice.

* * * *

F. Houber, of Coudersport, was the guest of Guy Beasor, '28, during the week-end of April 2.

* * * *

Ruth Propert, '26, has secured a position as a teacher in the Milton High School for next year.

* * * *

Isabel Weiser, '28, is back at college after an extended absence caused by an operation for appendicitis.

* * * *

Robert Smith, '26 and Paul Humphreys, '28, journeyed to Williamsport Saturday afternoon to see "The Student Prince."

* * * *

Penrose Wallace, '26, spent the latter part of his spring vacation at the home of Harry Cox, '29, in Bloomfield, New Jersey.

* * * *

Samuel Convery, '25, and William Convery, '29, were called home on Wednesday, April 14, because of the death of an aunt.

* * * *

"Red" Dorsett, '29, and Philip Martin, '27, are going to canvass the back door route during the summer and sell aluminum.

* * * *

J. Paul Shaffer, '26, secured a teacher's position for the coming school year in the Arnold High School at Arnold, Penna.

* * * *

"Buddy" Roberts, '27, and "Fuzzy" Furry, '28, spent the Easter vacation at the home of "Shorty" Miller, '26, at Bradford, Pa.

* * * *

Professor H. W. Robbins has returned from Vermont after being absent nearly a week on account of the death of his father.

* * * *

Raymond Edwards, '26, made a special trip on Saturday, April 10, to Harrisburg to see "The Student Prince of Heidelberg."

* * * *

Milforde Riffe, '28, is slowly recuperating from a strenuous week spent at his home in Elmira. "Early to bed and early to rise" is "Miff's" motto now.

* * * *

The "fussing" line has increased and gleee club "widows" are happy again since the return of the Bucknell songsters on Sunday evening, April 11.

* * * *

For the past week great activity has been in evidence in the two living rooms at Women's College, the cause of the disturbance being falling plaster and a sinking roof.

* * * *

Ever since the tennis courts have been placed in condition to play on, we have seen many wind burned faces, and applications of Sloans Linament for stiff muscles have been numerous.

* * * *

Did anyone notice the Aurora Borealis on the night of April 14? The "northern lights" were rather dim, but faint lines of pink light could be seen streaking the northern horizon at intervals.

* * * *

"Joe" Richiuitti, '27, is busy filling out his application for entrance to Jefferson Medical College. But, in doing so, he got "stuck," not being able to figure whether he was born in 1906 or 1907.

* * * *

"Doug" Mackenzie, '26, spent Easter vacation in New York. After taking in several shows and looking over the town in general, "Doug" returned to Lewisburg, pronouneing his trip a great success.

* * * *

Graduate Manager B. W. Griffith and Track Coach Rhodes Ingerton were invited to be guests of the Pittsburgh Alumni Association of Bucknell University at a banquet Friday evening, April 16.

* * * *

Carl Hile, '26, and Ray Edwards, '25, made business visits to Harrisburg on April 15. Ray has a good prospect for summer employment, and Carl is sounding out several propositions for permanent work.

* * * *

The coming of rain on March 31 proved troublesome to the majority who intended to bum their way home. However, George Timm, and "Rup" Hughes, both '28, succeeded in reaching Harrisburg before a heavy downpour chased them to the railway station.

Plans for the biggest Women's College event of the year, the lawn party, are well under way.

* * * *

"Andy" Hendrickson, '25, is now teaching English at Pennington Seminary, in Pennington, N. J.

* * * *

"Bud" Weymouth, '29, visited at the home of Mrs. George Weymouth, of Lock Haven, on April 10 and 11.

* * * *

Fred Heather, ex-'28, is now in Iowa, and writes back that he expects to be on the attendance roll next fall.

* * * *

Rodney K. Barlow, '28, was detained at his home in Reading, Pa., last Friday by the death of his grandmother.

* * * *

"Bottles" Martz, '26, is looking for trouble again. "Bottles" has his Ford out of hock and is in training for the coming season.

* * * *

Miriam Burns, '28, proved herself to be an able fisherwoman when she caught five trout on a fishing trip, Thursday, April 15.

* * * *

"Al" Conklin, '26, finally returned from his vacation on Sunday, April 11. "Al" always has a hard time breaking away.

* * * *

Agnes Dunbar, '27, spent the week-end of April 17-18 visiting Mrs. Walter Hall, at Shamokin. Mrs. Hall was formerly Kathryn Steckman, '25.

* * * *

Lucille Scullen, '26, spent the week-end of April 17-18 at Williamsport, where she visited Florence Laubscher, '25, who is teaching in the high school there.

* * * *

Rolland Dutton, '26, has turned night-hawk and is working practically every night until midnight on the sets to be used by Cap and Dagger in "The Dover Road."

* * * *

"Kate" Winner, '28, still continues to spend the week-ends in Lock Haven. It is a rare occasion indeed that one finds "Kate" around college over a week-end.

* * * *

"Si" Morgan, '21, was a visitor at the Lambda Chi house over the week-end of April 10. "Si" is working on a campaign fund, and made his visit a business trip.

* * * *

"Peg" Riley, '28, and "G. G." Guilford, '27, were the missing "Doubleheaters" during Easter vacation because of illness. Both returned to Bucknell on Sunday, April 11.

* * * *

Since the tennis courts at the Women's College have been fixed up, the campus dogs have been having a good time catching the tennis balls and running away with them.

* * * *

Eight days of vacation were not enough for Fred Farnsworth, '27, for he had to go home during the April 10 week-end to Bloomsburg, Pa. No excuses have been offered.

* * * *

The Y. M. C. A. Cabinet on March 29 appointed V. W. McHail, '28, editor-in-chief, and J. H. Gamble, '27, as business manager of the Y. M. C. A. student handbook for 1926-27.

* * * *

Those be-draggled and sleepy-looking students in classes on Monday, April 12, were Glee Club members who arrived in Lewisburg on Sunday night, after a strenuous Easter trip.

* * * *

Miss Charlotte G. Armstrong, instructor at the School of Music, is recovering from an operation performed during the Easter vacation for the removal of her tonsils.

* * * *

Ralph E. Mucher, '25, visited his T. U. O. brothers for several days during the week of April 11. Ralph is the representative for the Providence Mutual Life Insurance Company.

* * * *

Skippers beware! A new system is being tried—that of bells on the fire-escapes to apprehend "Semites" who decide that 10 o'clock is too early an hour to be locked up in the "Sem," on a warm spring evening.

* * * *

Kenneth Horsman, '27, has been busily engaged the past week in patching his canoe. One trip on the river convinced him that if he didn't want to swim ashore, he would have to repair the bottom of the boat.

* * * *

Dean and Mrs. R. H. Rivenburg recently entertained a few friends at dinner at their residence on Sixth street in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Plant, of Hightstown, N. J. Mr. Plant visited for a few days in Lewisburg, and became acquainted with his position as Physical Director. He will begin his duties at the opening of the University in September.

* * * *

Professor R. W. Griffith left Thursday, April 15, for a short business trip to Pittsburgh.

* * * *

"Martie" Morrow, '26, spent the week-end of April 16 visiting relatives in Harrisburg and Philadelphia.

* * * *

Mary Gettys, '26, spent part of the Easter vacation visiting George Long, '24, and his family, at Ardmore, Pa.

* * * *

The Girls' Glee Club has been giving a series of concerts in the neighboring towns, and is now working on one to be given in Lewisburg, April 22.

* * * *

It was announced in a recent Women's Student Government meeting that Women's College girls may attend the fraternity week-end parties until 11:30 on Friday evenings and 12:00 on Saturday evenings.

* * * *

The bird trips taken by Dr. Stewart's classes are proving very instructive as well as interesting and entertaining. The last trip to "the swamp" showed the students many birds they hadn't seen yet this year.

* * * *

Bert Ellor of Bloomfield, New Jersey, was the guest of F. J. McCormick, '26, at the Lambda Chi house. Mr. Ellor is going to enter the University next fall as one of "Uncle" Charley's pupils.

* * * *

"Joe" Kernan, '26, and "Tony" Cieri, '29, have formed a partnership in the purchase of a Ford touring car. Although the car is a 1916 model and an excellent example of a "Leaping Lena," the boys expect to travel a great many miles in it.

* * * *

Three "Semites," Lelia Bower, '26, Margarida Reno, '26, and Jean Matthews, '29, got up with the birds the other morning to partake of the fresh air that a hike to the marsh near Montandon offered them. Clearly, not all "Semites" sleep through all the time.

* * * *

A new system of seating in the dining rooms at the Women's College is being tried out at the suggestion of Dean Clark. Heads of tables have been appointed, and these were asked to invite a number of friends sufficient to fill their tables.

* * * *

Dean Amelia E. Clark was called to her home in Troy, N. Y., quite suddenly, due to the death of her father on Friday, April 9. Mr. Clark was quite well during Easter vacation so that his death came as a shock. Mrs. Beatty is taking Miss Clark's place during the absence of the dean.

* * * *

One of the small, but essentially important, factors, at the Womn's College has been missing since Easter vacation. "Shorty" Parmley, '27, who has been under observation at the Ashland hospital, is now at her home in Mahanoy City, but it is uncertain when she will be able to return to Bucknell.

* * * *

With the completion of the tennis court repairs for the "Seminary," the young ladies have been manifesting an unusual interest in the game, more than for past seasons. The lure of the sport has so seized the "Semite" racquet wielders that the courts are being signed up for almost a week in advance.

* * * *

Dr. A. B. Vastine, of the Geisinger Memorial Hospital staff of Danville, delivered a very interesting address on teeth and various diseases resulting from tooth decay before the Premed Society on Thursday, April 15. Dr. Vastine does all dental work at the hospital. He is an uncle of Robert and Richard Vastine.

* * * *

Mid-semester marks were given out at the Dean's office on Thursday, April 16, from 9:40-11 A. M. and 3:30 to 16, from 9:46-11 A. M. and 3:30 to 4:30 P. M., on Saturday, April 17 from 10-12 A. M. The waiting lines extended several hundred feet down the halls of Old Main—so anxious were the students to secure their grades.

* * * *

John H. Carstater, of Mill Hall, father of E. D. Carstater, '26, died on Friday afternoon, April 16. He was aged 53 years. Mr. Carstater had been a life long resident of Mill Hall. He is survived by his widow, two sons, and two daughters.

President Hunt conducted the funeral services which were held at the home Monday afternoon. Interment was made at the Cedar Hill cemetary.

* * * *

After making its first public appearance this spring at the Juniata-Bucknell baseball game on Friday, April 23, the Bucknell Band will play for all the home games remaining on this year's schedule. The regular Thursday night practice will soon be supplemented by another practice night each week in order to enable the band to carry out plans for several outdoor concerts in the near future.

* * * *

George P. Little, '20, visited his brothers at the "Sig" house over the week-end of April 10. He is in the insurance business, with headquarters in Montrose, Penna.

* * * *

Miss Eliza Martin, librarian of Bucknell University, favored the Lewisburg Lodge No. 96, I. O. O. F., with two well chosen readings on Monday evening, April 12.

* * * *

Harker Hand, '26, Morgan Davies, '26, and Harold Brown, '26, were at Williamsport Saturday afternoon to see "The Student Prince" while Harold McCleary, '27, and "Art" Harris, '29, were in attendance in the evening. They all enjoyed the show.

"GATHER YE ROSEBUDS—"

The young schoolmistress asked if any boy could bring her a bunch of flowers next morning, and met with a ready response from Jacob.

"Thank you, Jacob," she said "Have you a nice garden?"

"No, please, miss, but I goes round with the morning milk," was the frank reply.

Scratch for a Living

A novelist, who was in need of money to pay his rent, called on a friend one morning to borrow the amount. As he left he said:

"Jenkins, old man, the difference between a novelist and a hen is that they both scratch for a living, and the hen gets hers."

NO SHOW AT ALL

"Don't you think if I went to a medium I might obtain help from the spirits?"

"Don't think you'd have a ghost of a show."

This world is not in need of brains—It could afford to lose some.
If those who have them took some pains
Now and again to use some.

Method

"What makes you keep on asking me if the razor hurts," asked the man who was being shaved. "I've said 'yes' three times and it hasn't made any difference."

"No," answered the barber, "I was merely trying my razors out to see which of them wants honing."—Washington Star.

Had Enough of Those

The landlord had at last agreed to repaper several of the rooms. "What kind of paper would you like?" he inquired; "something with large figures?"

"Decidedly not!" answered the tenant. "They would be a constant reminder of the rent I have to pay."

Man and Woman Equal

Mrs. Benham—Man and woman are equal.

Benham—Then how is it that, when it takes nine tailors to make a man, it takes more dressmakers to make a woman?

The Castle at Tripoli

The old castle at Tripoli, erected hundreds of years ago, was taken from the knights of Malta and Turkish viceroys by the troops of the Turkish sultan. Arab boys lived there in great splendor for many years, until 1911 the Turkish flag was pulled down and the colors of Italy were hoisted and government officials were established in office in the once great citadel.

How Old Egyptians Lived

In the tomb of Antefoker, vizier of Sesostris I, one of the great pharaohs of ancient Egypt, found at Thebes in 1916-17, there are two drawings showing how the Egyptians between the years 1980 and 1935 B. C. cooked and how they warmed their rooms. One picture shows butchers slaughtering a bull, carving it into parts like those displayed in a modern butcher's shop, and the manner in which the meat was cooked. The meat was held in a frame by spikes and hung in front of a charcoal grate, to which a bellows was attached. This cooking appliance resembled a modern roaster used for the cooking of game and poultry.

How Rain Is Formed

Water vapor—i. e., water in an invisible gaseous form—is the only atmospheric gas that plays a distinctive part in the production of weather, says Nature Magazine. Besides being the source of clouds, rain, snow, dew, etc., it influences the temperature of the atmosphere in several important ways. The amount of it found in the air varies greatly from place to place and from time to time, ranging from a small trace to more than 4 per cent of the volume of air.

Alumni Notes

A. M. Weaver Succeeds Robbins, School Head

A. M. Weaver, '05, has just been unanimously elected superintendent of the public schools of Williamsport. He succeeds Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, '98, who has held that office since 1914, and who decided last February that he would retire from teaching and accordingly refused to consider another election.

Mr. Weaver's election required only a few minutes of the school directors' time, for ever since Dr. Robbins signified his intention of retiring, Mr. Weaver was the only candidate considered by the directors. He was peculiarly fitted for the place from the fact of his intimate knowledge of the educational situation in Williamsport where he has been principal of the high school for a number of years. For some time previous to his election to the principalship, Mr. Weaver was a teacher in the high school.

He left that institution for a period to become a principal of a high school elsewhere, but was called back to Williamsport to take charge of the high school upon the death of Principal Percy M. Bullard. Most of Mr. Weaver's teaching life, therefore, has been passed in Williamsport, and has given him an unusually intimate knowledge of his field.

His predecessor, Mr. Bullard, was graduated from Bucknell in 1901. A prominent candidate for Mr. Weaver's place as high school principal is James E. Nancarrow, '16. Should he be elected he will be the third Bucknell man in succession to head this high school, which, at the present time, has been continuously directed by Bucknell men for almost a quarter of a century.

Forrest Glenn Rogers, '17

Forrest Glenn Rogers, '17, was elected superintendent of schools for Centre County, at a meeting of the county school directors held at Bellefonte on Tuesday, April 13. There were several competitors for the place, but Rogers was elected by a vote of 113, while his nearest competitor secured only 37 votes. There were 175 directors and 157 of them were present at the meeting. The election is for a four-year term.

Mr. Rogers comes from Nittany, where he was a teacher at the time of his election. His early schooling was received in the Walker Township schools in Centre County. He spent two years at the Muncy Normal, and then entered Bucknell, where he was graduated in 1917 with the degree of bachelor of science. He did graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania for one year, and taught in the schools of Philadelphia for two years. For five years he taught in schools of Lycoming County, being for one year in charge of the department of mathematics at the Lock Haven High.

Four years ago he went back to his home town, Nittany, to become superintendent of the township schools and principal of the Nittany High School. Now he has stepped up again. He takes his new office May first.

Mrr Rogers was married in years ago and has three children. He belongs to the Lutheran Church, and classifies himself as a Republican in politics.

Sylvester B. Dunlap, '03

Sylvester B. Dunlap, superintendent of schools for Lycoming county, was unanimously re-elected for a second term in this office, at a meeting of the Lycoming County School Directors' Association, held at Williamsport on Tuesday, April 13. His salary was raised one thousand dollars.

Superintendent Dunlap is a Montoursville boy. He was graduated from the high school of that town, and later from the Muncy Normal, which school is now a part of the Mansfield Normal. He got his diploma at Bucknell in 1903.

His first school was a rural school in Lycoming County. Later he became assistant principal of the Muncy High School, and in 1910 he succeeded to the principalship. From that time until 1922 he served as head of the Muncy High School, was principal of the Muncy Normal, and had general charge of all Muncy educational matters.

He became county superintendent of schools in 1922, for a four-year term. As superintendent of the schools of the county, he has had a wider field of activity, and has been called upon for service in state educational committees. His reputation as an educator has grown as his field has widened.

Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96.

Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson, '96, continues to be in demand as a public speaker. He was one of three speakers who talked to the American Legion Auxiliary of the Garrrett Cochran Legion Post No. 1 of Williamsport at the Lycoming Hotel on the night of April 12. Judge Johnson talked about idealism in American life.

On Thursday, April 15, Judge Johnson is to address the Williamsport Y. W. C. A. at a dinner-meeting. He was scheduled to talk on "International Relations."

William E. C. Speare, '20

No longer the genial countenance of Mr. William Speare beaming good nature through the bronze grill at the Trust Company. He has taken the oxygen route and will follow the pure air line in the future. He felt the need of mixing with the outdoor world although not ill or physically incapacitated. The hunch won and he is now on the road delivering to doctors and drug stores ready-filled prescriptions, excepting of course the one kind that requires the doctor's O. K.

Everybody's sorry to see William slip away from behind the bars of the big financial institution for he was going one hundred per cent with the public. But he wanted to get out and out he got, and countless friends don't care whether in or out just so he gets what he wants and is happy.

Best wishes, William, for every sort of good break.

Mrs. Joy Carulla-Brown, '23

Cards have been received in Lewisburg announcing the marriage of Mrs. Joy Pross Carulla, daughter of Mrs. E. S. Heiser, of Lewisburg, to Mr. Posiah Allen Brown, of Philadelphia. The wedding ceremony took place in their newly furnished home at Stoneburst, near Philadelphia, on Tuesday, April 6, at 12:00 o'clock noon, in the presence of a number of the immediate friends and relatives.

The romance which culminated in the marriage last Tuesday had its inception several years ago when Mrs. Carulla was a resident of Philadelphia. The bride is one of Lewisburg's well known young ladies, and is a graduate of the local High School and of Bucknell University in the class of 1923. The groom is employed as a draughtsman in the Campbell Canning factory at Philadelphia.

The well wishes of a host friends go with them at this time.

—Lewisburg Journal.

George E. Deppen, '94

Attorney George E. Deppen, of Sunbury, has been re-appointed Referee in Bankruptcy for the fifth consecutive term, by Federal Judge A. W. Johnson, it was announced Monday.

Attorney Deppen's term expired on March 29, 1926, and the appointment was made effective as of that date. He was originally appointed by the late Federal Judge C. B. Witmer.

He will act as Referee in Bankruptcy in the counties of Union, Snyder and Northumberland, concurrently with L. F. Lybarger, of Union county, who was recently made a Referee in Bankruptcy by a similar appointment by Judge Johnson.

Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, '98

Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, superintendent of schools for Williamsport, spoke on "Objectives in Teaching Boys" at the weekly meeting of the Boy Scout Leaders' Training Course at the Williamsport Y. M. C. A. on Monday, April 12.

He pointed out that all learning is valueless unless given some method of expression. The Boy Scout Movement, he said, by giving boys something useful to do, fills a great need that was not felt years ago when boys had to make their own playthings and useful articles.

Oliver J. Decker, Esq., '99

Oliver J. Decker, Esq., '99, of Williamsport, will make the Commencement address at Susquehanna University this coming June, according to an announcement in a recent issue off the Williamsport Sun. A large class will be graduated, and the university is planning for a memorable commencement. Mr. Decker is a very able speaker, and should add much to the strength of the program.

Kermit L. Noll, '25

Kermit L. Noll, '25, who taught French and supervised the music at the Millheim High School during the present school year, has been elected head of the department of French at the Jersey Shore High School for the 1926-27 school year. Mr. Noll was well known to everyone on the Bucknell campus through his activities as business manager of The Bucknellian and as a member of the glee club and other campus organizations.

"So you are in a new business."

"Yes, I'm making a face powder that can't be kissed off."

"You don't say? Do you need any help in the testing room."

Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, '98

Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, '98, Williamsport superintendent of schools, addressed the monthly meeting of the Lycoming chapter of the D. A. R. on Friday afternoon, April 16.

Speaking on the subject, "How the D. A. R. Can Best Keep Alive the Spirit of American Independence in the Schools," Dr. Robbins suggested a number of significant avenues by means of which the scope of work done by the D. A. R. can be increased.

Harry E. Gress, '09

Harry E. Gress, '09, was re-elected superintendent of the public schools of Lancaster, Pa., on Tuesday, April 13, for a period of four years. He was also given a salary increase of $1500 a year. Gress has been at Lancaster only two years. He went there from Monessen, Pa., where he was connected with the public schools.

DEAN CLARK'S FATHER DIES SUDDENLY AT TROY

Word has been received here of the death at Troy, N. Y., of Warren G. Clark, father of Miss Amelia Clark, dean of women at Bucknell University, and at one time assistant professor of French at Elmira College. Death came after a heart attack while he was a passenger on a trolley car. The deceased was a prominent member of the Fifth Ave. Baptist Church, thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the B. P. O. Elks. He is survived by his widow and the above mentioned daughter. Mr. Clark was a native of Troy and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis G. Clark. He served a number of years as accountant in the City Comptroller's office and some years ago became a public accountant and established himself in an office in the Troy TIMES building.

O. E. Bickel Re-elected County Superintendent

At a meeting of the school directors of Union county held in the court house at Lewisburg on Monday of last week, Mr. Emory O. Bickel, of Mifflinburg, was re-elected unanimously to the office of county superintendent of schools.

Mr. Bickel is a native Union Countian, having been born in West Milton. He received his early education in the West Milton public schools and the Milton High School. In 1905 he graduated from Bucknell University with the degrees A. B. and A. M. He later received the degree Doctor of Philosophy from Central University in Indiana, and in 1921 the degree Doctor of Pedagogy from Susquehanna University. He is the author of several well known textbooks on mathematics.

After serving as principal of the high school in Danville, Bethlehem, and other places, Mr. Bickel was elected principal of the Mifflinburg High School in 1914, which position he held until his election as county superintendent in 1922. Supt. Bickel is a prominent worker in the Reformed Church, and is now serving his second term as president of the Mifflinburg Lions Club.

Miss Ellen Focht Wedded To Ralph Wallace Richards

Miss Ellen Wolf Focht and Mr. Ralph Wallace Richards, were united in marriage at high noon, April 17, at the home of the bride's parents on South Second street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frank B. Everitt, of the Presbyterian Church, assisted by the Rev. R. B. McGiffin of the Lutheran Church.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. James S. Richards, of York, Pa.

The bride was attended by Miss Audrey James, of Washington, D. C. The wedding march was played by Miss Josephine Lawshe. The bride was given away by her father.

The bride wore white satin and Venetian lace, and carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Miss James wore a peach taffeta gown, and carried a bouquet of old fashioned flowers.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin K. Focht of this place. She attended Bucknell Seminary and Wilson College at Chambersburg, and later graduated from Bucknell University. During the World War she was attached to the Air Service Department at Washington.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Richards, of Altoona. He is a graduate of Bucknell University, having previously attended Colgate College, where he was a football star. During the World War he served in France with the 79th Division. He is now engaged in the steel business in Pittsburgh where the newly married couple will hereafter reside.

Chinese Civilization

When the people in Europe were going about dressed in skins, and using pieces of stone tied to sticks for tools and weapons, the Chinese were a skilful and highly cultured nation with a literature already well defined.

Reading Alumni Meet At Big Easter Dinner

During the Easter recess twenty-four Bucknellians and their friends gathered at the annual spring banquet of Berks County alumni, held at the Thomas Jefferson Tea Room in Reading. Several new faces made their appearance for the occasion, which featured a good old Dutchtown chicken and waffle dinner.

Prof. J. P. Whyte, professor of oral English at Bucknell, did the honors as speaker-in-chief. John H. Eisenhaur principal of the Boys' High School of Reading, and president of the club, was toastmaster. The belated arrival of an alumnus who had promised to be present caused some anxiety; when he did appear, things began to take on a new interest, for he proved to be the hit of the evening. The only reason he is not with Keith is the fact that he has reached his declining years; those present started in to laugh as soon as the aged "cut-up" showed the slightest sign of a further outburst of "wise cracks."

Dayton L. Ranck, '16, spoke briefly about the relations of Bucknell alumni associations with the general alumni organization, and said among other things that the Reading-Bucknell Club would be enlisted before long in a reorganization scheme of the general Alumni Association. Frederick J. Schmidt, a student at Dickinson College, commented on athletic relations between his college and Bucknell, and told of the new era in athletics which his college will enter next year. Dr. Joseph R. Wood, who has only recently accepted the pastorate of the First Baptist Church of Reading, after having been actively enagegd in administrative duties at Bucknell for the past several years, congratulated the club on its enterprising activity and growth, signified his eagerness to affiliate himself with the organization while he is in Reading.

Those present at the banquet were: Professor James Primrose Whyte, of the Bucknell faculty, speaker of the occasion; Dr. Joseph R. Wood, recently assistant to the president of the University and now pastor of the First Baptist Church of Reading, and wife, both '94; the Reverend Geo. W. Necker, ex-'77; Mrs. Hannah Yerkes, Inst. '72 and friend; Dr. David S. Grim, '97; John H. Eisenhauer, '05, principal of the Boys' High School of Reading, and Mrs. Eisenhauer; John W. Speicher and wife (Mary Stanton, '07); Anna E. Bertolet, '16; Dayton L. Ranck, '16, comptroller of the University; Mabel H. Fritz, '18; Dr. Denzil King, '21, and friend; Alan R. Haus, '21; Angelina Kissinger, '22; Laura Smith, '22; Thomas Leinbach, ex-'22; Emma A. Matz, Mus. '23; Paul G. Schmidt, '25; Morgan S. Davies, '26; Frederick J. Schmidt, Dickinson, '27; Mary A. Fritz, '28; Richard G. Wood, '28; David E. Gring Jr., '28; and George A. Bachman, '29.

"LASSIE," AIRDALE PUPPY, COUSIN TO COOLIDGE'S DOG

It is doubtful if many of us know that we have a distinguished "personage" on the campus, one who is closely related to a White House member —by pedigree. We welcome "Lassie," an airdale puppy given to "Billy" Dakin," and cousin of the Coolidge airedale. "Lassie" is not at all proud because of her "ancestry" and popularity with the Tri Deltas. She makes her home at Professor H. T. Colestock's just as a common pup would —sleeping, eating, and playing, and expressing her feelings by yelping which has not yet the quality of real, he-dog barking.

Park Your Car Carefully; Save Your Top From Fire

While smoking in one's room in the "dorms" it is found much easier to flick one's cigarette butt out of the open window than to hunt an ash-tray. But sometimes the thrower neglects to seek the proper landing place for his "pill." "And thereby hangs a tale."

One of these careless smokers tossed his "butt" out of an open window in West College recently, not seeing the roof of a sedan automobile which was parked below. The lighted cigarette landed on the top of the car and leisurely proceeded to burn its way through. Luckily, the stub was short and burned only halfway through the roof. But that hole was enough to cause a leak in the top of the car and a good "bawling out" for the driver of the car. Moral: Park your cars a cigarette's throw from the dormitory windows.

Economic Move

The husband was having one of his periodic streaks of economy. "We must cut down on our expenses," said he to his wife. "There's no argument about it. We simply must." The wife smiled. "Quite right, dear," she agreed. "As you say, there's no argument about it. "I suggest that you do not try to get such long distances on the radio."

DEVEREUX PLAYER ACTS OUT SCENES

ville stated that some things interest the intellect, some the emotions. To read a play to oneself satisfactorily is difficult, said the speaker.

Make-up Changes Remarkable

The remarkable part of the whole presentation was the extremely short time it took the actor to change his costume and make-up, each make-up being entirely different. These costumes ranged from the finest clothes that kings wore down to those of beggars.

The program opened with an interlude from "King of Thebes" by Sophocles. Mr. Granville took the part of the blind king Oedipus just before his death. This famous Greek tragedy has lived through the ages. This was followed by a part from "The Trojan Women" by Euripides. The character portrayed was Menelaus, King of Sparta.

Following these more serious plays, the actor represented Eurgasilus, a parasite, from "The Captives"by Plautus. The popularity of this play evidently has not lost its favor as a comedy, for the poor, beggarly parasite brought much laughter from the audience.

"The Tragical History of Dr. Faustus," by Marlowe, came next. The actor took the role of Faustus, who had sold his soul for gold, and now was repenting for his great loss. This play is typical of the Renaissance period.

Granville A Good Falstaff

Shakespeare's well known character, Falstaff, as he appeared in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," was very well taken. There he was, the big, fat comedian of Shakespeare's plays, always repenting for his reckless life. He was now engaged in the "serious matter of love-making."

The last selection of the first part was that of the Duke of Gloucester, afterwards "Richard III." This smiling, cynical, and cruel duke plans to steal the crown from his father. In his great desire for this he is willing to murder anybody who attempts to hinder him or stand in his way.

The second part of the program began with Moliere's play "The Miser", in which Mr. Granville characterized Harpagon, the old miser himself in a very dramatic manner. Harpagon thought someone had stolen his gold and he was frantic. He was going to send his whole household to the court of justice and even take their lives if necessary in order to get back his money. Indeed he would have all of the people of France killed if it were not returned.

Audience Likes Malaprop

After characterizing men of various types, the actor then took the part of Mrs. Malaprop from "The Rivals" by Sheridan. This queer old soul with her constant use of misplaced big words brought no end of laughter from the audience.

This was followed by an interlude from "Faust" by the German writer, Goethe. The part portrayed was that of Mephistopheles, the devil in his fiery red costume, who picked out the best people in his country to convert to the paths of Satan.

From the Victorian era, Mr. Granville chose Eccles from "Caste" by T. W. Robertson. This poor old lazy soul continually grumbled because he had to "mind the baiby." It hurt him so, because his daughter had married into a highter caste than he was.

From the same period, the actor characterized Wilfred Denver, from "The Silver King," by the English writer, Henry Arthur Jones.

From king to the part of the great French poet, Francois Villon, was the next change on the program. This poet who was born in an attic claimed himself destined to die in an attic, but withall appeared to enjoy a good time and not take life seriously all of the time.

A Selection From Tolstoy

Mr. Granville then turned to the Russian writer Tolstoy. He chose the part of Fedya from "The Living Corpse." Fedya had been married, but continued drinking and at intervals staying away from the home that he left in spite of his wife's love for him. It was supposed that he had committed suicide and consequently, his wife remarried. Fedya and his former wife are living within the same city. He blames all of his misfortune and sorrow on drink. This play is really Tolstoy's play, "Redemption."

The next selection was Cyrano de Bergerac by the French playwright, Rostand.

For his final number, the actor took the role of Svengali from "Trilby," by George du Maurier. This play is famous for its characters. The old man Svengali was proud of his achievements as a musician, but he greatly feared death. He had a fainting spell and thought he was dying, at which time he begged and fought to live just one more year, one more week, one more day.

Noted Alumnus Plans To Attend Anniversary

The Rev. Dr. John Humpstone, Present Crozer Lecturer, Coming Back In June

The Reverend John Humpstone, D. D., '72, who refused the presidency of Bucknell and who is one of Bucknell's most prominent graduates now engaged in religious work, and pastor emeritus of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, Brooklyn, delivered the Samuel A. Crozer Foundation Lectures, 1926, in the chapel services at Crozer Theological Seminary during the month of February.

The current issue of the Crozer Bulletin has this to say regarding Dr. Humpstone's addresses:

"His subject, "Ten Eminent Preachers, Types of Ministerial Efficiency," was as attractive as it proved interesting and valuable. Doctor Humpstone is eminently qualified for the service he rendered, and may well serve as an eleventh illustration of his theme.

"The preachers selected by the lecturer were both interesting in their personalities ant most valuable as homiletical illustrations. The following were the divines treated in the course:

1. Athanasius. "Preaching and Controversy."
2. Ambrose. "Preaching and Administration."
3. Chrysostom. "Preaching and Eloquence."
4. Bernard of Clairvaux. "Preaching and Saintliness."
5. Massillon. "Art in Preaching."
6. Jeremy Taylor. "Preaching and Imagination."
7. Charles H. Spurgeon. "Preaching and Evangelism."
8. Phillips Brooks. "Preaching and Personality."
9. Henry Ward Beecher. "Preaching and Public Spirit."
10. Frederick W. Robertson. "Preaching and Chivalry."

"Broad culture, wide reading, as well as clearness of diction, and faultless English, were evident in each of his lectures; all were rich in homiletical value to the preachers and students who heard Doctor Humpstone. The lectures were open to the public and drew many outside the Seminary circle. They will be published and thus made available to larger numbers."

Dr. Humpstone expects to return to Bucknell at Commencement, to attend the fifty-fourth anniversary of his class.

HIGH SCHOOL TRACK CUP OFFERED BY BUSINESS MEN

The Business Men's Association of Lewisburg in its monthly meeting on Monday, April 12, decided to purchase four small loving cups to be presented to the winning relay team at the State High Schools Field and Track Meet at Memorial stadium on May 22. The large cup presented last year to the school having the most points will again be contested for this year as a school must win it three times for permanent possession. It is now held by the Norristown High School. More than 600 schools will be represented at the meet this year.

The special entertainment feature at the Business Men's Association meeting on Monday, April 12, was a musical program directed by Prof. Paul Stolz. Several Bucknellians sang in the chorus: Soprano—Miss L. Lawshe, Miss Jessie Pangburn, and Mrs. A. W. Wilcox. Altos—Miss Carolyn Hunt and Miss Edna Watson. The latter also gave two amusing readings. Tenors—Mr. R. F. Hartz, John Gilmour, and Rolland Dutton. Basses—Prof. Paul Stolz and John Pangburn. Pianist—Miss J. Lawshe. The program consisted of solos, duets, chorus numbers and readings.

EDUCATION STUDENTS WILL HEAR KLONOWER

Mr. Henry Klonower, director of the Teacher Training Division of the State Department of Education spoke recently to a group of practice teaching students on the subject of "Professional Education."

On account of a misunderstanding, there was only a small number of students present at the address. Mr. Klonower has agreed, however, to return and speak to the class in Introduction to Education at 10:30 on Wednesday, May 5. The address will be given in Bucknell Hall, unless further announcement is made.

Education students will be particularly interested in this address, and all who can do so are urged to be present.

The regular meeting of the Education Club will be held in Bucknell Hall, on Thursday evening, April 29, at 7:30.

Miss Margaret Groff, head of the West Philadelphia High School for girls is expected to address the organization.

Where "Tabby" Comes From

It may interest your readers to know the derivation of "tabby." It was a name first given to watered silk which came from the town of At Tabbi in Arabia. Tabby cats were so called because of the resemblance of the markings on their coats to the "watering" on the silk.—Letter to the Spectator.

"THE DOVER ROAD", GIVEN TWO NIGHTS, IS WELL RECEIVED

Comedy Centers Around Latimer Who Tries To Reveal Elopers In Most Unromantic Light

REVIEWER GIVES PLOT OF THREE-ACT PLAY

Cap and Dagger Aided In Play By Frill and Frown Girls; Ten Players in Cast

After weeks of tireless effort on the part of the cast, director, and manager, Cap and Dagger staged its twentieth anniversary production, "The Dover Road," before enthusiastic audiences Thursday and Friday evenings, April 22 and 23. The play was a new kind, untried at Bucknell, a high type of comedy with a deep plot, and was presented admirably considering the restricted quarters in which the cast was required to perform.

"The Dover Road," by A. A. Milne, tells the story of a chain of incidents in the life of one Mr. Latimer, who lives just off the Dover Road, the thoroughfare which leads to Dover and to France. Over this road, therefore, go eloping couples, especially tired husbands running away with other women. Mr. Latimer makes it his hobby to bring these couples to his home in order "to reveal them to each other in the most unromantic light" and so test the future of the marriage. So to Dover Road comes Leonard, already married, eloping with Anne, but forced by circumstances to find "an 'otel" for accommodations over night. After a dinner with Mr. Latimer, the latter reveals his purpose to them, telling them they will have to stay with him a few days.

The second act introduces Nicholas and Eustasia, Leonard's wife, who are just finishing their week as guests of Latimer's. Eustasia is continually "cossetting" at breakfast and after, until he shows signs of resentment. Anne comes in and they leave. Latimer enters and he and Anne have a practice breakfast. Latimer showing her how it will be to eat with Leonard for fifty years. Anne leaves and Leonard enters in his pajamas and bathrobe, and, with all evidences of a bad cold, reveals to Latimer that his luggage has been left behind, so he can't shave, and moreover, his suit is missing. Latimer has him shave in the room, and just as he finishes, Eustasia, Anne, and Nicholas enter. Eustasia immediately begins to cossett Leonard, much to the disgust of Nicholas and Anne. Mr. Latimer, having them all together, reviews their cases and offers them his house, or the privilege of leaving. Eustasia stays to take care of her husband, Anne stays because of necessity, Nicholas stays because of choice, Anne's presence figuring in the choice and Leonard stays because of his sickness.

When the curtain rises on the third act we see Anne counting her money. She finds she has not enough to pay her fare home. Nicholas enters and she wheedles him into lending her the money. They leave, and Eustasia enters with Leonard. She places him on the sofa, cossetts him to distraction, and then proceeds to read selections from Gibbon's "The Rise and Fall of Rome." Eustasia leaves and Nicholas enters. He and Leonard plan to run off to France, Latimer enters in time to approve of their venture, and sends them off. To keep Eustasia from following them, Latimer tries to play sick, but Anne enters and solaces him. She decides she nters with Leonard. She places him must go, which disillusions Latimer, who had hoped for other things. She leaves, and Latimer decides he will wear a false white beard in the future. The doorbell rings, and another voice is heard: "Is this an 'otel?"

As difficult as the acting of these parts was, they were carried out well. Dominie, the voluble head of the servants, was played by Robert Dilworth. The staff consisted of Elizabeth H. Sale, Mary C. Thomas, R. Henry Coleman, and H. Victor Meyer. Kenneth W. Slifer took the part of Mr. Lati-

B. U. Women Singers End Concert Season

Chorus Much Larger This Year; Miss Mary Graham Assists

The Bucknell Girls' Glee Club brought the 1925-26 season to a successful close with its annual concert in the Baptist church, at 7:30 Thursday evening, April 22.

The club and its director, Miss Grace Jenkins, received a hearty welcome from the audience. Although the attendance was small due to unfavorable weather, the concert was appreciated by the assembled music lovers.

The club this year has almost doubled last year's membership, and has been admirably developed through the untiring efforts of Miss Jenkins.

The chorus delighted the audience with several pleasing selections. The solo work of Mary Graham and Hannah Metcalf was very commendable.

The girls' quartet, which needed no introduction because of its excellent work in the past, gave several numbers.

Miss Edna Watson, well known as a reader of unusual ability, kept her audience in gales of laughter with her humorous selections. The program:

Pi Delta Epsilon Has Hottest Dance

The hottest dance of the season, literally speaking, was the Pi Delta Epsilon dance held in the studio in the Engineering Building last Friday evening. The excessive heat of the ballroom caused many of the dancers to forsake Noble at his best for the refreshing out-of-doors where there was a cooling breeze and a gorgeous moon.

This was the fraternity's subscription dance of the semester and it was well attended though there was a noticible lack of S. A. Es. due to their province convention. The music of the evening, by Noble and his orchestra, was broadcast by WJBU to the local fans and perhaps, with such a good radio night, to more distant receivers.

The dance was chaperoned by Professor and Mrs. Lewis E. Theiss, the former being an honorary member of the fraternity, and Miss Kathryn Clush. Even the chaperones commented on the high temperature of the dance, and it is doubtful if there will be further dancing there until more practical provision for ventilation is made.

BAPTIST CHURCH CANTATA PLEASES LOVERS OF MUSIC

Music lovers were entertained again at the Baptist church on Sunday evening, April 25, with the Baptist choir giving the cantata, "The Daughter of Jairus," by Stainer.

The score included two soprano soles by Mrs. W. W. Wilcox, "Behold There Cometh unto Jesus," and "Weep Not, She Is Not Dead"; a tenor solo, "My Hope is in the Everlasting," by Mr. Ralph Hartz; a soprano and tenor duet, "Love Divine," by Mrs. Wilcox and John Gilmour; a trio, "To Him Who Left His Throne on High," by Mrs. Wilcox, John Gilmour, and Professor Stolz; a women's chorus, "Sweet Tender Flower"; a men's chorus, "In the Death of a Man;" and a full chorus, "Awake Thou That Sleepest." Miss Josephine Lawshe accompanied on the organ.

S. A. E. CONVENTION IS GREAT SUCCESS

Delegates From Twelve Chapters Enjoy Program of Smoker, Banquet, and Dance

The bi-ennial convention of the Beta province of Sigma Alpha Epsilon was held at the Pennsylvania Zeta chapter house here on April 22, 23, and 24. Thirty representatives from other chapters in the province were present. The colleges represented were Penn State, Dickinson, Gettysburg, Carnegie Tech, Allegheny, Pittsburg, Lafayette, University of Pennsylvania, Columbia, Cornell, Syracuse, and St. Lawrence. The convention, a great success from every viewpoint, included two business meetings, an informal smoker, a banquet, and a dance.

The convention started off with a bang on Thursday evening. The brothers got together, met each other, and held an informal smoker. The high lights of the convention were the banquet, on Friday evening, and the dance on Saturday evening. The banquet, starting at 6 o'clock, was a jolly get-together. Every one was in high spirits and merriment reigned supreme. Fraternity and college songs were sung from time to time.

Brother Arthur E. Brown, of Harrisburg, Province Archon, was toastmaster of the banquet. He formally welcomed the delegates to the convention. The principal speakers were Province Recorder-Treasurer, Floyd W. Smith, of New York City, and the treasurer of the Chapter House Association, Roy Butler, of Lewisburg. Brother Smith portrayed the humor-

Druids Pledge Frosh; Mock Initiation Sat.

Many covetous and envious eyes were directed April 23 to the green ribbons worn on the coat lapels of fifteen freshmen who had been chosen from the ranks of the entire yearling class. Students went through the day asking one another, "What's the green ribbon for?" Even the commonest and most heard of phrases, "Wish the 'Prof' would cut!" was cast aside for "Why the green ribbon?"

The ribbons marked the pledges of The Druids, the national honorary fraternity that was installed at Bucknell only recently, taking over the chapter of Theta Delta Tau that had previously existed here. The Druids are a strictly honorary sophomore fraternity, national in scope. Each spring the fifteen most popular and active freshmen are chosen from the globe class and extended bids. As a result freshmen are found trying to excel in some particular activity or entering into several of the numerous campus organizations in order to be eligible for membership in The Druids.

The fraternity thus gives the freshmen an added incentive to "make good" that is beneficial to the college as well as to the class. It fosters leadership and the spirit of cooperation.

Mock initiation similar to that of the old Theta Delta Tau fraternity will be held Saturday afternoon, May 1. Here will be a chance for everybody to have a ringside seat at a fifteen ring circus, for the show will cover the entire town and there will be room for all to see. At this time the latest edition of "What the Men of Today are Wearing" will be released for the public.

Saturday evening the first formal Druid dance will be held at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house.

MRS. FOSTER TALKS AT "SEM"

At a meeting of the women students in the living room of the Women's College on Monday evening, April 26, Mrs. K. C. Foster, field secretary of the Baptist Board of Education, offered an excellent opportunity for summer work to all those who might be interested in teaching in the daily Vacation Bible Schools.

There are positions open to college students for teaching hand crafts, dancing, music, and supervising recreation in a number of these schools in New York City, and at the same time for taking one or two courses at the Columbia University summer session, for college credit.

GRAYS OPEN PARK BY BEATING B. U.

Williamsport, Of N. Y. P. League, Defeats Orange and Blue In Slow Game; Score 5-3

Bucknell dropped a tough game to the Williamsport team of the New York-Pennsylvania League last Wednesday in the latter's new park by a 5-3 score. This was the same score that marked the finish of a similiar battle between the same teams a year ago.

It was the first game played on the Memorial Park Field, the new home of the Williamsport club. The field was not in very good shape and this caused the game to be rather slow. Several sure double plays were spoiled when the balls took frenkish hops because of loose earth in the infield.

The Orange and Blue looked well pitted against the more experienced League club. "Lefty" Blaisdell twirled a good game and with a little better support would have turned in a victory.

Williamsport scored first, in the third inning, when Devine, who had walked, tallied on Poole's double. McCleary evened up this score in the first half of the next inning when, after singling, he scored on Murphy's second hit of the day. The "Grays" got two lucky breaks in the fourth that gave them two markers.

Comorosky and Poole were the heavy sluggers for Williamsport while Murphy and McCleary hit best for the college boys.

Kostos turned in the fielding feature of the day by making a beautiful catch

May 6 Is Tag Day; Loosen Up---Aid Y.W.

Prepare to be tagged! May 6 is the date the Y. W. C. A. has set for its "Eagles Mere Tag Day" and on that day the Hill will be patrolled by Y. W. girls who expect to do a rushing business in tagging.

The purpose of the tag day is to send delegates from the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet to the conference held each year at Eagles Mere. Heretofore this conference has been for the Y. W. C. A. alone. This year a new experiment will be tried when Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. hold a joint conference.

Because the two Christian Associations are meeting together, it is necessary to limit the quota to nine delegates from each college. The junior, sophomore, and freshman girls' classes each send a delegate, who is elected by class members, and whose expenses are paid by the class. The expenses of the other six delegates are to be met with the proceeds of the tag day. So, carry your pocketbooks up the Hill on May 6, and prepare to be tagged!

To promote greater interest among the girls and to encourage active work in its organization, the Y. W. C. A. is changing its committee system. Committees are no longer to be chosen at random by the cabinet. At a house meeting in each of the women's dormitories, a cabinet member will place before the girls questionnaires that have been prepared by Dorothy Gilbert, chairman of employment. First, second, and third choices of the work each girl desires to do will be tabulated, and committees will be chosen in the future from this list. The new system will give every girl a chance to serve, and serve in the work she likes best.

Springtime is surely tennis-time! Courts at the Women's College are in constant use and signed up for weeks in advance. The Y. W. C. A., encouraged by the enthusiasm for this spring sport, is planning for a tennis tournament among the girls. The contest, under the management of Grace Millhous, '27, is to be held for the benefit of the "Y. W." No definite date or plans have been made as yet.

The Y. W. C. A. will have charge of the observation of National Music Week, May 2 to May 8, at the Women's College. No plans have been made as yet.

L'Agenda Now Out; View Section Fine

Dedicated To Professor Burpee; Juniors' Pictures Paired

L'Agenda of the Class of 1927 is in process of distribution to the student body, and within a short time every student should have his copy of the book, which is the mirror of student activity on Bucknell's campus. Through the energetic work of C. L. Carpenter, editor-in-chief, and Charles Kimball, business manager, with the cooperation of the whole staff, L'Agenda made an early appearance this year.

Perhaps the most improved feature of the book is the new view section. Pictures of scenes on the Hill were photographed in the fall when the leaf-laden trees cast curious shadows on the ground, and the resulting views are distinctive and pleasing to the eye.

The book is bound with a stiff cover which will withstand the wear and tear of years, providing a permanent binding which will surpass the flexible covers of preceding L'Agendas.

L'Agenda is dedicated to Frank Eugene Burpee, professor of mechanical engineering, with these words: "Whose sincere love for the college during his long and loyal service has endeared him to the hearts of all Bucknellians, this L'Agenda is respectfully and appreciatively dedicated by the Class of 1927."

Photographs of Bucknell's first poverty day celebration adorn one of the pages. Other amusing pictures are of various freshmen with their council adornments.

Commendation is deserved for the pleasing appearance that the class rolls make. Each name is listed with the address beneath. The junior pictures are arranged in twos, two pictures at the top and bottom of each page. The write-ups are arranged symetrically, and the short and snappy characterizations are to be praised for their conciseness.

Several new organizations have their cuts in this year's L'Agenda. Among

Prof. Delbert Mann To Teach Next Year

Professor Delbert Mann, of the University of Kansas, has been secured as the temporary head of the sociology department for the coming school year, during Professor C. R. Johnson's absence from the University. He comes here with a record both as an instructor and an author. His experiences also include much active service in the recent war.

Professor Mann was born in Michigan, where he received his early education. In 1913 he was graduated from the Oklahoma State Normal School, after which he taught in the Kilbornlo high school in Oklahoma, for one year.

From this position he went to Constantinople, Turkey, where he taught in Robert College until 1917, when he returned to America, only to return again to foreign fields in the medical department of the United States Army. In this work he remained until 1919, going, after the Armistice, into Germany with the Army of Occupation.

Soon after his return to this country he married. He took work at the University of Kansas, from which institution he received his B. A. degree in 1920 and his M. A. degree in 1923. In the college year of 1920-21 he was an instructor in sociology, and since that time has been assistant professor in sociology at the university. He was also an instructor of sociology at the University of Nebraska during the summer of 1923.

Professor Mann was a co-authorr with Dr. Stuart A. Queen in the writing of "Social Pathology," a worthy book on sociology.

MRS. RIVENBURG GIVES TEA

The faculty of the Women's College and the wives of the members of the faculty of the University were entertained at a tea at the home of Mrs. Romeyn H. Rivenburg on Saturday afternoon, April 24. Mrs. Rivenburg and her sister, Mrs. Watson, of Moosic, received the guests. Mrs. T. A. Edwards and Mrs. Frank M. Simpson presided at the tea table.

DR. PIKE LECTURES ON MENTAL HYGIENE AND DANVILLE WORK

Says Insane Were Cruelly Used And Blood Often Shed Before Twentieth Century Dawned

IN 1751 PA. PASSED ACT PROVIDING FOR HOSPITAL

Declares 50 Per Cent of Cases Are Curable; Patients Are Treated As Sick Persons

Dr. H. B. Pike, of the Danville State Hospital, addressed the students of Bucknell on the afternoon of Tuesday, April 27. Dr. Pike was introduced to the students in the overcrowded Chemical Laboratory room by Dr. George B. Lawson, of the philosophy department. The subject of his talk was "Mental Disorder and Mental Defect."

"The history of mental medicine," Dr. Pike began, "is mingled with cruelty, mystery and bloodshed through the ages until the twentieth century. Before the time of King Tut, mental defectives were treated in two ways. If the diseased individual was evil he had to pass through numerous ordeals, emphasizing corporal punishment, to drive the evil spirit out of him. If he was a good person, he was treated with deference and almost worshipped.

"The first example of homocidal mania recorded was that of King Saul, who hurled a spear at David in 1063 B. C. The Greek philosophers and historians all refer to cases of insanity in ancient times. The Romans, five hundred years before the time of Christ, drafted laws for the care of the insane. They defined cases which had to be cared for, and others which were able to stay at home. These laws, though in different form, are the present basis for the care of the insane. Now was the time for a master hand to mould this problem."

Hypocrates, the father of medicine, was born in 400 B. C. He laid the foundation of mental medicine, depicting various conditions and advocating remedies.

In the next school, Dr. Pike said, mental disease was classified in four groups. They are mania, melancholia, dementia, and imbecility. Now there are twenty-nine classifications, but these four are still the basic types.

"For thirteen hundred years," continued Dr. Pike, "ignorance and superstition again spread over the world. Epidemics of insanity appeared; all hands were raised against the insane. Then there arose the fanatic, witchcraft, and the desire to kill Between 300 A. D. and 1700 A. D., thirty thousand insane people were killed."

Dr. Pike recalled how Joan of Arc paid for the superstition of her time.

At the beginning of the sixteenth century the darkest hour had passed. Parnell revealed conditions, brought light to darkened souls and started reform with burning zeal.

In 1751 an act was passed creating the Pennsylvania Hospital at Philadelphia, with part of it set aside for mental defectives. However, the first American asylum for mental defectives was established at Williamsburg, Va., in 1783. This home, as well as others that sprang up, was a cage and emphasized corporal punishment. Benjamin Bush, the first executive at Williamsburg, although an honest man who worked for the betterment of mental defective, yet resorted to cruelty.

In the latter nineteenth century Dorothy Dix called the attention of the legislatures by advocating hospitals for the insane. It was soon found that humane types of people were needed to look after the insane. In 1854, Florence Nightingale started a reform of nurse training. In 1892, nineteen schools for nurse training were established in America. The Danville hospital was among the first nineteen in America and was the first in Pennsylvania. Four of the first graduates are still there.

The new plan, which is being carried out at Danville, is the idea of

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI KAPPA PSI

Brother Geesey, district archon, was a week-end visitor at the chapter house.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Brother E. F. Jones, ex-'27, visited the chapter Sunday. "Eddie" has a position with the Surety Bond Co. and is located in Scranton.

"Art" Harris, '29, was a guest at dinner Tuesday, April 20.

Brother Cain, manager of the Syracuse tennis team, and "Bob" Weidenhamer, member of the team, were guests of the chapter Monday and Tuesday of last week.

Miss Frances Warren Theiss, '40, was a guest at supper Friday evening.

"Low" Kesler, '28, was a guest at supper Friday evening.

Veta Davis, Doris Worrell, Miss Clush, Barbara Reifsnyder, and Blanche Thompson were guests at dinner Sunday.

Mr. Harby, Mr. Hurst, and Mr. Kelley were guests at supper Friday evening.

Final arrangements have been made by Chairman "Norm" Davies for the Founders' Day banquet to be held this Friday evening at the chapter house. Brother "Tom" Wood of Muncy is to be chairman and many alumni are expected to return for the affair.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Mr. V. L. Granville, of the Devereaux players, was a guest of the house during his stay at Bucknell on Monday and Tuesday, April 19 and 20.

Brother Lee Kaylor, of the Ohio Sigma chapter, Mount Union College, visited the boys here on Monday and Tuesday, April 19 and 20.

Mrs. L. E. Baker and Mrs. G. T. Fenstermacher, of Milton, were dinner guests Tuesday evening, April 20.

Brother Statton Rice, of Gettysburg, spent most of last week at the house.

Jean Peterson, of Mount Union, Iowa, was a guest on Thursday, April 22.

Sunday guests, April 25, included Brother and Mrs. Roy Butler, of Lewisburg, and Professor and Mrs. W. H. Coleman.

KAPPA SIGMA

Brothers Davis, '28, Corson, '28, and Dixon, '26, attended the Penn Relays at Philadelphia last week-end.

Brother A. R. Lewis, '23, was a week-end guest of the chapter.

Miss "Betty" Middleton, of New York City, and Marian Coe, '26, were guests at supper on Friday evening, April 23.

Former pledge Eugene Long, of Muncy, was a guest at the house on Sunday, April 25.

Brother Walter Shorts '26, visited his parents at Dickson city over the week-end.

DELTA SIGMA

The chapter is contemplating the purchase of a new victrola to take the place of the present one, which is rapidly showing signs of old age.

Three men from the Juniata baseball team were guests at the house for lunch and dinner, Friday, April 23.

Delta Sigma recently had as its guest Mr. Ball of Denver, Colorado, a chapter visitor of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

In a recent issue of "The Purple, Green, and Gold," Lambda Chi Alpha's national magazine, McCormick, Karmilowicz, and McCleary were given places on the first, second, and third all Lambda Chi teams in the order named. Walden Erickren, star tackle of the University of Washington, won the great national recognition among the Lambda Chis in 1925.

Visitors at the house on Friday, April 23, included Thrush, McClain, and West, members of the Juniata baseball team.

On Saturday afternoon the Lambda Chi baseball team played two games with the Kappa Delta Rho's. They dropped the first game by a 10-5 score, but came back and won the second, 11-4. "Bill" Knoll featured with his pretty catches in center field.

Richard Colestock was a dinner guest at the house, Sunday, April 25.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

The K. D. R. indoor baseball team met the Lambda Chi Alpha nine Saturday afternoon on Loomis field. Two games were played, the K. D. R. team winning the first game with a score of 10-6, and the Lambda Chi's the second with a score of 11-6.

Brother Lester "Indigo" Stanton, '24, wife, and daughter of Waymart, Pa., spent Sunday at the house.

Bro. W. W. Wilcox, '25, of Knoxville, Pa. visited over the week-end in Lewisburg.

Brother T. J. Miers attended the Senior Prom Saturday at Mansfield.

Asa Eaton was called home Thursday morning on account of the sudden death of his mother.

Bros. Weishaupt and Cargill spent the week-end at their homes in Lewistown.

Bro. Bird returned Sunday evening from a visit with his parents and friends at Kirkwood, N. Y.

Wednesday night was the Kappa Delta Rho's broadcasting hour. The program consisted of songs, solos, and instrumental selections. Many favorable comments were received from listeners.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

Kermit L. Noll, '25, who is principal of the Millheim High School, was initiated into membership in Phi Lambda Theta on Wednesday evening, April 21.

Brother Arthur L. VanTine, ex-'27, spent Monday at the house and on the Hill making preparations to resume his studies next September.

The "Relic" dance that was held at the house last Saturday evening, with Jack Gardner at his best, was none other than a "Hot number."

Keep The Campus Clean

The other day we were walking along one of the campus paths and noticed a student throw an empty cigarette package on the ground. This little incident was small enough in itself, but suppose every student unconsciously littered the college grounds in such a manner. Visitors are impressed, mainly, by the appearance of the University and its campus. This is your school, and every student should take an interest in it as such. The next time you are inclined to get rid of paper, etc., add a second thought to the first one, and stick the offending article in your pocket. The weight of it won't seriously hinder you, until the right and opportune moment arrives for you to relieve yourself of the burden.

How To Score In Bridge

The scoring rules of auction bridge have been recently changed to facilitate ease in totaling scores. The only change made is in the scoring of honors. The new totals are as follows:

3 honors, divided.....30
4 honors, divided 40
5 honors, divided 50
4 honors in one hand.....80
5 honors, 4 in one hand and 1 in partner's 90
5 honors in one hand.....100

Penalties, bonuses, little slams, and grand slams count the same as heretofore.

Bucknell's Emergency Troop Co. A of the Twelfth Regiment

By RAYMOND H. EDWARDS
Of the Bucknell University Class in Journalism
Reprinted by Courtesy of The Williamsport Sun

Bucknell's Emergency Company of 1863, which was composed of the handful of able-bodied men students who had not already gone to war, has been called to attention by the recent death of W. L. Nesbit, Bucknell '60, whose brother, D. M. Nesbit, was first lieutenant. Sixty volunteer students and one member of the faculty put on the "blue" and joined the Union forces, when Governor Curtin sounded the alarm telling that Lee had entered Pennsylvania.

Many had left their classes before in defense of the Union. But no students could fail to volunteer when a dispatch was received on Monday, June 15, 1863, which read: "Lee's rebel calvary are making a raid into Pennsylvania. The Militia are called out." The call came in the morning. That afternoon no studying was done. The students were resolved to go. And go they did, almost to a man.

The Call for Enlistment

Attorney Frederic E.Bower,of Lewisburg, who was then a senior in the Bucknell Academy, says of the occasion: "Well do I remember Tuesday, June 16, 1863. We had just assembled for the first class in the afternoon in the south room of the Academy building (the room which is now used for bacteriology), when a big chap by the name of Joe Sergeant came in for the purpose of looking over the older and bigger students for enlistment. As he passed down the long table around which we were assembled I grabbed the paper from his hand and hurriedly signed my name to it as a volunteer. It was the only way I could enlist for I was small of stature and only 17 years of age. I had already tried to enlist at the regular recruiting office and been "turned down."

On that Tuesday afternoon friends were busy making and filling haversacks for the boys. The next morning, Wednesday, the 17th, about 9 o'clock, the volunteers formed in the streets of the town, and amid blessings and tears marched to Montandon. All of the girls in town, as well as the Bucknell Institute girls walked to Montandon to see the boys off. Mr. Bower says that he still has a vivid mental picture of the boys and girls throwing kisses to each other as the train slowly moved southward.

In an old diary we find the following: "Two companies left this morning, and Captain Jones' company of students. All the college and academy students enlisted except seven, one a 'sick copperhead', the others wounded, too delicate, and too young." Many parents becoming alarmed by the danger from the Confederate invasion, had called their daughters home, so that by this time there were but seven boarders at the Institute. It looked as if there would not be any commencement. The girls thought and talked constantly of what they would do if Lee's army came this way; where they would bury their valuables; who would have an empty cistern where their Lares and Penates could rest secure during the invasion.

The Start for the Front

When this little company of student volunteers boarded the train at Montandon, they were not greeted with comfortable plush cushion seats, but rode on rough board seats to Harrisburg. The train moved out about 11 o'clock and arrived at its destination about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The trip was uneventful except for an hour's stop in Georgetown (Dalmatia) for some unknown reason.

"Upon our arrival in Harrisburg," says Mr. Bower, "we marched to the State Capitol grounds, and prepared for the night. We slept the first night on the grass in front of the Capitol. We had no blankets under us, except for a few which we hurriedly collected before leaving Lewisburg, no coverings over us, but we slept as well as the disorderly Democratic convention, then in session in the building, would permit.

"The next day as we were assembled in the corridors of the capitol, a man brought in about 15 volunteers from the surrounding vicinity and joined our company." This brought the number of the company up to seventy-five. "Then," continued Mr. Bower, "we proceeded to elect our officers." T. R. Jones, who was graduated from Bucknell in '62, was elected captain; D. M. Nesbit, first lieutenant; and Professor Charles S. James, second lieutenant. Professor James was a mathematics teacher in the college.

The Old Muster Roll

In the Rev. O. P. Eaches' story of the Emergency Company, which appeared in the Bucknell Mirror of 1898, he writes: "I have in my possession the old muster roll by which I assigned men to their duties, standing guard, serving on detached.

"Sergeants: O. P. Eaches, Benjamin T. Cox. J. B. Hutton, Ross Ward, Robert A. Townsend.

Let Them Know That You Saw Their "Ad" in The Bucknellian

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

PASS ON YOUR KNOWLEDGE

"If I had it to do over again....."

Seniors about to forsake the ivied walls invariably regret the misused portions of their collegiate past. They see how high school ideas were jarred loose, what professors are indispensable, and what parts of the college machinery were actually of benefit. But spring has come, Bull Sessions over with, and it is too late to broadcast their experience to the freshmen.

At one college an attempt is being made to salvage this wasted knowledge. The College Eye, Iowa State Teachers' College, prints each week three or four senior replies to the questions listed below:

1. Give your name, major and minor subjects.
2. What course or courses in this school have been of the most value to you? Why?
3. What instructor have you liked the best and why?
4. What changes in a B. A. curriculum would you suggest?
5. Have you any other suggestions that would be of help to lower class students or new students?

DREXEL TO CONDUCT LIBRARY SCHOOL

To meet the ever-increasing demand for school librarians, the Drexel Institute School of Library Science of Philadelphia, has added a summer course to open July 6 and to continue until August 13.

One of the most interesting features of this summer course is the fact that the Carnegie Foundation of New York has furnished sufficient endowment to make the course practically free to school librarians and teachers. This was done on the recommendation of The American Library Association after an investigation of the Drexel Library School.

The need for such a course, it was said, was revealed in a recent survey, and Drexel Institute, which has successfully conducted a School of Library Science since 1892, and which last year set the pace by elevating this school to a graduate one with a college degree required for entrance, immediately organized the course.

This course is open to high school teachers who do part time library work, to school librarians who wish to improve their knowledge of library methods and to teachers who wish to become librarians.

STATE EXPOSES VIOLATORS

Dean A. R. Warnock, of the Pennsylvania State College, sounded the death knell for violators of college regulations when he announced that the names of all students dropped from college will be posted on the Old Main bulletin board with the general nature of their offense. Dean Warnock declared that repeated violations of the automobile ordinance and the expulsion of several students for drinking necessitated stringent enforcement of all college dicta.

Several students' cases are being considered at the present time and should the offenders be dismissed from college they will be affected by the new regulation. However the names of those students who were recently expelled will be withheld.

WHERE FACULTY LEADS SHALL STUDENTS FOLLOW?

Four members of the Women's College faculty profited by the notice to "Semites" in last week's Bucknellian, and visited the spiritual reader who recently moved into the McCall property on North Fourth street. The spiritualist has "penetrated the veil of many mysteries and can recall and foretell many events in the lives of those who take readings from her." She also claims to have brought happiness to many who are in love. Perhaps that is what kept the worthy faculty ladies there so long that they missed their dinner at the "Seminary."

THE YALE NEWS SUGGESTS COLLEGE "ELLIS ISLAND"

Through the 'Yale News,' the Yale students have expressed the suggestion of an educational "Ellis Island," in order to prevent the overcrowding of the undergraduate body. They insist however that the requirements be not only scholastic, though the scholastic standards should be stringent, but also that there should be requirements concerning the character, personality, promise, and background of the prospect in order to keep up the success of Yale in her graduates and prevent the forming of a "brain plant."

Swarthmore College has recently purchased a rare collection of books on Romance philology. The collection is most valuable, since many of the books are no longer printed, and copies cannot be found very easily, even with a great deal of research.

Game to the Last

A great editor was dying. A physician leaned over him with a stethoscope, listened a few minutes, and then rose sadly.

"Poor man!" he announced. "Circulation almost gone."

With an effort, the editor lifted his head. "You're a liar!" he proclaimed, weakly. "Over four hundred thousand, and gaining every day."—Outlook.

A lone delver into the mysteries of the oyster has been found in the person of Betsy Ann Herrold, a student at the College of Fisheries at the University of Washington, where she is but one in 5000 students that has an interest in the propensities of the oyster. She has aspirations toward the running of a flat with her father who is the owner of an oyster farm at Llwaco, Washington.

Denver Will Dance After 50 Years

For fifty years dancing has been prohibited at the University of Denver. Now by unanimous votes the Student Council and other student organizations have petitioned to have the ban on social dancing removed. It's now up to the dean and trustees.

The request was made possible by the latest general assembly of the Methodist Church in Colorado which made dancing optional for members.

Bars Seniors From Football

If the will of Ohio College administration and professors prevails no seniors will play in college football. A resolution commending this plan was passed at the annual conference of the Ohio College Association. It is suggested that the seniors declared ineligible be used for coaching intramural teams.

Columbia University has, through recent donations been able to obtain 160 letters of Pierre Bayle the "father of Voltaire." In these letters Bayle expresses opinions which when written were thought radical and harmful. The teachings of this martyr to independent thinking form the basis for the Constitution of the United States.

Wellesley students have given the nickname of "Marshall Ney" to Miss Elizabeth Parks of Ashboro, N. C., who has finished the work of the late Dr. James Weston in proving that Marshal Ney, bravest of Napoleon's generals, was not shot to death by the French soldiers but was banished to this country where he became Peter Stuart Ney, a North Carolina schoolmaster.

We note that Franklin Field now sports twelve amplifiers which are to replace the score-boards and score callers the latter now receiving their messages by phone and passing them on by speaking into the broadcasting amplifier before him.

Roller skating is the latest fad at the Oregon Agricultural College. Everyone is skating to classes, to town, and even to dances. It was estimated that 700 pairs of roller skates were sold during one week.

Free transportation to and from Europe will be granted this summer to thirty-two Dartmouth undergraduates who have secured jobs on the cattle boats.

The Coming Of Spring

The winds are moaning in the tossing boughs
Of shivering trees that all their leaves have doffed;
The snow is falling, feathery and soft,
Upon the earth that not till spring will rouse—
The earth that now in torpidness does drowse
Beneath the blanket wafted from aloft.
Chill winter at my love of spring has scoffed.
To spoil my joy this king now vows.
But no! Soon will my hopes of spring return;
Soon will they be realities—not dreams—
And summer breezes, wafted through the fields
Will bring me messages from flower and fern.
Though far away the joyous spring now seems,
To its warm power the coldest winter yields.

"Where are you going with that goat, little boy?"

"Down to the lake. Come along if you wanter see some fun. This goat has just ate a crate of sponges and I'm goin' down and let him drink."

He—"You are a singular sort of girl!"

She—"Well, that's easily altered."

CO. A, BUCKNELL'S EMERGENCY TROOP

J. Small, O. W. Spratt, Franklin P. Startzel, Leroy Stephens, C. A. Stone, Robert C. Straw, George W. Truitt, Jr., Robert VanValzah, William Winter, William J. Wolverton, Jacob C. Wolf, I. C. Wynn, Peter Yeager."

The second night in Harrisburg, Thursday, the 18th, the boys slept on the floor of the rotunda in the Capitol building, in spite of the talks and cheers from the convention hall, as George W. Woodward was nominated for governor.

The next day the company was taken to the First Baptist church on Second street, where the men were lined up and mustered into United States service. The Rev. Mr. Eaches writes, that, "Of more than thirty companies then formed, only three had the courage to pass under the control of the general government. The Bucknell company, which then became Company A of the 28th regiment, went in to serve where ordered."

It was during the mustering in of this company that Attorney Bower again found difficulty in passing the inspection, because of his age and stature. Being aware of his difficulties, Mr. Bower says that, "I quickly grabbed the fife from Musician Shanafelt and posed as a musician while the government official passed down the line. After being sworn in as a musician I quickly returned the fife, and assumed the duties of a regular private." The company possessed two musicians, Mr. Bower's roommate, George Kincaid, as drummer, and T. M. Shanafelt with the fife.

After being sworn in, Company A elected O. P. Eaches as orderly sergeant. Captain Jones then appointed the other necessary officers. When the day's work was over the boys retired to the inside of the church, where they again enjoyed the comforts of the floor for a bed.

At Fort Washington

The next day the company marched to Fort Washington, which was located on a high hill directly across the river from Harrisburg and overlooking the Market street bridge, which was at that time a covered wooden structure. The purpose of the fort was to guard the bridge as well as the city from invasion. The new troopers were placed in the division of Major General Couch of Massachusetts. This division numbered 20,000 militia. The 28th regiment was commanded by Colonel James Chamberlin, Bucknell 1860. Mr. Eaches writes that, "We were in the place of honor on the right of the line, and first marching order in the brigade consisting of the 28th, 29th, and 30th regiments."

Arriving at Fort Washington they were subjected immediately to drill. It was here that they received uniforms, guns, tents, and other equipment. The tents were each supposed to shelter four men, but it was necessary for five to sleep in each. Straw was used for the bottom.

Equipment of Men

Each man was equipped with a Springfield muzzle-loader rifle with a triangular-shaped bayonet attached. The sights on the rifles could be adjusted to 300, 600, and 800 yards. It took nine motions to load these muskets for one shot. However, after some drill, this reloading could be accomplished at an amazing rate of speed.

The first service was constructing and manning the earthworks on Fort Washington. Trenches and embankments were thrown up around the hill. If one were to visit Fort Washington hill today, he would have no trouble finding several such trenches in areas that have not yet been leveled for building purposes. The hill is being rapidly built up with beautiful homes, but it still retains the name of Fort Washington.

Rebels Invade Pennsylvania

While the newly added company was drilling, word came that the rebels were ravaging the southern counties of Pennsylvania. They were taking goods from stores, harvesting crops, and burning orchards. Jenkins' raiders were on their way up the Cumberland Valley, with the hope of reconnoitering around Harrisburg. They naturally caused considerable alarm. The Market street bridge to the city was well fortified but there was a bridge up the river which the rebels might cross and so come down to the capital city.

As the 28th was preparing to move to the battlefront, one company was detached and sent to this bridge above Harrisburg. It was Company A that was chosen for this mission. The men marched up the river about eight miles to their first post of duty to check the oncoming raiders.

The Rev. Mr. Eaches writes: "Here we occupied a block house built in the old style, with the upper story projecting, and with openings for muskets. Here we slept on our arms, expecting all the time an attack from the enemy. On the top of the mountain we built a fort of stones and trees." This mountain was one of a series where the Union forces had signal stations where they could flash the advance of the enemy from one to another.

The company formed picket squads. Each man went on active duty at two-hour intervals. The mountain was very steep and it rained almost constantly while the company was stationed there. Mr. Bower says that it was the first time he had ever seen it rain beneath his feet.

Heard Cannonading

During the week the men were stationed here they could hear the cannonading at Carlisle and Gettysburg. They also saw the flash of the artillery from Carlisle. Closer than that they heard the popping of the muskets from a skirmish between two New York regiments and Jenkins' raiders at Oyster Point, which was less than two miles away. The Union forces soon drove back the rebels. Oyster Point was the farthest north the Confederate forces advanced during the war.

After the Confederates had retreated down the valley, the emergency company was ordered to rejoin the regiment at Carlisle. When the men arrived in Harrisburg, they were greeted with good things to eat, which the ladies of the city brought out. It was the Fourth of July when the boys arrived in the capital. That night they slept in the senate chamber of the Capitol building.

The next morning they boarded the train for Carlisle. From Carlisle onward the railroad track was torn up. The Rev. Mr. Eaches states that, "Carlisle looked like desolation, torn by cannon ball and ravaged by fire."

They marched from this point down the Cumberland Valley. They started for Gettysburg, but the course was changed, when the news of the battle reached them.

Hard March to Front

"We made hard marches to the front," writes Mr. Eaches, "carrying tents, baggage, one hundred rounds of cartridges, and ten days' rations. At one point on this journey we were in momentary expectation of meeting the Confederates. But having heard of our approach, they prudently kept out of the way. We were the first troops that had passed down the valley since the Confederate invasion. We received a royal welcome everywhere we went."

While on their march to Shippens-

OUR OFFICIAL DUTIES CEASE

When the "thirsty" that terminates every properly prepared piece of copy is placed at the end of this editorial, the editorial duties of the 1925-26 Bucknellian staff will be officially closed. The editors will feel their responsibilities take wings and fly away, and a feeling of blissful peace will descend that has been unknown since the day, almost a year ago, when we took up the duties which were then so new and are now so familiar.

No other position within the grasp of the undergraduate student gives one so comprehensive a view of the University as that which we are about to vacate. Editors of the Bucknellian must see and feel every current of activity which forms in the college, must bring to light the thread of history that is daily being spun out by our own activity and life. We see—and sometimes we laugh, and sometimes tears come—but always we must observe.

Concerning the work of the past year we have little to say. The staff has attempted to produce a publication that would reflect the life of the college, be a part of the life of the college, and be an active agent in making that life what it should be. Pain and struggle and failure were not lacking. Disappointments became commonplace. But sympathy and understanding and commendation found their place, too, in the eternal scheme of things that governs even the lives of editors. Pride and consciousness of work well done made its atonement for the disappointments. Wherein we have failed and wherein we have succeeded, the college already knows.

The future is in the hands of a new board of editors, operating under a new plan. Our approval and our best wishes go with both the new editors and the new plan. Both are starting clean, in a field where as yet there is no prejudice, no favoritism, no jealousy. They are looking toward the ideal, hoping and determining that they will be able to make the Bucknellian the kind of instrument that it ought to be. They are accepting responsibility, expecting cooperation, planning to serve.

God grant that their vision of the ideal shall not be blurred, and that their faith in their fellow students shall be justified!

A NEGLECTED HEALTH RULE

It was noticed in a recent issue of the Bucknellian that the "Semites" had cooperated with Professor Rice in promoting better health at Bucknell. This was indeed a mighty fine thing. However, the lamentable fact concerning this situation is that they do not continue the good work, for their own good.

It is probably an old story to most people that eating between meals overtaxes the digestive system and renders it unable to perform its function properly. Ill health will invariably result. Such consequences may not be noticeable at the present but several years hence the real truth will make itself known and it has been said that the truth sometimes hurts.

In the last analysis it is the force of habit that leads to this practice. The majority of the students are really not hungry but think they are, and lack the will power to convince themselves. Recently, a Bucknell professor made the statement that it wasn't the knowledge gained but the habits acquired that measures the value of our education. Hence it is imperative that one cultivate good habits in order to attain success in life. It is believed that a very good start for many Bucknellians toward acquiring such habits would be to abstain from the consumption of victuals between meals.

Goldena Guilford Elected President of Junior Girls

Goldena Guilford, '27, was elected president of the junior class women at a meeting in the Y. W. C. A. room on Wednesday evening, April 28. The other officers elected were Edith Freed, treasurer; Kathryn Smith, secretary; and Edith Womer, vice president. The elections for secretary and vice president were unanimous.

Helen Thompson was elected delegate to the Y. W. C. A. convention at Eagles Mere, June 11 to 21.

Plans for the mock prom, an annual affair, were discussed, but no definite date was set. Every year the junior girls dress as men and take their freshmen sisters to the prom in the living room of the Women's College. Florence Parmley is chairman of the entertainment committee, and Dorothy Gilbert is chairman of the refreshment committee.

The C. S. R. A. To Meet Commencement Hall

The organization and plans of the Council of Student Religious Activities, or the C. S. R. A., were explained to the girls of Women's College on Thursday evening, April 22, by Mary Dwyer, '28, who is secretary of the board. Miss Dwyer defined the meaning of the name C. S. R. A., and asked for the support and cooperation of the college women for this newest religious organization.

The C. S. R. A. consists of the president and one other member, chosen by the president, of the Y. W. C. A., the Y. M. C. A., the Ministerial Association, the Student Volunteers, the Baptist Christian Endeavor, the Methodist Epworth League, and the Presbyterian Young People's Society. The purpose of the organization is to promote fellowship on the campus and to support all religious activities. Professor C. M. Bond is the faculty advisor. Ray Edwards, '26, is the president of the council. Meetings are held once each month. This month a meeting will be held in Commencement Hall, to which all interested students are invited. The meeting next month will be a "retreat," after which the new officers will assume their duties.

Debate Banqueters Give Lybarger Cup

At a banquet given by the Bucknell Debating Board in the Cameron House Tuesday night to the men's and women's debating squads of Bucknell University and to Mifflinburg High School debaters, the winning team in the Bucknell University High School Debating League, the Lybarger Cup was formally given to Mifflinburg High School. The Lybarger Cup is the trophy presented each year to the Bucknell Debating Board by Lee Francis Lybarger, Esq., of Mifflinburg, Pa., to the end that the Bucknell Debating Board shall give it to the High School deemed to be the winner in the High School Debating League which is under the supervision of Bucknell University.

In presenting the cup to Bucknell University Mr. Lybarger stated that his gift was prompted through his interest in debating, because of the manifold benefits derived from that activity. The most fundamental thing in an education is the training of the intellect and there is nothing which will give the student more exercise in this direction than debating, for debating gives a stimulus to the judgment, the keenness of mind, and the ability to the essential from the non-essential. In concluding Mr. Lybarger expressed his hope that the movement started among the high schools under the supervision of Bucknell University will expand to other schools, thus giving to them the incentive to increase their efforts in debating.

T. B. Drum, the president of the Bucknell High School Debating League, gave the Lybarger trophy to the Mifflinburg High School as a reward for its unceasing efforts which brought it out on top of the League which embraced twelve of the largest high schools in Central Pennsylvania. Mr. Drum laid special emphasis on the fact that though one school received the cup, all were winners in the contest, since the training they had received in competing for the cup was one of no little benefit to all who participated.

Some of the inside workings so necessary to turn out successful debaters were disclosed by Professor R. F. Howes. It is the coach's duty, said Professor Howes, to see that the debaters get a knowledge of the fundamentals of the question. After the fundamentals are grasped a stand should be taken which is based upon the knowledge of the basic principles involved in the question. To this method of training Professor Howes attributed much of Bucknell's debating teams' success.

Brief reviews of the recent debating season were given by Mildred Marshall, '26, and Carl A. Hile, '26.

With Professor W. H. Coleman as toastmaster, each speaker received a delicate thrust of humor or satire which hit the mark. Between the laughter provoked by the toastmaster's appropriate remarks and the retaliations which he received from the subjects of his witticisms, a great deal of hilarity was aroused.

The guests of honor were: Dr. E. W. Hunt; R. H. Rivenburg; the Rev. Dr. West; F. T. Boyer, principal of the Mifflinburg High School; Miss L. K. Glover, coach of the Mifflinburg debating team; Hon. L. F. Lybarger, of Mifflinburg; and Professors W. H. Coleman, R. F. Howes.

S. A. E. CONVENTION IS GREAT SUCCESS

ous side of a treasurer's life. He spoke of the new Sigma Alpha Epsilon clubhouse in New York and of its future. Brother Butler related the early history of S. A. E. in Bucknell. He mentioned the 1898 province convention which was the first one held at this chapter.

The other speakers were Brothers Little, of Pennsylvania; Kelly, of Syracuse; Bush, of Penn State; Morris of Cornell; Humeston, of Bucknell, and Marvin, of Columbia.

The convention dance, held Saturday evening, from eight to twelve, was a real peppy party. About 65 couples tripped the light fantastic to the syncopated jazz of Gardner's "Campus Serenaders." The visiting S. A. E. brothers caught the spirit of Bucknell dances and joined in the merry-making. The chaperones were Mother Miller, Professor and Mrs. W. H. Coleman, and Miss Gush.

Two business meetings, on Friday and Saturday morning, completed the schedule of the convention. At the elections, held the second meeting, Brother Brown was re-elected province archon; F. Brewster Wickersham, of Harrisburg, was elected vice-archon; Floyd W. Smith, of New York City, was re-elected recorder-treasurer; and Professor Charles H. Richardson, of Syracuse, was appointed chairman of the National Scholarship Committee.

The next province convention will be held at the new S. A. E. chapter house at Penn State.

Juniata Surprises Bison Ball Players

Juniata pulled the unexpected by defeating the Orange and Blue tossers in a loosely played overtime game, by a score of 6-5. Although touched for ten hits, Murphy pitched winning ball and with fair support would have turned back the visitors. Only once was Tom in trouble and that was in the initial inning when an error and two homers gave Juniata three markers.

Snyder, on the mound for the visitors, although found for eleven hits, succeeded in keeping them scattered except in the fourth and sixth innings. His hitting was the big feature of the day, as he had three hits out of five trips to the plate. Of these three hits one was of the four-base variety.

W. Blaisdell continued his sensational hitting for the Bisons, having three bingles out of four trips to the plate. Shorts, with a single and a triple, and Kostos with two bingles, also hit well for Bucknell.

The Game of Polo

Modern polo was played almost in its present form by the princes of Byzantium, and the Emperor Comnenus was injured by falling from his horse in the game. The game became popular in England in 1872.

Bucknell Athletes To Have Busy Week

There will be a full week of activity for Bucknell University athletic teams this next week, with the varsity baseball team, the freshman nine, and the varsity track team getting into action.

Coach Blair will take his squad with him on the second extensive road trip of the season, starting April 28. The Bucknell nine will meet the York team of the New York-Pennsylvania League, the club which won the league championship last summer, in a contest at York. On the following day the team is scheduled for a game with Mt. Saint Mary's at Emmitsburg, Md., and the final tilt of the three-day trip will be staged at Gettysburg, Pa., with the Gettysburg College team. Blair will likely take all four pitchers, Blaisdell, lefthander, and Murphy, Martin, and Magee, righthanders.

The Orange and Blue track squad will participate in its second dual meet of the season when the Gettysburg team is entertained on the Memorial Stadium field. Rhoades Ingerton's men have been training hard for this meet and expect to cop the majority of points.

Mansfield, Pa., will be the center of attraction as far as the Bucknell freshmen are concerned. This coming Saturday the yearling diamond team will meet the strong Mansfield Normal team on the latter's playing field at Mansfield and the Frosh are counting on making this contest their second victory of the season.

Yearling Track Men Lose to Lock Haven

Despite the rain a large crowd attended the track meet between the Lock Haven High team and the B. U. freshman squad at Lock Haven Saturday afternoon, Lock Haven scored 65 1-2 points to Bucknell's 50 1-2. Nearly all of the spectators agreed that the Bucknell team was the best seen in some time.

Because of the constant rain thruout the last two-thirds of the meet no records could be established. Charley Slopey of Lock Haven, was the high scorer with 23 points to his credit. Burd, with 13 points, and Hoffman, with 11, also starred for Lock Haven. Bucknell's high scorers were Crago, eight points, and Loper, nine points. The summaries of the events:

100-yard dash: First, Slopey, Lock Haven; second, Loper, Bucknell; third Hickoff, Lock Haven. Time 11 seconds.

880-yard run: First, Bachman, Bucknell; second, Farrow, Bucknell; third, Riemer, Bucknell. Time 2 minutes, 11 seconds.

220-yard dash: First, Crago, Bucknell; second, Slopey, Lock Haven; third, Loper Bucknell. Time, 22 seconds.

Mile-run: First, Farrow, Bucknell; second, Riemer, Bucknell; third, Harman, Lock Haven. Time, 5 minutes, 4 seconds.

High-hurdles: First, Slopey, Lock Haven; second, Hubbard, Bucknell; third Brown, Lock Haven. Time, 1 minute and 3 seconds.

440-yard dash: First, Miller, Lock Haven; second, Bachman, Bucknell; third, Hickoff, Lock Haven. Time, 56 seconds.

Danville Frosh Game Interrupted by Rain

In a one-sided game at Danville, on Saturday, April 23, which was halted by rain at the end of the sixth inning, the Bucknell Freshman baseball team was on the long end of a 20-1 score. Halicki, pitcher for the freshmen, starred, striking out thirteen men, and allowing but one hit. Halicki led the batters by pounding out four safe hits. Convery, sliding into home in the fourth inning, injured his knee and was replaced by Murray.

Thought McCleary Made Record Until Distance Was Measured

In a discussion on the new world record for the 100 yard dash, that of 9 5-10 seconds made by Locke in the Drake Relays last Saturday, the day was recalled when McCleary ran the distance in 9 seconds in a track meet here two years ago. However, the distance was measured later and found to be only 90 yards.

New Zealand Track Star May Enter Sesqui Games

R. A. Rose, the sensational distance runner of New Zealand, who has been commissioned by his home athletic federation to meet Paavo Nurmi before returning to New Zealand, will be asked to change his plans and compete in the national A. A. U. championships in Philadelphia, July 2, 5 and 6. These games will be held under the direction of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, which begins June 1 and continues until December 1.

The New Zealand Federation believed Paavo Nurmi would compete in the British championship and Rose had been instructed to pass up the American meet in favor of the British races. Now, however, Nurmi says he doesn't expect to run in the British games, so it is possible that Rose may change his plans too.

Rose will arrive in Vancouver, April 30, and come East immediately. He has been invited to visit Philadelphia for a week.

Sesqui Stadium Will Open Officially Saturday, May 1

Philadelphia's new Municipal Stadium, which will seat 100,000 persons and which is located on the grounds of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, to be held from June 1 to December 1, will be officially opened on May 1, when 10,000 boys stage a "Boy's Week" demonstration.

The huge Stadium is virtually completed, and from a construction standpoint has been pronounced O. K. by architects and engineers who have inspected it. Preliminary settlings have been similar to those in other structures of similar design.

ORTON TO DIRECT STADIUM

Dr. George W. Orton has been appointed director of the new Municipal Stadium of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, which opens in Philadelphia June 1 and continues for six months. In addition to directing the stadium, Dr. Orton will continue to act as director of sports of the Exposition. The stadium will be completed this month and has a seating capacity of 100,000.

I'M THE GINK

I'm the whopee gink. I guess every one thinks I'm the silliest person on the campus and they aren't far from right. At any hour of the day or night you can hear me out yelling my nonsense at the top of my voice. Of course it disturbs every one who is trying to get out of college what they came for but I should worry because I'm paying to be a nuisance. There isn't any sense in my yelling but I'm having a great time——Whopee.

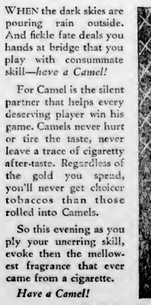
When it's a rainy night—and with three crafty bridge players your luck is running wild —have a Camel!

WHEN the dark skies are pouring rain outside. And fickle fate deals you hands at bridge that you play with consummate skill—have a Camel!

For Camel is the silent partner that helps every deserving player win his game. Camels never hurt or tire the taste, never leave a trace of cigarette after-taste. Regardless of the gold you spend, you'll never get choicer tobaccos than those rolled into Camels.

So this evening as you ply your unerring skill, evoke then the mellowest fragrance that ever came from a cigarette.

Have a Camel!



Camels represent the utmost in cigarette quality. The choicest of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos are blended into Camels by master blenders and the finest of French cigarette paper is made especially for them. Into this one brand is concentrated all of the knowledge, all of the skill of the world's largest organization of expert tobacco men.

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camels, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

* * * *

"Doug" Mackenzie, '26, and "Dutch" Baker, '28, spent Saturday, April 17, trout fishing in Black Gap Creek. "Dutch's" cabin at the Yankee Run Outing Club was ideal for a night's lodging. The two ambitious fishermen report a good catch.

* * * *

Two birthdays were celebrated at the "Sem" according to custom, by table-parties at dinner on Friday evening, April 23. The waitresses' table was gaily decorated in gold, in honor of "Billie" Smith, '26, much to "Billie's" surprise. A flower-trimmed and candle-lighted table in another part of the dining room bore witness that the birthday of Loretta Barbour had not passed by unnoticed.

"Gene" Halleran, '27, stepped in a hole while descending the Hill on April 21, and sprained his right ankle. Dr. W. L. Gerhart bandaged the foot with surgeon's tape and reduced the swelling. Several days elapsed before "Gene" was able to walk again.

* * * *

The spectators at the Bucknell-Dickinson baseball game on April 14 enjoyed the added attraction of a parade in which "Pat" Pastorius, Lloyd Streeter, Ray Johnson, and Frank Hammel, all of '29, featured—with the Student Council's "permission."

* * * *

Pauline Lindley, Cornelia Trowbridge, and Jane Rees were recent week-end guests of Betty Slifer in Milton. Betty gave an afternoon bridge party on Saturday in honor of her guests. arah Deck, '28, Veta Davies, '27, and "Babe" Heifsnyder were among the "Sem" girls that attended.

* * * *

Howard Whitling, '29, seems to hold the school record for getting injured. "Pop" has the unlucky habit of running into trouble at least once a week. His latest mishap was a pair of ruined white trousers, and a cracked bone in his ankle. Perhaps he will stay off roller skates in the future.

* * * *

"Kitty" Cunningham, '28, reversed the usual order on Monday evening, April 19, by giving a party to her Doublerite friends in celebration of her birthday. In this way "Kitty" shared a plentiful birthday box from home that furnished the essential part of the celebration.

* * * *

Eight "Semites" whose birthdays all came in the month of April got together and had a combined birthday party on Sunday evening, April 18, on the second floor of New Building. They played cards and ate the large birthday cake baked by Chef Moore. The guests were Isabel Smith, Marian Coe, Pauline Bellet, Virginia Frantz, Virginia Scully, Eleanor Kitlowski, Helen McElravy, Mary Konkle, Isabel Morrison, and Katharine Hensel.

Work Must Have Been Terror to Printers

It has always been a subject of impassioned debate among the unfortunates who have to deal with such things just how bad a manuscript can be.

We have Ben Jonson's word for it that Shakespeare never blotted a line—which must have endeared him to his copyists and printers, no matter what the critical Ben thought of it. We have also Arnold Bennett's assertion that he never touches pen to paper until he has his subject so well thought out that all he need worry about is calligraphy. We know that Anatole France shamelessly seized scissors, paste and pen and began the real revision when the proof sheets arrived, the Living Age says.

But the glory of writing very nearly the worst manuscript in literary history must certainly go to Dostoevsky. The great Russian seems to have had nearly as hard a time keeping his pen sedately at its own proper employment as the ordinary run of mortals experience when they sit down to express what they believe to be thoughts.

One page, which has found its way from his family's possession into the Dostoevsky room in the Historical museum at Moscow, shows a portrait sketch, a deft bit of Gothic architecture, and the name Rachel scrawled over and over again in Roman letters of copperplate perfection, contrasting oddly with the incredible badness of the Russian writing.

With all this it is amazing that the novelist should find any room at all for his writing—but he did, and for innumerable corrections, interlineations, and marginal corrections, also.

Said to Be No Spot Quite Free From Dust

When beams of sunlight shine into a partially darkened room you are able to realize how thick the air is with millions of tiny particles of dust. But it is only with the help of a strong microscope that you can appreciate the marvels of dust.

In the dust in one room you may find such various matters as the pollen grain of grasses, scales from our own skins, as well as fragments from our clothes.

You may also find atoms of salt. Salt dust is carried scores of miles inland from the sea, and there is no part of any land where it does not fall. Sand, too, floats in the air, both sea sand and desert sand. Always there is meteoric dust, ground-up morsels of some lost planet, floating in the air. This dust you find everywhere, on the tops of snowclad mountains and in the deepest abysses of the ocean.

Everything provides dust, from the ash of your cigarette to the scales from the wings of a butterfly.

Ants' Sense of Smell

Experiments prove that ants identify friends and detect enemies by the sense of smell.

Alumni Notes

Nancarrow, '16, Elected Head Of Williamsport High School

James C. Nancarrow, '16, present head of the mathematics department of the Williamsport High School, was elected principal of that high school by the board of education at a special meeting on April 22. The newly elected principal will succeed Alvin M. Weaver, '05, who has been advanced to the superintendent's chair for the city.

Mr. Nancarrow received his early education in the Jersey Shore schools, graduating there in 1911. He then entered Bucknell University graduating in 1916. Following his graduation he took a special course at Penn State, and later, in 1918, special work in chemistry and physics at the Carnegie Institute of Technology. In 1921 Mr. Nancarrow returned to Bucknell for graduate work, taking courses in history, mathematics, educational sociology, and organic chemistry. His teaching career began in Wellsboro in 1916. He has held his present position since 1919.

Mrs. Nancarrow was Ada Brooks, Bucknell, '12.

Mr. Nancarrow will be the third Bucknell man to head the Williamsport High School which has now been under the direction of Bucknell-trained principals for more than a quarter of a century.

MANY BUCKNELLIANS IN WILLIAMSPORT HIGH

In addition to making A. M. Weaver, '05, superintendent of schools, and J. E. Nancarrow, '16, principal of the high school, the Williamsport Board of Education, on April 22, elected a round dozen Bucknellians to the teaching staff of the high school. They are: Isabelle F. Bond, '15; Mary M. Butb, '17; Clara M. Casner, '21; Anne W. Galbraith, '07; John C. Hoshauer, '26; Sara McFarland, '10; Verna G. Null '16; Hayes Person, '20; A. E. Paulhamus, '21; and Marguerite I. Quigley, '20. E. R. Bartholomew, '12, was elected as physical director.

At the same time the high school teachers were elected the Board chose several Bucknellians for other schools, as follows: Curtin School, Hulda Heim, '22, and Mildred Meghan, '24; mery School, Mary Elsnmenger, '24; and H. E. Stabler, '03, was re-elected principal of the Transeau School.

This brings the total number of Bucknellians teaching in Williamsport close to the twenty mark.

Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, '95

A testimonial dinner will be given to Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, '96, retiring superintendent of the Williamsport public schools on April 27 at the Lycoming Hotel in Williamsport. The dinner will be given by the Teachers' Association as a mark of appreciation of Dr. Robbins' excellent work during the twelve years of his incumbency.

More than two hundred guests will attend the dinner, including the Williamsport school directors and the principals and teachers of the grade and high schools. Dr. Charles Lose, Hon. '85, who preceded Dr. Robbins as superintendent, and Edward L. Taylor, president of the school board, will be the principal speakers.

Dr. E. M. Gress, '07

Dr. E. M. Gress, '07, state botanist, is authority for the statement that weeds cost Pennsylvania $32,000,000 annually, according to a dispatch from Harrisburg, printed in the Williamsport Sun of April 23. This estimate was based on a loss of two dollars per acre on each of the approximately 16,000,000 acres of tillable land in the state.

Dr. Gress is planning an educational campaign to induce farmers to plant good clean seed. His activities are to be directed specifically toward the elimination of Canada thistle, horse nettle, quack grass, and garlic, which he classes as most noxious of all weeds growing in Pennsylvania.

Charles F. Bidelspacher, '01

Charles F. Bidelspacher, '01, who represents the Williamsport region in our state legislature, is the father of the Charles Bidelspacher, a student in the Curtin Junior High School, in Williamsport, who recently won the district oratorical contest, in the elimination meet at the Williamsport High School, and who will represent his district in the regional oratorical contests to be held in Philadelphia on May 28. Representative Bidelspacher was a good debater in his literary society when he was a college student. Like father, like son.

Clipman, '88, Taken Sick; Colestock, '96, Gives Sermon

The Rev. W. H. Clipman, '88, was recently taken to the Geisinger Memorial Hospital in Danville, for a surgical operation. Professor Henry T. Colestock, '96, took Mr. Clipman's place in the pulpit of the Mifflinburg Presbyterian Church on Sunday, April 18. Mr. Clipman has returned from the hospital but expects to make periodic visits there for some time to come for further treatment.

Major W. G. Murdock, Ex-'05, Resigns His Prohibition Post

Major William G. Murdock, ex-'05, of Milton has resigned his post as prohibition administrator for the fifth judicial district, with headquarters at Philadelphia.

Major Murdock announced that he had had a disagreement with his superior, Assistant Secretary Andrews, during a telephone conversation with the latter in Washington on Friday, April 23. It appears however, that there has been a disagreement of long standing between the two.

Major Murdock refused to make a detailed statement concerning this matter, merely remarking that even since General Andrews has been in charge of prohibition enforcemnt, the General had seemed to feel not entirely in sympathy with the work that was being done in Philadelphia.

Major Murdock was appointed to the post of state prohibition director about two years ago, to succeed the Rev. John T. Davis, and was appointed about six months ago to the post of prohibition administrator when the prohibition forces were reorganized. Senator Pepper was sponsor for the appointment.

Major Murdock, after a vacation, intends to return to the practice of law. He has not decided whether he will return to Milton or not.

Mrs. Thomas Edwards, widow of a former Bucknell dean of women, and Mrs. Frank Simpson entertained a large number of their friends at the Simpson home on S. Fourth street on the afternoon of April 14. There were many Bucknellians among the guests.

Mrs. Harry R. Warfel has been acting as substitute teacher in the Lewisburg High School recently for Mrs. Margaret Mathias.

CO. A, BUCKNELL'S EMERGENCY TROOP

burg, the company ran out of provisions. Mr. Bower was sent with a squad to gather some. They went about the surrounding country gathering fruit, pastries, meat, and anything they could get. They carried their findings in their blankets. Towards evening they were heavy laden and tired. "Just as we were starting back to our company," says Mr. Bower, "we met a man driving a horse and wagon. Without hesitating we piled our loads on the wagon. But the driver refused to carry us to our destination, until we took charge of affairs."

Camped in Woods

Upon nearing Shippensburg, they camped in a wood a short distance outside of the town. Mr. Bower says that the ladies of the town came out to visit them. Like most college students these chaps furnished some entertainment in the way of songs and speeches. The ministerials took advantage of the opportunity to work out. After an enjoyable evening about the fire, the boys very politely offered to escort the young ladies back to town, but were "turned down."

The next morning the company marched into town and made its headquarters in an old school house. While there Captain Jones acted as provost marshal of the town, and the whole company acted as a provost guard. The safety of the town depended upon the company. The Phi Kappa Psi boys in the group found here some resident fraternity men and shared their hospitality.

Guard Rebel Prisoners

Mr. Bower says that they saw lots of rebel prisoners in Shippensburg. He took part with others in helping to guard them. The prisoners' place of abode was open fields with guards all around. Their tent was the sky and their bed the ground. Mr. Bower said that they had poor clothes and were a discouraged looking group. Some wished that the war was over, and others were seeking revenge.

On one occasion Mr. Bower had a brief chat with one of the rebel prisoners. It was on a hot July afternoon when one of the men ventured outside of the group to the shade of the apple tree that Mr. Bower was enjoying while on guard. Mr. Bower says. "The man was very friendly and we struck up a conversation, which was too soon terminated by one of the Union officers who spied us."

Chambersburg and Hagerstown

After remaining in Shippensburg about a week the company marched on to Chambersburg. Mr. Eaches says that, "Near Chambersburg, the people brought us all the delicacies of their homes. We camped in barns, freight stations, in woods, and open fields. Looking back after more than fifty years, never did sleep seem sweeter than when camping in the open field with no tent but the sky, our shoes and knapsacks for pillows and our blankets around us."

From Chambersburg the company moved to Hagerstown, Md., with two other companies who had Lewisburg captains. They were Captain George W. Forrest, who was the father of James B. Forrest, now in the Union National bank, and Captain Charles Shorkley.

Start Return Trip

Mr. Eaches writes that Hagerstown was a dismal place when they entered. There was not a flag in sight and the doors and windows were nailed shut. The company encamped here for a short time and then retraced their steps northward. Hagerstown, Md., was the farthest south the Bucknell student company went during the war. On this return trip the boys again enjoyed the comforts of the cattle cars with rough boards for seats.

Upon their arrival in Harrisburg the company was discharged, and the boys lost no time in boarding the next special train of cattle cars home. Mr. Bower says of the trip, "Northumberland was the destination of our train. We could not wait for the next, so we hiked from that place to Lewisburg. Our clothes were shaggy and torn, but we did not hesitate to march directly up to Commencement Hall to join in the commencement exercises."

War Time Commencement

There is an interesting story in the Bucknell Mirror of 1898 on "Commencement During the War," part of which we might quote here. "Sunday, July 3, after the news of the battle of Gettysburg, the congregations in the various churches were dismissed and every one worked all day, making bandages, scraping lint, collecting blankets and other comforts for the wounded soldiers. Amidst all this confusion, we wrote our essays, and passed our examinations. Our programs were printed with the Goddess of Liberty in the national colors on the outside, and most of our essays were on the times in which we were living. The girls were all here, and our commencement was assured, but would our class brothers, who had enlisted for the defense of their country, be able to get here to hold their commencement?"

Appear During Exercises

"On Wednesday afternoon, July 29, when our graduating exercises were well under way, there seemed to be some confusion at the entrance of Commencement Hall. In a few moments the large head and broad shoulders of 'Energy' Townsend appeared in view; following him up the steps were some of our class brothers. This was the signal for such an outburst of enthusiasm as to give no doubt of the welcome home to the brave soldiers. By the next day enough men were here to insure graduation exercises, and the University class of '63 received their diplomas and were numbered with the alumni."

Of this the Rev. Mr. Eaches writes: "The class of '63 has been the envy of all the classes since that time, in that it is the only class that escaped the senior examinations. We presented a ragged appearance as we came, clothing torn and soiled and shoes almost worn out."

Those men graduating in the class of 1863 were George Bowman, William Case, Asher Cook, The Rev. O. P. Eaches, Haddonfield, N. J.; Henry F. Grier, Chicago, Ill., David Porter Leas, Henry C. Munro, Joseph Philips Tustin, William W. Winter, Henry Herr Witmer, William J. Wolverton. All except Mr. Eaches and Mr. Grier are dead.

Courage of Men of Company A

Company A of the 28th regiment was in service exactly 42 days. Of this Mr. Eaches writes: "There was no fierce and deadly conflict. Had there been I think that Company A would have faced the enemy with courage. We knew what we were doing when we took the oath to the government. We were not boasters. We are not cowards.

"It was not all solemnity in camp. About the fire at night there were pleasant gatherings, talks of the past and the future. On our marchings we sang 'John Brown's Body,' 'When This Cruel War is Over,' and often taking songs to beguile our way. Corporal Townsend had a favorite hymn, 'I Love to Steal Awhile Away.'"

Such is the story of Bucknell's Emergency Company, whose departure for war stripped the college proper of men, and even markedly decreased the number of students in the Bucknell preparatory school. Though these volunteers were not called upon to fight, it is to be remembered that "they also serve who only stand and wait." They did all that was asked of them. No one could do more.

MU PHI EPSILON

Mu Phi Epsilon announces the initiation of Mrs. W. W. Wilcox, Rebeka Rentschler, and Helen Esther McFarland, and the pledging of Josephine Behney, Esther Weeter, Mary Hite, and Sara Park Miller on Wednesday evening, April 21, in the living room. A party followed, given by the actives to the new members and pledges.

Why the Sea Is Blue

Holiday-makers are sometimes disappointed to find that the sea is not colored that beautiful azure blue which we love. A glass of sea water is perfectly transparent and colorless, yet the ocean is often colored any shade from yellow to purple.

It is the salt in the sea water which causes the blue color, for all the innumerable small particles of salt in the water filter the sun's rays and reflect the blue light. Seas which contain a large proportion of salt are colored the deepest blue. The Mediterranean, for example, which is rich in salt, is perhaps the deepest blue known. And the Pacific ocean is dark enough to be called indigo.

Why Moon Affects Hair

"How the moon any effect upon the growth of human hair?" asks a correspondent. A well-known astrologer declares that it has. He states that if the hair is cut when there is a new moon it grows twice as quickly as if cut when the moon is a dying one. Although this authority has a luxuriant growth of hair, he has it cut only four or five times a year, always when there is a dying moon.

Why Bright Easter Colors

The use of bright colors at Easter is symbolic of the rays of the aurora and the dawning hues of the Easter sun. Purple is largely used because from a very early period it was one of the most highly prized of all colors.

Seals "Preserved"

Under the law passed by congress in 1912 a reserve of 5,000 three-year-old male seals is required, but this number is not now considered adequate to supply the future needs of the herd in the Pribilof islands. During the season of 1925, therefore, 9,350 three-year-old seals were reserved from killing. They are marked by shearing the fur from the tops of the heads.—Washington Star.

SOMETHING TO SUIT

The Cook—Shall I make a nice cottage pudding for dessert?
Mrs. Justwed—Certainly not. Don't you know we're not living in a cottage? Make a flat pudding instead.

THE KNOWN FACT

Wife—They say it takes nine tailors to make a man—I hope that isn't so in your case.
Hubby—I can't say; but I can tell you for a certainty one dressmaker can break me.

FOR WHOSE GOOD?

Lady Visitor—Wonderful roads you have here; but who's benefitted by them besides the motorists?
Host—I might mention the undertaker, I think.

Pass the Ball Grounds

Employer—On your way to the printer's you will pass a baseball ground.
Boy—Yes, sir.
Employer—Well, pass it.

How Long Fish Live

A Swiss naturalist, Konrad Yesner, has recorded the history of a pike two hundred and sixty-seven years old. It had spent its entire existence as a prisoner in a fish pond. Carp are known to live for many years, growing two or three inches a year.

Bad Effect on Trade

In England the trade in black silk was once ruined for a generation because a notorious murderess elected to be hanged in her black silk dress.

Not in Class by Herself

Heaven has its troubles as well as earth, only Heaven does not worry about them so much as we do. This fact was revealed by Betty, who was getting into bed when mamma came to kiss her good-night. "And did you ask God to forgive you?" she asked, having in mind the little temper which Betty had shown during the evening. "Oh, yes, mamma," came the reply, "and God said it was all right. He had many little girls worser than me."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Wondrous Gold

"Gold is a wonderful theater of the understanding. It dissolves every doubt and scruple in an instant. It accommodates itself to the meanest capacity, silences the loud and tremulous and brings over the most obstinate and inflexible."—Addison.

Never Lasting

It takes the public about 10 years to get over a popular delusion; but it always gets over it.

"Work For Humanity, Not Self"--Mrs. Foster

Mrs. Katharine B. Foster, field student secretary of the Baptist Board of Education, spoke in Vespers at the Women's College on Sunday evening, April 25. Her subject was, "What the College Student Expects of His Religion."

The function of the church is not only to minister to the spiritual needs of its members, but also to be active in the field of social service work. In some towns the churches are fulfilling one of these needs; in others, neither of them. Especially toward the laboring man, the church is not doing its duty. Mrs. Foster quoted a speaker at the recent interdenominational conference at Evanston as saying that in mining towns many people join the church in order to have a pastor to recommend them for a job, or to get assistance in time of financial need. In other places people who are not accepted socially, the mentally deficient, and the physically disabled, drift to the church to satisfy their desire for social intercourse.

On the other hand there are churches which are fulfilling their duty in both these fields. In the city of Dallas, Texas, Mrs. Foster said, there hadn't been an automobile accident for ten years, because the citizens decided that it would pay them more to respect traffic regulations and abide by the laws, than to cause loss of life and property. In this same city there are almost five thousand more pupils enrolled in the Sunday Schools than in the public schools.

Mrs. oster and the Student Volunteers were entertained on Saturday evening at the home of Professor and Mrs. L. L. Rockwell. A luncheon was served in cafeteria style, and the guests sat about the fireplace and talked.

Mrs. Foster held conferences on Monday with those students who are interested in doing Daily Vacation Bible School work during this summer and at the same time take work at Columbia University to earn college credits.

New "Y. M." Cabinet Inducted Into Office

In a very impressive and fitting service which marked another milestone in the history of the local Y. M. C. A., the new officers for 1926-27 were installed Monday evening, April 26, in Bucknell Hall. Those installed were C. Irving Carpenter, '27, president; Paul S. Webster, '27, vice president; Frank B. Loper, '28, secretary; and Paul M. Humphreys, '28, treasurer.

Professor C. M. Bond, who had charge of the installation, said, "Light has always been the symbol of faith. The pagans used light. The Russians use lighted candles in their services, as do many sects today. Let your life be a light in your new duties." He then called upon each new officer to light a candle on the cross of candles placed on the table before him, and as each man did this his predecessor came to him, and taking a red ribbon from across his bosom, placed it across the bosom of his successor.

The services closed with a prayer by Professor O. S. Groner, and a song. The Rev. Dr. R. M. West pronounced the benediction.

CORRECTION

Due to an omission made in the last issue of the Bucknellian in reference to the board of editors of the Belle Hop for 1926-27, the office of Assistant Editor-in-chief was left vacant. This position is to be filled by J. Glenn Doyle, '28.

"I dropped my watch on the floor this morning."

"Did it stop?"

"Certainly, did you think it would go through?"

THE COLLEGE CALENDAR

A second rather mysterious disappearance of Alumni Office record material has occurred recently. This time it is rank sabotage in the pilfering from the Alumni Office of The College Calendar. This calendar, a small date book, lists all the official University functions and its theft seriously hampers the making of engagements for organizations.

Partially to counteract this loss on the part of the Alumni Office, organizations with reserved dates should immediately notify the Alumni Office of their former reservations.

GREEN APPLES

(By Amy Jennings)

From the Fourth Anniversary of The New Student, reviewing 4 years of writing on student problems, by students and other authors.

Youth is supposed to be particularly fond of green apples, half-baked ideas and other indigestible comestibles. Age used to be especially apt in pointing out the connection between the indulgence of this appetite and the later colic. How often has not an old man watched a young one consuming Darwinism and prophesied a pain? He went the same way, he did, and he knows how it ends.

But the real truth is that the green apples of the old man's youth have long since ripened and become a most healthful and innocuous diet even for the very young. The green apples of this generation are probably hardly recognized, and are doubtless eaten, if at all, with little or no protest.

If at all .. .. that is the difficulty .. .. .. Youth has become wary. He would rather starve than suffer colic. He has become mentally emaciated. Let him take a good feed from the tree of knowledge—ripe or unripe, the apples are better than those handpicked fruits, taken from goodness knows where, packed in barrels, ripened by steam, and fed to us with a censored spoon.

In other words, why not expose yourself to new ideas, new situations, new people? Summer is the time for green apples and bold experiments. Don't waste these months in sleep and companionable exercise—or even in developing a sweet forbearance in the bosom of your family. You have only three summers of your college life. Use them experimentally. Try new thoughts and different beliefs.

Colic? Pooh! If you have never had one you don't know the capacity of your digestion. You might turn out to be an ostrich. June 7, 1922.

PROFESSORS DESERVE SALARY OF $50,000

A professor of psychology recently left one of our eastern universities and accepted an advertising position in New York. Thereby his annual salary was increased from $5,000 to $25,000. This man was at the very height of distinction as a scholar and teacher. Presently one of our very greatest universities offered him a full professorship at $8,000 annually. He expressed himself as willing to sacrifice much between education and business; but the margin of difference made the change unreasonable. So he still writes advertising for a popular breakfast food,—or maybe toothpaste.

This example can be multiplied by hundreds. Our college and university faculties are being deserted by their first-class members at a rate which calls for a drastic reform of the salary schedules. A generous and well-meaning gentleman gives ten, twenty, or forty millions to found a new university or develop a small college into a large university. How much better it would be to devote all major gifts for a decade to the increase of salaries! .. ..

The list of gifts to science and higher education indicates that the money for education is now forthcoming. Our contention here is that it is not being used to the best advantage. .. .. ..

Today our distinguished minds do not seek out the university. They flee from it as from a desert isle. The best teachers we have are inquiring, by the hundreds, how they can escape poverty and drudgery. Had Justice Harlan Stone not left teaching for private practice, he would have been appointed neither Attorney General nor Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. First class lawyers, surgeons, chemists and economists, literary critics and electrical experts,—no one now expects to find them in our universities. .. .. ..

The salary of a professor should equal that of the average corporation lawyer and the leading scientists in our industrial laboratories. At present the professors should receive from $30,000 to $50,000 annually. .. ..

—F. Bohn, in The Forum.

"THE DOVER ROAD" GIVEN TWO NIGHTS

mer. Leonard was portrayed inimitably by Albert B. Lauderbaugh; Anne, by Margaret U. Brick; Eustasia, by Catherine O. Cunningham; and Nicholas, by Frederic B. Davies.

It is doubtful whether better characters could have been chosen to present the different parts. Albert Lauderbaugh, as Leonard typified the characteristic Englishman, revealing many times, much to the delight of the audience, the typical tardy perception of that character. Kenneth Slifer in the role of Latimer won the audience by his nonchalant manner and dry humor. Margaret Brick played the true Englishwoman, independent but warm-hearted, always reserved, but ready to help. Catharine Cunningham, as Eustasia, captured the hearts of her audience by her childlike, self-sacrificial spirit in caring for the sick. Although she did bore the patients, she showed a heart of gold. Nicholas, well represented by Frederic Davies, was the man of the world, ready to give up women as puzzles. The sesquipedalian Dominic, ever-ready at his master's command, was played very successfully by Robert Dilworth. All the members of the cast deserve credit, for their production showed the result of hard work.

To Mr. C. Willard Smith of the English department go special honors for the time and effort he gave in coaching and directing the play, and for getting results as he did. As one of the members of the cast said, "I can't say too much about how he has helped us."

But all this would have been much less possible had it not been for Roland Dutton, who managed the play and built the scenery. Nearly every night during the three weeks preceding the play saw "Dut" in the basement of Bucknell Hall constructing the sets, and as the time for the play came around he worked tirelessly gathering properties. Another result of his work was the new way in which the curtain was raised and lowered.

Between the second and third acts the female leads were called to the stage to receive beautiful bouquets of roses and snapdragons, donated by the sororities of which the girls are members. The Normandy trio, consisting of Alex Horoschak, 'cello, Paul K. Stolz, violin, and Charles Rivenburg, piano, played between the acts. Members of Cap and Dagger were ushers.

CO-EDS EXCHANGE GIFTS AT SENIOR-SOPH PARTY

Boxes large, boxes small, but all of them slender, each one tucked under the arm of a sophomore girl who seemed to be going somewhere—but where? Everything was explained when these mysterious boxes turned up at the Nightgown and Pajama Party, an old traditional function among the women students, in the living room at the "Sem," Friday evening, April 23.

Interest ran high as each senior and her sophomore sister arrived and the mysterious boxes were opened. After every box had been opened and its donor complimented on the colorful contents, there followed the distribution of the friendship pins to the sophomores, given by their senior sisters as a remembrance of the evening.

Then with Miss Mary Gettys, '25, at the piano, the happy crowd danced until ten, when everyone left—but not until the ice cream and cakes had entirely disappeared.

THE CAMPUS PARLOR SHEIK

He is about five feet eleven inches tall, altho, due to his erect carriage, he looks much taller. His gait is a long, swinging stride which carries him along at a good rate of speed. His military bearing is further enhanced by the spic and span appearance of his clothes, for there are no wrinkles or creases in his suit nor is his necktie worn at the wrong angle. His hair is jet black, and is combed straight back in "Rudy" Valentino fashion. His forehead is rather narrow and his ears are ridiculously small. Long, black eyelashes overhang a pair of large, ebony eyes whose vacant stare reveals the sad fact that his intelligence is not of the highest order. He has a small mouth set just below a nose of a distinctly Grecian appearance. He has a long, slender neck, and his slim, sensitive hands show good care. He gives the impression of being the very embodiment of sophistication. Women cannot resist him. He is the perfect man, the "parlor sheik."—Now you tell one.

DR. PIKE LECTURES ON MENTAL HYGIENE

detention subordinated to that of cure. There are 1685 persons at Danville, none of which are mechanically restrained. Many are even working miles away. There are no cells there, and no doors are locked at night except those to the wards. There is no "Leave Hope Behind" sign at Danville.

Dr. Pike stressed the fact that today we talk not of the insane but of those having mental disease. The inmates are known as sick patients and treated as such.

When the patient enters the Danville Hospital he is given a thorough examination. When this is completed, his case is brought up in a consultation of ten physicians, who diagnose his case and decide what is to be done. A social service worker keeps the patient in touch with his relations and the outer world. When sufficiently improved, he is taken home, or, if a home is lacking, the authorities find one for him. All those released are helped as much as possible by the authorities.

It is surprising to note that 50 per cent. of all cases go back home to stay. The other 50 per cent. is composed of three groups: those sixty years of age or more, those having mental disease caused by syphilis, which is incurable, and the group whose mental conditions began before they left school, called dementia praecox.

The greatest advance steps in the care of mental defectives were suggested by Clifford Beers, a man who at one time was mentally defective. He recognized preventive means and wrote a book on "The Mind that Found Itself."

In 1900 the National Commission for Mental Hygiene was formed. This commission has done much in recent years to further the work of caring for mental defectives.

This mental health is necessary. We must understand the mechanism of the mind, normal and sub-normal psychology. The human mind is bound to the conception of progress, embracing all laws of evolution. The mind is dependent on life, and property and function of a certain living order. Life, a combination of force and matter, has three phases, namely, inherent motion, inherent nutrition, and inherent reproduction.

At this point Dr. Pike produced a human brain and proceeded to point out the various parts and functions. An interesting part was that a normal man's brain weighs forty-nine ounces while that of a woman weighs only forty-three ounces.

The professor had written on the back of a student's paper:

"Please write more legibly."

The next day the student went to the desk and asked:

"Professor, what is that you wrote on the back of my theme?"

FRILL AND FROWN ACTS STRONG PLAY, "GOOSE HANGS HIGH"

Theme, Of Parental Sacrifice, Appeals To College Audience. Many Are In The Cast

TEST OF MODERN YOUTH IS KEY-NOTE OF DRAMA

Father Willing To Sacrifice Honor For His Children To Keep Them In College

One of the best dramatic productions that has been given at Bucknell was presented by Frill and Frown, in its play, "The Goose Hangs High," at Bucknell Hall on Friday evening, April 30.

The "Goose Hangs High," with its theme of parental sacrifice, had a strong appeal to an audience of college students. In the role of the parents, Arthur Harris and Edna Watson did excellent work. Mildred Fox, as the Mid-Victorian Grandmother Bradley, shocked by her modern grandchildren, was equally commendable in her ability to relieve tense moments with a bit of comedy. Twentieth-century youth was well portrayed by Domingo Mare and Florence Utt, as the collegiate twins, supported by Barton Dakin as the elder brother. Cornelia Trowbridge, the sweetheart. Gilbert McCune, a family friend, Frederick Davies and Frank Johnston, as business men, and Helen Williams, the cook, all cooperated to make the play a splendid success.

The key-note of the play was that modern youth, seemingly so selfish, can make generous sacrifices when put to a test. Bernard and Eunice Ingals are sacrificing everything, much against the will of Grandmother Bradley, to meet the demands of their children. When the children, Lois and Bradley, twins at college, and Hugh, the elder son, arrive home for the Christmas vacation, matters are at a crisis. The purse has been emptied to its limit and the demands have increased, for Hugh has become engaged to Dagmar Carrol and the twins are planning expensive new ventures.

Ingals' ground to revolt against dirty politics, resigns his position at the City Hall in a moment of rage.

Sheckells Will Hold Managership Of Band

Albert W. Sheckells Jr., retiring president of the University Band, was elected manager of that organization at the meeting held in Commencement Hall on the evening of April 29. Sheckalls will assist the present manager, Clyde Learn, until the end of this term.

A committee was appointed to arrange for the annual banquet of the band. It is planned to have this banquet during the week of May 10. All those who intend to go to the banquet are requested to be present at the rehearsal Thursday evening, May 6. The voting of medals to the various members who have completed three years service in the band will also take place Thursday evening.

The band is planning on giving several twilight concerts on the campus during the coming nice weather. They may give several concerts in near-by towns as requests are numerous. An entirely new program has been prepared and the men are anxious to show the people of the college and the town just what they can do. These concerts will pave the way for the commencement season, at which time the band will furnish the music.

Director "Eddie" Calhoun praised the boys for the work of the year and outlined his plans for the coming year. Although previous service in the band would be considered, he stated that next year he would like to see a smaller band with selected musicians rather than a larger organization with inferior men. It is planned to have membership on merit entirely, and thus this organization will reflect more credit on Bucknell.

Y.W.C.A. Convention Held At Milwaukee

Anne Everitt, '28, Is Delegate For Bucknell Institution At National Assembly

Anne Everitt, '28, returned on Thursday, April 29, from the Y. W. C. A. national biennial convention held at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, April 21-27, at which she represented Bucknell University.

The major purpose of the convention, Miss Everitt reports, was accomplished when an amendment was adopted to strike from the constitution of the association the requirement that all electors in the association be members of Protestant Evangelical churches. The new amendment makes it optional for each association to throw open its voting membership to Catholics, Unitarians, Christian Scientists, and other denominations outside the Federal Council of Churches. It is stipulated, however, that three-fourths of the voting members of each local delegation at the national convention must be "members of churches eligible to membership in the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America."

The convention of three thousand regular delegates was opened on Wednesday, April 21, by Mrs. Frederic M. Paist, President of the National Association, who is a sister of Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy. Meetings were held in the Milwaukee Auditorium, a structure composed of six separate auditoriums and covering an entire block. To this first meeting, Mme. A. Bertrand, First Vice President of the World's Committee, brought greetings from the World's Committee.

The feature of the morning sessions was a series of addresses, "Some New Frontiers," by the Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, of Chicago, Ill. At this time the business of the convention was also transacted. Afternoons were spent in Convention Discussion Groups. Twenty-five separate groups met to discuss the place of the Y. W. and its work. Reports of the sentiment found in these groups were given at a Convention Forum in the evening. Student, Industrial, and Business and Professional Assemblies also met separtely to discuss problems individual to their group.

On Saturday evening, April 24, a pageant, "Forward Thrugh The Ages," was given. On either side of the great stage of the auditorium were enthroned Time and Woman. To Woman's demand as to what she should do, Time told her to go back through the ages; to see what other women had done, and profit by them. There followed a procession of beautifully gowned women who depicted the life of woman from the time when she was a mere burden-bearer, down through the ages to the present day when she is the "hub of the universe."

Glee Club Officers Elected For 1926-27

Charles Kuskell, '27, for the past three years bass soloist, and Lewis K. Davis, '27, student manager for the same length of time, were elected president and student manager respectively of the Bucknell University Glee Club at the business meeting held in Room 1 on the evening of April 31. Other elections resulted in the selection of Gilbert McCune, '27; vice president; Lyman H. Musser, '27, secretary; and Charles H. Rivenburg, '29, librarian. It was suggested that the director appoint the two members of the vigilance committee, and as a result, Director R. F. Hartz announced that C. H. Rivenburg, '29, and L. H. Fahringer, '28, were the men to serve in this capacity.

The student manager and chairman of the banquet committee, L. K. Davis, '27, announced that the annual banquet of the club would be held on Wednesday evening, May 12, at The Cameron House. Plans are being made to have a fitting culmination of the year's work by having a chicken and waffle dinner. Plans are also under way for a combined glee club outing of the men and women on Saturday, May 15. Director Hartz then gave a brief outline of the work fo rthe coming year and thanked the boys for their cooperation of the past.

PHI GAMMA DELTA HAS FOUNDERS' DAY

Charles Furman, '86, Tells Fijis History Of Delta Chapter Founded In May, 1882

Sixty diners, including one of the founders of the chapter, numerous alumni, the active chapter, and the pledges, celebrated the forty-fourth anniversary of the founding of Delta chapter of Phi Gamma Delta, at a banquet held on Friday evening, April 30, at the local chapter house on University avenue. The founder who was present was Charles B. Furman, '86.

Quite naturally Mr. Furman was the lion of the evening. When Toastmaster Thomas Wood, '05, asked him to lead off in the speech making, Mr. Furman told the story of the founding of Delta chapter. The ban on fraternities at Bucknell, which had been effective during much of President Justin R. Loomis' administration, was lifted by President David Jayne Hill, almost as soon as he was inaugurated, in 1879. The Phi Kappa Psis and the Sigma Chis, then the only fraternity organizations at Bucknell, resumed activity. But the college had grown during the ban, and the time seemed ripe for another organization.

Gettysburg Phi Gams thought there should be a chapter here, the matter was taken up by the late Hon. John C. Nissley, '85, a group was organized, and in May, 1882, this group of five men was formally taken into the fraternity of Phi Gamma Delta.

The installation took place in George Lenhart's room—the corner room on the second floor of the old Harvey house, the brick residence on the northwest corner of Third and St. George streets, immediately across the street from the residence of the Hon. Albert W. Johnson. The installing legates were Harry L. Stahler, of the Gettysburg chapter, and the Rev James Shindle, a Lutheran clergyman

L'AGENDA STAFF ELECTED; McHAIL EDITOR FOR 1927

At the calmest class election that has prevailed in the hectic politicni history of the sophomore class, Vincent W. McHail was elected editor-in-chief of the 1928 L'Agenda and Frederick Fox was elected business manager. The class meeting was held in Commencement Hall on Friday afternoon, April 30.

Before any nominations were made, a motion to accept proxy votes was passed almost unanimously, and then candidates were placed before the class.

Two additional tellers were selected to aid the three originally selected, when the class deemed such action necessary, by passing a motion to that effect.

Bucknell Bowlers Win Booby Prize

The Lewisburg bowling season ended with the Lions club in last place with an imposing average of .119, showing 6 games won and 37 lost after an all-winter tournament. Ralph Hartz, H. W. Holter, George M. Kunkel, and Professor Frank E. Burpee were the mainstays of the "crack" team.

Their poor showing is explained by Ralph Hartz, who said: "We do not play to win, but for the enjoyment we get out of playing."

It must be remembered that bowling gives the husband a legitimate excuse for being "Out" occasionally. Next winter should see a boom in faculty bowlers.

Nine members of the Lafayette College faculty available for addresses at high school commencement exercises are included in the annual list prepared by the Teachers' Bureau at Lafayette College for the information of high school officials in eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey. This bulletin is being mailed to high schools.

"CRIME TO BE SICK IN UTOPIA"-- DEALEY

Dr. James Q. Dealey, Of Brown, Tells Of Scientific Progress To Bring Utopia Nearer

"In the land of Utopia no one should ever become sick. If he does, he will be put in jail," said Dr. James Quayle Dealey, professor of political and social science at Brown University, who spoke on "The Rond to Utopia through the Methods of Science," to a considerable audience at Bucknell Hall on the evening of May 3.

"Science will be so far advanced at that time that it will be considered a crime to become sick," Dr. Dealy said. "Imprisonment will be the punishment for such criminal carelessness. That better health and longer life is an existing realization of Utopianism is evident to-day.

"At one time, when a woman reached the age of forty she sat in a rocking-chair, Bible in hand, awaiting the summons of death. To-day, however, when a woman reaches sixty, she daubs her face with paint and powder, bobs her hair, and adorns herself in the garb of a flapper, making it almost impossible to distinguish her from her daughter.

"In many other respects civilization has advanced along the road to Utopia," Dr. Dealey continued. "Improvement in the management and construction of cities, in the diffusion of education, in the federation of churches, in the alleviation of poverty, in the diminishing of the number of accidents, in the prolongation of life, has been a direct result of this reaching out for something better in life.

"The idea of Utopia—a land of perfect bliss—is not a new one, according to Dr. Dealey. Plato, a Greek Philosopher, portrayed his idea of Utopia in his book, "The Republic." In the fifth century St. Augustine tried to console the Christians by picturing in his "City of God" a beautiful vision of the hereafter, which in those days was thought to be in the immediate future. But Sir Thomas Moore must be credited with giving the word "Utopia" to literature. It was he who saw the existing desolation in England, and attempted to rectify conditions by writing his "Utopia," a place where the most perfect system of laws and institutions existed.

"In the United States to-day there is the foundation of a would-be Utopia," said Dr. Dealey. "And this is New York City, which will some day be the intellectual and esthetic center of the country. From it will radiate all art, all culture.

"But the world is yet an infant," concluded Dr. Dealey. "Mankind is only about 25,000 years old, and the scientists predict that this is but a drop in the bucket compared to the millions of years the world will yet last. And so we should not succumb to fatalism, but should strive to reach Utopia which ever recedes in the distance as we approach it."

Four Home Contests On Bison Schedule

Two home games are scheduled for Bucknell baseball teams during the coming week. Wednesday afternoon the Orange and Blue freshman nine will meet the Penn State yearlings on the Memorial Stadium diamond here, and Saturday afternoon Albright will be the home attraction against the varsity.

The Albright game will be the first of four successive contests scheduled for the home field. Gettysburg is carded to appear here May 14, Ursinus May 21, and Lebanon Valley June 4. One game will be played with Penn State at State College, June 5, and the Bucknell baseball season will end with a return game with the State collegians in Memorial Stadium June 8.

Walter Blair's first year tossers also have several interesing contests booked for them. The tilt with the Penn State first year men is the first local one of the year for the yearlings.

"Last night I made an awful mistake."

"That so? How come?"

"I drank a bottle of gold paint."

"How do you feel now?"

"Guilty."

Bucknell Biologists Survey Water Supply

Toil Beside Mountain Streams, Carrying Heavy Back Packs, To Get Water Samples

The bacteriological survey of the Lewisburg water supply was conducted by Professor John W. Rice and twenty assistants on Friday and Saturday, April 30 and May 1. Spruce Run, which supplies the water for the Spruce Run dam, was tested as far as Bear Gap, and Twenty-two samples of water were examined.

At seven o'clock, Thursday morning, two automobile trucks collected the crew at Bucknell Hall, and hauled the biologists to Spruce Run dam, the location of the Lewisburg sedimentation basin, the intake of the town's water supply. Supplies were sent ahead to Dr. Davis' cabin in Bear Gap.

Toiling, with heavy packs on their backs, through thickets, brambles, and swamps, the expedition took samples from every inlet or rivulet emptying into Spruce Run. Testing equipment was carried along, and the tests were completed soon after a stop was made.

The first night was spent at the cabin where banjo music helped entertain the tired students. A camp fire was built, and stories of all kinds and descriptions were swapped around the round table.

The survey was ended about one mile from the Sand Mountain fire tower, which many of the party climbed. Professor Rice climbed the 75-foot ladder in 30 seconds, and several of the girls—there were five girls and fifteen men on the trip—also scaled the dizzy height of the tower. "Ken" Gardner decided that the ladder would not support his bulk, so he would not venture to climb the "stairway."

Two "hi" coli, an indication of sewage pollution, were discovered in one of the twenty-two samples tested. Other results of the tests will be announced this week.

FRESHMAN HOP COMMITTEE APPOINTED; DANCE MAY 17

The Freshman Hop, the last class dance of the year, will be held in the Armory on the night of May 15. "Jerry" Hathaway, the Hop chairman, has announced the following committee, from whom tickets may be purchased: Edwin Wallace Wilkinson, Edward Simon Hoffman, James Griffiths Whillis Williams, Horrace Jones Sheppard, Harry Victor Meyer, Byron Burdie, Helen Rillo, Elizabeth Montgomery, Elizabeth McHose, Gertrude Gochnaur, and Josephine Roberts.

The Eight Collegians of Harrisburg ave been signed to play for the dance.

Leaguers Will Plan For 'Matty' Memorial

Organized baseball's support of two separate projects memorializing Christy Mathewson were disclosed today, together with the appointment of a group of the games' leading officials as members of a memorial committee.

The proceeds of two major league benefit games will go toward the erection of the memorials to the famous pitcher of the old New York Giants. The first will be played May 28 at Boston, between the New York and Boston Nationals for the benefit of the fund being raised by the American League to erect a welfare center and club house at Saranac lake, where Mathewson died last October.

The second contest, on July 7, will be played at the Polo Grounds between the Giants and the Washington Senators.

The proceeds will be devoted to the erection of a useful memorial to "Big Six" at Bucknell, the scene of his boyhood days and later triumphs as college athlete. Baseball Commissioner Landis, as donor chairman, heads the memorial committee.

PIKE LECTURE ON "EMOTIONAL LIFE" WELL ATTENDED

Delusion is the Common Example Of Much Disorder Found in Ideation and Judgment

PIKE EXPLAINS BRAIN IS SEAT OF EMOTIONS

Emotion, Preceding Intelligence, Reacted To Instinctively In Different Ways

Dr. Pike's third lecture given on Monday, May 1, was attended by a larger group than either of the previous lectures. His subject was "Emotional Life."

Continuing with the discussion of memory in his last lecture, Dr. Pike started out, "Idealism is the next step in memory. This deals with the grouping of percepts to form ideas. Then ideas are associated in order to form a judgment. After this we associate judgment to form a new judgment. This is the process of reasoning."

There is much disorder found in ideation and judgment, according to the lecturer. A common example of this is a delusion. Delusions are not true to fact, highly improbable, cannot be corrected by any appeal to reason, and are out of harmony with the individual's education and surroundings.

There are three common types of delusions; namely, melancholy, expansive ideas, and ideas of persecution. The first, the idea of being unworthy, often by self accusation, is permeated by degradation. The second, are generally cases where the individual thinks he is aching, or otherwise, and acts accordingly. These cases are usually caused by syphilis. In the third type, the individual is always convinced of his innocence, imaging everyone is after him, and tries to fortify himself. First he recognizes his persecutors, then tries to get away, and finally, with his back to the wall, he springs to kill. This is the most dangerous type of victims of delusion.

The brain, Dr. Pike explained, is the seat of all emotions. Around this hinges the complex axis that makes up all our human experiences. The emotions may be set in action by the senses: seeing, smelling, hearing, feeling, and tasting. The sympathetic

Drum To Represent Bucknell As Orato

Eastern Pennsylvania colleges will be represented by Bucknell University at the sectional elimination contest for the National Intercollegiate oratorical championship to be held at Washington, D. C. soon. Representing Bucknell will be T. Burns Drum, a member of the senior class.

The Bucknell orator was selected to represent the Pennsylvania district at a contest held Friday, April 30, at Bucknell, in which representatives from Muhlenburg, Penn State, Swarthmore, Temple, Marywood Women's College, Juniata, and Bucknell participated. Walter Heist of Juniata was awarded second place in the contest.

The winner of the Washington contest will be awarded a prize of three hundred dollars and the right to participate for a three thousand dollar prize and the national intercollegiate oratorical championship at Los Angeles, Cal.

MU PHI EPSILON

Mu Phi Epsilon, the women's musical sorority, will give a public concert on Monday, May 17, in the Baptist church. An interesting program has been planned and as added attraction Mrs. James P. Whyte, a Mu Phi Epsilon alumna from Northwestern University, will give some readings. A silver offering, which will go towards the national endowment fund of the sorority, will be taken.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

SIGMA CHI

Kappa Chapter of Sigma Chi welcomed brother C. M. Kunkle, '00, to the house for a brief visit Tuesday morning.

The Sigma Chi fraternity house is the scene of busy preparations for their annual spring dance, which will be held the week-end of May 7-8.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Brother Don Kaupp, ex-'26, was a chapter visitor over the week-end.

Brother Jack Davis, '23, visited the chapter over the week-end.

Brother Scarlet and Ralph Davies of Penn visited Fred Davies over the week-end.

Brother John Corter, '21, was a guest Friday and Saturday.

Brother Charles B. Furman, '86, one of the two living founders of Delta chapter, was a guest Friday and Saturday while attending the annual Founders' Day banquet.

Mr. Blackmore and Mr. Cook, of Carnegie Tech, were guests over the week-end.

Alfred James, '29, of Penn State, was a guest over the week-end.

Final arrangements have been made for the week-end party to be held next week. Noble and his orchestra will play both evenings.

KAPPA SIGMA

The following brothers visited the chapter over the week-end: "Cy" Hoffa, '22, Berninger, '22, A. R. Lewis, '23, "Andy" Hendrickson, '25, "Tenny" Steininger, '20, and Luke Miller, '23.

"Tommy" Horan, '24, accompanied by Mr. A. R. Kaiser and Miss L. Raker of Mt. Carmel, visited the chapter house over the week-end.

Brothers Davis and Eggleston, and coach Ham of the State College tennis team, were house guests on Saturday, May 1.

Preparation is being made for the annual Mother's Day, which will be held at the chapter house, Sunday, May 9.

"Eb" Williams, '24, and his parents, of Nanticoke, motored over to college during the week-end.

"Jack" Newlin, brother of pledge "Ted" Newlin, was a house guest during the week.

Brother "Bill" Gray, '26, and E. A. Hartman, '26, of State College visited the house on Sunday, May 2.

Fingley, Carback, Taylor, and Sand, Druids at Penn State, attended the Druid Formal at the S. A. E. house.

"Chuck" Kushell, '27, visited friends in Nanticoke over the week-end.

"Frei" Dixon, '26, spent the week-end in the vicinity of Wilkes-Barre.

Joseph Rudner and John Davis of Lansford were house guests of Clayton Hollinger, '27, and James Wil- '29, over the week-end.

"Jack" Cregnell and L. Tilgalon of Honesdale were house guests of "Jack" Dowd, '26, on Sunday May 2.

DELTA SIGMA

Parents' Day was celebrated at Delta Sigma house on Sunday, May 2, by the presence of a score of fathers and mothers of Demies, and the following of a carefully prepared program for their entertainment. The affair was a pronounced success, partly through the efforts of Clifford H. Mellor, chairman of arrangements, and partly because parents and boys entered completely into the spirit of the occasion.

From the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard, the first father and mother to appear from a distance, at six o'clock Saturday morning, the week-end was devoted to the renewing of home ties. Eighteen parents were present at Sunday dinner, and the room overflowed so that it was necessary to run a second table. Toward the close of the meal, "Mike" McClune, '27, delivered to the guests a brief speech of welcome, and the waiters appeared immediately with a set of silver candlesticks, bearing the fraternity crest, for each family represented. The formal part of the program being then concluded, each diner left the table with a red, white, or pink carnation, according to his taste.

A Brunswick Panatrope, an electric phonograph, was purchased from Housel's of Williamsport recently, and has attracted much attention, as it can be heard, at times, on the hill.

The 8 Collegians of Harrisburg have been secured to play at the annual week-end party, May 21 and 22. Other plans for this event have been going ahead smoothly.

The freshmen have finally come to their "Reign of Terror" and have been performing different antics for the benefit of the active chapter. The week will end with an over night hike on Saturday night. "Bob" Dilworth promises an exciting time.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Allen Lowrie, of Porto Rico, was a visitor of Pledge Brother Colestock the week of April 24. Mr. Lowrie, whose father is governor of Porto Rico, is a student at the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Guests at the house on Sunday, April 20, included: Brothers W. J. Rolfe, '20, "Skipper" Jones, '20, D. A. Copenhaver, '24, and Mr. Pfarr, of Scranton.

Extensive plans arre being laid for the biggest and best week-end party Delta Zeta has ever had. Lloyd Major's orchestra of Harrisburg has been secured for the occasion. The house will be decorated with its colors, purple, green, and gold.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

A pleasant little "Vic" dance enabled the boys to while away the afternoon of May 1. Miss Helen Bartol and Mrs. W. W. Wilcox were guests. The pianoless orchestra played its entire repertoire in order to give the "Vic" a rest. Five hundred and bridge were played, but the chess fiends were unable to find anyone willing to watch of play with them.

BETA KAPPA

Those who attended the Beta Kappa Birthday Dance, held in the Lewisburg Club on Saturday evening, May 1, had a "rattling" good time. Not only did the baby rattles which were given to the young ladies contribute to this, but the "peppy" music furnished by the Blue Band made the affair a success. The chaperones were Professor and Mrs. Frank Burpee and Miss Kathryn Clush.

The pledges "worked out" on the fraternity tennis court on Saturday, making it available for the use of the ambitious "stars."

Ray Johnston, brother of "Pete" Johnston, '28, and Cyril Augustine of Apollo, Pa. were guests at the house over the week-end.

Since the installation of the radio at the house many of the baseball fans have caught the radio "bug."

PI BETA PHI

The patronesses entertained the active chapter on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Malcolm Musser.

On Saturday, May 8, the local alumnemembers and pledges of the local chapter in celebration of Founders' local chapter in celebration of Founnae will entertain both the active Day.

PROGRESSIVE?

Nine Bucknell co-eds wishing for a date,
Suddenly the doorbell rang, then there were eight.
Eight little co-eds, sending prayers to heaven,
One went to the movies, then there were seven.
Seven sad co-eds, in an awful fix,
One began to read a book, then there were six.
Six pretty co-eds, wishing "He'd" arrive,
One remembered Monday's quiz, then there were five.
Five wistful co-eds, their eyes upon the door,
One went out to take a walk, then there were four.
Four hopeless co-eds, as mad as they could be,
One took a trolley ride, then there were three.
Three brown-eyed co-eds, feeling mighty blue,
One called up a frat house, then there were two.
Two timid co-eds, wishing for some fun,
One got tired and went to bed, then there was one.
One lonesome co-ed, the whole world seemed to shun,
Then at last the 'phone bell rang, and so my tale is done.

"Measure of the Great"

Great men are the ambassadors of Providence sent to reveal to their fellow men their unknown selves. There is something about them better than they do or say. If measured at all, they are to be measured in the responsive action of what others do or say. They come and go, in part a mystery, in part the simplest of all experience, the compelling influence of truth. They leave no successor. The heritage of greatness descends to the people.—Calvin Coolidge.

Let Them Know That You Saw Their "Ad" in The Bucknellian

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

RAINCOAT FOR FIELDS LATEST FAD IN SPORT

Great raincoats for baseball and football fields, tennis courts, and other playing places, made of a special rubberized fabric, which will keep the ground dry and thus permit games to be played in spite of rainy weather, have now been developed and it is expected will be extensively used in coming seasons in athletic contests. The University of Illinois is the first great institution to arrange for the new "raincoat" for its football field. The rainy season of last year, which interfered with the speed of famous backs such as "Red" Grange, and spoiled many a football contest, brought the need of such a covering sharply to the attention of the athletic officials of that institution.

The new rubberized fabric, made according to a special formula, has been developed by the Du Pont Company and this material is such that it is not only rainproof, but resistant to fungus growth, thus preventing it from becoming moldy or mildewed when rolled up and not in use. Tests of sections of the new fabric were made at the University of Illinois grounds under light frost conditions, and the rubberized material kept the ground from four to six degrees warmer than other fabrics, besides keeping out the water.

Satisfactory tests of the new material were also made in the theoretical and applied mechanics laboratory of the university. The development of the new material is expected greatly to aid in baseball and tennis matches, many of which have to be postponed each year because of showers which make the ground too wet for playing.

Harvard Outnumbers Colleges In Roster of Scientific Men

"In academic production and possession of scientific men Harvard leads by a wide margin," said Dr. J. McKeen Cattell, editor of Science, in a January issue of that publication.

"In 1920 there were at Harvard 73 of our thousand leading scientific men. The numbers in other large institutions were: Columbia, 42; Chicago, 39; Yale, 35; Johns Hopkins, 35; Cornell, 33; California, 31. From 1905 to 1920 the net gain was at Yale, 9; at Harvard, 7; at the Johns Hopkins, 5; at California, 4. Chicago and Cornell were stationary; the net loss at Columbia was 18.

"The men can be weighted, in which case the relative strength of Harvard becomes greater. The ten strongest departments in each of the twelve sciences have been determined, Harvard among universities standing first in mathematics, physics, chemistry, botany, zoology, pathology, and anthropology; second in geology and physiology.

"The Johns Hopkins had one of our leading thousand scientists for 37 students. At Harvard the ratio was 1 to 75; at Yale, 1to 105; at Columbia, 1 to 262. In the fifteen year period the Department of Agriculture had a net loss of nine, the Geological Survey of 6; the Smithsonian Institution of 5; the Bureau of Standards a gain of 11. The Carnegie Institution and the Rockefeller Institute had large gains as had also the industrial laboratories. The movement of scientific men to the research foundations and the laboratories is one of the notable changes of the past 25 years."

Lafayette Gets Ancient Coins

Five Parthian silver drachms have been added to the wealth of Lafayette College through the gift of the Rev. J. Christy Wilson, Presbyterian missionary in Persia. These coins were dug up near Ahar, Persia, in 1923, and are now on display in the Van Wickle Library at Lafayette College. Each of the coins carries the head of a different ruler, and these heads have been identified as those of Mithradates III, B. C. 57-54; Orodes I, B. C. 57-38; Phrates III, B. C. 70-51; Sintraces, B. C. 77-70, and Artabanus, B. C. 88-70.

College Girls To Learn By Working

In an attempt to get first hand knowledge of conditions in shops and factories where women are employed fifty Radcliffe, Wellesley, and Simmons students are to seek employment during the summer and report in full upon their experience when they return to college in the fall. The women are to go incognito and spend their leisure as well as their working hours, exactly as the working girls do.

Make Sure!

All previous wills are revoked by the drawing-up of a new will, but so much trouble arises through error or carelessness that it is always best to make sure of the matter by turning the document to be revoked. Remember that, if the new will is lost or destroyed, an older will that is not lost or destroyed might become valid. It is impossible to be too careful.

Honor From Reproach

Many words used as terms of contempt and reproach have since become titles of honor. Both the Methodist and the Quakers were so called in contempt, as indeed were the Puritans and the Roundheads. It must not be forgotten either that the word "Christian" was a term of contempt, first used in Antioch by the enemies of the new religion.

That Thin Knowledge

Required to tell what he knows about Isaac Newton the average person would reply that Sir Isaac was sitting under the old apple tree at Appomattox composing Paradise Lost, when an apple fell from the tree and hit him on the head. He jumped up, crying Eureka! and immediately invented the steam engine.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Book Borrowers

All of us suffer from people who borrow our books and then forget to return them. In time we cannot remember what has become of the missing volumes. Keep a card or small notebook at hand near the bookshelves and each time a book is borrowed jot down the title, the borrower and the date. Then when a reasonable length of time has elapsed do not hesitate to ask for the return of the book.

Heroic Roman Matron

Cecona, wife of Caligula, emperor of Rome, was killed by Julius Lupus, A. D. 41, while weeping over the body of her murdered husband. When she saw the assassin approaching and discovered his purpose, she calmly presented her breast to the sword, urging him to finish the tragedy his companions had begun. Her two daughters died by the same hand.—Chicago Journal.

Strategy

"You are the most beautiful girl I ever kissed," he whispered to her. So of course, after that, she did not dare ask him if she was the first.

The Gleaning Bell

In many parts of rural England one may still hear the gleaning bell being sounded at morn and eventide, to tell the country folk when they may begin gleaning and when they must cease.

The custom is of considerable antiquity, being mentioned by Tusser in the year 1577. As a rule, the bell is sounded from the belfry of the parish church, and the ringer is entitled to a penny for the whole period from each family that goes gleaning.

In some parishes, however, a crier perambulates the district with a hand bell while in others a gong, suspended from a tripod on the village green, is utilized.

Cloud Turrets

A scientific explanation of the connection between the imposing masses of cumuius clouds, piled up in aspiring white turrets, which are popularly called "thunder heads," and the approach of a thunderstorm is offered in a recent report on cloud studies made by one of the government scientists.

It appears that the form of cloud called turreted cumulus is most common when there is a rapid vertical decrease of temperature in the upper air, combined with heating at the ground, which favors the ascent of columns of air to great heights, and that is, at the same time, a condition favorable to thunderstorms.

Smithy on Wheels

In olden times the blacksmith's craft was not merely the rough work and shoeing of horses that it is today. Very fine work was done by the old smiths, who were expert at the making of iron gates, ornamental fences, firedogs, and so on.

In the hope of reviving this almost forgotten craft a rural development committee in Yorkshire is sending out a blacksmith's demonstration van to tour the villages.

The van is fitted with a lathe, grinding and drilling machinery, a portable forge, an oil engine, and welding plant. The village blacksmith will thus have a chance of seeing modern tools and methods at work.—London Answers.

Tally on Fighting Men

The "Field of Sticks" custom was recently explained at a gathering of Clachnacuddin, Royal Arch chapter, on a trip to Achnabat. The word "achnabat" comes from the Gaelic term "Anchan-a-bachte" (the field of the sticks), and it is supposed that before going into battle with a rival clan the members of one clan stuck their sticks into the soft mossy ground of the field. After the affray it was easily seen how many of them had been killed or were missing by the number of unclaimed sticks.

Winking In Chapel Offence In Old Days

Early Regulations At Columbia Also Forbade Cockfighting, Dicing, and Card Games

Students who find college regulations irksome in these modern days will be interested to know something of the rules and regulations that obtained in American colleges in the early days, when even winking in chapel was deemed an offense serious enough to bring down upon the offender's head a public rebuke from the college head.

The Bucknellian has secured copies of the laws and regulations of several of our leading colleges in their early days, and will publish these from time to time. In this present issue is published a digest of the regulations of King's College, now Columbia University, as they existed before the War of the Revolution changed the name of the institution. These particular regulations were adopted June 3, 1755, which was at the time of the French and Indian War, when the land around Bucknell was dense wilderness, and still the hunting ground of the Indians. The digest follows:

Of Admission

None shall be admitted (unless by particular Act of the Governors) but such as can read the first three of Tully's Select Orations and the Three first Books of Virgil's Aeneid into English, and then Ten first Chapters of St. John's Gospel in Greek, into Latin and such as are well versed in all the rules of Clark's introduction so as to make true Grammatical Latin and are expert in Arithmetic so far as the Rule of Reduction to be examined by the President or fellows:

Every scholar shall have a Copy of these Laws and his Admittatur shall be signed at the end of them by the President upon his Promising all due Obedience to them which Promise shall be expressed in Writing under his hand.

Of The Public Worship

The President or one of the Professors or Fellows in his absence shall every morning and evening read the form of prayers established by the Governors of the College and according to the rules and method therein prescribed.

Every student shall constantly attend the said publick service at such stated hours as the President shall appoint and those that absent themselves shall for every offence be fined twopence and one penny for not coming in due season, unless they can alledge such reasons for their absence or Tardiness as shall appear sufficient to the President.

Every Pupil shall constantly attend on the Publick Worship every Lord's Day at such Church or meeting as his Parents or Guardians order him to frequent and for very neglect shall be obliged to perform such Extraordinary Exercise as the President and Professors or fellows shall appoint unless he hath some reasonable excuse admitted to be sufficient by the President.

Every Pupil shall behave with the utmost decency at Publick Worship, or in the Hall and whoever is proved guilty of any profane or indecent behavior as talking, laughing, jostling, winking, etc., he shall submit to an admonition for the offence and to an Extraordinary Exercise for the second and if Obstinate, expelled.

Of Moral Behavior

If any Pupil shall be convicted of Drunkenness, Fornication, Lying, Theft, Swearing, cursing or any other scandalous immorality he shall submit to open admonition and confession of his fault or be expelled if he be contumacious.

None of the Pupils shall frequent houses of ill Fame or keep company with any persons of known scandalous behavior and such as may endanger either their Principles or Morals: and those that do so shall first be openly rebuked and if they obstinately persist in it they shall be expelled.

None of the Pupils shall fight Cocks, play at Cards, Dice or any unlawful game upon penalty of being fined not exceeding Five Schillings for the first offence, and being openly admonished and confessing their fault for the second, and expulsion, if contumacious.

If any Pupil shall be convicted of fighting, maiming, slandering or greviously abusing any person he shall be fined Three shillings for the first offence and if he repeats his offence he shall be further punished by fine, admonition, suspension or expulsion according to the aggravation of his fault, especially if contumacious.

If any Pupil be convicted of any Dilapidations of the College or any Injury done to the Estates, goods or persons of any others he shall be obliged to make good all Damages.

Of Behaviour Towards Authority And Superiours

If any Pupils be Disobedient to the President, Professors or fellows of the College or treat them or any others in authority with any insulting, disrespectfull or contemptuous language or deportment, he shall be fined not exceeding five shillings for the first offence or submit to open admonition and confession of his fault, according to the nature of it and be expelled if he persists contumacious.

Every pupil shall treat all his superiours and expecially the authority of the College with all duty and respect by all such good manners and behaviour as common decency and good breeding require, such as rising, standing, uncovering the head, preserving a proper distance and useing the most respectful language, etc., and he that behaves otherwise shall be punished to the nature and degree of his ill behaviour.

Of College Exercises And Due Attendance

The Pupils in each of their terms shall be obliged, at such times as the President shall appoint, to make exercises in the severall branches of learning suitable to their standing both in Latin and English, such as Declamations and Dissertations on various questions pro and con, and frequently Thesis and Syllogistical Reasonings.

Whoever shall misbehave in time of exercise by Talking, Laughing or Justling one another, etc., shall be fined one shilling for each offence.

All the Pupils shall be obliged to apply themselves with the utmost diligence to their studies and constantly attend upon all the exercises appointed by the President or their Tutors or Professors for their Instruction.

None of the Pupils shall be absent from their chambers or neglect their studies without leave obtained of the President or their respective Tutors, except for Morning and Evening Prayers and recitation and half-an-hour for Breakfast and an hour and half after Dinner and from Evening Prayer till nine of the clock at night. The penalty, four pence or some exercise for each offence.

If any student shall persist in the neglect of his studies either through obstinacy or negligence and so frequently fails of making due preparation for recitation and other appointed exercises and if he refuse to submit and reform after due admonition he shall be rusticated, i. e., suspended for a time, and if he does not bring sufficient evidence of his reformation he shall be expelled.

No student shall go out of town without the President's or his Tutor's leave unless at the Stated Vaction upon penalty of Five Shillings and for repeating his fault he shall be rusticated, and if contumacious, expelled.

N. B. The stated vacations are a month after commencement, one week at Michaelmass and a fortnight at Christmass and Easter Week, i. e. from Good Fryday till the Fryday following, which last being so near Commencement is to be considered as only a Vacation from Exercises but not from the College or Dayly Morning and Evening Prayers, and so does not come within the last Prohibition.

All the fines shall be paid to the Treasurer of the College to be laid out in books and disposed of as a reward to such of the schollars as shall excell in the course of their studies in their severall classes as the President, Professors and Tutors or the major part of them shall Direct.

WE MAKE OUR BOW

With this issue of the Bucknellian the newstaff takes the helm. We realize, far better than others can, the responsibilities our new positions bring to us, and the meagre experience with which we assume those responsibilities; for, through an unusual chain of circumstances, not a single member of the incoming staff has held any editorial post on our college paper. With this fact in mind, we ask our readers to overlook our "beginners" mistakes." Mistakes come to all, but those of the beginner are the most numerous and the most embarrassing.

To the departing staff we extend our thanks for the lessons we have learned through their experience. Because of their kind tutoring we are not altogether strangers to the duties and hardships before us. Theirs was the most difficult regime of many a year, for they were handicapped from the beginning with difficulties in the business staff, inadequate printing conditions, and a great lack of help from the staff assistants. Such incumbrances threw upon the editors the responsibility of the routine work of the paper, and gave them little time for those broader tasks that are the soul of editorship.

In spite of their obstacles the departing staff put out a paper which rivals those of colleges three or four times our size, of which fact they can well be proud. Many of the readers, not knowing the difficulties under which the staff has worked, made adverse criticism as to lateness and efficiency. To these we suggest investigation before condemnation.

We are taking the paper under a new method of management, which will divide the work of collecting and editing the news. But there is one thing that all Bucknell students should realize; that is, the Bucknellian is the most translucent of mediums through which the outside world sees our college, and that world includes our dear ones, future Bucknellians, and alumni. This fact alone should incite to an active interest in the publication, rather than desultory criticisms which never reach the proper ears. We hope to have the cooperation and constructive criticism of all the students, that we may fulfill the ideals and visions of the former staff, or at least carry the torch nearer to the goal.

The Board of Health of Lewisburg, in the initiation of a system for the sanitary disposal of garbage, has made a request of citizens to support a modern proposal.

The faculty members through Professor John W. Rice, of the biological department, are likewise asked to support this plan. Their support will in a great measure determine whether or not this system shall be instituted.

Support of the proposal will be shown by answering and signing the following questions, and returning same to Professor Rice.

Board of Health — Lewisburg, Pa.

CITIZEN SURVEY FOR SANITARY GARBAGE DISPOSAL

1. Do you consider the present method of garbage disposal in the town satisfactory from the stand point of sanitation and usefulness?
2. Do you realize that decaying garbage is a menace to the public health in that it creates offensive odors, allows breeding places for flies, and adds to the rat menace of the town by affording them food?
3. Do you realize that the rat population of Lewisburg is costing our town about $17,000 a year in the destruction of foodstuffs, etc.?
4. Do you realize that a systematic and sanitary method of garbage disposal would cut down our fly and rat menaces, and would stop foul odors?
5. Would you support a system of garbage disposal which will remove your garbage twice a week throughout the year; which will provide you with a large, clean, sterilized, covered garbage can into which you can dump table refuse, ashes, tin cans, broken bottles, etc.; and which will cost you at the rate of one dollar ($1.00) per can per month?

Ruth Bray was also chosen as delegate to the Y. W. C. A. convention at Eagles Mere.

Bucknell Track Men Lose To Gettysburg

On Saturday afternoon, April 29, a crowd of about one hundred and fifty sat in the blazing sun and watched Gettysburg beat Bucknell in a track meet by the score of 66-59. The meet was closely contested throughout and the winner was not decidd until the last few events.

Diehl broke the former Bucknell record for the 16lb. shot by hurling it 43 ft. 7 inches. Caite and Jones, both of Gettysburg were the high point gatherers, each having 13 points. Trimmer lead the Bucknell track men with 10 points to his credit, while Frable annexed 9 points.

An interesting feature of the day was a special two-mile race between Paul Schmidt, post graduate, and Farrell, '29, at the request of the former. The race was fast and exciting throughout and as the runners started on the eighth lap they were together. "Smithy" took the lead, however, and crossed the line only a pace or two ahead of Farrell.

The summary of the events:

880-yard dash: Klinger, Gettysburg; Davis, Bucknell; Yiengst, Gettysburg. Time 2 min. 7.4 seconds.

440-yard dash: Caite, Gettysburg; Hetler, Bucknell; Davis, Bucknell. Time 53.2 seconds.

1 mile: Nuss, Gettysburg; Ringwald, Gettysburg; Johnston, Bucknell. Time 4 min. 53.2 seconds.

2 mile: Woover, Gettysburg; Throne, Bucknell; Nuss, Gettysburg. Time, 10 min. 53.4 seconds.

High hurdles: Trimmer, Bucknell; Bender, Gettysburg; Heiney, Gettysburg. Time 15.4 seconds.

Low hurdles: Trimmer, Bucknell; Jean, Gettysburg; Chaimburg, Gettysburg. Time 27.1 seconds.

100-yard dash: Caite, Gettysburg; Jones, Gettysburg; Walters, Bucknell. Time 10 seconds.

220-yard dash: Jones, Gettysburg; Caite, Gettysburg; Walters, Bucknell; Bender, Gettysburg. Time 23.2 seconds.

Broad jump: Jones, Gettysburg; Walters, Bucknell; Bender, Gettysburg. Distance, 21 ft., 3½ inches.

Pole vault: tie between Bender, Gettysburg and Frable, Bucknell. Height, 10 ft., 6 inches.

Shotput: Diehl, Bucknell; Beck, Gettysburg; McClune, Bucknell. Distance 43 ft. 7 inches.

High jump: Hitchens, Bucknell; Bach, Bucknell, Bender, Gettysburg. Height 5 ft., 7 inches.

Discus throw: McClune, Bucknell; Slaughter, Gettysburg; Diehl, Bucknell. Distance, 112 ft., 7 inches.

Javelin throw: Frable, Bucknell; Stevens, Bucknell; McClune, Bucknell. Distance, 165 ft., 8 inches.

DIEHL AND TRIMMER BREAK OLD RECORDS

In the dual track meet with Gettysburg, Saturday, May 1, there were two Bucknell men who stood out prominently. Walter Diehl broke the Bucknell record for the 16 lb. shotput, with a heave of 43 feet, 7 inches. Trimmer ran the fastest hurdle race of his career, making the distance of 120 yards in 15.8 seconds. His record cannot be counted, as one hurdle was knocked over.

Freshman John G. Farrow, challenger, and P. G. Scmidt, champion distance runner of Bucknell, ran a special race during the Bucknell-Gettysburg meet Saturday, May 1. The race was undecided until Schmidt broke the tape some three feet in advance of Farrow. The time was 10 minutes, 30 seconds. The Gettysburg man, who won the two mile run in the meet, made it in 10 minutes, 50 seconds. So we may expect great things of Farrow next year.

Dr. G. L. Riemer, '95, Gives Valuable Books To Bucknell

Valuable books on German grammar and syntax, and on phonetics and general linguistics are included in a gift made by Dr. G. C. L. Riemer, principal of Bloomsburg State Normal School, to the German section of Bucknell University.

Dr. Riemer, who is a graduate of the University of the class of 1895, was for twenty years head of the department of Modern Languages at Bucknell; under his chairmanship the department was one of the most vigorous in the college. He left Bucknell to go to the State Department of Public Instruction as Director of Foreign Languages for Pennsylvania. From Harrisburg he went to Bloomsburg, where he has become one of the best-known educators in the state.

Crows

In a field in sunny Spain stands a stone mortar. Crows hover around it, picking up bits of grain and chaff—cawing.

Here Marcheta, in the fresh beauty of her youth, will come to pound maize. For years she will pound maize. The stone will stand up under the blows; not a dent has the muscle of three generations of women made upon it. But the crows will hurl their black gibes upon a woman aging early and bent with toil. Old Marcheta—still in her thirties.

The American woman does not pound maize. But she still beats carpet; she still pounds clothes; she still pumps water. She exhausts her strength in tasks which electricity can do better, and in half the time.

The high ideals of a community mean little where woman is still doomed to drudgery. But the miracles which electricity already has performed indicate but a fraction of the vast possibilities for better living and the tremendous opportunities which the future developments in electricity will hold for the college man and woman.

Electricity, which can release woman from her burdens, has already created a revolution in American industry. Wherever mankind labors, General Electric motors can be found carrying loads, driving machinery and saving time and labor. And there is no branch of electrical development today to which General Electric has not made important contributions.

A series of G-E advertisements showing what electricity is doing in many fields will be sent on request. Ask for booklet GEK-1.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

State Tennis Team Loses To Bucknell

The Bucknell-Penn State tennis match, played on the Kappa Sigma, Phi Gamma Delta, and Women's College courts at 2:30 Saturday afternoon, May 1, ended in a 7-2 victory for the home team, with our netmen taking the first four singles and all three doubles. The State forces were composed of eleven men, including captain and manager, and Bucknell was forced to muster a squad of six men for the first time this season to compete in the nine matches which our opponents requested.

The Malpus-Rudisill and Helmick-McCaskey contests both attracted much interest, but the first doubles, in which Rudisill and McCaskey opposed Malpus and Barr, of Penn State, was no doubt cheered by the largest gallery. Barr's lightning service elicited considerable comment from the spectators, but Rudisill's well-placed drives and McCaskey's able recoveries and brilliant net work brought victory to Bucknell in straight sets.

Horter and Ballentine showed good form in the singles, but especially distinguished themselves for their fine teamwork in the foursome episode. Frost was handicapped by the fact that he was playing State's regular No. 1 man, who competed in fifth position because of a dislocated knee. Zortman also failed to win in the singles, but he and Frost scored their comeback in the doubles, when they defeated McCabe and Harts, Penn State.

The match was the third played on the campus this season, and demonstrated by the support it received that Bucknell tennis is coming more and more to be a real function in our university life. We have a considerable schedule ahead, and it is hoped that the keen competition we are bound to meet and the addition of four new courts on the campus, together with the improvement of the "Sem" courts, will stimulate interest in the sport here. Summaries:

Singles

Rudisill, Bucknell, defeated Malpus, Penn State, 6-0, 6-0.

McCaskey, Bucknell, defeated Helmick, Penn State, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2.

Ballentine, Bucknell, defeated McCabe, Penn State, 6-2, 6-0.

Horter, Bucknell, defeated Shuster, Penn State, 4-6, 6-4, p.3.

Eggleston, Penn State, defeated Frost, Bucknell, g-2, 3-6, 6-3.

Garman, Penn State, defeated Zortman, Bucknell, 8-6, 6-2.

Doubles

Rudisill and McCaskey, Bucknell, defeated Malpus and Barr, Penn State, 6-2, 6-4.

Ballentine and Horter, Bucknell, defeated Hinkel and Helmick, Penn State, 4-6, 12-10, 6-3.

Frost and Zortman, Bucknell, defeated McCabe and Harts, Penn State, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

State Yearlings, 3; Bison Freshman, 13

In a loosely played game, the Bucknell freshman baseball team easily defeated the Penn State yearlings, by the score of 13-3, on Wednesday, May 5, at Memorial Stadium.

Halicki, the star twirler of the Bison frosh, pitched an excellent game, yielding only six hits and striking out 10 men. Bucknell peppered away at the offerings of Shacikoski and Decker for a total of sixteen hits. Buck, Halicki, Seiler, and Woodring, with three bingles apiece, led the offensive. August, of Bucknell, contributed the fielding gem of the day, by making a pretty running catch in right field.

The Penn State freshmen were unable to hit effectively the brand of pitching served up to them by Halicki. Moreover, at times, their fielding was loose and their throws were wild. Undoubtedly the Bucknell frosh were superior in pitching strength, batting, and fielding. The score:

His Wealth of Learning

Willie was just back from the circus. He bounded into the room with a leap, skip and a jump. "It was great!" he cried. "But what did you learn?" asked his grandmother. "What did I learn?" he echoed. "Just let me tell you. I learned to eat peanuts with both hands. That's what I learned!"

Machinery in History

Civilization and progress are closely allied with the increased application of power, but engineers are inclined to believe that the prehistoric builders were not without mechanical devices. It seems almost impossible that those massive blocks of stone which face the pyramids could have been placed entirely by hand.

Where Napoleon Rested

The capital of the island of St. Helena is known as Jamestown, and is strongly fortified.

Bison Baseballers Defeat Gettysburg

Hitting and fielding in excellent manner behind the superb twirling of "Lefty" Blaisdell, Bucknell handed Gettysburg the short end of a 7-1 score, Friday, May 1.

Gettysburg gained their run in the opening inning when Challenger, after doubling along the right field foul line scored on Stevens single to center. Bucknell evened the count in the third inning, McCleary scoring on Gaskill's single. N. Blaisdell opened the fourth by driving out a mighty triple to center and W. Blaisdell followed suit by driving out a mightier clout in the same pasture that was good for the round trip.

McCleary with four hits and W. Blaisdell with three led the slugging for the Orange and Blue. McCleary stole everything but first base. In the fourth inning a walk, an error, and a hit loaded the bases for Gettysburg but Blaisdell fanned the next two men retiring the side. After the fourth inning Gettysburg got but one hit, a scratch single.

St. Mary Twirlers Win From Bucknell

A long clout into the tall timbers with two men gone in the ninth spelled disaster for the Bucknell tossers last Thursday, April 30, Mount Saint Mary's winning 1-0. The game was a pitching duel between Tom Murphy for the Orange and Blue, and Woodgie and Staniford for the victors. Murphy, pitched winning ball and although touched for seven singles, was never in danger. With men on the sacks "Murph" was invincible.

W. Blaisdell came close to breaking up the game in the ninth inning but his long fly was caught on the edge of the park by F. McAndrews. Captain Gaskill opened the sixth inning by driving a mighty hit to right field but after sliding safely into third the umpire called him out for failing to touch second base.

The game was marked by stellar fielding on both sides and it seemed certain it was going into extra innings until Allen drove one out of the park.

B. U. Racquet Men Win Match With W.M.

After losing its first match to Syracuse the previous week, Bucknell's tennis team came back srong against Western Maryland, and on April 29, winning both doubles handily and taking three of the four singles games.

The Bucknell court men were in fine form, making many clever returns on difficult chances.

The following are the scores of the rome:

Rudisill, (Bucknell) won from Parr, (Western Maryland) 6-2 6-0.

McCaskey, (Bucknell) won from Woodward, (Western Maryland) 6-3 6-1.

Horter, (Bucknell) won from Condon, (Western Maryland) 6-4 6-1.

Royer, (Western Maryland) won from Ballentine, (Bucknell) 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

Rudisill and McCaskey, (Bucknell) won from Bryant and Condon, (Western Maryland) 6-3, 6-3.

Horter and Ballentine, (Bucknell) won from Royer and W. Woodward (Western Maryland) 6-3, 6-3.

Tie a tin to trouble

A TIDY red tin of Prince Albert, to be exact. There's the greatest little trouble-chaser in the known world. Smoke P. A. and pipe-grouches choose the nearest exit.

Yes, Sir, P. A. is right there with the Pollyanna stuff. Sunshine, gladness, the light heart, the bright smile. Because Prince Albert is the cheeriest, chummiest tobacco that ever tumbled into a briar or corncob.

Smoke P. A.—and smile. Cool, comfortable P. A. Fragrant, friendly P. A. Not a tongue-bite or throat-parch in a ton of it. The Prince Albert process hung the "No Admittance" sign on Bite and Parch the day the factory opened.

Get a tidy red tin of P. A. today and give pipe-worries the gate.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

From the way the S. A. E. pledges are acting in front of their home this week, the catering department must be feeding them hops.

* * * *

William Hinkle, '28, a member of the Penn State tennis team, stayed in Lewisburg during the week-end of April 30, visiting friends.

* * * *

Mary Frabel, '29, was pleasantly surprised when her parents arrived on Friday afternoon to pay her an unexpected visit.

* * * *

"Jeff" Thomas and Harry Pierson, both '28, visited in Reading on Saturday and Sunday, May 1 and 2. We would like to know what that pagoda is, they're talking about.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Westley, of Sayre, spent the week-end of April 24 and 25 with their daughter, Louise Westley, '28. They made the trip by automobile.

* * * *

Walter Kuster, '26, journeyed to Penn's Grove, N. J., recently to see the manager of the Dupont Works at that place. "Walt" is looking for a job that he can step into when he gets his coveted sheepskin.

* * * *

"Bud" Frable, '28, pole vaulter, suffered a bad spill in the track meet with Gettysburg last week when his pole broke while he was in mid-air. He was not seriously injured and recovered quickly.

Since other colleges are getting into the limelight on the prohibition question why not have a Bucknell boy or girl go to Washington to telify as to conditions at Bucknell? Things look fairly respectable around here.

A table-party at the "Sem" on Wednesday night, April 28, celebrated the birthday of "Kitty" Gaventa. "Kitty" won't say what anniversary it was, but we all managed to count the candles on the cake.

* * * *

Mock initiations at the "Demie" and S. A. E. houses has caused much excitement among the "Semities." "Here they come" will sound down the hall and then immediately every window and fire escape will be filled with fair spectators.

* * * *

Grace Williams, '28, spent the week-end of May 2 and 3 at her home in Atglen, driving there with the Rev. and Mrs. F. B. Everitt, of Lewisburg. They report a narrow escape from collision with a trolley car, besides three punctures.

* * * *

A Kappa Delta table-party was given in honor of Anne Outwater's birthday, Saturday evening, May 1. Table decorations were carried out in green and white, K. D. colors, even to the green-iced cake blazing with white candles.

* * * *

Interest is now running high at the Seminary as plans for the Japanese Lawn Party near completion. Of course no one knows exactly what is going to happen, but by several hints given we may be sure its going to be lots of fun.

* * * *

The Swarthmore representative to the regional oratorical contest had the misfortune of going to Lewistown and not Lewisburg. He arrived in Bucknell Hall five minutes after the judges had gone into conference to give their decision.

* * * *

Among the first hathers of the season were "Ted" Mitchell, "Johnny" Laughner, "Artie" Shorts, "Johnny" Bridegum, and Willis Hill, all of '29, who dipped in the icy waters of the Susquehanna on Sunday, May 2.

* * * *

Spring, which always arouses in the feminine heart a fever for housecleaning, arrived at the Seminary last week. Miriam Stage, '28, moved out all her furniture and gave the floor of her room several coats of paint. All the girls agree that she made a good job of it.

* * * *

Early-comers to the Frill and Frown play on Friday, April 30, were surprised to find that entrance to Bucknell Hall was forbidden. The ing held and it was deemed necessary not to admit anyone while any of the orators were speaking.

* * * *

"Rolly" Fredericks, '29, who had been home in Lock Haven for some time, suffering from an infected tooth, returned to college on April 28. We are all glad to hear that "Rolly" has recovered from his illness.

* * * *

Guy Payne drove down to Lewisburg from his new place of business in Williamsport, early Wednesday evening, April 28. Guy, of course, came to look over the College Inn and found everything in good running order.

* * * *

On the evening of Tuesday, April 27, "Red" Kesler served waffles and coffee in his room. Several friends dropped in and the midnight supper was thoroughly enjoyed by all the lucky ones present.

* * * *

R. W. White, '26, trusted to the quality of his shoe leather on Friday, April 23, and started on the asphalt way for his home in Coudersport. However, motorists were kind, and "Whitie" returned Sunday reporting an enjoyable week-end.

The latest necessity in demand at the Library is step-ladders. There are so many diminutive persons on Bucknell's campus who can't reach even the center rows of the magazine rack that the installation of such aids is imperative.

* * * *

"Red" Snyder, '29, and "Bill" Brown '28, felt the need of more exercise the other evening when they walked to Milton and back. Both of the boys have agreed that they have had enough exercise to last them for some time.

* * * *

Robert Jones, '28, and Edward Hoffman, '29, went to Philadelphia on the excursion train which left Lewisburg at midnight, May 1. They will visit points of interest in the historic city, besides making a special tour of the Sesqui-Centennial grounds.

* * * *

Paul Schmidt and John Farrrow, '29, ran a special two-mile race in the Gettysburg-Bucknell track meet last Saturday, May 1. Ever was the freshman hot on Schmidt's heels, but, true to his old-time form, the veteran runner nosed out the freshman in the final sprint for the coveted tape.

* * * *

Albert Buffington, '28, is making prepartions for his trip to Germany this summer. "Al" intends to take a course at the University of Heidleburg to prepare himself for specialization in the German language. Besides this he will become acquainted with Germany and countries adjacent.

* * * *

Rablo Shipman, '29, who purchased an old motorcycle several weeks ago, had a "spill" in front of the Chemical Laboratory on Thursday morning, April 29, when the rear wheel of the motorcycle locked. "Shipp" was thrown over the handlebars, but did not suffer any serious injuries.

* * * *

A table-party was given at the "Sem" on Monday evening in honor of "Shorty" Parmley, who returned to Bucknell on Saturday, April 24, after a prolonged absence because of illness. Guests were "Martie" Morrow, "Billie" Dakin, "Betty" Jack, "Sally" Heysham, "Nan Kennedy, Jessie Fielding, and Betty Seigfried.

* * * *

"Ken" Horsman, '27, and "Bud" Wise, '29, paddled a canoe to Sunbury on Saturday, May 1, in order to do some shopping. The return trip took two hours and ten minutes, and so hungry were they, that "Ken" pawned his kodak at a road-house to get food to keep from starving until he could arrive in Lewisburg. Then he had to borrow an automobile to go back to the "eats" stand to reclaim his kodak.

The Presbyterian Y. P. took a hike to Chillisquaque on Saturday, April 17, accompanied by Miss Brakeman and Mrs. Faint. A merry, brisk walk down the state highway brought the hikers to the woods and creek, ravenously hungry. The day was a joy to all,--for that day--but one day later four of the hikers discovered that they had been poisoned, and have been in misery ever since. The poison was of the ivy variety, not ptomaine.

"The Misplaced Decimal," a musical comedy, is to be presented in Lewisburg, June 29. Carolyn Hunt and Kathryn Wainwright are coaching the play, and the cast is composed of young people in the town. The Bucknellians who are taking part are, Dorothy Griffith, '28; Margaret and Frances Aumiller, '27; Virginia Zortman, '26; Charles Kalp, '29; and Abbott Bucher, ex-'29; "Lew" Kesler, '28, and Elmer Dietz, '28, are in charge of the dancing.

SLIFER, '26, WRITES FOR WILLIAMSPORT SUN

The Williamsport Sun for Friday, April 30, 1926, printed a very interesting article headed "Bucknell Alumnus Saves Friend Held in Frozen North," written by Kenneth W. Slifer, '26, who has been a member of the Bucknell class in journalism. The story centers about the Fiala-Zeigler expedition of 1903 into the far North of which Dr. George Shorkley, B. U, '92, was a member. This expedition became lost. It was Dr. M. Frederick Mount, ex-'97, who accompanied a relief party that went to its rescue. After numerous hardships Mount found Shorkley with the rescued party. These two Bucknellians are Phi Kappa Psi fraternity brothers and have always been close friends since their student days at Bucknell. They roomed together at Medical College after leaving Lewisburg.

LAFAYETTE COLLEGE LIBRARY GETS LAFAYETTE'S LETTERS

The Marquis de Lafayette must have spent all of his time writing letters, one might conclude on glancing through the collection of Warren Cady Crane, recently purchased by the New York Lafayette College Alumni and presented to the college.

The collection arrived at the Lafayette College library last week and college officials are at present engaged in making an inventory. Included in the collection are insignia of the coat of arms of General Lafayette, and a large number of original letters, and more than 500 different engravings, wood etchings, and photostatts of the general and of his various activities. It represents a collecting activity carried on by Crane for more than fifty years in America and Europe.

HE'S JONES OF CROZER—VERY MUCH OF CROZER

Thomas W. Jones, '24, had the unusual experience of graduating from Crozer Theological Seminary before coming to Bucknell and taking his A. B. degree, then returning to the Seminary, where he obtained his B. D. degree.

The Crozer Bulletin says in referring to Mr. Jones:

No one knows better than Mr. Jones that neither religion nor ministerial efficiency depends solely on educational advantages or attainments. A better test is the missionary spirit and its manifestation in actual sacrificial service. Moved by this motive, Mr. Jones has entered upon mission work in Central America, a field of recognized difficulties. His definite field is at Quiche, Gautemala, a town 6000 feet above the sea. He writes hopefully of the work to which he will devote his life.

Sigma Xi Elects Graduates

Wilson, '19, and Rassweiler, '24

Two recent graduates of Bucknell have lately been elected to membership in Sigma Xi, the scientific society which corresponds to the arts society of Phi Beta Kappa. They are Benjamin James Wilson, '19, an instructor in our department of mechanical engineering, who is absent from Bucknell this year on leave of absence to do graduate work at the University of Illinois, and Gerald Mark Rassweiler, 'A. B. '24, who is also at the University of Illinois.

The men elected to this society this year at that institution included less than one per cent of the enrolment. It speaks well for their undergraduate work at Bucknell that these two men should be among those selected.

Bucknell is represented in Sigma Xi by two other members—Professors Norman H. Stewart and Harry S. Everett.

Raymond B. Winter

District Forester Raymond B. Winter, who was a member of the Students Army Training Corps at Bucknell, was seriously burned while directing a force of two hundred and fifty forest fighters during a blaze in the mountains west of Lewisburg. Mr. Winter was speeding through a wood road in his Ford truck with the fire burning fiercely on both sides of the way, when his engine went dead. The stalled car took fire and was soon in flames. Mr. Winter abandoned the machine and ran for nearly half a mile though the blazing forest. His face and hands were badly burned.

Mrs. J. M. Beaver Furst, Inst. '58

Mrs. Jennie M. Beaver Furst, Inst. '58, holds a remarkable record for Sunday School teaching that is unequalled in either county or state as far as is known. Beginning her teaching in the infant department of the Methodist Sunday School at Lewisburg, when she was eleven years old, Mrs. Furst continued her teaching throughout the years until she retired, a little more than a year ago, at the age of eighty-four, after responding to the teaching urge for more than seventy-two years.

—Williamsport Sun.

The Rev. Dr. T. C. Hanna, '95

The Rev. Dr. T. Carson Hanna, '95, of Sunbury, spoke at a patriotic mass meeting for law enforcement, in the Trinity Presbyterian church, Frankfort avenue and Cambria street, in Philadelphia, on Sunday afternoon, April 25.

Dr. Hanna maintained that despite various charges of the anti-dry campaigners, prohibition is not a failure. He said that the vital question concerning prohibition revolves about the matter of law enforcement, and that any degree of failure attached to the Eighteenth Amendment is, relatively speaking, very small.

Charles F. Bidelspacher, '01

Charles F. Bidelspacher, '01, who has served in the state legislature for a number of terms for the Williamsport district, has been made a member of the legislative committee of the Williamsport chapter of the Izaak Walton League. The Williamsport chapter is making a determined effort to end stream pollution and to encourage love of nature among children. Moving pictures will be shown under the auspices of the League on May 27. These films will show forest scenes, and picture wild animals in their native haunts.

Dr. Frederick W. Robbins, '96

Root of It All

Everywhere we are taught that "life is sacred," that "liberty is sacred," that "property is sacred"—but where are we taught that happiness is sacred? And yet it is only because of their relation to happiness that these other things have a trace of sacredness.—James Mackaye.

Elusive Happiness

Happiness is something that we had yesterday and hope to regain tomorrow, but which always eludes us today.—Exchange.

Initial P-H Dance Proves Big Success

A Pan-Hellenic dance, the first of its kind, was held in the ball room of the Engineering Building on Saturday evening, May 1.

It was the idea of the present Pan-Hellenic society to have one function a year in which all the sorority groups could share. This first attempt was so very successful that a formal Pan-Hellenic dance will probably be an annual affair from now on.

Ten tickets were given to each sorority for sale, so that sixty couples were counted on. The posters made by each sorority were the clever, unusual features of the evening. As the color scheme was black and white, the posters were all made in that combination, and represented the sororities. Black and white crepe paper decorated the walls

Punch flowed freely during the evening. A gargoyle, with a glass tube protruding from its mouth, played the part of a fountain which supplied the dancers with tasteful and refreshing drinks. The punch container was cleverly concealed behind a partition and the gargoyle served an artistic as well as useful purpose.

Music by Noble and his orchestra was broadcast through WJBU. Dean and Mrs. Romeyn Rivenburg and Professor and Mrs. F. A. Sprague were guests.

Exchange of Statues

The equestrian statue of George III which stood at Bowling Green, N. Y., was dragged from its pedestal July 9, 1776, and laid prostrate in the dust. The statue being composed of lead was afterward melted and run into bullets and in 1802 the first statue of Washington was placed on the pedestal it formerly occupied.

Alloys Long Used

An alloy has been used with gold for many centuries. Gold in the raw state was known in the latter Stone age. It was probably the first metal known to man. So long ago as in the day of the cities of Cyzicus and Phocaea electrum, a natural alloy of gold and silver, was used a making coins.

Sounded Like a "Slam"

He is still wondering what the young lady meant, if anything. When she happened along he was at one end of a line, the other end being far out in the lake.

"Fishing, I see," said the girl.

"Yes," responded the young man. And then he added, in a jocular vein: "Fish feeds the brain."

Strolling along, the girl pleasantly called back over her shoulder: "I hope you have a large catch."

Unreasonable to Expect

The orchestra was practicing the composer's long and tedious piece when he arrived.

"What's this?" he demanded from the doorway. "I can hear only the violins, not the wind instruments."

"It's too hard a job for the wind instruments," replied the orchestra leader. "The players can't blow and paws at the same time!"

PIKE LECTURE ON "EMOTIONAL LIFE"

nervous system plays an important part in emotion. Emotional states are always accompanied by certain phenomena associated with the sympathetic nervous system.

We have emotion even before intelligence, continud Dr. Pike. The idea of self preservation leads to the emotion of fear. When an emotion is felt, something must be done. However, we react to it in different ways. Thus, it becomes an instinct for us to seek saftey when our life is threatened. The term used for victims of this instinct in the late war was called shell-shock. Cases of this kind occur in everyday life, usually ending in flight. Fainting, on certain occasions, represents a flight from reality. Thus emotional reactions are rather common, especially those of fear. Many who get out into the world fear that they will not succeed. Many people carry fear with them night and day. The normal person, however, usually adjusts himself to his emotional reactions.

Civil Service Announces Exams For Junior Examiner

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination for the position of JUNIOR PATENT EXAMINER. Receipt of application for junior patent examiner will close June 12. The date for assembling of competitors will be stated on the admission cards sent applicants after the close of receipt of applications.

The examination is to fill vacancies in the Patent Office, Washington, D. C., and in positions requiring similar qualifications.

The entrance salary for this position is $1,860 a year. After the probational period required by the civil service act and rules, advancement in pay without material change in duties may be made to higher rates within the pay range for the grade, up to a maximum of $2,400 a year. Promotions in the Patent Office without examination by the Civil Service Commission are made successfully to assistant patent examiner, $2,400 to $3,000; associate patent examiner, $3,000 to $3,600; and patent examiner, $3,800 to $5,000.

Applicants must select one of the following optional subjects: Civil engineering, electrical engineering, mechanical engineering, chemical engineering, electrochemistry, or general chemistry.

The duties of appointees will be to perform elementary scientific or technical work in the examination of applications for patents; to see what the alleged inventor thinks he has produced that is new, and to see that the disclosure is complete; and to investigate the prior art as represented by patents already granted in the United States and various foreign countries and by the descriptions in technical literature.

Competitors will be rated on physics, mechanical drawings, technics, the optional subject chosen, mathematics, and language (French and German).

Full information and application blanks may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Penn State Football Squad Ends Six-Week Spring Work

Spring football work at Penn State came to a close and the Nittany athletes are transferring their activities to baseball, track, or lacrosse. The grid drills have been under way more than six weeks and Coaches Bezdek and Hermann believe that quite a bit has been accomplished. The prolonged weather this spring was a big help in putting pep into the workouts.

One of the features of the spring training was the work of Bud Bergman at guard. The Philadelphia boy was regular fullback in 1924 and a substitute back last fall. With backfield material more than plentiful, Bezdek decided to try Bergman in the line, and from his showing this spring it appears as though the former fullback is going to solve one of the line problems.

from Philadelphia. The five men who founded the chapter were John P. Currin, '85, Charles B. Furman, '86, George S. Lenhart, ex-'85, John C. Nissley, '83, and H. S. Foringer, ex-'85. Of these five founders, only Currin and Furman are living.

Founder Furman also told of the first fraternity rooms occupied by the new chapter. They were on the third floor of the building on West Market street now known as the Banks Building. The American Legion at present has its headquarters in this building. Farther west, on the next corner, above the present post office, the Sigma Chis had their hall. The Phi Kappa Psis had rooms in the second floor of the building where the Saturday News is now published.

The first banquet that Delta chapter of Phi Gamma Delta ever had was held in these quarters in the Banks Building. The young chapter had rented a large room, which it proceeded, at its own expense, to partition off into two rooms. Some cooking equipment was installed in the rear room, the front room being kept as an assembly place. On the occasion of this initial banquet, the food was prepared in this rear room, but before it was served the new Fijis went into the front room for a brief confab. Upon returning to the culinary apartment, the would-be diners were amazed to find a tramp rapidly devouring the prepared edibles. But he hadn't eaten them all, by a long shot. He was hastily ejected and the banquet proceeded. That was forty-four years ago.

Continuing in reminiscent mood, Founder Furman drew word pictures of many interesting occurrences that marked his day in college. Every one was poor in those days. The average board bill was $1.25 a week. One student, who went through the Academy and then the College, wore the same shabby, grreen coat during his entire seven years. Another student was so poor that he was unable, during a very considerable period, to write home, because he could not get the necessary two cents for a stamp. Another student earned an occasional quarter or fifty cents toward his expenses by teaching singing. Finally Mr. Furman told of the experiences of his own father—Adoniram Judson Furman, '59, who came to Bucknell less than ten years after the founding of the institution. He left Western Pennsylvania with all the money he could get for his college course—thirteen dollars. He walked practically every foot of the distance to Lewisburg, earning his way, sometimes helped by sympathetic dwellers along the way, and spending of his precious thirteen dollars exactly 18 3-4 cents during the journey.

Dean Romeyn Rivenburg, '97, the Rev. Drr. Raymond M. West, '89, Dr. Robert F. Trainer, ex-'96, Professor Ephrain M. Heim, '93, and Professor Floyd G. Ballentine, '99, were among the other speakers. Other alumni present were Professor Lewis E. Theiss, '92, Edward Burrows, '02, Herbert Grice, '18, Harold L. Shiner, '21, John P. Carter, '21, Ernest S. Burrows, '07, John H. Foresman, '92, Francis Reamer, '21, John Davis, '23, B. V. Hastings, ex-'13, L. D. Lewis, '23, Max Reed, '25, R. E. Harris, Indiana University, and Edward Chapin, Pennsylvania State College.

Dr. Pike Talks Again About Mental Health

Dr. W. B. Pike, on Thursday, April 29, delivered his second lecture of the series to a larger audience than before. The next lecture, dealing with "Emotions" was held on Monday, May 3, at 4:30 and the last lecture of the series will be on Thursday, May 6, at the same hour. The trip to Danville will be made on Saturday, May 8.

Dr. Pike continued discussing the history of the mind in his second lecture. He began by telling that the history of the mind lies in the functions of the nervous system. It can be understood only by studying the growth and development of the nervous system.

Taking the baby as an example, we find a dark field in his brain structure. There is great development in this field. The child desires things that he cannot have. These desires become more numerous and more complex. Then he must gradually take into account the world about him. He is bound by society and must abide by its laws. Conflict is at the root of mental life. All sorts of desires to repress crop out. This constitutes the material out of which the unconscious starts. Thus, repressed desires lead to the working of the unconscious brain.

The faculties of the conscious mind are thinking, feeling, emotion, and will. Much knowledge of this is obtained by studying the environment of the individual.

Thinking is conveyed to the brain through sensation, perception, memory, adoration, reasoning, and judgment. But sensation is only one stone in thought. To understand environment we must know what produces the senses. We must have a conscious recognition of perception. A child begins to perceive at three months of age. There are two false ideas of perception, namely an illusion and a hallucination. In an illusion a normal mind recognizes the thing as abnormal which the abnormal mind accepts it as a normal thing.

Memory deals with retentions and reproductions. These are two kinds, memory of self and organic memory. The organic memory, dealing with the development of the personality, is the most important. The loss of memory is called amnesia, which is divided into two classes, loss of memory for recent happenings, and loss of memory for remote occurrences. Amnesia is circumscribed covering just a certain period. The loss of memory goes from the unstable to the stable. The victim has reminsences of childhood days but does not remember what happened yesterday.

In suming up his talk, Dr. Pike made a touching plea for the older people who, although perfectly sane, are neglected, forgotten, and then sent to the State Hospital for the Insane so that they will have someone to look after them. Older people, having lived through the prime of their lives, should be cared for patiently and kindly in their last few years instead of being sent to a State Hospital, and forgotten by friends and relatives.

Dixie wanted to take breakfast at the Seminary on Friday morning, so he walked right in through the open doorway and followed a crowd of girls into the dining room. Although the sable and white collie pleaded his cause very eloquently, with much tail wagging, they wouldn't let him stay. "It's a dog's life!" said Dixie as they escorted him to the door.

FRILL AND FROWN ACTS STRONG PLAY

Affection for her husband causes Eunice to sanction his action, but both are desperate as they realize what the step will mean to the children. They cannot tell them how they have failed them. Then Grandmother Bradley takes a hand by telling the children of the disaster. To her surprise they respond nobly. The twins plan to give up college and Hugh abandons all thought of marriage. But again it is grandmother, her pride stung by the twin's vivid pictures of her son-in-law's future, who saves the day. She buys a partnership in a nursery business and offers the management to Bernard. All plans, however, seem to have been in vain, for Ingal's resignation has not been accepted. He refuses to hear of the sacrifices of his family and announces his intention to return to City Hall. Eunice, realizing that this would mean the sacrifice of his honor, threatens to leave him if he returns. The play is brought to a close with the realization that happiness would come should they all share the sacrifice.

Y. W. C. A. CONVENTION HELD AT MILWAUKEE

Famous characters in history were all presented. There were biblical women, a fairy queen, Joan of Arc; and to Queen Elizabeth, Willian Shakespeare led a group of fifty small choir boys to sing to her his "Who is Silvia?"

Business meetings saw the major amendment to the constitution adopted. Minor amendments were lost, except for one concerning amendments. This states that all amendments may be settled in one convention, instead of two, if all associations are warned of the amendment six months previous to the convention. A resolution was also passed to uphold the prohibition amendment and any laws for its enforcement.

On Monday, April 26, new Y. W. C. A. officers were chosen. National officers elected were: Mrs. John T. Hanna of Dallas, Tex., president; Mrs. Charles Gilkey of Chicago, Ill., first vice president; Mrs. Edward Dunham of Trenton, N. J., second vice president; and Miss Hazel Butterfield of Beatrice, Neb., secretary.

The convention was adjourned on Tuesday afternoon, April 27.

B. U. GLEE CLUB ENDS BIG SEASON WITH FESTIVITIES

President Hunt, As Chief Guest, Compares Former Glee Clubs With Those of Today

PROFESSORS COLEMAN AND NORRIS PRESENT

Director R. F. Hartz Tells Men Their Cooperation Is Cause Of Season's Success

With a banquet featuring lots to eat and speeches of great inspiration, the Bucknell University Glee Club closed the most successful year in its history, Wednesday, May 12, when 35 men and their guests gathered at the Cameron House for the annual banquet. The guests present were President Emory W. Hunt, Prof. W. H. Coleman, and Prof. I. E. Norris. Prof. P. G. Stolz, and Prof. C. A. Lindemann were not able to be present.

While waiting for the courses to be changed, songs of both ancient and modern vintage shook the room. Some of the famous songs used by the club en route were among these. After the dinner, during which waffles and chicken were the object of attack, Toastmaster S. Cober Braucher, '28, welcomed theguests in an appropriate talk, and introduced the three guests present, asking for a few words from each.

"My thoughts turn backward," said Dr. Hunt, "in the neighborhood of 43 or 44 years to the time when I was a member of the college glee club, and I have been thinking about the difference in the attitude of the institution toward the glee club, from the

ATTENTION! PICNIC ON MAY 15

Attention, members! Something interesting is going to happen. What? The School of Music picnic. Who? The men's and women's glee clubs. When? Saturday morning, May 15.

Everyone intending to go should sign up with the manager of either club, or with the directors. The party will leave the Women's College at 12:45 sharp on Saturday morning. The place where the picnic is to be held has not yet been decided upon, but it is hoped that everyone will turn out and co-operate to make this outing a success.

M. F. Mount, Ex-'97, Dies After Illness

Was A Prominent Physician And Surgeon At Hot Springs, Ark. Had Gone To The Arctic

Dr. M. F. Mount, ex-'97, of Hot Springs, Ark., who went into the Arctic regions to rescue his friend and fraternity brother, Dr. George Skorkley, '92, when the latter was lost with the Ziegler-Fiala polar expedition, died on May 1, at St. Joseph's Infirmary in his home town after an illness of two months.

Dr. Mount was a prominent physician and surgeon in Hot Springs. He was 56 years of age and had been a resident of Hot Springs for about 20 years, serving several years as secretary of the Hot Springs Garland County Medical Society. He is survived by his widow, one daughter, Miss Florence Mount, a student at the University of Arkansas, and one sister, Mrs. Ed. Zizell, of Rio Pedros, Porto Rico.

Dr. Mount, as a native of Trenton, N. J. He attended Bucknell University, and completed his medical education at the Hahnemann college and hospital at Philadelphia.

In 1904 and 1905 Dr. Mount was a member of the Ziegler-Fiala polar relief expeditions, which he accompanied as a surgeon. The reason he joined this party was because his intimate friend and chum, Dr. George

Kappa Sigs Celebrate Annual Mothers' Day

The annual Mothers' Day was celebrated at the Alpha Phi chapter of Kappa Sigma fraternity on Sunday, May 9. Among the forty guests were fifteen mothers of men in the chapter. The festivities were opened shortly after noon by a fine dinner. After dinner was served, the guests adjourned to the living room, which was decorated appropriately for the occasion. Chairman "Sol" Hartman, '27, introduced Brother Edmund Pierce, '28, who welcomed the mothers of Kappa Sigma. President Clayton D. Hollinger, '27, then gave an interesting talk on "The Family and the Fraternity." Edna Watson, '27, gave two delightful readings, interspersed with good humor and wholesomeness. She also distinguished herself by the rendition of two solos, "I'm Wearing a Flower Mother Dear, for You," and "That Wonderful Mother of Mine." The popular Glee Club tenor, John Gilmour, '27, sang "Little Mother of Mine," and "Mother Machree." Another pleasing touch was added to the musicale by the baritone soloist of the Glee Club, Melvin Shuttlesworth, '28, who sang, "Just Been Wondering" and "Sitting, Thinking." Continuing the program Brother "Cruck" Kushell, '27, bass soloist of the Glee Club, rendered delightfully, Kipling's "Mother of Mine," and "Thinking of You." Alton Roth, '29, played two pleasing selections on the violin, "Love's Greeting" and "Lonesome for You." The program was appropriately ended by a talk on "Mothers," by Pledge James G. Williams, '29.

Martha Von Neida Is Burned Severely

Mock initiation almost resulted in tragedy on Wednesday when Martha Von Neida, a Phi Mu pledge, while blackening her face with a burnt cork, in New Building, accidentally set fire to her flimsy costume, and suffered severe burns about the body before the flames could be extinguished.

When her dress caught afire, Miss Von Neida made a wild dash for the outdoors and ran out of the building, enveloped in flames. She then rolled on the ground and a girl who had followed her from the "Dorm," along with J. L. Cornely, '26, who was playing tennis nearby, succeeded in beating out the bames with their hands, but not until the girls outer clothing was almost burned away.

The stricken girl was quickly carried to the infirmary, and although in great pain, she retained consciousness throughout. Her back was severely burned, but her long tresses, falling over her shoulders, were barely singed.

Bucknell Students Heed Call To Fight Fire On Old Montour

FIRST SECTION OF VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS LEAVES TOWN IN TRUCKS AT MIDNIGHT, SATURDAY, FOR TWELVE-HOUR DUTY

Late Saturday night an imperative call for fire fighters was sounded on the Bucknell campus. It echoed through the dormitories and fraternity houses, bringing up short several dances.

The summons came from wearied men on Montour Ridge, who sought vainly to control the fire they had been battling since its start on Friday noon.

Sergeant Murtha canvassed the town and hill, drafting men from the streets, poolrooms, restaurants, or other hangouts, and from the college. He stopped all the dances to issue the call, offering the men an even better time than they were having then. Chief made it plain that if some men did not volunteer, all would be drafted. Getting a hearty response, he agreed to let the dances run on with the promise that the volunteers would report for action by 12:00.

About midnight, the fire fighters left town in trucks. The run to Chillisquaque was made at break-neck speed. On the curves, the loads had to keep low and lean to one side to make sure that the turn would be negotiated safely.

Organization was Lacking

On the grounds and craving for action, the fire eaters encountered disappointment. They had not answered a false alarm, as is so often the case in town, for the fire was still blazing away; but they did find themselves to be of little use. System was lacking in the combating of the flames. To have to fight aimlessly without any very definite plan of attack laid out for them was not bringing results, and certainly did not appeal to the students. Consequently, most of them, after fighting awhile until they saw the futility of their efforts, started back at daylight.

Those students who remained tramped along the fire line to do what they could to prevent spreading. This was not a ten party affair, and surely no white collar job. Fighting had to be done with instruments such as clubs and green boughs, and hence close to the fire. More than once either the scorching heat or the stifling smoke or a combination would make life miserable and force the fighter to retreat to save his eyes and face.

The Men Were Worn Out

Other trials soon harassed the men in the nature of a scarcity of food and water, two essentials. With continued hours of fighting, running up to Sunday afternoon, weariness seized all, and the list of ills was complete. So, in small groups and pairs these who were worn out by a twelve hour stretch of combating fire ad unfit for further action, straggled back to Lewisburg—back to eats and to sweet sleep.

Late Sunday the condition of the fire had not improved. The District Forester, Raymond B. Winters, a Bucknellian, then took charge. Regular four-hour shifts were organized and men drafted for them. Further efficiency was introduced with the reduction of numbers, and the provision of more tools and a steadier supply of food.

With this systematization, things moved. Only the eight and eleven

Students Of English To Publish Verses

Pamphlet Will Contain 50 Pages With One Poem to Each Page. Edition of 300 Copies

The English Department, with Assistant Professor Harry R. Warfel as its representative, has undertaken the publishing of a book of Bucknell verse, an effort which marks a new era in the creation of verse by Bucknell students. The prospectus announced recently by the English Department reads as follows:

"It is proposed to publish in the near future a book of Bucknell Verse containing exclusively the productions of Bucknell undergraduates. The tentative plan is for a booklet of fifty pages—approximately one poem to a page. As this is to be principally an exhibit of facility and versatility in metrical composition, it is hoped that wide variety of verse forms will be included. About half the volume should be in the conventional meters: blank verse, couplet, quatrain, terza rima, ballad stanza, Spenserian stanza, and sonnet. Some examples of French verse forms like the triolet and villanelle should be included. The remainder may be in free verse.

"Not more than five contributions from any one student will be accepted. All students having material suitable for the purpose are urged to hand it to Mr. Warfel or some other member of the English Department.

"An edition of three hundred copies is planned. One hundred copies will be retained by the English Department; one hundred copies will be placed on sale, and the remainder will belong to the contributors on the basis of two copies for each accepted contribution.

"The estimated cost is about $2.00 a page. The English Department will contribute half the expense of publication. Contributors will pay toward the remainder of the cost the sum of $1.00 for each accepted contribution. Any profit from sale of books will be divided equally between the department and the contributors."

Selection of the poems to be published will be made Monday, May 17, and

Twenty Mechanicals See Big Steel Works

See Unusual Old Steam Hammer, Inspect Open Hearth Furnaces, And Have Fine Dinner

Professor F. E. Burpee, accompanied by twenty mechanical engineers from Bucknell, visited the Standard Steel Works at Burnham, Pa., on Wednesday, May 5. This mill is a subsidiary of the Baldwin Locomotive Works of Philadelphia and manufacturers steel and iron products. The original plant was started in 1795, with only a charcoal blast furnace and a forge.

In 1856 wrought iron was introduced and a few days later the third Bessemer converter in the country was installed. The plant has increased steadily in size from the first small beginning until it now has a rated net output of 4,000 tons of steel per week.

After inspecting machine shop No. 1, the oldest steam hammer in the country was looked over. This hammer was made in England in 1856 and in emergency cases is used at the present time. Another interesting phase of the tour was the open hearth unit. These massive steel furnaces attain a heat of 2800° Farenheit and are capable of making 100 tons of steel at one time. After visiting the test plant and display room, the visitors were served a wonderful dinner in the Y. M. C. A.

After dinner was served, the annual spring meeting of the Central Pennsylvania Branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers was held. State College was represented by twenty men. The meeting was opened by chairman Burpee, of Bucknell University, who introduced Mr. A. Lewis, of the Burnham Works, whose talk was "The Employe versus the Employer." Talks were also given by Fred Snodgrass, '26, of Bucknell and Professor Keller of Penn State After a short business meeting the affair was closed and an expression of thanks was given Mr. L. H. Fry of the Standard Steel Company in behalf of the visitors.

The members of the women's evening cooking class which is a part of the extension course in home economics, gave a dinner in the laboratory for their husbands on Thursday evening, May 6. This marked the completion of one unit of lessons.

Druids Initiate New Men Into Membership

Hold Waffle Supper At Forest Inn; Forty-five Present At Mystic Rites

From the instant the appearance of the first platter of waffles was greeted with an approving roar, to the moment the last one disappeared down the throat of W. F. Wagner, the Druids held high carnival at the Forest Inn on the night of Thursday, May 6.

Thirty members of this order were packed about the first table, while fifteen neophytes, stalled by a blown-out tire of the second truck, were hungrily waiting their chance, somewhere back on the dusty highway. Despite a late start and the delay caused by tire trouble, they got to the Forest Inn before the table was re-set for them. In due season they were admitted to the dining room.

Mrs. Roadarmel, the genial hostess and miraculous baker of waffles, looked a little pale when W. F. W. touched the home plate for the first crowd, but when those hungry neophytes got under way she simply threw up her hands. Fortunately, Mr. Roadarmel and his son Ralph, both hardy woodsmen and forest rangers, were present to carry on, but even they weakened visibly before the neophytes cried "Enough." The bulging yearlings then

Prizes For Everyone This Poverty Day

Come on freshmen—Go your stuff! About 25 prizes will be distributed to freshman participants in Bucknell's second annual Poverty Day on Saturday, May 15. These prizes are donated by the merchants of Lewisburg, whose chief desires are to reward originality, not vulgarity. Prizes will be given to the most appropriate, the most asinine, the most ridiculous, the most original, and so on ad infinitum.

A. T. Purke, '26, and "Pud" Hollinger, '27, have succeeded in their efforts to give the freshmen some real prizes, and the list below shows prizes which are all worth working for.

The Orpheum—20 tickets.
Montgomery—1 shirt.
Donehower—1 pair golf hose.
Foresman—4 tennis balls.
Prowant—1 sport shirt.
Wainice—1 box candy
Headings—1 shaving brush and 1 razor.
Johnson—1 suit dry-cleaned and pressed.
Harry Billy—15 shines.
Pittenturf—3 suits cleaned and pressed.
Bechtel—ticket for $2 in trade.
Heiser—1 safety razor.
Nogel—1 stick-pin.
Zearfoss—1 flashlight.
Wagner—1 ticket for $2 in trade.
Baker—1 shaving cream and 1 brush.
Gedrich—1 pair Keds.
Harris—1 pair white-duck pants.
Heiter—1 ticket $1.50 in trade.
University Book Store—$1 box stationery.
Grenoble—1 pair cuff links.
Stahl—1 pipe.

Several other prizes will be added to this list.

Sen. George Pepper Will Speak June 9

The Honorable George Wharton Pepper, United State senator from Pennsylvania has been selected by the Trustees and Faculty of the University to deliver the commencement address to the graduating class this year on June 9 at Bucknell's seventy-sixth annual commencement exercises. The Senator from Pennsylvania has been chosen because of his deep interest in Bucknell and for his national prominence at this time. In a recent interview relative to the commencement program, President Hunt spoke of Senator Pepper as "Distinctively a representative of the scholar in politics."

Receives Degree

Senator Pepper will receive from Bucknell University at the commencement exercises at which he is the chief speaker an honorary doctorate. His appearance on the commencement platform will in all probability attract many guests to Bucknell's campus on Commencement Day, June 9.

FINAL PIKE TALK EXPLAINS CAUSES OF BRAIN DEFECTS

Vast Number of Physical Wrecks Of Life Suffer From Mental Diseases Or Defects

LIFE IS A CONSTANT OVERFLOW OF ENERGY

Insanity A Proionged Departure From The Person's Normal Thinking And Acting

Dr. H. B. Pike delivered his last lecture, Thursday, May 4, on "What we know as to the causes of mental disease and mental defect."

"Life is a constant overflow of energy," Dr. Pike said. "Every change must be met by a certain adjustment. That adjustment must have further reaction and adjustment. This constitutes development in the individual and evolution in the race.

"Before society understood mental disease and mental defect, continued failures in life were accounted for as sociological problems. Today, however, it has been found that a vast number of the physical wrecks of life suffer from mental disease or mental defect. These people fall into two groups, the feeble-minded or the insane.

"Insanity is a prolonged departure from an individual's normal method of thinking, feeling, and acting, so that he can no longer adapt himself to his surroundings. All insanity is mental disease, but it must be remembered that not all mental disease is insanity. Thus, modern science in this work has discovered that the recognition of factors that lead to conditions of mental disease are much

Kent Pre-Legal Club Resumes Activities

The Kent Pre-legal Club came back to life after a year's sleep, in a meeting in the Chemistry Building on Tuesday evening, May 11. Six new members were selected and officers for the year 1926-27 were elected.

The Kent Pre-legal is a local honorary club for pre-legal students, and candidates for admission must have obtained a "B" grade throughout their political science work. The present rules require also at least one semester of political science study before admission can be granted.

Unfortunately the members of the club, prior to Tuesday's additions, are seniors and graduation will seriously deplete the ranks of the organization. These are: T. Burns Drum, A. F. Hirt, W. R. White, C. T. Farrow, Jr., W. A. Mathewson, and R. Y. Garrett Jr.

The following men were selected and initiated into membership on Tuesday night: D. W. Anderson, '27, P. B. Davis, '28, E. W. Wilkinson, '29, V. W. McHail, '28, H. W. Lunger, '27, and G. W. Walker, '27.

The 1926-27 officers are: D. W. Anderson, presiding judge; P. B. Davis and G. W. Walker, associate judges; E. W. Wilkinson, clerk of courts; V. W. McHail, sergeant-at-arms.

A scholarship committee was appointed to pass on the scholastic eligibility of prospective members. This committee consists of: A. F. Hirt, R. Y. Garrett, and P. B. Davis.

The next meeting will be held in the Chemistry Building on May 25.

WOMEN'S STUDENT "EX" ELECTS 1926-27 OFFICERS

Amy Haldeman, '27, was chosen president of the Women's Student Government Association for next year at the annual election held on Wednesday evening, May 5. She succeeds Irene Bell, '26, who has piloted student government through a very successful year.

Members of the Student Executive Board who were elected were Helen McElravy, '27, and Gertrude Downs, '28, Kathryn Smith, '27, and Lillian Reese, '29, Josephine Behney, '28, Ruth Cooper, '28, Amy Haldeman, '27, Jean Wood, '29, Katherine Gaventa, '27, Jane Beakley, '28, Virginia Scully, '27, Mary Taubel, '29, Mabel Punk, '28, Alice Spoken, '29, Florence Beckworth, '27, and Grace Williams, '28. Installation services were held on Monday evening, May 10.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI KAPPA PSI

"Eddie" Gring attended the Annual Spring Dance at Bryn Mawr.

Brother Clarence A. Weymouth Sr., former star athlete of Bucknell and Yale, paid the boys a visit over the week-end.

Fred Evans visited his parents at Kingston over the week-end.

Brother "Red" Fowler of New Haven, Conneticut, was a recent visitor at the house.

Red Letter Week for the freshmen is in full swing.

Brother "Doc" Gordner of U. of Penna., was a week-end visitor at the chapter house.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Whirling, rushing figures; lustrous, luscious, colorful figures! Mad syncopation! Rustling silk, beautiful girls, weather in accord with the general feeling of good natured gaiety. Such was the setting of the annual week-end party of Delta Chapter of Phi Gamma Delta.

A casual visitor entering the Phi Gamma Delta House on Friday afternoon would have been greeted with a sight as rare as the proverbial hen's teeth. All was confusion; happy, eager, anxious confusion, for the "Fijis" were about to welcome their dreamed-of "H. P. Q's." On this day all roads led to Lewisburg in general and the Chapter house in particular. Upon the arrival of the first guests the scene took on the cheerful, colorful aspect of the typical week-end party. The welcome sound of the dinner-chimes summoned all to the more business like procedure of "putting on the feed-bag."

The dance on Friday night, from 8 till 1, was informal. Noble's Orchestra was at it's best, and was the chief factor in the glorious success of the first night. Many were the sighs and numerous the entreaties for more dancing, as the orchestra played the last selection.

The next day the guests made the house their headquarters, and from there set out to enjoy the numerous attractions to be found. The baseball game received the major portion of the visitors, while some preferred the lazier atmosphere of the tennis court and garden.

All returned to the house for dinner. After dinner the favors were distributed and each guest received a Florentine leather hand bag, with the fraternity crest.

Saturday night saw a fitting climax to the wonderful week-end. If anything could have surpassed Friday night it was the dance on Saturday. Realizing that the party was nearing its end, the "Fijis" and their guests enjoyed the dancing to the utmost.

In order to allow the Seminary "Gals" to get in by 12:00 o'clock, supper was served at half past eleven. The visitors from out of town continued dancing and were served at the close of the dance.

The happy ending was lacking, for such a party comes but once in a life time. With a feeling of genuine regret the guests took their departure, with happy memories of a never-to-be-forgotten week-end.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Mrs. Gould from Bates College, Maine, and Mrs. W. H. Coleman were dinner guests Wednesday, May 5.

"Hell Week" has finally come and gone. The freshmen attracted much attention by their weird noises and antics. An exciting and amusing time was had by all.

Mothers' Day celebration was a huge success. The splendid weather that has prevailed for the last few days brought out an unusually large number of parents. Consequently, this year's gathering was one of the greatest and best of all times. The arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Bach and Mrs. Thorn was the beginning of a stream of parents, relatives and friends that did not terminate until Sunday was well on. The features of the banquet were Mother Martin's talk on the boy's place in this world and what he must do if he is to become a success. Mrs. Bach expressed the opinions of the mothers and thanked the boys for the splendid opportunity to be with them. Mr. Lybarger's fitting talk on the relation between boy and father clearly expressed the "father viewpoint." The celebration ended with affirmations on all sides that next year would see all the parents back again to renew this wonderful association with the boys and their parents.

KAPPA SIGMA

Brothers "Herb" Wendle, '28 and "Jim" Davis, '28, accompanied by Mr. Wendle, father of "Herb," spent the week-end in Philadelphia.

Brother "Ken" Corson, '28, visited friends in Philadelphia on Sunday, May 9.

The following brothers attended the Junior Prom at Bloomsburg State Normal on Saturday, May 8: Fred Dixon, '26, "Jack" Dowd, '26, George Koch, '26, Chester Rishell, '26, "Gus" Shorts, '26, "Eddie" Pierce, '28, "Whitie" Barber, '28, and Howard Kulp, '29.

The fire-fighting unit on Old Montour was greatly strengthened by the addition of Brothers Kushell, '27, Hollinger, '27, and Zortman, '26, last Saturday evening.

Brother "Bill" Gray, '26, of State College visited the chapter house over the week-end.

Alpha Phi of Kappa Sigma announces with pleasure the pledging of Mario Bianchi, '29, of Barre, Vermont.

DELTA SIGMA

Three members of the Albright baseball team were guests at the house, Saturday, May 8.

Brothers Purke, Slifer, McClune, Mellor and Lauderbaugh attended the annual convention of Alpha South province of Phi Delta Theta in Philadelphia, Friday and Saturday, May 7 and 8.

Rev. and Mrs. G. C. Horter, of Painted Post, N. Y., visited their sons, Richard, '26, and John, '29, twice during the past week and were guests at the house during that time.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

The home of the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity was a scene of varied activity and beauty during the week-end of May 7, with Lloyd Major's Orchestra of Harrisburg forming the center of the spirited enjoyment. The house had been decorated in the fraternity's colors: purple, green, and gold, contrasted with blue and white. The Women's College was well represented, as well as many towns and girls' schools in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

The music was one of the main reasons for the success of the party. Not only the dancers, but crowds of students and town people enjoyed the pep and harmony of the musicians. Novelties and special dances were used to advanage, and the selections played were those suggested by the dancers.

Checkered designs and spider web effects woven in crepe paper set off by streamers and evergreen, presented a very pleasing appearance to the guests. Palms and colored lights added to the effect.

Leather pocketbooks were carried away by he guests as memories of the occasion. These were presented to the girls as programs for the formal dance on Friday evening.

The chaperones were Professor and Mrs. F. E. Burpee, Professor and Mrs. H. W. Robbins, and Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Hartz.

KAPPA DELTA RHO

The parents of Preston Geist, '27, were visitors at the house, Sunday, May 2.

The Kappa Delta Rho indoor baseball team met the Lambda Chi Alpha team, May 1, to play off a rubber, the former winning by a 6-2 score. Thursday the house team defeated Theta Upsilon Omega 7-1, and Friday downed Phi Lambda Theta 33-3.

Alpha Chi Omega gave a Dam Dance at the house, Saturday, May 8. Music was furnished by the Blue Band.

Plans are progressing rapidly for the week-end party to be held Friday and Satuday, May 14 and 15.

Pledgemen bowed to the toils of "hell-week" from Monday to Thursday of last week.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Shorts, of Emlenton, Pa., visited their son Arthur during the past week-end. They were on hand at Sunday noon, when "Artie" pushed a baby carriage up Brown street to the house. This carriage, borrowed from Assistant Professor John S. Gold, was "Artie's" contribution to the collection of curios gathered by the freshmen on their all-night hike.

T. U. O's indoor-outdoor baseball team broke even with last week's schedule, losing to the K. D. R's. by a 7-1 score, winning in eleven innings over the Kappa Sigs 12-5, and playing a 16-16 tie with the "Demies."

Among the various gifts presented to the house by the freshmen on Sunday morning were: a hod with 16 bricks given by "Strong Man" Mitchell; a goose by "Abie" Laugher, the said goose is now at large in Lewisburg—his name is "Charley;" a baby carriage with "Artie" Shorts' compliments; a rooster donated by "Chuck" Rivenburg; a brick numbered 2400, from Seventh street by "Johnny" Bridegum; and the pedigree of Buck Private Shannon, whose grave is in the cemetery, was given by "Gene" Klingler.

PI BETA PHI

The active chapter was delightfully entertained by the patronesses at a luncheon on Saturday afternoon, May 1, at he home of Mrs. Malcolm Musser, North Third street.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Plans are well under way for the annual Symposium to be held June 2. Laura McGann has consented to act as Symposiarch.

Senior Tri-Deltas are being entertained at a round of delightful teas and dinnerrs. Sunday evening Mrs. Colestock entertained at tea. Clara Price, '25, Emma Kunkle Cober, '22, Mrs. Leo Rockwell, and Mrs. Frank Sprague were also present. Wednesday evening the Seniors were guests at a dinner given by Mrs. James McClure, an honorary member of the sorority. Miss Ethel Fowler and Eleanor Schooley completed the Tri Delta party. The evening was spent in playing "Michigan," and Elberta Councilman, Hannah Metcalf, and "Shorty" Miller tied for the presidency of the bank. Sunday Mrs. Walter McCracken, a patroness of the sorority, gave a dinner for the nine Tri Delta Seniors.

The sorority was entertained for their monthly social meeting at "Mattie" Felty's. The girls were divided into groups, and performed stunts. "Martie" and "K" Glase served delicious salad and cakes.

Mock Initiation was held Saturday at Anna Everitt's home at Allenwood. Peg Zerby and Mary Tyler as "Maggie" and "Diggs," "Jo" Schilling as "the old maid who had been pretty fast in her youth," Sally Porter as the "Angel", Jessie Fielding as "The Gypsy Fortune Teller," Inez Robinson and Ruth McFarland as "little girls," Helen Rillo as "The Sailor who lost his sweetheart," Lillian Reese as the "Milkmaid," and Eleanor Schooley as "Puss in Boots" kept the entire chapter in laughter. When they arrived at the Everitt farm, everybody was ready for lunch. Before the hike back to the Reading Station, Mrs. Everitt treated the crowd to ice cream. The sophomore class acted as the committee.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The pledges of Eta chapter of Alpha Chi Omega surprised the active chapter very much the other day. Notice came that there was something for the chapter at the express office. It proved to be an elegant gate-legged table to match the rest of the fraternity suite furniture, and is a gift from the pledges.

Goldena Guilford, '27, was elected as the representative from Eta chapter to go to the Alpha Chi Omega Convention at Lake Louise, Alberta, Canada, from June 28 to July 2.

An "at-home" to faculty members was held on Sunday afternoon, May 2, in the fraternity suite in Wolfe House.

Edythe Evans, '29, Jane Foust, '29, Kitty Bossler, '28, and Amanda Brown, '28, are going to live in the suite next year.

PHI MU

Phi Mu will hold its spring dance at the Lambda Chi Alpha house on Saturday, May 22. Many alumni and guests are expected for the dance and the Japanese Garden party that is to be held the same night

Freshman pledges will undergo the torment of Mock Initiation on Wednesday afternoon, May 12. After witnessing the antics of fraternity pledges the past week, the girls are expecting the most fiendish torture.

ZETA GAMMA TAU

Zeta Gamma Tau entertained its mothers and patronesses at a Mothers' Day tea in the living room of the Women's College on Saturday afternoon, May 8.

TAU KAPPA ALPHA

A. F. Hirt, '26, A. Hile, '26, and Bruce Miller, '27, carried paddles and pillow cases to Prof. R. F. Howe's office in Biology Building on the evening of May 5 where they were put through the rites of Tau Kappa Alpha national honorary forensic fraternity. Each initiate was presented with a T. K. A. key, a small gold scroll, suitably engraved.

PICTURES COME BY RADIO

May first saw the first pictures transmitted commercially by radio for print cross the Atlantic. Two of these radiographs appeared in the New York "Herald-Tribune." One was of a race at Newmarket and the other was a likeness of the Prince of Wales taken in Biarritz, conveyed by aeroplane to London and from there sent by radio to New York. The enterprise of the "Tribune," in securing these pictures interested Theodore Rogers, '28, who is related to the proprietor of that paper and who worked for a time in its advertising department.

Let Them Know That You Saw Their "Ad" in The Bucknellian

THE TALE OF A TEST TUBE

By ROBERT L. LYON, '29

A tall and beautiful figure she was, as she stood in the soft glow of the library fire. A maid whose lips were like the ruby of the desert, like the warming red wine; whose eyes had the brilliance of the evening star; whose face shone with the luminous beauty of the rising sun! She stepped forward, and the flickering light fell upon her nymph-like shoulders, threw into full relief the outline of her black satin evening gown, and passed on, to be broken into a rainbow of flashing colors by the sparkling diamond upon her left hand. And the youth could utter no sound, for his heart beat wildly.

But hark! the Vision speaks. Like the tinkle of a water-fall, like rippling notes of a silver flute, fall her jeweled words. And a little golden laugh, ringing like the bells on Christmas-day, falls with them. "You like me? You think I'm pretty this way?"

He was mute. Then at length: "You—you are different to-night. I never saw you this way before. My God, girl, you are divine! you are Aphrodite, herself!"

"Oh no." She smiled, and teeth glistened in her mouth, like the pearls in Cleopatra's wine. "I'm no goddess. I'm just a little girl—little Toinette, and I belong to you." She extended her hand, and the jewel sparkled in the fire-light.

The Vision Departs

But alas, ere he could grasp that hand, a most astounding thing happened. His enchanted surroundings were whisked away without warning, and he was dropped with a jolt into the dingy interior of a Reading coach, where a most unsympathetic individual in a blue coat was waving a ticket punch almost in his face. He responded to that gentleman's wishes, with much confusion, but thru all his embarrassment, there shone a ray of pure triumph. He had been day-dreaming, to be sure, but his very surroundings were a proof that before many hours had passed, his dream would become a reality.

Frederick Lawton was a socialist. Critical by nature, and filled with youthful ardor, he had been aroused almost to fanaticism by the lurid arguments contained in a small Communist pamphlet which had fallen into his hands. Stapled between covers of flaming red, which bore the single word "ARISE!", this tract called upon the reader to repudiate the twin tyrants, Clergyman and Capitalist, break the bonds of custom, and prepare the world for a new civilization, from which the ills of the present system would be banished.

He Finds An Associate

Armed with these weapons, the new convert—then a junior in the Greenville high school—marched forth to join the revolution. But he did not march far. His school-mates refused to take him seriously, and in many ways, manifested their complete indifference to the salvation of the race. Stung by their apathy, he was about to withdraw within himself, when, to his great joy, he became acquainted with a girl who listened sympathetically to his arguments, and ended by enlisting under his banner.

This girl's name was Marie Antoinette Clairmont, but she was universally known as "Toinette." Although of French extraction, she showed few of the emotional characteristics generally associated with that people, but was rather noted for the intellectuality of her bobbies. She was an extremely pretty girl, and, like her fellow revolutionist, Fred, came of an old and well-to-do family.

These two, so admirably suited to each other, and so alike in their interests, became fast friends at once. As time went on, and their common interests multiplied, the original cause of this friendship dropped out of sight. The sympathies consistent with their station asserted themselves, and although they still called themselves "socialists," their interest in that doctrine became negligible. Not so, their interest in each other! So continually were they together that the younger set came to accept their engagement as an established fact.

They Must Separate

Then came the separation. Fred, whose imagination was picturing a brilliant career in public life, was accepted as a student by the law school of the University of Pennsylvania. "Toinette," a year younger, was to remain at home, to complete her preparatory work.

The evening preceding his departure the two spent together. With a mutual desire to avoid publicity, they went to the movies, slipping out early, to stroll home by the longest way. The night was quiet and cool, and Fred remained for a long time upon the front porch of his sweetheart's home.

He had admired before, but to-night he worshiped. Never had she appeared so beautiful. Unfortunately, the moon was shining on the wrong side of the house, but a nearby streetlight did very well as a substitute, casting over the lawn that faint, silvery glow which is so necessary to occasions of this kind. Stimulated by their surroundings, and by thoughts of the approaching separation, the romantic element in both was aroused to its highest pitch, and when they parted, their farewell was expressed not by the formal handshake which each had anticipated, but by that eternal symbol which has served the lovers of every generation since man arose from the brute.

Weeks Of Loyal Adoration

During the weeks that followed, that night remained vivid in the memory of the new collegian. But now he was on his way home. After a separation of months, after days of feverish waiting, after an eternity of loyal adoration, he was to be reunited with his idol. And on Christmas-eve, with the bells ringing, and the whole world making merry, he would ask her the supreme question.

At the station, a girl hailed him joyously. He returned the salute politely and hurried into a taxi. As the cab backed away, he could see her slim figure on the platform. It was not his girl; it was a little Irish maid who lived in one of the less respectable districts of the town.

Mary McCoon was noted for neither the perfection of her dress nor the polish of her manners. Her laughing blue eyes and slightly curved mouth barely saved her from being homely. But curiously enough, her sudden appearance had taken our young collegian's thoughts from his sweetheart, for the moment, and centered them upon herself. He remembered her steadfast loyalty to a lone suitor, a student at the local high school. Fred thought of him with disgust. "How could she bear that abominable Charley Stuart? Mary is only a slum girl herself, but she's infinitely superior to that bum!" Young Stuart was not, perhaps, actually as disreputable as Lawton thought him, but he was, in truth, no person to appeal to an intellectual, his highest ideals being the ownership of a suit of clothes and a jazz trombone. Indeed he was one of that parasite class known as "small-town sports", whose delight is to loaf in front of poolrooms and spatter discolored saliva on the passers-by.

He Reaches Home

While Fred was occupied with these thoughts, the taxi turned into a fine maple-lined avenue and drew up before his home. For a while, the greetings and explanations attending such an occasion took his entire mind, and as soon as he could do so, he made his way to the telephone. The moment "Toinette's" bell-like voice sounded in the receiver, a flood of his old emotions swept thru him. "Hello, 'Nette.—Yes, got home this afternoon. —Yes.—Yes.—Say, listen, Kid; what are you doing tonight?—Oh, you are? Well how about tomorrow, then?—What! Come on now, be reasonable. —Oh, all right."

"Damn!" he muttered as he turned from the 'phone. "What on earth's got into the girl? Got a date for to-night, she can't break. I can understand that,—some maiden-aunt or something, probably. But she won't talk about the future—says she'll see me Sunday. Well that mean's I've got to take in church, of course."

The days dragged until the end of the week, when he broke his usual custom and went to church,—altho the shock of this abrupt reversal of policy was eased somewhat by his being a half-hour late. Almost before the benediction had been said, he was in the vestibule, waiting to keep his long-anticipated appointment.

Continued Disappointment

Antoinette greeted him with a profusion of friendly words, and a smile which sent him into the upper air at once. But when he made a motion toward his car, which was parked in the side street, she excused herself hastily and hurried off with a girl friend. Filled with astonishment and chagrin, the young man started his machine, pushed out the accelerator, and drove home at racing speed. As he hurtled into the drive, his attention was disturbed for an instant, and the car grazed the side of the garage door, badly marring one of the fenders.

Infuriated by this succession of misfortunes, the youth determined to call upon his mistress that evening, and have what he termed a "show-down." As the time approached, however, his wrath cooled, and he was once more filled with that single emotion which had almost monopolized his attention during the preceding months. As he crossed the lawn of the splendid Clairmont estate, the sound of a piano struck his ear, and he was suddenly filled with a strong wave of self-confidence and elation. At last, everything seemed to be breaking right. The girl herself, wearing a gown which set off her beauty in striking fashion, met him at the door. Upon her hand sparkled a jewel,—tho he knew it could not compete with the flashing stone which he intended to place there. In the background of this gorgeous picture, the library fire was throwing out a halo of flickring light, to encircle the divinity before it. The dream in the Reading coach had become a reality, at last!

The Disillusion

"Bon soir, mademoiselle. You didn't give me a date, so I took one anyway." And Fred bowed low.

"I'm very sorry, but I'm engaged this evening. Mr. Stuart will be here in ten minutes. If there's anything I can do for you—." The cold politeness of the tones cut like a dagger in the hands of a princess.

"You're engaged? And who is Mr. Stuart, if I may enquire?—Say! You —you don't mean Charley Stuart, the one that lives down in the nigger district!"

"That is the gentleman to whom I referred. And it is nothing to you where he lives."

"Gentleman!" he almost exploded. "You'll pardon the language, but what in hell do you see in him? Of all the conceited cockroaches! If that roughneck has the nerve to show his—."

"That will do, Mr. Lawton. When you insult my friends, I must ask you to leave my home." And she opened the door. The angry youth stared at her for a moment, then seized his hat and stalked out. Again his dream had dissipated!

In a few minutes his wrath changed to a cold cynicism. "I might have expected that," he thought. "But I've learned my lesson. Try to get me interested in a girl now! I'm going back to college and laugh at her. I'll send back her photographs the first thing I do." He laughed bitterly. "Love, love!—gee, what bunk! Barnum was a conservative, all right."

The Ancient Regression

He was interrupted by a quick step behind him. "Hello!" rang out a girl's musical voice.

"Good evening," he replied with impatient emphasis.

"I'm awfully glad you're going my way," returned his new companion, without noticing the irritation in his tone, "I hate these dark streets when I'm alone."

The sun was rising in a flood of yellow light, when the inhabitants of the Greenville factory district began to stir. On the roofs of the smoky brick building, the wash-women were already at work. "How-de-do, Mrs. McCoon, ain't this a grand mornin' tho?"

"Why bless your heart, Mrs. Rogan, but you'll not be talkin' about the morning, when I tell you what's on my mind."

"Why how's that, Mrs. McCoon?"

"Well I guess you've got to hand it to my Mary. She's got one swell feller now. Took her to that big club affair last night, and she's got a date to go ridin' with him this afternoon." And the proud mother stuck a clothespin on the line, with a gesture of triumph.

"What, has that there Charley Stuart come back to her again?"

"That there Charley Stuart!" Mrs. McCoon oozed disgust from every pore. "Well I guess not. It's one of them high-hat college fellers, from up on Highland street. He's home on his vacation."

"Well I never! What's his name, Mrs. McCoon?"

"Why it's—now, don't that beat all? I plumb forgot to ask what his last name was. But he's from the Univers'ty of Pennsylvania, I think Mary said, and his first name's Ned, or something about like that."

EPILOGUE

As when a chemist introduces a substance consisting of two elements, "A" and "B," into a test-tube which already contains a similarly composed compound, "CD," the substances react, exchanging their atoms to form two new compounds, "AC" and "BD," —so, in like manner, do the characters in the story of life show at times as little evidence of reasoning power as the lifeless elements, when they desert old alliances to form new.

Romance and Gloves

A curious atmosphere of romance has always lingered around gloves. The knight's gauntlet was the gage in battle, poisoned gloves were used by the Medici in disposing of rivals, perfumed gloves were revered by lovers.

HEARTS

By Samuel L. Savidge, '29

It was not the mere fact that Alma trumped his aces which annoyed Douglas. The thing which really nettled him was her utter unconcern—no pink suggestion of a blush, no blue eyes diffidently downcast. Alma never made any attempt to apologize. In fact, Douglas wondered at times whether she was even aware of her short comings as a partner.

Douglas had studied Alma more carefully since they had been engaged. He owed it to himself, he thought, and some book he had read said he owed it to his prospective children.

In the realm of his own observations, he decided that most marital troubles were caused by spiritual differences—what's more, very small differences. The De Havens had separated because Scott had insisted on having a German police dog, while his wife was determined it should be a poodle. It was the little things, constantly recurring, which made men leave home.

So, while Alma's trumping his aces was a very inconsequential matter, it troubled Douglas. He had hazy visions of his hurling a globe of gold fish or a potted geranium at Alma—say ten years hence when she had trumpted his ten thousandth ace—or desertion—or ever divorce and—alimony.

Alma was a real pal on the golf links, and she danced like one in a million. Douglas believed Alma could be taught to play bridge, if one had lots of patience and time. He bought her books on the subject, simple texts, at first, then complicated treatises. Yes they were going to be very happy, he felt sure, after they were married in September. The mere thought of Alma's being his wife made his heart beat more quickly.

When the summer bridge season opened, Alma's playing had improved to such an extent that it attracted even the attention of Gordon Burgess.

Then one day when he dropped round for an announced tet-a-tete her maid indiscreetly told him, "Miss Alma has gone riding with Mr. Burgess." Dougas endeavored not to be jealous; for jealously was little and unbecoming, and he, of course, knew that he was broad-minded.

At the Anderson's week-end party a month later Alma and Gordon left the bridge table to take a little spin over the newly finished concrete road and telephoned an hour later, that they had just been married in Hamilton.

Douglas tried to be philosophical about it, and comforted himself with a little poem he had once heard about there being bigger fish in the sea than ever were caught, but still it was a painful blow. Everyone said he took it bravely.

He was eager to talk to his more successful rival.

After the couple had returned from their honeymoon, he found Gordon one day at the club.

He seized Gordon's hand firmly. "Congratulations.—" Then, as if it were an after thought, he added, "I suppose you were first attracted by Alma's bridge.

Gordon thoughtfully answered. "Well, I suppose so. It wouldn't be safe for my own laurels to marry a bridge shark." He laughed reminiscently. "But that evening at the Anderson's, Alma and I were partners. The Smiths bid four hearts. I doubled and they redoubled. I let the redouble stand and was all ready to set them back when Alma trumped my ace, unguarding her queen. Smith, on the next trick, caught her queen with his king. It was a perfect scream really, and when Alma didn't apologize, I knew I was in love.

POVERTY DAY

Numerous posters about Hill and town bring to our attention the approaching Poverty Day. They say that indecent costumes will not be tolerated, which is to be commended, considering the liberties taken with the occasion last year. This celebration which last year replaced the traditional Pajama Parade is to be a future tradition, but there should be no smirches upon its beginnings. The ancient warning of a word to the wise and the devil take the foolhardy still holds true. Pride for one's Alma Mater should deter one from indecent or would-be risque clothing or lack of clothing this freshman's day of days.

DRUIDS INITIATE NEW MEN INTO MEMBERSHIP

unlocked the door of the dining room and came forth, well fortified for what was to follow.

They needed to be. Druids are creatures of the forest. Their rites are awesome, like the forest. Into the deep and darksome forest the long train of neophytes tremblingly wound its uncertain way, to meet fate. Beside a rushing mountain torrent, under the lofty arches of majestic hemlocks dimly illuminated by a mystic fire, each neophyte unflinchingly braved the terrors of the ordeal, made his vow of allegiance, and emerged from the dark depths a wearer of the coveted emblem of the Druids.

By this time it was so late that the formal program which had been prepared to follow, was dropped. Instead of reassembling about the festive board, the Druids filed into the waiting trucks and the two or three private cars that had brought them, and started back to Lewisburg. Arbogast, the truckman, took the precaution to send the Ford truck filled with freshmen on ahead; but this time no tires blew out, and the crowd reached town about ten-thirty, filled with pleasant memories—and Mrs. Roadarmel's waffles.

The men initiated on Thursday night are the first taken into the society since it was installed here a few weeks ago, when the Bucknell chapter of Theta Delta Tau, which was started at Bucknell in 1895, became the nucleus of the new organization. Professor Lewis E. Theiss, who could not be initiated when the other Theta Delta Tau men were taken into the Druids, was made a member of the new chapter at this meeting. The other initiates, all of the class of '29, were the following: William J. Convery, Edward H. Halicki, Arthur T. Harris, Edward S. Hoffman, Charles E. Kimball Jr., Bernard Klosterman, Thomas W. Kredel, William T. Mahood, Frederick B. Mitchell, Ben H. Reese, Archie P. Seiler, Edwin G. Ward, Clarence A. Weymouth Jr., James G. Williams, and Lewis E. Woodring.

Other members present were George H. Fritzinger, Eugene S. Horsman, Douglas MacKenzie, W. F. Wagner, and Frank E. Waldner, all of the class of 1926. Juniors present included J. Boyd Allsworth, Albert W. Bibl, Sam Convery, John S. Cregar, Randall L. Davis, Glenn W. Diehl, Walter K. Elder, Clayton D. Hollinger, James E. Hulick, Vernon L. Tuck, Stanley A. McCaskey, and Sterns Warner. The class of 1928 was represented by Jame P. Davis, Harold S. Lynn, William C. Madison, H. Montgomery Marsh, John B. Middleton, O. Philip Montgomery, Fred McKinney, Donald Nicholson, Edmund B. Pierce, and Hugh J. Yates.

SPECIAL SENIOR PRIVILEGES WENT INTO EFFECT MAY 7

The special senior privileges which went into effect on Friday, May 7, and extend to the end of the present term, are as follows:

1. Seniors will be permitted to chaperone juniors and underclassmen on hikes, parties, etc., to Red Rock, Blue Hill, and Tourist Camp, providing there are at least two couples in such parties. They must return at 7:30.

2. Seniors may go riding or hiking with men out of town limits, providing they are back from the hike by 7:30, and from riding by 9:30.

3. Seniors may go walking with men in town in the evenings, providing they walk on Second, Third, Fourth, and Brown streets, and on Market street as far as Eighth.

4. Seniors may eat dinner with men in town.

5. Seniors may have dates with men in town Sunday evenings.

6. Seniors may go in groups of three or more to shows in Milton or Sunbury, at night. If there are men in the party the group must be confined to seniors and there must be at least two couples.

7. Seniors may be out until 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Howes Talks At Vespers

An all-student Vesper service will be held in Bucknell Hall on Sunday, May 16, from 6 to 7 o'clock in the evening. All college students are invited, and it is hoped that the various Christian Endeavors and Young People's groups will co-operate by not having meetings on that night.

Professor Norman Stewart will speak on a subject relating to friendship, and there will be special music more important than punishing those who break windows, commit damage, and even go as far as to commit homicide.

DR. PIKE DISCUSSES DEFECTS OF BRAIN

"There are 60,000 patients admitted to institutions for the insane in the United States every year. In fact there are more beds in the hospitals for the insane than in all other hospitals in the United States. The expenditure for these cases last year totalled $75,000,000.

"In Pennsylvania there are 22,500 inmates in the twenty-four institutions for the insane. The almhouses in this state housed over 50,000 inmates in the last two years. It has been figured that up to date, the cases of insanity have cost the state of Pennsylvania $378,000. There are over 30,000 feeble minded individuals outside of the regulation of the state, and, although the figures are not certain, about 8,000 prostitutes."

Of the 163,000 murders committed in the United States during a grim period, fully 69,000 were committed by boys and girls under twenty years of age, of which 50 or 60 per cent. were mentally defective or mentally diseased. Thus, the State, community, and in fact, everybody suffers because of the failure of not recognizing these diseases at first and caring for them then.

"No one factor is responsible for this. There is a combination of factors which produce it. Man is the product of the combination of his ancestors and he is subjected to his environment. Although diseases are not inherited, yet faulty heredity and environment must be watched. A weak organism may be prevalent through heredity. Strength canot come from weakness, pefection cannot come from defect. Thus, one whose heredity is known to be weak should be careful so that the weak organism is not overworked. Faulty environment often leads to mental disease which could have been prevented. If the individual grows up in an environment of mental disease, he may succumb to it. Yet if he is taken from that environment there is no reason whatever for him to he a victim of mental disease.

"Syphilis is responsible for more insane patients than any other factor. It has been estimated that one out of every ten people in the United States is a victim of syphilis, which may be transferred to offsprings. Syphilis is not a reportable disease in Pennsylvania. There should be a law to make these cases reportable so that the disease may be checked. Otherwise, nothing can be done."

Thus, in summing up his last lecture, Dr. Pike emphasized public education in this line for everybody. Dr. Pike asked the Bucknell students to carry what they have learned out into the world after graduation. The future of the country rests in the hands of those who are educated.

His series of lectures on mental hygiene made to a large group of Bucknell students during the past two weeks culminated in a clinic at the Danville State Hospital on Saturday, May 8.

About 200 students attended the clinic which was given in the auditorium of the institution. Besides this about forty nurses from the Danville Geisinger Memorial Hospital were present.

Dr. J. Allen Jackson, superintendent, gave the introductory speech in which he generally reviewed the conditions of detention and supervision of mental defectives throughout the state. His most striking statement was that the hospital at Danville was the best of its kind in the state, and one of the best in the whole country. He said that the hospital now houses 2000 persons, 300 of whom are nurses and doctors.

Dr. Pike then took charge of the clinic proper. He brought forward various specimens of mental defectives, ranging from the idiot to the mild maniac. These specimens covered the entire field of insanity.

At the conclusion of the clinic the visitors were taken through the hospital, the men going to the male quarters, the women to the female quarters. The chapel, the receiving ward, the sleeping-quarters, the dining hall, and the workshops were visited. Mental defectives were observed working and eating, seemingly unconcerned about the curious visitors.

A tour of the grounds about the institution concluded the program of sight-seeing.

At a meeting of the women of the class of '29, Jane Foust was elected president for next year, Anne Griffiths, vice president, Mildred Mosser, secretary, and Clara Fortner, treasurer. Jessie Fielding was elected as delegate to the Y. W. C. A. convention at Eagles Mere.

BUCKNELL STUDENTS FIGHT FOREST FIRE

o'clock shifts were used, for the fire was entirely under control at five o'clock Monday morning.

"Semites Serve Sandwiches"

Refusing to allow college men only to be of service during the forest-fire, some of the "Semites" volunteered in their branch of service last Sunday evening. Doabler House girls, receiving permission from Dean Clark for use of the kitchen to make sandwiches for the fire-fighters, set to work with a will. The "Sem" kitchen and all the fraternity houses were scoured for bread and other supplies. With the aid of "Shorty" Parmley, '27, and "Billie" Williams, '28, the "Doablerites" had soon dispatched four great cans of sandwiches to Old Montour. When "filler" gave out, Helen Steinhilper and "Jerry" Branch went through the women's dormitories, gathering such a supply of peanut-butter, jams and jellies as are found in girls' rooms. In all, the girls sent out about four hundred sandwiches to the men, some of whom had had nothing to eat all day.

Class of '72 Also Fought Fires

Saturday's experience in fire fighting was not the first such experience of Bucknell men. Fifty-four years ago the class of Seventy-two fought flames on Montour. It was about this time of year, just a few weeks before Commencement Day.

The class of '72 consisted of twenty-one men, one of whom was Professor William C. Bartol. The class had gone for a picnic on Montour, and had climbed to the very summit of the ridge. The occasion was in the nature of a farewell party, as the hike was one of the last outings held by the class. To celebrate the event, the men of '72 gathered large stones and erected a cairn on the highest point they could find.

They Had To Backfire

After performing this labor, they cooked and ate their dinner. As so often happens, the little fire they started got beyond their control. Soon it was blazing lively, fanned by a vigorous hilltop breeze. Not a man in the class, probably, had ever fought a forest fire. Like most inexperienced forest fire fighters, they attempted to beat out the flames. The effort was a failure. Soon the fire had spread so far they were afraid the whole mountain would burn. Then some cool head organized the class and a new effort was made along the lines now commonly used in fighting fire. With improvised rakes a fire line was made, all dead-leaves and combustible material being scraped aside. Then a backfire was started along the inner side of this clear space. After a very hard struggle the fire was extinguished.

Beyond any question the cairn erected by the class of 1872 still tops Montour Ridge. It is perhaps the first Bucknell memorial erected outside the college grounds. Certainly it is the first memorial to Bucknell forest fire fighters.

SHIKELIMO CHAPTER OF D. A. R. MET MAY 3

A number of women who are connected with Bucknell in some way figured in the May meeting of the Shikelimo chapter of the D. A. R., which was held at the home of Mrs. John P. Ruhl on the evening of May 3.

Mrs. James P. Whyte, who went as a chapter delegate to the recent national D. A. R. Congress in Washington, reported that 4,000 women attended that convention, and that they represented 2145 chapters throughout the nation. Shikelimo chapter was honored by having two pages—Mrs. A. C. Ehrhart and Mrs. A. W. Johnson, wife of a Bucknell trustee. The incoming treasurer general of the society is Mrs. Adam M. Wyant, the wife of one of our own Bucknell congressman, A. M. Wyant, ex-'94.

The officers of the local chapter, elected at this meeting, include Mrs. Charles A. Lindemann, recording secretary; Miss Mary E. Butler, Institute '93, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William C. Bartol, historian. Five members elected to the board of management include Mrs. Mary S. Gretzinger, Institute '87; Mrs. G. S. Matlack, Institute '69; Mrs. James P. Whyte; Mrs. M. L. Drum, '98; and Dr. Mary B. Theiss, '94.

Among out of town visitors were Mrs. Eugene Marsh, Institute '87, and her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Henderson, Institute '10, both of whom have belonged to the chapter.

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Bloomsburg Wins Track-Field Meet

Heavy scoring in field events that came near the end of the meet allowed Bloomsburg Normal to overcome a lead which Bucknell Freshhen had compiled on the track and gave Bloomsburg a 59 to 56 victory in a pretty dual track and field meet staged on Mt. Olympus Saturday afternoon, May 8.

Outstanding in the Bloomsburg victory was John Kanyuck, one-armed athlete, who took three firsts, a second and a third to make 18 points. Kanyuck jumped 5 feet, 3 inches to win the high jump, leaped 20 feet, 5 inches for victory in the broad jump and cleared the hurdles in the 220 yard low hurdle event in 30.2 seconds to carry first in that event. He was second in the 120 yard high hurdles won by Walls of Bucknell and he cleared the bar at 8 feet to take third in the pole vault. Placing third in that event as the most remarkable feat of Kanyuck's afternoon because the handicap of having only one arm was a serious one.

It was a meet where every point counted and the crowd had to remain until the last event was decided to learn which team triumphed.

Bucknell Best In Track Events

Bucknell did best in the track events and took first places in six of the seven events. Bloomsburg countered by excelling in the field where Maroon and Gold athletes took five of the six events.

Bloomsburg took second place in five of the track events and second in three field events. Bucknell placed men in second position in five of the thirteen events. The fresh team took six third places to five for Bloomsburg. It was the placing of Bloomsburg in second position in eight of the events that gave them victory. In the two hurdle events two Bucknell men, both running in third position, were ruled out, one man getting out of his lane and the other knocking over a hurdle. Had these men placed Bloomsburg still would have held a one point advantage in total score.

William Walsh, anchor man of the Bloomsburg team that finished third in the Penn Relays, and recognized as the best sprinter in the school, was unable to take part in the meet on account of illness, and his absence was felt.

Bachman Wins Half-mile Run

All of the sprints were close while in the distance events the leaders were well bunched over the entire course. Robinson, Bloomsburg distance man, who made a good showing against Carl Davis, Penn State runner, in an exhibition race at the county track meet Wednesday, had to be content with third place in the half mile. Bachman, of Bucknell, took the event with Farrow, a team mate second.

Robinson came back in the mile and ran a pretty race to nose out Grier Riemer, a former Normal runner. Robinson ran third until the last 200 yard and then sprinted to beat Riemer by a narrow margin. Farrow of Bucknell took the event in 5 minutes flat.

While time for some of the track events was slow, it was due largely to the condition of the track which was only recently given a fresh coat of cinders. Rain has not fallen since that time and as a result the track is not packed well.

220 yards dash—Crago, Bucknell, first; Sorber, Bloomsburg, second; Loper, Bucknell, third. Time, 23.5 seconds.

Albright College, 4; Bucknell Varsity, 5

A three-run rally in the eighth inning enabled the Bucknell Varsity to nose out the visiting Albright College baseball team, 5 to 4, in their annual ball game, Saturday afternoon, May 8, on the Stadium field.

An error, a base-on-balls, and three hits resulted in three runs for the Orange and Blue. "Bill" Blaisdell's triple in the second inning was responsible for one run, scoring his brother, Neal. Hartzell and Pitcher Shoupe were the big guns for the visitors. The former hammered out two triples out of four times at bat.

"Tom" Murphy, though hit frequently, came through with eleven strikeouts, which aided greatly in quenching Albright uprisings, in the fourth, fifth and seventh innings.

WOMEN'S COLLEGE TENNIS MATCHES SHOW RESULTS

The Women's College tennis tournament which has been under way since Thursday, May 6, is now beginning to show results. The contest is one of elimination and is directed by Grace Milhous, '27.

The players choose their own umpires, and any player not appearing forfeits the game to her opponent.

The results so far:

C. Dutton eliminated M. Elias, 6-3, 6-2
N. Kennedy eliminated M. Gettys, 6-2, 6-3
E. Jack eliminated A. VanDine, 6-2, 6-0
M. Zerby eliminated D. Riker, 6-1, 6-4
E. Rodgers eliminated M. Fritz, 6-1, 6-0
G. Milhous eliminated H. Falstick, 6-0, 6-1

Only preliminary games have been played so far, and winners of these games play in the semi-finals.

Bucknell Frosh Lose To Mansfield

The Bucknell University Freshman team, traveled to Mansfield Normal School on Friday, May 7, and lost to the Normal lads by a score of 6-0.

Playing before a large crowd and in perfect baseball weather, the fightin' Frosh team fell before the masterful hurling of Sorber, the Normal school ace, and the wonderful support given him. Sorber seemed to have the Bucknell yearlings well in hand throughout the entire game, allowing only three scattered hits.

Only in the fourth inning did Bucknell threaten to score, and that came with two men out. Blazes socked a Sorber pitch, which was good for three bases, but was left stranded on third base when Halicki flied out to left field for the final out of the inning.

The Normal School nine scored in the early innings of the fracas, and shoved enough runs across in the first two innings to win. Halicki, the Frosh pitcher, allowed only seven hits, and struck out ten batters, but his team mates failed to give him the necessary support to win the game. The box score:

When silvery moonlight falls on town and field—and the long, joyous tour home is ready to begin—have a Camel!

WHEN moonlight washes woodland and hills with platinum light. And the tour home is ready to begin—have a Camel!

For Camel makes every smooth tour smoother, adds of its own contentment to every delightful journey. Camels never tire your taste or leave a cigarette after-taste. Pay what you will, you'll never get choicer tobaccos than those in Camels.

So this night as the forest-topped hills race by in moonlit procession! As the magic road curves through the colonnades of birches—have then the finest made, regardless of price.

Have a Camel!

Camels contain the very choicest tobaccos grown in all the world. Camels are blended by the world's most expert blenders. Nothing is too good for Camels. In the making of this one brand we concentrate the tobacco knowledge and skill of the largest organization of tobacco experts in the world. No other cigarette made is like Camels. They are the overwhelming choice of experienced smokers.

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

A great deal of interest was manifested by the "Sem" girls in the drawing for rooms by the Junior girls immediately after lunch on Tuesday, May 4. As each junior came from the office with her fateful slip she was greeted with shouts of "what number?" and then she was either congratulated of sympathized with, according to the relative value of the number she had drawn.

Women's College Tennis Tournament started off Thursday, May 6, with three matches.

University speedsters have had their swift rushes to and from the Hill ended by the excavating for a new pipe line at Third street and University avenue. The resulting earth piles were an effectual bar to all fast driving.

* * * *

Phoebe Bloomfield, '27, was the happy recipient of a gorgeous bunch of deep red roses the other day. They were a birthday gift, the number of roses equalling the number of years. But we won't tell you how many roses there were.

* * * *

Is it not surprising to discover that Lewisburg was founded in 1770? A new Pennsylvania State Highway marker, erected at the west approach of the Susquehanna River bridge, also tells us that Derrstown was the name of the early settlement.

* * * *

"Bud" Frable, '26, was kept very busy during the Bucknell-Gettysburg track meet on Saturday. In the midst of his pole vaulting event, "Bud" was called to the javelin contest and then back to the pole vault again. He was also participant in the discus throw.

* * * *

"Tubby" Johnson, '28, has been working industrially for the last two nights mapping out the perambulations of the freshmen in this week-end "paper chase." We have good reason to believe that several members of the class of '29, will lose more sleep the night of March 7.

FRILL AND FROWN ELECTS OFFICERS; PARTY ON MAY 22

Frill and Frown, girls' dramatic society, held a meeting in the Y. W. C. A. room at the Women's College, Thursday evening, May 6, for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year. At the same time, a play, for the Japanese Garden party, to be given May 22, was discussed. Helen Durkin and Eleanor Miller, '28, were asked to choose the play. Arrangements to present "The Goose Hangs High" in Milton, sometime about May 21 were also planned.

The officers chosen are:

Edna Watson, '27, president.
Margaret Brick, '27, vice president.
Miriam Burns, '28, secretary.
Eleanor Miller, '28, propert manager.
Helen Williams, '28, was re-elected treasurer.

Value of Friends

Have you a friend whose loyalty you would not question, who always seems to understand, who does not expect more of you than you know your capacity to be, who is interested when you are pleased, or sympathetic when you are sad, who shows you that he values your good will more than he does the dollar in your pocket? Have you? Think twice before you answer, and if you have, stay by him stick to him, and if ever need be give him the shirt off your back, even if it's the last one in your own wardrobe. A good friend and true is a God-given asset in this day of dollar-chasing commercialism.—Chilton (Ala.) County News.

Odd Name Combinations

The following compilation shows the curious, and even ludicrous, results of including family names with the baptismal ones. Sponsors who read this little list would do well to hesitate when they are requested to "name the child": Edna Broker Mothershead; Marian English Earle; Sawyer Turner Somerset; Nealon Pray Daily; Benton Killin Savage; Owen Taylor Money; Ima Little Lombe; Brober Husbands Hart; R. U. Phelan Goode; Marie A. Bachelor; Eaton Growe Chatte; May Tyms Uppe; Bet ty Ebsser; Knott Worth Rending.

Alumni Notes

Mrs. Maria J. Scheibner

Mrs. Maria J. Scheibner, who attended the Bucknell Institute early in the seventies, died at her home at 308 Oley street, Reading, on Sunday, May 2, at the age of 76 years.

Mrs. Scheibner was born in Sharpsburg, Pa., and came to Reading in 1881, when her husband, the late Martin E. Scheibner, became principal of the High School for Boys. He remained principal until 1899. Mrs. Scheibner left Reading at that time as her husband became head of a private school at Doylestown. She returned in 1910, and has lived there ever since. She was a member of the First Baptist Church. She is survived by three sisters: Mrs. Edmond Wells, Beaufort, S. C.; Mrs. A. H. Howells, Sharon, Pa.; and Mrs. Willichty, Portland, Oregon.

Errol H. Derby, '20

Errol H. Derby, '20, who is city editor of the Greensburg Daily Tribune has an article in the Editor and Publisher for April 24, in which he discusses the advantage of printing high school news in community papers in order to attract youthful readers and so build up circulation. His argument is that students who learn to read the newspapers in early life will continue to be newspaper readers as long as they live, and will probably stick to the newspaper that attracts their youthful attention.

The high school age, Mr. Derby says, is the age at which the young can most easily be interested in newspaper. He tells how the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph runs a very notable high school news department, and how his own paper is entering this field.

Andrew Hendrickson, '25

Andrew Hendrickson, '25, has been very successful in his work as teacher at the Pennington Seminary, Pennington, N. J. "Andy" became publicity man and teacher at the Wenonah Military Academy, after his graduation last June, but left that school to take the Pennington position, where there was imperative need of some one who could handle the boys. "Andy" has had wide experience in handling people, having had charge of a church for two years and having been boss of a labor gang in construction work. He has made an excellent record at Pennington.

Prof. John W. Rice, '14

An interesting and enthusiastically received address on Public Health was delivered before the assembly of the Lewisburg High School by Dr. John W. Rice, '14, on Monday, May 3. "Dr. Rice," says the Lewisburg Journal, "pointed out the fact that the increase in public health is due largely to the fact that disease prevention by scientific methods, along with proper regard for water and milk supplies, has lengthened the average life in the nation almost fifteen years, thus increasing the productive powers of the nation. Dr. Rice further stressed health conditions in Lewisburg, pointing out the great values that have followed the control of the town's water and milk supplies. Typhoid fever has become practically unknown, and epidemics of small scope and placed under control. Concluding his address he pointed out the next move that must come in the town in the prevention of disease, and the immunization of children to diptheria."

The new $20,000 addition to the Lewisburg Lutheran church, which is to house the enlarged Sunday School class taught by Dr. John W. Rice, '14, was dedicated with fitting services on Sunday, May 9. A large number of out-of-town visitors helped make the service a very appropriate one, Lewistown sending a large delegation.

Judge A. W. Johnson, '96

President Coolidge on April 26, approved the bill to establish a term of the Federal Court at Lewisburg. This act authorizes a clerk with an office at Lewisburg, and established the official residence of Judge A. W. Johnson, '96, at Lewisburg.

Dr. Raymond M. West, '89

Dr. Raymond M. West, '89, was the principal speaker at the Bowlers' banquet held in the Milton Y. M. C. A. on Tuesday evening, May 4, which event was a fitting climax of the bowling tournament held in Lewisburg during the winter months.

Dr. West spoke on the subject "Service."

Dum—"Do you know Shakespeare well?"

Belle—"Say, you can't kid me; Shakespeare's dead."

Use Scientific Methods for Growing Orchids

Because of the rareness and beauty of the orchid several florists in the United States are devoting their efforts to growing orchid plants from seeds. This "aristocrat of the flower kingdom" was formerly imported from the mountainous districts of the tropics, where it grows clinging to trees. Manufactured gas now makes this unnecessary.

The seed of the orchid is almost microscopic in size. Since it is incapable of self-germination, scientific methods are necessary. The seeds are first placed in a glass flask, containing a specially prepared liquid, which furnishes carbon dioxide and moisture. It is necessary to keep the temperature at 90 degrees in the day-time and 70 degrees at night. The plants are grown in flasks for the first year. After that they are transferred to pots from year to year. The plant starts to flower at the age of five or six years.

In the propagating house, where the plants are extremely delicate, they are kept warm by gas. The fact that gas can be controlled easily and efficiently makes it invaluable in orchid culture, as any sudden change in temperature would cause the loss of many years' work.

New Yorker Who Made Lobster Dish Famous

One Ben Wenberg, a beau of his time, and a crony of Charles Delmonico, one of the four members of the family that made Delmonico's famous as the best restaurant in America, was responsible for the first concoting of lobster a la Newberg. Every Sunday at noon Mr. Wenberg would make his ceremonious entry into the dining room at Delmonico's, and take a seat at a table invariably reserved for him. In one of the pockets of his silk-velvet embroidered waistcoat he always carried a small bottle of the fiery red pepper which lent its peculiar savor to the method he had invented for preparing lobster. The waiters brought him all the rest of the condiments, sauces, wines, and the other ingredients, as well as the chafing dish he employed. This concoction was known first as Lobster a la Wenberg; and, since the two never were reconciled, so the name remains.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

HARVARD GRADUATES TO CONFER WITH OVERSEERS

For the first time in the history of Harvard, college graduates are to be allowed a place in the government of the institution. Ten representative students of the college, selected mainly from the student council, will appear before the Harvard Board of Overseers at a meeting to be held Monday morning, May 10, to tell the members of the board frankly what they think of the conduct of the university and how it can be improved, and to answer questions.

At this meeting all officers of the University will withdraw, so that the students may discuss freely and without embarrassment anything they desire with the overseers. Then, after luncheon the officials of the college will be theoretically "on the carpet" It is stated that "officers of the university will attend," to be examined on the matters brought out by the undergraduates in the morning.

ARMY MAKES IT HARDER TO SECURE VARSITY LETTER

Drastic changes in the awarding of athletic insignia at the United States Military Academy were recently announced. The new regulations prevent the award of the major "A" for brief participation in any one contest, even though it be the historic annual Army-Navy football game.

In football, the letter will be given to members of the team who play one full period in at least three-quarters of all games for a season, or who play one full period in the Navy game. This latter point is a most important change, as heretofore it has been the cusutom to award an "A" for even a fraction of a minutes's play in the service game. Correspondingly stringent regulations have been drawn up for all the other sports at the Academy.

JUNIATA COLLEGE REACHES FIRST HALF CENTURY MARK

Juniata College has just celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of her founding, with special services which were attended by several prominent men, including Chief Justice Robert Von Moschisker, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, Charles W. Schwab, head of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Judge Albert W. Johnson, of the U. S. District Court of Central Pennsylvania, and Howard Heinz, of the Heinz Co., Pittsburgh, each of whom was invested with the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

VARSITY SHARPSHOOTERS DEFEAT CO-EDS 500-498

"Defeated but not downhearted" is the present state of the Penn State co-ed's rifle team as a result of their match with the Varsity team this week, from which the boys emerged the victors by the close score of 500 to 498.

As the stakes were that the losers should treat, the girls are going to pay their debt by giving a fudge party to the winners sometime in the near future.

ALLEGHENY GETS NEW HEAD

The students of Allegheny College were given a first address by their new president, Dr James Albert Beebe, on April 6. The new head succeeds the late president, Fred W. Hixson. Dr. Beebe was president of Iliff School of Theology, an important Methodist institution at Denver, for several years, and later Cenamo Dean of the Boston School of Theology from which institution he graduated before going to Denver.

COLLEGE DAY FOR SESQUI

November 17 will be set aside as College Day at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia. Colleges all over the country are expected to send groups of students to the huge auditorium now being constructed on the Centennial grounds as their representatives. All efforts are being made to make the affair a strictly collegiate celebration. College songs, piano selections and the cheers comprise the program for the day.

Women at the Chicago University are the most free from supervision and those of Wisconsin the most restrained in the Big Ten Universities. All the institutions have their "blue laws." Sunday dancing is a misdemenor. Dancing and card playing are taboo at Purdue. All require their women students to register their trips out of town.

Gettysburg College will name its new gymnasium the "Eddie Plank Memorial Gymnasium" in honor of Eddie Plank, a former student at Gettysburg, and star pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics for fourteen years.

MT. HOLYOKE COLLEGE BANS SMOKING BY WOMEN

Students at Mount Holyoke College, with the beginning of the academic year next September, will be considered as having given their word of honor not to smoke while under college jurisdiction, according to a new rule first promulgated and signed by the authorities. The rule reads as follows:

"Mount Holyoke College does not favor smoking by college students and has made the regulation that no student may smoke while under its jurisdiction. Every student entering or re-entering college will be considered as having given her word of honor that she will keep this regulation. A student failing to do this will be asked to withdraw from college.

YALE GRADUATING SO MANY, TO TRY TRIPLE EXERCISES

A three-session commencement, the first ever to be staged in the 200 years of its existence is to be held at Yale his June. This year tradition is to be set aside and the annual alumni meeting which always has been held on Tuesday of Commencement week, is to be eliminated, temporarily, at least. Also, separate graduation exercises will be arranged for Yale College and Sheffield Scientific school. This has not formerly been the case. Following the two sessions on Tuesday, the third will take place the next day, when the honorary, professional, and graduate degrees will be awarded. It was necessary to make these divisions in the commencement exercises because of the size of this year's graduating class.

HOW THEY DO IT IN GERMANY

An under-graduate of Ohio State University is now studying at a university in Germany. He says that there is a decided contrast to the American system. Quizzing and and threats of expulsion are beyond the pale of consideration. Their principle is that ones comes to school for one subject only, and the different groups are thus segregated. Text-books are not used and one chooses his professors with the utmost care. Degrees are given for knowledge rather than for credit hours. Gambling flourishes and dueling is a favorite sport.

Twenty-five years have seen an enormous change in all kinds of college athletics. Somewhere around 1900 the University of California rejected a football coach, not because of inability to perform his duties in any way, but because he was not a graduate of Yale. In that day football was tolerated rather than supported by the faculty. Today it is recognized as having financial and advertising value.

At Oxford University, England, all students live together in a dormitory, closely resembling a fraternity. A servant is assigned to each five or six students, who shines their shoes, makes their beds, runs errands and does all sorts of odd jobs for them.

The University of California holds first place for the number of full time students enrolled. This great Western University fosters 16,290 students, whereas, Columbia is second with an enrollment of 11,700.

Importance of Pictures

A room without pictures is irritating for two important reasons: The first is that it brings the eye to a stop at each of the four walls, which makes one feel unpleasantly crowded in. The second is that the room is unbalanced, since the floor has all the furniture and decoration, and the walls give the effect of lightheadedness. Decoratively it is just as important to have the upper part of the room interesting as the lower part. No one wants to look constantly at the floor for inspiration! The tendency, indeed, is to look at the eye level, and if there is nothing but blank wall, the effect is disconcerting and foolish, and there is less of good opportunity to see something infinitely worthwhile.

Had the Wrong Edible

An Englishman, on his first visit to Boston, was having breakfast at the Parker house. Of course, he asked the waiter to bring him "some of those Parker house rolls that we hear so much about, and the usual Sunday morning breakfast."

In due course the meal was set before him, and he speedily seized one of the little brown delicacies and took a good bite. Unable to swallow the mouthful, he removed the contents with much embarrassment and as little ostentation as possible.

Summoning the waiter, he confided that something untoward had happened to the roll. Whereupon the waiter exclaimed: "Why, sir, that's not a Parker house roll; it's a codfish cake."

Disease Epidemics Not Rare Among Canaries

That even canary birds are not immune from the ravages of disease epidemics is shown by a report from experts of the New Jersey experiment station, published in the Journal of Bacteriology.

The first outbreak of the epidemic occurred among canary birds in a bird store in New Brunswick, N. J., where a stock of 200 birds became badly infected. The total loss in this store alone was about 70 birds, or a mortality of 35 per cent. Another private breeder lost 25 out of a stock of 30 birds. Many other owners were losing birds from the disease in the same period.

The canary bird fanciers had never known of a disease which caused such a death rate, spread so rapidly and seemed to affect both young and old birds. Nine of the birds which had died from the disease were therefore brought to the laboratory, where post-mortem examinations were made.

By means of a small glass tube a sample of blood was drawn from the heart of each of the nine birds and cultures made from these samples revealed in each case the presence of a bacteria of the para-typhoid group. The source of the infection could not be traced.

Common Legal Terms Derived From Latin

The words council and councillor are derived from the Latin "concilium," "con" or "cum," together, and "sulo," call. A council is a body called together, and it has come to mean such a body as a legislative council or a city council. A member of the body is a councillor, usually spelt in the United States councilor.

The word counsel is from the Latin "consulo," to consult. The verb to counsel means to give advice or counsel. The noun, counsel, has several meanings. There is counsel, the advice given, and then counsel is used to mean an adviser belonging to the legal profession, and in this sense it is either singular or plural—plaintiff's counsel may mean one lawyer or several. This title is given to lawyers specially commissioned to represent the crown, hence called King's counsel, but this distinction is now also conferred by the government on prominent members of the legal profession without regard to service for the crown. Counsellor practically means the same, that is, one who gives counsel. The English form of the word is counsellor, the United States is counselor. In Canada the English spelling is always used.—Montreal Family Herald.

Christy Mathewson Out Guessed Batters

Fifteen years ago this month, Pearson's Magazine published an article by Christy Mathewson, ex-'02, which he called "Outguessing the Batter." In an editorial foreword the magazine printed the following comments about "Christy:"

"Christy Mathewson has been pitching for the New York baseball club of the National League for ten years. During that time the New York club has sometimes been first and sometimes last. It has been a tail ender and a world's champion. That is to say, in some years it has been the weakest team as a team and in other years it has been the strongest. Whether the team has been weak or strong has made little difference to Mathewson. During that ten years he has won 262 games and lost 118 games, a winning percentage in ten years of .689. This record does not include the many games in which Mathewson has pulled the team out of a hole—gone to the rescue of some other pitcher. His record as given here includes only the full games in which he has worked. No other pitcher has ever had such a record. Lots of other pitchers have as much speed as Mathewson; lots of others have as wide curves. But no others seem to have something which he possesses in the same degree. That something is 'head.' Matty has a great 'head.' He outguesses the batter. In the following story he explains as well as any one can explain the process by which he fools the batter and the baserunner."

A digest of this interesting article follows:

Does Brain-work Count?

"In pitching and winning your games," I have often been asked by devotees of the American game, "how much figure does brainwork cut?"

Many an honest young fanatic has asked me that question during the ten years and more that I have been pitching major league baseball, peering at my head meanwhile, as though he expected some such reply as "no headwork whatever." Many an older and wiser baseball follower, fortified by the wondrous knowledge that comes to men after years of squatting in the grand-stand, has asked me the same thing in a modified form.

How much figure does brainwork cut? I don't quite know myself. I do know that no pitcher, however powerful or agile, can hope to become a great performer without being thoroughly equipped "from the shoulders up." The steel arm is desirable, the good eye is even more desirable, but, without the little filling of gray matter that is popularly supposed to inhabit the skull, a pitcher might just as well pack his suit-case and go back to the quaint little village where he was first discovered. It isn't the iron in the arm, because lots of longshoremen could snap a pitchlr's arm in two with a single twist; it's the combination of brain and body, the perfect coopration of mind and muscle, that makes a man a successful major league twirler.

Lots of Psychology in Baseball

Many things have been said and written about pitchers outguessing batters, and batters outguessing pitchers, and to tell the truth there has always been a question in my mind about the outguessing proposition. I have seen so many instances where guesses went wrong—so many hundreds of instances—that I am about the last human being in the world to pose as an oracle on the subject of pitching psychology. Nevertheless, there certainly is a lot of psychology about pitching a baseball, and I think that my readers will agree with me, if they are good enough to read this article from the first to the ninth inning.

Joe Tinker, the clever little shortstop of the Chicago club, is a man with whom I have fought many a battle of wits, and I am glad to acknowledge that he has come out of the fuss with flying colors on many occasions. There was a time when Tinker was putty in my hands. For two years he was the least dangerous man on the Chicago team. His weakness was a low curve on the outside, and I fed him low curves on the outside so often that I had him looking like an invalid every time he came to the plate.

He Got a Nice, Long Bat

Then Joseph went home one night and did a little deep thinking. He got a nice long bat, and took his stand at least a foot farther from the plate, after that night of meditation, and then he had me. If I kept the ball on the inside edge of the plate, he was in a splendid position to meet it, and if I tried to keep my offerings outside, he had plenty of time to "step into 'em." From that day on, Tinker became one of the most dangerous batters I ever faced, not because his natural hitting ability had increased, but because he didn't propose to let the pitcher do all of the "outguessing."

Granting that a pitcher needs something more than a clear head, it must be admitted that the successful pitcher is always a student. There are a hundred and one little things that every good twirler has in his repertoire, a hundred and one little things that the average baseball lover doesn't know anything about. I have always made it a practice, before going into a crucial series, to get some kind of authentic information about the strength or weakness of every batter slated to face me, and once I know positively that a batter doesn't like speed, I feed him oceans of it. If I find that his weakness is a low curve, he gets that for a steady diet. Willie Keeler, one of the most scientific batsmen that ever lived, once told a newspaper man that the secret of his success as a hitter was to "hit 'em where they ain't," and I think the secret of a pitcher's success is to "give 'em what they don't want." It a pitcher can do that, the batter will have his troubles in "hitting 'em where they ain't."

Matty Sought Advice

When we met the Athletics in the season of 1905, after having won the National league championship, I realized that a good part of the pitching burden would be on my shoulders, and I began making inquiries about the weak and strong points of the American league champions. There isn't much chance, naturally, for a man playing steadily in one league to attend games in another organization, so a pitcher or a manager seeking to find the weak links in the armor of an opposing team must depend largely on the advice and information given him by baseball men and intelligent "fans" who have had the opportunity to see the opposing team in action. The well-meant advice of friendly novices must be ignored, plentiful though it may be, but the tips given by regular baseball men are invaluable.

Gleason's Tip Helped Matty

Monte Cross, who played on Connie Mack's infield in 1905, was known by me to be a dangerous hitter, though his average was not high. He was the kind of a hitter who was always bobbing up with a hit at a time when a hit meant trouble, and just before the series started, I did a little quiet detective work through friends of mine who knew the game and knew Monte. I had been told that Monte's weakness was a high, fast ball, but when I talked to "Kid" Gleason, of the Philadelphia Nationals, Gleason told me that Cross had fought against and overcome his weakness, and had developed into a murderer of the high, fast delivery. Keeping Gleason's advice in mind, I gave Cross nothing but low curves during the series, and had him helpless from the start. Had it not been for Gleason's tip, Monte's always dangerous bat might have caused trouble in that series, for there were some very close games before it was all over.

In the summer of 1901, Jesse Burkett, one of the best natural hitters that ever lived, and the man who led the National league that same season, faced me for the first time. I was young and inexperienced, and at that time depended almost entirely on my drop curve. One of these I served to Mr. Burkett, and he slammed it so hard that the impact almost broke the right field fence. While the incident didn't make me any too cheerful, it did Burkett a world of good, and he got a lot of pleasure out of "kidding" me regarding my drop curve. That was the last low curve that I pitched Burkett that season, and he never got another hit off of my delivery. I kept them going at him fast and high, and I am sure to this day that the old veteran was thinking all the time about the low curve that he sent to the right field fence. He was waiting for another, and he never got it.

"Y. W." Girls Got The Cash

"Mother" was the theme of Vesper Services held at the Women's College on Sunday evening, May 9, in observance of Mothers' Day. An interesting talk on "Mothers, and Our Attitudes Toward Them" was given to the girls by Mrs. Roy F. Howes. Hannah Metcalf sang "That Wonderful Mother of Mine," and Mildred Headings played as the girls assembled and disbanded.

* * * *

Are Y. W. C. A. girls "gold-diggers?" We'd hardly call them that; but we must admit that they know how to lay siege to a wallet on Tag Day! Returns from the Eagles Mere Tag Day have been pouring in, until the chairman of the finance committee, Nancy Kennedy, '28, reorts that forty-five dollars have been collected to send "Y. W." delegates to the convention.

B. U. GLEE CLUB ENDS BIG SEASON

attitude it shows now most everywhere. The idea of getting any consideration from the college for being on the glee club or going on trips never occurred to the students. Excuses for absences because we had been on a trip,—we never thought of that, and we consequently planned trips so that we would not have to take more cuts than we had left. And a banquet at the end of the season! Well, few of us were in shape to provide a banquet for ourselves.

"But is is my honest conviction that glee club trips, conducted as yours have been and managed as yours have been, are of more value than most any other activity in the college. I know what the influence is when a bunch of uplifting fellows get to a town. The boys and girls in the audience are thinking more of the college represented than of the songs that are sung. I know that there is a lot of influence through you when you are scattered about on your trips."

Professor Coleman, replying to his introduction, said, "I appreciate the honor which you have accorded me in inviting me as one of your guests tonight. I agree very heartily in the values which Dr. Hunt has attached to the glee club. The individual is always seeking self-expression, and it seems to me that music is one of the most glorious methods of expression. The true musician does not sing for the art but sings for those who can not express themselves in that way. You may be sure that all the sympathy I can give will be willingly given in helping you."

Professor Norris, rising to his toast, said, "The influence of the club is in attracting other men and women to the college. This banquet is a fine way of carrying on and keeping up the spirit, and the way the men get together to sing in different places, is indicative of this spirit. We should feel proud of our accomplishments."

The toastmaster then introduced Ralph F. Hartz, director and manager of the club, who said, "We started the principles of service while we are in college, and we should align ourselves with the college so that we may be of service to Bucknell. I want to thank you fellows for your wonderful cooperation during the year. Without it the club would not have been successful. I have heard different expression of enthusiasm for the club in the different towns we have visited. We are hoping to establish a firm hold on the intercollegiate contest.

"We have accomplished several things. First, we have made a record at the Victor Company; second, we have broken into new territory and made a success of it. Next year we want to raise the standards still higher. You are the determining factor. The standards that you set will be the standards of this organization. Let's raise the standards for next year. We can do it, and we'll put out a better organization than we had this year. Let's get the spirit of cooperation, of service, and of right-living."

Each speech was followed by a Bucknell-ell-ell, led by the club cheerleader, Stanley McCaskey, '27.

Director Hartz then introduced the new officers, and each responded with a few words. The officers installed are: Charles Kushell Jr., president; Gilbert McCune, '27, vice president; Lyman Musser, '27, secretary; Charles Rivenburg, '29, librarian; and Lewis K. Davis, '27, student manager.

The most important event of the evening then occurred. Director Hartz presented three-year service medals to eleven men. These men had adhered to certain standards, making at least one major trip each year, and singing in all local concerts, for three years of their college life. The following are those who received medals: J. L. Cornely, '26, R. H. Smith, '26, L. K. Davis, '27, R. E. Dilworth, '27, G. Frith, '27, L. George, '27, E. Hartman, '27, C. Kushell, '27, S. McCaskey, '27, G. McCune, '27, and L. H. Musser, '27.

Eugene D. Carstater, the only four-year man on the club this year, then gave a short talk, emphasizing the training the club gives in meeting different types of men.

The meeting closed with a spirited singing of the Alma Mater and a cheer.

Evelyn Pauling, '28, has been suffering with fainting spells during the past week. Six or seven times since last Saturday, Miss Pauling has fallen unconscious, and these attacks lasted from five minutes to half an hour, during which time she was in a state of coma. She is now a patient in the infirmary.

Judging from the number of compacts carried on the campus it is easy to see why so many girls don't shine in their classes.

M. F MOUNT, EX-'97, DIES AFTER ILLNESS

Shorkley, with whom his acquaintance at Bucknell had ripened into intimate friendship at medical college, was a member of the lost Arctic expedition, which had sailed in June 1903.

In the meantime, Dr. Mount had been anxiously waiting for news of his friend who had been unheard from for almost two years. When the first expedition was organized, Dr. Mount enlisted as surgeon on the "Frithjof," which sailed for the North, entering the ice fields on July 9, 1904. Lack of an adequate supply of coal forced the rescuers to return unsuccessful when within 70 miles of the Shorkley camp.

But Dr. Mount did not give up because of the discouragements and hardships of this first voyage. On the contrary, he was more than ever determined to aid in the rescue of his friend. Though he married Miss Lara Pue, of Washington, D. C. only a little while before expedition No. 2 was to sail, he left his bride, returned to Norway, and sailed once more for the frozen North.

After weeks of patient, courageous, and hard work, the crew of the steamer "Terra Nova" worked the ship to Cape Flora, reaching the camp in August, 1905. Thus were the two college chums reunited, and Dr. Mount returned happily to his practice in Hot Springs, Arkansas, where he lived until his death.

WOMEN'S FACULTY HONORS BRIDES TO BE

A party in honor of Miss Carolyn Hunt and Miss Katherine Bergstresser, who are to be married, was given by members of the Women's College faculty on Thursday evening, May 6, in the living room of the Women's College.

Games of bridge, five hundred, and Mah Jong were enjoyed. After refreshments were served the guests of honor were presented with gifts by the faculty. Miss Hunt received an electric percolator, and Miss Bergstresser an electric waffle iron.

The guests were Miss Carolyn Hunt, Miss Katherine Bergstresser, Miss Mary Hunt, Mrs. Horace Hunt, Mrs. George Irland, Mrs. James McClure, Mrs. L. P. Fowle, and the members of the Women's College faculty.

B. U. TRACK MEN GET THIRD PLACE IN CARLISLE MEET

Dickinson and Gettysburg Lead In Contest Made Notable By Much Record Breaking

FRABLE AND DIEHL ONLY BISON WINNERS

Juniata Wins Class B Victory, Scoring Almost As Much As Her Five Opponents

Dickinson College easily shook off Bucknell and had only Gettysburg to worry about in winning the Class A title in the sixth annual Central Pennsylvania Intercollegiate A. A. track and field championship at Carlisle last Saturday, May 15. Juniata scored nearly half the points in the Class B competition. Results:

Class A

Dickinson	59
Gettysburg	46
Bucknell	27½
Muhlenberg	21½

Class B

Juniata	70½
Susquehanna	36 1-6
Drexel	29 1-3
Schuylkill	15
Ursinus	8 1-6

Jones, of Gettysburg, was the high scorer of the meet, with aces in the two dashes and in the broad jump. His teammate Bender won the high hurdles race from Trimmer by six inches, setting a new conference record. The Dickinson scoring was well scattered, sixteen different men contributing points in thirteen of the fourteen events. In Class B. Sleigle of Susquehanna garnered twelve points, but Trout of Juniata was the sensation in this quadrangle, running the quarter mile three seconds faster than the Class B record and a fifth of a second better than the Class A record, and getting six points besides.

For the glory of Bucknll, Frable bettered his individual record by five inches to rob the veteran Bender of victory in the pole vault. Walter Diehl took the only other first place the Orange and Blue collected, incidentally shoving the conference shot put record two feet eight inches be-

I. N. A. Convention Held At Swathmore

The Intercollegiate Newspaper Association of the Middle Atlantic states held its twelfth annual convention May 14 and 15 at Swarthmore College, about twenty members having sent delegates. An informal banquet was given the delegates on Friday evening at the Strath Haven Inn. The business of the conference was conducted at a meeting held in the Delta Upsilon lodge Saturday morning.

The speakers of Friday evening were Dr. Miller, assistant president of Swarthmore College, who extended a cordial greeting to the delegates on behalf of the college; L. Lee Stark, ex-editor of the Rutgers Targum, who responded to the salutation; Mr. Fullerton Waldo, of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, who acquainted the prospective journalists with some of their problems and the methods of overcoming them, as found by his experience, and the experience of editors under difficulties in such places as Greenland and Alaska.

The last two speakers of the evening Dr. H. B. Rathbone, of the N. Y. U. department of journalism, and Dr. Frank Parker, gave somewhat contrasting viewpoints upon the requirements of success. Dr. Rathbone placed his emphasis on personality and drew many smiles and much attention from his audience by his formula of that abstract quantity, which was imagination and will fully developed together with our innate and acquired traits. Dr. Parker distinguished the "minor virtues" necessary for success, and emphasized the lack of exactness in the attempt for literary skill by the modern reporter.

The business meeting of the following morning began with the regular

A. C. Lindsay Talks To Big Four Society

Speaks On Problems Confronting Each Industry As Concerns Particular Use of Air

The last meeting of the Big Four Engineering Society was held Wednesday, May 12, in the Engineering Building, the attraction of the evening being an illustrated lecture by Mr. A. C. Lindsay, a representative of the Carrier Engineering Corporation of Newark, N. J., specialist in air conditioning and humidifying. He spoke to the group on conditions and problems confronting practically each industry as concerns its particular use of air, and the modern methods of meeting them. The Carrier slogan, 'Manufactuured Weather Makes Every Day a Good Day," has been developed along varied lines to meet every need.

Mr. Lindsay told the society that, contrary to much common belief, air does not absorb water vapor. It is a carrier of heat and a mechanical broom to sweep away water vapor. Air conditioning is primarily control of air as to its temperature, relative humidity, and movement. To humidify or dehumidify air it is necessary only to raise and lower the dew-point remains constant, and hence the relative humidity changes.

More than two hundred industries are directly aided by air conditioning, chiefly those in which hygroscopic substances, or those extremely sensible to humidity, as paper or textiles, are used.

An interesting application of these

Professor Colestock Will Make Addresses

At this time of the year—Commencement time—Bucknell students and alumni, who are always interested in the activities outside of the classroom of the university faculty, note with attention that many of our professors are in demand for Commencement addresses.

One of Bucknell's lecturers is Dr. Henry T. Colestock, head of the department of history. Dr. Colestock has in previous years given many commencement addresses throughout northern Pennsylvania and has spoken at teachers' institutes in the state. The reputation gained by these addresses has scheduled this year for Dr. Colestock almost continuous daily addresses from May 28 into the middle of June. The itinerary includes Emporium, Glen Rock, Gordon, Herndon, Hollidaysburg, Muncy, Parsons, Parksburg, Trevorton, Sayre, and Wyalusing. Dr. Colestock will also give the Memorial Day address at Northumberland on Monday, May 31.

WHAT THE BAND PLAYED BEFORE THE WAFFLES

Preceding the band banquet at the Hopp Inn at Mifflinburg, May 13, a twilight concert was given on the veranda of the Inn under the direction of "Eddie" Calhoun.

The program was an hour in length and included several classical as well as popular melodies. The program:

The Thunderer	Sousa
Les Millions d'Arlequin	Drigo
Washington Post March	Sousa
Simple Avieu	Atherton
Sleepy Town Gal
Humoreske	Dvorak
The Orange and Blue	Aviragnet
High School Cadets	Sousa
Hail Bucknell	Bartol
The Gladiator	Sousa
Alma Mater.

BISONS TO PLAY URSINUS

Walter Blair's varsity baseball nine will get into action Friday on the Memorial Stadium diamond when it crosses bats with the Ursinus team. The Bison tossers, with either Murphy or Martin on the hill and reliable "Gus" Shorts doing the receiving, may be expected to turn back the invaders.

PROF. G. V. BROWN GIVEN FINE WATCH

Chemical Engineering Students Give Departing Faculty Member Token of Their Esteem

Professor Glenn V. Brown was honored by a farewell dinner at the Hopp Inn of Mifflinburg by the Chemical Engineering Society, Wednesday evening, May 19. In appreciation of his friendship and his sincere cooperation with both undergraduates and alumni the boys presented "Doc" with a handsome watch, chain, and a knife having the seal of Professor Brown's fraternity, Phi Kappa Sigma.

After a hearty meal, Malcolm Jones as toastmaster called upon Professor William Schuyler who told of his years of teaching under Professor Brown and the easy cooperation they brought. Mr. Schuyler was followed by representatives of the classes who expressed their sorrow at losing Dr. Brown and hoped that he would not forget to keep in touch with his undergraduates.

In his talk "Al" Conklin, '26, spoke of the difference between the chemical department under Dr. Brown and the department at the University of Pennsylvania where he spent his first two years of college. He said, "Penn lacks the friendship and cooperation found at Bucknell under "Doc" Brown. He was never too tired or too busy to

FRESHMEN, TAKE NOTICE

The following freshmen will remain under freshman rules until their last examination is finished, by order of the inter-class council: L. E. Anderson, C. P. Bailey, P. M. Barzilaski, G. R. Beddow, K. A. Bidlack, M. Blizard, F. B. Bryson, R. J. Deitrick, K. S. Fisher, R. W. Frederieks, H. G. Kulp Jr., W. O'Neil, G. Riemer, S. L. Savidge, W. A. Schooley, F. Thomsen Jr., H. L. Snodgrass, J. Stull, R. Watson, T. M. Welker, C. F. Weymouth Jr., and M. W. Wilton.

Assistant Professor John S. Gold, who is superintendent of the Lewisburg Reformed Church Sunday school, was scheduled to give the principal address at the evening session of the Buffalo District Sunday School Convention, held at Vicksburg on Sunday,

SOPHOMORES SPEAK IN ORATORY MEET

Five Contestants Give Orations In Contest For Annual Prize Awarded At Commencement

The Annual Sophomore Contest in Public Speaking was held in Bucknell Hall Friday evening, May 14, at 7:30. Professor James P. Whyte who was in charge of the contest made a few preliminary remarks in which he stated that two prizes were offered, one for the best speaker of the women, and one for the best speaker among the men. The winners, however, will not receive their awards until commencement time. Without further announcement the speakers made their appearance.

Miss Helen Williams used "If" by Rudyard Kipling as a basis for her declamation. She developed her theme in a very unusual way and thus placed the contest on an high level from the start, as the speakers following her realized.

Miss Pauline Ware spoke on the theme "The Business of Being a Friend." "Being a friend," said Miss Ware, "takes time, energy, patience, and thought, and these are very essential if the friendship is to have a fitting culmination. Whether our friendship with others shall be a success, or whether it shall end in bankruptcy depends upon the empha-

Girls Close Season With Large Banquet

The Girls' Glee Club brought its season to a successful close with a banquet at the Cameron Housse on Thursday evening, May 13. Grace Jenkins, director of the club, was given a hammered brass bonbon tray as a token of appreciation for her services.

Edith Womer, '27, the retiring secretary, presented each of the two seniors who had done the best individual work for the club a stained glass powder jar and perfume container. The girls who received these gifts were Hannah Metcalf, who was president for two years, was soloist for one years, and sang in the quartet for three years; and Margaret Tennant, who was pianist.

As a prize for perfect attendance at rehersals, compacts embossed with the Bucknell seal were presented to Grace Williams, '28, and Esther Wetter, '29.

After the banquet the officers for next year were elected. They are Grace Milhous, '27, president; Kathryn Bossler, '28, secretary and treasurer, ara Heysham, '28, manager; and Elizabeth Siegfried, '29, assistant manager.

The retiring president, Grace Pheifer, '27, gave a farewell speech to the senior members of the club, while Marguerite Mayers, Music '26, retiring manager, presented each one with a beautiful pink rose.

The guests were Dean Amelia E. Clark, Miss Lulu Coe, Mrs. H. H. Rivenburg, Mrs. P. G. Stolz, Miss Charlotte Armstrong, Miss Katherine Bergstresser, and Miss Evelyn Brubaker.

SEMITES' TENNIS MATCHES ARE NEARING COMPLETION

The Women's College tennis tournament is approaching the semi-finals and is becoming more interesting every day.

During the past week in group A Caryl Dutton eliminated Lois Reinhardt, 6-4, 7-5; Betty Jack eliminated Nancy Kennedy, 6-1, 3-6, 6-2; and Elizabeth Rodgers eliminated Margaret Zerby, 6-2, 5-7, 6-3.

In group B, Grace Milhous eliminnted Virginia Zortman, 6-0, 6-2; Doris Worrell eliminated Ruth Bray, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5; and Helen Steinhilper eliminated Gertrude Downs, 6-0, 6-2.

The three survivors in group A were Caryl Dutton, Betty Jack, and Elizabeth Rodgers. Caryl Dutton then eliminated Betty Jack, 7-5, 6-4.

In group B, the contest is between Grace Milhous and Doris Worrell, the winner to play Helen Steinhilper.

Mock Prom Revelers Stage Farcical Dance

Incongruous Dress and Corsages Of Onions and Lettuce Cause Great Mirth

The annual debauch of the junior and freshman classes, known as the Mock Prom, was truly a "mock prom" this year, for it imitated in farce the real prom to perfection in the Women's College, Wednesday evening from 9:00 to 10:00.

Corsages, of course, were sent by the gulant junior "youths" to their blushing freshmen partners. The corsages consisted, some of lettuce leaves and onions some of cauliflower, some or radishes, of violets, bluets, or dandelions. The men were rather inconsistent in dress, some coming in sport clothes, "knickers," and so forth, some in real honest-to-goodness "tuxes," and some in full evening dress.

"Shorty" Parmley, resplendent in brother's ,tux," made a perfect little manager of the dance. She, (he,) handed out the programs, made in imitation of the prom programs. Then the orchestra The Great White feet, struck up, and say it wasn't good! All in blazers and knickers, with the office stand of Wandering Jew bearing a sign, "Palms," standing by, the men started. Mary Gettys, piano; Billie Dakin, saxaphone; Charlotta Gilbert, Billie Willnams, drum and traps; and Fern McNeal, violin, made up the orchestra. The dances, were, Hop, Skip and Jump, and Extra.

Then came intermission with refreshments and Apache dance by Eleanor Miller and Sally Meyers, which was loudly applauded. The last three dances were Push, Pull, and Prom. In Push, the girls led their partners, in Pull, the couples were tagged and partners exchanged, and Prom was a prize dance; that is, couples were given numbers which were called out until only one number remained, the lucky number held by Kitty Gaventa

Poverty Day Frosh Chase Away 'Blues'

Poverty Day came to a fitting climax with the Freshman Hop at the Armory, bringing to a close the freshman's big day of Saturday, May 15. One hundred and twenty couples danced to the "blue" strains of the Eight Collegians Orchestra of Harrisburg, in the hours from 8 to 12.

As usual, the Armory was barely decorated, because of the fire hazards, although fraternity and sorority banners draped along the walls somewhat relieved the bare appearance of the ball-room.

To the sorrow of man, long dresses seem to be "coming into vogue" again, for several girls introduced the ankle-long dresses for dancing, and it is assumed that the new style will spread like a fire in a prairie. As one girl puts it: "Wear 'em short in the winter; wear 'em long in the summer." Thus giving another proof of the inconsistency of women.

The programs, printed in green tints, had a cover picture drawn by Dan treeter, ex-'28. The guests were Miss Helen Bartol, Mrs. Jennie Phillips, and Miss Kathryn Clush.

M. P. KEISTER SAILS AWAY AS MISSIONARY

The Student Volunteer Band lost one of its members when "M. P." Keister, '26, left Bucknell on Friday, May 14, to sail for Korea where she will take up work in missionary service.

Miss Keister is sent to the foreign field by the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Her probable location will be at Seoul. There she will serve as assistant to the treasurer of the Methodist Episcopal work in Korea. However, this is not the extent of her duties, for Miss Keister plans to do educational and evangelical work besides.

From Lewisburg Miss Keister went to Harrisburg where it will be necessary for her to purchase enough clothing and supplies to last five years. From Harrisburg, she goes to Vancouver, British Columbia, from where she will sail, May 27, on the "Empress of Asia."

Members of the Student Volunteer Band presented "M. P." with a handsome pocketbook as a farewell gift.

BUCKNELL'S BAND HAS BIG DINNER AT MIFFLINBURG

Regales Town With Concert During Hour Before Meal; Then Attacks Waffles

FACULTY GUESTS JOIN IN JOYOUS OCCASION

Tell of Band's Early History When Simpson Was Sergeant And Cleveland Was Elected

Memories will long remain from the band banquet held in the Hopp Inn at Mifflinburg on May 13—memories of the over-supply of chicken and waffles, memories of the sparkling toasts, and memories of the souvenir hunter who walked away with a pair of salt and pepper shakers.

The bandsmen motored to the scene of festivities early in the evening and gave a twilight concert in Mifflinburg, featuring "The Orange and Blue," a composition by Professor Avirangrnt, the founder of the Bucknell School of music.

"A feast fit for a king" was spread before the hungry men, who wondered where in the world they were going to stow away all that food. The waitresses kept bringing delectables, and the tables literally groaned under the weight of the food. After two hours interim the tables were cleared and Albert W. Sheckells, president of the band, took charge as toastmaster.

President Emory W. Hunt responded to the toast, "The Band from the Side Lines," with an excellent talk on the band, and the personal reminiscations brought about by the teamwork of a band. "Personal relations are the best part of life," he said. "Toot your own horn, but be sure it is in tune," was the closing advice of the president.

"Four years—Then Farewell," was given by Robert H. Smith, a band veteran of four years. He told of his freshman experiences in the band, of the first rehearsal, and of its hopes for the continuance of good bands at Bucknell.

Dr. W. C. Bartol spoke on "Anything, Everything, or what have you?" Dr. Bartol thanked the band for playing "The Orange and Blue," composed by Dr. Aviragnet, and he hoped the

School Boy Athletes Compete Here May 22

The pick of the school boy track athletes from the entire state of Pennsylvania will gather at Bucknell next Saturday, May 22, when the final events for championships in the P. I. A. A. will be run off on the Memorial Stadium field. Fully one hundred twenty-five school runners and field men, selected to represent the eight Pennsylvania districts, are expected to throng the Bucknell stadium.

A similar state-wide meet was held at Bucknell last year with the greatest success. This week the stadium track will be put in the best possible condition, so that the youthful athletes may be given the best opportunity for shattering former records.

The Business Men's Club of Lewisburg, at a recent meeting, decided to present four silver cups to the members of the winning relay team. A large silver trophy cup, temporarily in the possession of the Norristown High School track team, whose relay runners won the relay event last year, will be contested for again this season, as it is necessary to gain the winning decision three times for permanent posession of the cup.

The officials will be from Bucknell. The meet is attracting great attention, and with prevailing good weather another bunner interscholastic field meet should result.

Arrangements are being made for a dual track and field meet for the yearling track team with Wyoming Seminary on the latter's field at Kingston, Pa., Saturday, May 22. This will likely be the last meet of the year for Captain Frank Loper and his mates.

Seniors, subscribe now to The Bucknellian.

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Practically the entire chapter turned out in force to help fight the fire on Old Montour last week. Many tales of hard beds and harder sandwiches have been circulating since that time. Most of the men seem to have had a "hot time" of it.

The chapter was pleasantly surprised by the arrival of Brother Don Kaup, ex-'26, who dropped in for a two-day visit. Brother Craig, of Cornell, and Mr. Parker, visited the house Wednesday afternoon. Gus Shorts, '26, was a guest for dinner on Wednesday.

Several members of the Gettysburg baseball team were guests for dinner and supper on Friday. Brother Bertram Mortimer, ex-'26, Brother Harry Staley, C. Lester Craun, and Brother J. Hubicsne of Gettysburg were also visitors over Friday and Saturday.

With the establishment of the Dementia Praecox Ward, on the third floor of the Phi Gam house, it is rumored around that "Looney" and his boys are holding forth in great style. It is also said that yodelling is the greatest indoor sport enjoyed by the inmates.

Spring is surely here. Regardless of the numerous June bugs and mosquitos, some of the more hardy members of the second floor Phi Gam team have erected a minature Chautauqua tent, especially made by Omar the Tentmaker, and have moved their sleeping quarters to the upstairs porch. Talk about chances for stargazing!

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Mr. and Mrs. W. Wick from Wilkes-Barre, and Mrs. Turpie, were visitors at the S. A. E. house, Wednesday, May 12.

Brothers Harter and Bream from Gettysburg were guests at the house. Both represented Gettysburg against Bucknell in baseball.

Brother "Jimmie" Tyson, from Philadelphia, visited his home chapter May 14. Business necessitated a hurry visit.

The pledges of S. A. E. were sent out for the annual hunt after the Hop. Sunday morning and afternoon saw many of them return, after their little sojourns into the surrounding districts of Lewisburg, with all kinds of paraphernalia and different species of animals.

Pledge Henry Coleman, president of the freshman class, made his return Saturday, after a week of absence—escaping from the clutches of scabs—and successfully appeared at the Freshman Hop. "Henny" says he doesn't care to be president again.

DELTA SIGMA

Brother J. H. Melhuish, '24, dropped in for a short visit Saturday afternoon, May 15. He is playing the trombone in Gilligan's orchestra of Wilkes-Barre at the present time.

Four members of the Gettysburg baseball team were guests at the house for lunch and dinner, Friday, May 14.

The "Demie" seniors were the guests of the alumni, Saturday, May 15, at a picnic. The boys reported a good time with lots to eat.

"Ken" Rhone's brother was a guest at the house for dinner, Sunday, May 16.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

Three members of the Gettysburg baseball team were guests at the house, Friday, May 14.

Traditional "Hell Week" has come and gone. It has left in its path a group of tired, sleepy lads, who greet the new week with a sigh of relief. "It was Hell" remarked one. "Yet there is a lot of fun in it."

"Hell Week" was started by a proclamation for all freshmen to be present at every meal. Then rules upon rules followed until the freshmen were soon eating with their knives, running errands, reciting witty names for themselves, addressing everyone as Sir, and furnishing matches and cigarettes.

The climax came Saturday night at 12:30 o'clock. All who never had taken the "ride" assembled at this late hour. Then pillowslips were put on, followed by a long and dizzy ride until the driver himself was lost. Then followed a night of tramp, tramp, tramp! The weary walkers began to drift into Lewisburg around 7:00 A. M. Their contributions were as follows: "Pud" Blazes, a fish; "Red" Dorsett, a snake (it wasn't a real one); "Sam" Davenport, a little red pig; "Al" Abbott, a rabbit; "Bucky" Harris, a rooster; "Art" Harris, a cow (the carnation kind); "Ben" Reese, a—well, anyhow Ben got it; "Bill" Strong, a white horse; "Bill" Knoll, a bullfrog; Johnny Seigh, a black and white kitten; Kelly Nowicki, a guinea-hen; and "Rod" Barlow, a duck.

The menagerie was returned later in the day and all the animal catchers settled back into a trance of sleep! sleep! sleep!

KAPPA DELTA RHO

Brother "Cy" Williams and "Ick" Jones were visitors over the week-end.

The sophomores gave the house a smoker, Wednesday, May 12.

The indoor baseball team added two more victories to its list by defeating Theta Upsilon Omega, 14-4, and Kappa Gamma, 20-6.

The last strains of music had died away, the last burst of laughter had floated off into the quiet night, the last girl had departed for home, and the fellows slowly climbed the stairs to bed. They held their hands on their throbbing heads and murmured, "Wow, whatta week-end!"

Well, it was some week-end. It began Friday night with a throng of mad, rushing, howling people stepping lively to the "peppy" music of "Doc" Getkin's Night Hawks of Sunbury. Underneath arches of rainbow-hued paper decorations couples Charlestoned or they slowly swayed in a dreamy waltz under boughs of green in the sun parlor. Miss Lulu E. Coe and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wilcox were guests.

Saturday the couples sat around the house talking, playing bridge, or walking in the shade of the orchard. It had been originally planned not to have a dance Saturday night to avoid conflicting with the Hop. But after dinner the cry of "Let's have a dance" became so strong there was nothing else to do but have one. So preparations were soon made. The Penn Roamers of Wilkes-Barre hurried down, again Miss Coe and Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox came as guests, and again merry couples joined in the mirth.

Sunday, after dinner, came sad farewells. Back to the wilds of Milton or to far off Ann Arbor, Mich., the girls went. And the week-end came to a close.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA

Zeta Alpha chapter of Theta Upsilon Omega welcomed thirty-two guests on the annual Parents' Day held on Sunday, May 16. While some of the visitors arrived on Saturday to see the Poverty Day parade, the majority arrived on Sunday morning.

Each guest was given a red rose as a token of welcome. An informal musical program made the day a complete success. The guests were: J. Frank Wagner, and D. A. Wagner, both of Winstown; Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Hoffa, John A. Hoffa, John Scher, and Mrs. M. E. Scher, all of Dushore; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Miller, and Miss Elizabeth Gordinier, of Coudersport; Jr. and Mrs. Fred A. Cooper, of Knoxville; Mrs. John Angus, of Conemaugh; Robert E. Dilworth Jr., of Conneaut, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Shuttlesworth, of Williamstown; Mrs. Sara McHail, of Bolivar; Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Vastine, William H. Vastine, and Frederick Vastine, of Shamokin; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Cornely, Miss Christeen Cornely, Miss Agnes Whiteside, and Foster Lehman, of Madera; Miss Odessa Fry, Miss Frances A. Foulk, Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Kuster, Betty Marie Kuster, and Herman L. Kuster Jr., of Bloomsburg; Mrs. A. E. Bradley, of Madison, N. J.

The Program:

"Welcome" ..... Richard T. Merwin

Bass solos: Robert E. Dilworth

(a) "Just for Today" ..... Abbott

(b) "That Wonderful Mother of Mine" ..... Goodwin

Violin solo: Alton Roth

"Ave Maria" ..... Schubert

Piano solo: Charles Rivenburg

"A Freshman" ..... Frank R. Loper

Baritone solos: Melvin C. Shuttlesworth

(a) "Myself When Young" ..... Lehmann

(b) "Thinkin' of You" ..... Kountz

Quartet: Angus, Thomas, Rivenburg, Shuttlesworth

"Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes"

"Fidelity"

A beautiful chime clock was presented to the house by the pledges, the class of 1929. The clock is an Ansonia, and its chimes sound every quarter hour.

Other Sunday visitors were: R. E. Parnell, of Johnstown, Tilly McDonald, of Walters, Oklahoma, Miss Rebecca Meyers, and Miss Mary Belle Brownmiaster, of State College.

KAPPA GAMMA

Arrangements for the symposium and dance to be held on June 7 are being completed. The dance will be held at the Lewisburg Club.

Brother Harry Sprance, ex-'26, visited the house on Friday, May 14, and attended the Bucknell-Gettysburg game.

The fraternity's indoor baseball team lost its first game to the strong Kappa Delta Rho team by the score 18-7. The team looks promising, but a good deal more practice is needed.

A week of torture for the freshmen was begun on Monday, May 17. Many strange antics may be seen on Market street at any time this week.

BETA KAPPA

Richard T. Carvelth, '22, who is principal of the Blakely High School, Blakely, Penna., visited his brothers over the week-end. "Dick" is president of the corporation and one of the founders of Eta chapter.

Brother Eugene D. Carstater, '26, journeyed to Howard, Penna., on Saturday, May 15, where he visited Brother Eugene English, '23, who is an instructor in the Howard High School at present and who was an instructor in English at Bucknell University last year.

Ira Gehard and Robert Steinert of Tamaqua, Penna., visited at the house on Sunday, May 16.

Pledge Brother E. Ray Johnson, '29, attended a sorority dance at Bloomsburg State Normal School on Saturday evening, May 15.

Brother Vernard E. Lozier, '23, who was employed by the Westington Lamp Co., at Orange, N. J., died at the University of Pennsylvania Hospital on May 6 as a result of pneumonia. He was buried from his late home in Stanhope, N. J. on May 10.

Brother John R. Weber, '28, motored to Elmira, N. Y. on Saturday, May 15.

The Beta Kappa Journal for April, containing many interesting facts concerning the activities of the fraternity in general, has just made its appearance.

Elaborate plans are being made for the annual Spring dance to be held on Friday evening, June 4. The Belmont Club Orchestra of Lancaster, Penna., which had a very successful season at the Ambassador Hotel, Atlantic City, N. J., has been engaged for the occasion.

PHI LAMBDA THETA

The Phi Lambda Theta fraternity staged a week-end favor dance on the night of Friday, May 14th. Jack Gardner's Campus Serenaders furnished the music and "Doug" McKenzie's voice was at its best as he entertained with snatches of song. The house was charmingly decorated in black and white. Lanterns adorned the porch and balustrades were entwined with laurel, making a very beautiful effect. Many alumni were present as well as several other guests and the floor was well filled. Altogether it was one of the most successful dances of the season.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

A peppy sport dance with clever programs, lively jazz, flashy sports clothes, pep, and pretzels was given by Eta chapter of Alpha Chi Omega in the Kappa Delta Rho house on Saturday evening, May 8, from 8:00 to 11:15.

Everything was novel and unusual from start to finish. A large sign, 'Entrance,' was hung on the fire escape at the back of the house, and all the couples were requested to enter that way. All the newest in sport clothes, as brilliant blazers, noisy ties, multi-colored stripes, and sporty shoes were to be seen.

The programs were made of heavy white paper covered with old fashioned calico and "printed" by hand with green crayon. They were artistically tied with rope.

Signs were hung around the rooms, some clever, and some not so clever. Over the orchestra could be seen "High class static guaranteed." Another sign read, "What you don't see ask for.....And then try to get it."

Quite a surprise came when a large dishpan was brought in filled with cracked ice, with the tops and necks of interesting looking bottles sticking out. Pop! And a big box of pretzels to go with it.

The "racket," as the programs expressed it, was amply supplied by the Blue Band. It was so good, and so peppy, that some couples were inspired to play "Ring around the Rosy," tag, and various other fitting and dignified games.

Mrs. Sprague and Mrs. Wilcox chaperoned the dance. Several of the girl's mothers who had come to visit them over Mother's Day also attended the dance.

Something that not every dance can have, this dance did have—an enormous bonfire, which lighted up the sky and was reflected luridly in the waters below, just opposite the Kappa Delta Rho house. Burning Montour! Dancers watched the blaze between dances from this vantage point.

The patronesses of Eta chapter of Alpha Chi Omega gave a tea to the actives and pledges in Professor and and Mrs. Owens' home, Tuesday afternoon, May 11, from 4 to 6.

A pleasant afternoon of getting better acquainted with each other, and then a big surprise. During the delicious refreshments which were served, Mrs. Riveniburg, chairman of the committee selected, made a most charming speech, and brought out a tall box. From it she drew a handsome silver electric tea urn and coffee percolator, engraved with the Greek letters of the fraternity, and presented it as a gift from the patronesses to the chapter.

Early College Laws Made Students Study

Rules Laid Down As To Moral Conduct, Absences, Eating, And Hours of Study

Quite evidently history does repeat itself. For some time we have been congratulating ourselves upon the creation of a college "budget" system as a new and equitable means of taking care of certain desirable or necessary activities. Now it appears that New Jersey College, more familiarly known to us as Princeton had a budget or what amounted to a budget as early as 1774. But there is this difference, the Princeton budget was arbitrarily imposed by the faculty of the college. Our budget exists because the students themselves have voted to raise funds for given purposes in this way. To quote from the "American College" which some years ago reprinted the early rules of Princeton, "Every student shall, at the commencement of each session, pay to the librarian sixty-seven cents, for the use of the library." Another like regulation was as follows: "Every student shall pay to the inspector or treasurer sixty-seven cents at the commencemnt of each session to constitute a fund in advance, for such general repairs of the college as are not chargeable to any individual."

These "Laws and Customs of New Jersey College," were evidently issued under date of November 9, 1748. The regulations for admission to the college may cause the students of 1926 to smile. They follow:

Entrance Requirements

"None may expect to be admitted into the College, but such as being examined by the President and Tutors, shall be found able to render Virgil and Tully's Orations in to English, and it turn English ino true grammatical Lattin, and so well acquainted with Greek, as to render any part of the four Evangelists into that language, ino Latin or English, and to give the grammatical construction of the words.

"Every student that enters the College shall transcribe the Laws; which being Signed by the Presdient shall be ye Testimony of his admission; and shall be kept by him whilst he continues a Member of said College, as the Rule of his Behavior."

Standardization is another thing that we have considered more or less of modern note in higher education. It appears from old regulations, however, that our first colleges had pretty uniform rules concerning most everything, and notably about divine worship. Columbia's regulation concerning chapel attendance and conduct printed in a recent Bucknellian sound amazingly like those of Princeton, which follow:

"The President or in his absence one of the Tutors shall morning and Evening publickly read a portion of the holy Scriptures and pray with the students.

"Every student shall be obliged to give his attendance at all such religious exercises: and those that absent themesleves shall be punished for every offence in a fine of 2 pence proc. and those who do not timely attend, 1 pence unless detained by sickness or some excuse that shall be deemed sufficient.

Sabbath Rules

"The students upon the Lord's-day shall attend divine service in some place of public worship; which if they without sufficient excuse omit they shall be punished in a fine of 4 pence proc. and if they do not give timely attendance 2 pence proc. and they shall pay a religious regard to the Lord's day by keeping at their Rooms, and not visiting or admitting others into their Company.

"And it is judged expedient and hereby ordered that no student be out of his Room on the evening next after Saturday, or next after lords-day except for religious purposes, or some necessary occasion under penalty of 4 pence for every such offence."

Rules of Moral Conduct

The stiffest punishments of all were apparently for immoral or disorderly conduct. All forms of wrong doing such as drunkenness, lying, theft, frequenting taverns, "keeping company with persons of known scandalous lives," and they like led to reproof, fines and finally expulsion as follows:

"None of the students shall play at Cards or dice, or at any other unlawful game upon the penalty of a fine not exceeding 5 shillings proc. for the first offence, for the second public admonition, and for the third expulsion.

"If any student fight or strike another person he shall be punished in a fine not exceeding 3 shillings proc. for the first offence.

"All members of the College shall be obliged to repair and make good, all the Damages they shall wilfully or carelessly do to the estate or goods of any person whatsoever.

"Those persons that bring into their Chambers without a permit from the President or some one of the Tutors, Wine, methegin, or any kinds of distilled spiritaous Liquors shall be punished in a fine not exceeding 5 shillings proc. for each offence."

Other regulations that appear amusing today are there concerning study:

Leave of Absence

"None of the students shall be absent from their Chambers without leave obtained of the Presidnt or one of the Tutors; unless half an hour after morning prayer and recitation, and an hour and a half after dinner and from evening prayer until nine o'clock, under penalty of 4 pence for each offence.

"If any scholar persist in the carelessness neglect of his study and shall not make suitable preparation for the exercises appointed for his instruction, stated recitations and other scholastic after due admonition he shall be expelled.

"No scholar shall go out of town except by the President or Tutors license (unless in the stated vacations) upon pain of such fine as the President shall think proper not exceeding 3 shillings for the first offence; and if after admonition they contemtously repeat the offence shall be expelled.

"If any of the students of the College do not obey the Presidentor Tutors or shall insult or treat them with disrespect, or contempt, they shall be punished for the first offence in a fine not exceeding 5 shillings proc. for the second shall make a public confession, be admonished, or expelled from the college.

Expenses Were Small

Expenses, or as the word was then spelled Expences, seem amusingly small. They were reckoned in terms of shillings, the shilling being approximately equivalent to our quarter dollar.

"Every scholar shall be obliged to pay for his tuition in College the sum of 15 shillings every quarter.

"Every one who is admitted to the honour of a degree shall pay 30 shillings proc. to the President of the College."

In 1794 the laws of the college were amended. Except for the fact that they are a wee bit more liberal, they differ little from those originally drafted. There are two provisions about study and class attendance that are of interest:

"When a student is absent from recitation, without the express permission of his instructor, he shall be called to an account for it in the presence of his class; and if he have no sufficient excuse to justify the absense, he shall be reprimanded by his instructor according to the nature of the offence; and if such absences become frequent with a student, he shall be reported to the faculty, and, by their decision, be subjected to such punishment as may be deemed necessary.

Hours of Study

"The hours of study shall be, from the time of morning prayer till eight o'clock, from nine till twelve in the forenoon and from two till five in the afternoon; during which time every student shall keep to his room, unless called from it to recite or by some urgent necessity of which he shall always be ready to give an account to any officer of the college who may observe his absence."

For the improvement of the student in "publick speaking,' the revised rules read, two or more orations, as the faculty may direct, shall be pronounced every evening immediately after prayers, on the stage in the "publick mall." And, among other regulations for such orations, this ruling appears:

"Nothing indecent, profane or immoral, shall at any time be delivered on the publick stage, under penalty of such censure as the faculty or trustees shall judge proper. And, with a view to preserve all the public exercises of the students from impropriety of any kind, every student, during the whole of his senior year, and previously to his commencement performance especially, shall shew to the president or vice-president, the whole of what he proposes to speak, and he shall not fail to observe such corrections as shall be made of his performances; and if any student pronounce anything in publick of a censurable nature, in contradiction to the directions of corrections of the officer to whom he has shown his piece, the president is required to stop him on the publick stage, and he shall be otherwise censured as the trustees of faculty shall determine."

Even Eating Was Regulated

Even the manner of eating meals and of dressing was rigorously prescribed. These are two of seven set regulation governing meals.

"At the ringing of the bell for dinner, breakfast and supper, the students shall go peneeably to the door of the dining-room, where they shall regularly arrange themselves in their several classes, each class giving the precedence to the next one above it, and in this manner they shall wait five minutes, if necessary for a tutor.

"The students shall sit in their several classes at the tables, according to the order which the faculty or tutor shall appoint, and shall behave themselves with decorum, carefully observing all the regulation which the faculty or the tutors shall make for their decent and proper behaviours. Any officer of college attending at the dining-table shall have full power to send out of the dining room any student who shall behave in any respect indecently or improperly."

Dress Regulations

Dress regulations are as follows:

It is recommended to the students to be plain in their dress, but it is required of them always to appear neat and cleanly; and if any student shall be grossly negligent in this respect, it shall be the duty of the college officers to admonish him for it, and see that he preserves a decent appearance.

"Every student shall possess a black gown, which shall be made agreeable to fashion which the faculty shall prescribe; nor shall any student appear at prayers in the hall, or at church, without his gown."

Despite all these rules, students were evidently given to pranks that resulted in damage, for, in addition to assessing each student sixty-seven cents a term, provision is made for the imposition of other assessments.

Inspection of Dormitories

"A person shall be appointed to inspect the college, and see that the rooms an entries be kept in good repair, for which he shall receive such salary as the trustees shall from time to time appoint. This office may be connected with that of tutor or professor, if it shall be deemed expedient.

The inspector shall visit the apartments of the college once a month, to see if any waste has been made, and shall cause it immediately to be repaired. If the waste has happened in any private apartment and by the fault of him or them who occupy it, and in all cases where the damage could not be done by a person from without the apartment, the inspector shall charge double for the repairs which he shall cause to be made, and in like manner for damages made in the uninhabitated apartments of the college, "when the party or parties who have offended can be discovered; but when such discovery cannot be made, the inspector shall levy the expense of repairs equally on all the students, and it shall be paid at the end of the session in which it has taken place."

Library Was Open Once a Week

There are some very amusing regulations about the use of the library. It was open one day in the week at noon. Books might be kept for varying lengths of time, depending upon their size, as follows: A folio, six weeks; a quarto, four weeks; an octavo, two weeks; and every other book one week. And no book might be lent to any person who lived more than a mile from the college.

Students were forbidden to disguise themselves as women, to disturb or attempt any imposition upon fellow students, to have private servants in college, or to have any horse or riding beast or dog or fire arm or ammunition, without expressed permission. A horse does not appear in these motorized days, to be a probable cause of much delinquency, but evidently it played as much havoc with studies a century and a third ago as motor cars sometimes do now.

College Expenses

There is nothing in these old regulations, perhaps that is of greater interest to us of this day than the published list of expenses. These were as follows:

Entrance money	$4.67
Tuition	$8.00
Library	.67c per session
Damage	67c
Room rent	$3.33
Board with steward	$1.67 a week

Doubtless there a few of these regulations that the students of to-day would care to see in force, but it is a certainty that board at $1.67 a week would be welcome even, perhaps, if one had to eat it under restrictions.

HOW BUCKNELL GOT HER COLORS

By Eugene S. Horsman

How does it happen that Bucknell's colors are orange and blue? How many of us can tell? Who is responsible for the choice of these colors, and when and how was the choice made?

Many of us may have assumed that these colors were adopted when the institution was created. The fact is that Bucknell had been a college for a quarter of a century before anyone apparently gave the matter any attention. For up to the year 1873, little thought had been devoted by either faculty or students to the advantages of having some distinctive emblem for Bucknell, but in the spring of that year pressing need was felt. Boat racing was the latest sport of every college and Bucknell, not to be outdone, acquired two shells thru the kindness of its Philadelphia alumni. With the acquisition of these shells spirit ran high, and those of the students who had seen boat races, realized the great need of colors for our team. A deep pink was tentatively chosen, but Bucknell's activity with boat races began and ended on the Susquehanna, with never an intercollegiate contest.

For fourteen years little was said about the matter of college colors at Bucknell, but it was not so in other universities. Princeton, Harvard, and Yale decided upon their hues, and chose immortal colors. By 1887 Bucknellians were again confronted with the necessity of keeping up with the times.

A committee consisting of Dr. Wm. V. Hayes, '88; Harry Kelly, '88; and John Minick, '88, was chosen by the college, and to this committee was appointed the task of selecting the colors. On Saturday, October 1, 1887, a meeting of the committee was called to be held in Mrs. Wm. E. Martin's apartments in the Academy, of which the late Professor Martin was then principal.

For some time no progress was made, there being conflicts with the colors of other colleges, until the attention of the committee was brought to a silk ribbon bow on the back of Mrs. Martin's rocking chair. It consisted of two colors; a gendarme blue, and a deep pumpkin orange. Without further delay these colors were selected, and a resolution presented by the students to the faculty for their acceptance.

With their final adoption, spirit ran high, and the Bucknell Mirror of October, 1881, came out with the following editorial: "In closing let us express the hope that every student will take an interest in this matter, and by wearing a hatband, necktie, jersey, cap, or blazer, of blue and orange, show to his friends that he is alive to the best interest of his college." The newly chosen colorrs were enthusiastically displayed, and when the college weekly, the present Bucknellian, was founded, it was named the Orange and Blue.

Though subsequent changes in dyes have brought the colors to their present hues, may we ever love and reverence the traditions, and institution that they stand for.

Students And Faculty To Take Joint Action

We have been witnessing a further proof of the contention that the Faculty and students can co-operate in working out their mutual difficulties to the benefit and satisfaction of both parties concerned.

During the present semester, one of the more advanced classes, comprising a rather representative group of men and women, has been studying the problems of religious growth in which students are involved every day of their college lives. The class has been organized as a project study of campus ethics. Many phases of student life have been studied rather intimately by means of questionnaires, observed life situations, and published reports of studies made at other colleges.

Such a study could not go far on any campus without facing the question of student dishonesty in daily work, special tasks, and examinations. The method of the class has been to gather facts from the situations which the members of the class observe, or which they themselves are involved. The Faculty Committee on Attendance and Standing has been given the task, by the Faculty, of working out some common practice for faculty members to follow in the cases of alleged dishonesty.

There were three very enlightening and helpful informal conferences held, in which a considerable number of faculty members and students participated. The discussions throughout were characterized by a friendly spirit of helpful cooperation. There was the evident wide-spread desire to deal wisely and sympathetically, and yet vigorously with the situation.

As a result of the study made by the class, and these informal conferences of faculty members and students, the Committee on Attendance and Standing recommended to the Faculty at its meeting on Wednesday, May 12, a plan of procedure in cases of alleged or proved dishonesty. These recommendations call for a permanent joint Faculty-Student Committee on Cooperation which shall be an avenue through which cases of alleged dishonesty are to be handled.

Throughout the discussions it has been practically the unanimous opinion that we do not want a formal honor system here at Bucknell. There has been much insistence, however, upon the necessity for trying to determine what dishonesty is, and for establishing a tradition which Bucknell men and women shall ever love and practice,—the tradition that the man or woman who does dishonest work has no place in our Bucknell life.

Solve Distribution Puzzle-Get Prize

Instructors and students of economics and marketing, who have been puzzling over the theories of distribution, will have opportunity to sink their teeth into a real, practical business problem, now that $1,000 has been hung up as a prize for the best solution to the price-cutting problem.

Hon. Arthur Capper, United States senator from Kansas, will serve as chairman of the jury of award with six other individuals of national note. The prize is offered by Edward Plaut, president of Lehn & Fink Products Company, of New York, manufacturers of nationally advertised products.

The prize winning "price peace plan," according to the formal announcement, must cover a definite policy for the retailer, the jobber, the manufacturer, the chain store and the department store, including consideration of "free goods" and "hidden discount" problems. The workability and legality of the plans, either under existing law or desirable modification, will be the chief criterion on which the judges will base their decision.

There is no limit to the length of the plans submitted nor is there any limit to the number of plans any contestant may send in, but not more than one award will be made to the same person. The contest closes at noon, Monday, November 1st, 1926.

In addition to the chairman, the jury of award includes Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, chairman of the National Consumers League; Dr. Melvin T. Copeland, Harvard School of Business Administration; Nelson B. Gaskill, former Federal Trade Commissioner; G. Barrett Moxley, ex-president of the National Association of Wholesale Druggists; A. W. Shaw, publisher of "System;" Frank L. Stone, president, National Association of Retail Druggists; and Herbert J. Tily, president, National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Details of the contest can be secured from the College Contest Editor, Lehn & Fink Products Company, 250 Park Avenue, New York City.

Announcement has just been made by President R. B. Ogilby of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., of three innovations adopted by the faculty. Next fall the Freshman Week plan will be instituted for the first time; mid-year examinations will be dropped in courses running through the year, the final examination covering the work of the entire course; and juniors and seniors electing to substitute a comprehensive examination for the routine of class work will be excused from half of the required courses.

sis placed upon these essentials." As a fitting closing she quoted the poem "Being A Friend" by Edgar E. Guest.

Miss Dorothy Biker, with a vast experience derived from her various classes in sociology, very ably handled her dissertation on "Sociology, The Hope of Tomorrow." She emphasized the fact that sociology, although young in the field of social science, has made remarkable strides. "Even here at Bucknell," said Miss Biker, "the courses are overflowing with students who are anxious to know more about sociology. A general survey of this group reveals the fact that very few are taking the course for the purpose of teaching it later. They are simply anxious to grasp its teachings in order that they may be better equipped to grapple with the problems of life."

L. Francis Lybarger Jr., winner of the Freshmen Declamation Prize Contest last year, spoke on the subject "Organizing The World For Peace." His appeal was for the abolition of war as a remedy for the ills of the world today, and as a guarantee for the future peace and happiness of all.

Albert Cooley took a timely subject "Our Forests," and pleaded for their conservation. "The forests," said Cooley, "are being destroyed and cut down more than five times as fast as they are growing up again. At this rate the whole supply will be wiped out in about forty or fifty years. We must conserve our forests."

DO MEN PREFER BLONDES? INDIANA STUDENTS SAY NO

Do "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes?" Not according to the result of a quiz held at Indiana University.

More than 250 men students have expressed their opinion of what the perfect University co-ed should be and this is what they say. She should be "A sweet and innocent pleasingly plump, intelligent, fairly good looking, powdered and rouged brunette of medium height, with blue eyes, an aquiline nose and bobbed hair."

The majority of men voted for the girl with a free and easy manner who greets her men friends with a gay "hello," rather than for the reserved and dignified type.

That she be a good dancer, a lively conversationalist with musical laugh, and a woman who neither swears, smokes, or paints her lips, is also desired. She possesses money, is prominent in campus activities and inclined towards athletics.

Most of the men voted for long and slender hands and small feet, and they also want her to be a good cook.

Only nine of the two hundred and fifty said they preferred "dumb" women to the intelligent and fair-looking ones.

Under the terms of a measure recommended for enactment into law by Congress it is proposed to continue governmental aid for Howard University by amending the charter of the university so as to provide specifically that Federal appropriations be authorized to help in the construction, development, improvement, and maintenance of the institution.

The university, which is situated in Washington, D. C., was incorporated by Congress in 1867 and was named for General O. O. Howard, one of its founders and early Presidents. Although it is non-sectarian and open to both sexes and all races, it is chiefly known for its work in the higher education of the colored people.

The university has an attendance of about 2,000 students, who are required to pay tuition and provide for their own living expenses. It has been thoroughly investigated by the college rating board of the Maryland and Middle States district and rated in Class A. Thirty-eight States and thirteen countries are represented in its attendance.

help one of the boys over a rough spot." Conklin also brought up the fact the "Doc" had worked up an organization of the Chemical Engineering Alumni which is closer and more compact than the alumni organizations of any of the other departments of the college.

In behalf of the society Conklin presented Professor Brown with the token of their appreciation. It was with a husky voice that "Doc" addressed his students to thank them for the remembrance and expressed his sorrow at leaving his students and his work here. He said that he hoped to keep in touch with his undergraduates as he has done with his alumni. With his good wishes the meeting broke-up after a cheer for "Doc" and the singing of the Alma Mater.

yond the old mark. He has not been defeated in this event this season. Trimmer lost the high hurdle race by six inches, and also took second in the low timber event. Frable was not in his usual form in the javelin and had to be content with third place, though he surpassed the old record.

"Mike" McClune came away with two thirds in the field events. Hetler placed in the quarter and Davis in the half-mile. With a game ankle to hinder him, Hitchens bravely stayed in the high jump until he drew a tie for third place.

Bayley, Dickinson's peerless distance runner, paced a teammate to victory in the mile, then tried to lower his college record for the two-mile. But the first race had been too much for him, and he missed equaling the record (11:02) by one second. However he has one more opportunity, that is, to win the Middle Atlantic two-mile next Saturday. Bayley is going to begin training for rthe 1928 Olympics this summer. He finished third in the International two-mile at Franklin field this spring.

In the first five years of the conference championships Bucknell won three legs on the Public Ledger trophy. Dickinson, besides being host to the other colleges this year, is offering a new cup on the same basis; and it looks as though the Dickinson men are going to be very reluctant to permit it to leave Carlisle, for they now have the first leg on it.

Not since 1921, when the first meet of the Central Pennsylvania conference was held at Harrisburg, have as many records been bettered as this year. One main reason for this was the fact that the Dickinson track is so much faster than that at Island Park at Harrisburg, which is now torn up by construction worrk. Eight Class A records and the same number in Class B went by the board; some of them were badly broken.

Class A records as they now stand are:

100 yard dash	10 s
220 yard dash	22 2-5 s (1926)
440 yard dash	51 3-5 s.
Half mile run	2:03 (1926)
Mile run	4:36
Two mile run	10:03 (1926)
Low hurdles	15 4-5 s (1926)
High hurdles	26 1-5 s
High jump	1 ft. 9 in. (1926)
Broad jump	2 ft. 10 1-4 in. (1926)
Pole vault	11 ft. 10 1-4 in.
Shotput	43 ft. 3 1-4 in (1926)
Discus	126 ft. 4 1-2 in.
Javelin	127 feet (1926)

B. U. Varsity Downs Battlefield Team

The Bucknell Varsity had an easy time of it last Friday afternoon in Memorial Stadium walloping the Battlefield Collegians from Gettysburg for the second time this season, 12 to 2.

The Bisons unloosened some of their old time slugging, collecting twelve hits, two of them home runs, by "Tom" Murphy and Vernon Tuck. Excellent pitching by Neal Blaisdell let the visitors down with only four hits.

In the ninth inning first baseman Heilges hit the ball down the left field line, far over the head of Murphy. Umpire Martz called it a fair ball and Heilges ran the circuit for a homer.

The Bison team showed a great improvement in its fielding. Tuck was the only member to miscue. Snappy playing and hard hitting enlivened the whole game. The score:

A FREE THINKERS SOCIETY IS STARTED BY YALE MEN

A united front was presented by atheists, deists and agnostics at New Haven when the "Yale Freethinkers Society" was formed. Twenty five men were enrolled. The Society plans to have as speakers in the near future-Professor Chauncey Brewster, Tinker of the Yae faculty, and Sinclair Lewis, novelist—the former because he is said to have expressed the hope that such an organization would be formed; the latter, because he is regarded as "the most distinguished Yale Atheist."—New Student.

RADIO MENU

A newly wedded husband was asked to take down a menu over the radio one morning. He got two stations, one broadcasting exercises, the other the menu. The result is this:

"Hands on the hips, place one cup of flour on the shoulder, raise the knee, depress toes and wash thoroughly in one-half cup of milk. In four counts, raise and lower foot and smash two boiled eggs. Repeat six times, inhale one-half teaspoon of salt, a teaspoon of baking powder and one cup flour. Then breathe naturally, exhale, and sift.

"Next jump to a squatting position in quick time. Twist sideways and beat egg swiftly, arms forward over head, raise the cooked egg with flour, and in four counts make a stiff dry dough which is seretched at the waist. Lay flat on the floor and roll into marble the size of a walnut. After ten minutes remove and dry with rough towel."—Valkyrie News.

When the straight-8 blows a shoe

BEFORE you even look for the jack or tire-tools, tuck a neat wad of Prince Albert into the muzzle of your jimmy-pipe. Light up . . . and get yourself in the frame of mind where a flat tire is "all in the day's work." Talk about a gloom-chaser!

P. A. simply knocks troubles for a row of planished-steel mudguards. Its cool, soothing smoke percolates into your system, the sun crashes through the clouds, and everything is hotsy-totsy. Yes indeed, Fellows, Prince Albert is great tobacco.

And paste this in the fly-leaf of your thesaurus: P. A. can't bite your tongue or parch your throat, no matter how hard you hit it up. The Prince Albert process flunked Bite and Parch on their first examination. Get a tidy red tin of P. A. now and see.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

GRACE CUTTING COOLEY, '26, WINS DANVILLE TEACHERSHIP

Grace C. Cooley, '26, has been elected as a teacher in the Danville High School for the next scholastic year. She will teach English and French. She was graduated from the Lewisburg High School, and during her course at Bucknell was a member of the women's debating team. She has specialized in French, Latin, and social sciences, and has been a capable student.

Sport Lovers Plan Memorial To Camp

College men, undergraduates and alumni alike, have been enthusiastic in their endorsement of the plan just announced for the erection of a suitable national memorial to the late Walter Camp, whose fame as the "Father of American Football"is secure on every campus in the United States.

Under arrangements completed by the National Collegiate Athletic Association, working in close co-operation with Yale University, the Walter Camp Memorial is to be a tribute not from Yale alumni alone, but from every university, college and preparatory school where football is played. The memorial is to take the form of a monumental gateway at the entrance to the Yale Athletic Field at New Haven, which are to be renamed Walter Camp Fields in his honor by the Yale Corporation.

Plans for this unique undertaking, which will be the first time in the history that all American colleges have been combined in a joint campaign, call for the participation of 458 colleges. Scores of "prep" schools will also have a part in raising the money for the memorial. Upon bronze tablets set into the walls that flank the gateway will appear, grouped by states, the names of all universities, colleges, and schools which have contributed to the memorial.

The memorial gateway, together with the imposing approach and enclosure, has been designed by John W. Cross, Yale 1900, of New York. Architectural drawings were approved last week by the Yale Corporation. The cost will be approximately $300,-000. Half of this amount is to be subscribed by Yale alumni and the remaining half raised by the National Collegiate Association on behalf of all the other universities, colleges, and preparatory schools.

In commenting on the significance of the proposed memorial, President James R. Angell of Yale said:

"Walter Camp was an outstanding figure at Yale and in the nation. He was a strong factor in building up our athletic policy, and through his personal character exerted a splendid influence in developing a spirit of sound sportsmanship among young men here and elsewhere. Yale had planned to erect a memorial to Walter Camp, but was more than gratified when other institutions manifested a desire to participate in a tribute to his memory.

Home 'Ecs.' See 'Sem' Kitchen

The senior girls who have completed the four year course in home economics were taken on a "sight-seeing tour" through the kitchen at the Women's College, by Mrs. Clara G. Sale, dietitian, on Tuesday, May 4. They inspected the huge refrigerating plant which was recently installed, and the machines for large quantity cooking.

Students in the course in household administration under Miss Olive Douglass, head of the home economics department, visited the infirmary at Women's College, Wednesday, May 5, where Miss Buhl, the head nurse, spoke to them about the care of patients in the home.

STUDENTS CARRY BUGGY TO LANDING OF CHAPEL

"Thanks For the Buggy Ride" was the very latest prank of some vivacious collegiates who on Thursday night secured a buggy from some unknown source and placed it on the first landing of the stairs to Chapel. It was a very ancient model of a carry-all and had all the trappings of a high-class buggy. It seems a shame that all the labor of those ambitious students should go to waste, for the janitors removed the decoration of the hallway long before the first class.

But the buggy was not the only evidence of work of the ruffians. They had also the audacity to remove a professor's Ford from it's usual parking place and place it in the middle of the Quadrangle. It seems likely that many freshmen will flunk their English courses.

It is also said that these same marauders attempted to stack the furniture in Bucknell Hall. How well they succeeded has not been ascertained.

FACULTY SMOKER VERY SUCCESSFUL

On Thursday evening at 8:00 P. M. the Pennsylvania Zeta chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon held an informal smoker for the faculty. This annual affair was well represented—surprisingly so—being that it came at such a busy time of the year. Everyone present had an enjoyable time, "eating, talking, and drinking 'till the late hour." This little get-together afforded a fine opportunity for the freshmen to get acquainted with the faculty, the old men to re-acquaint themselves, and for the "profs" to meet in an informal manner and discuss old times, politics, every day problems and what-not.

Alumni Notes

Bucknell Professors Tell About Drinking

Both President Emory W. Hunt and Professor William C. Bartol, '72, of our own faculty, as well as another Bucknellian, President Lincoln Hulley, 88, of the John B. Stetson University, are quoted by the "International Student," in a symposium in its May issue concerning the drink situation among American students. The material used is taken from a report submitted at a hearing before the Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate. This testimony, according to the editors, is based upon evidence secured from unbiased incontigutious among presidents, deans, professors, and students in colleges and universities in the United States.

This evidence shows four things:

1. There is less drinking among college students today than there was prior to the coming of the Eighteenth Amendment.

2. That the spirit of adventure, for the most part, prompts such drinking as remains.

3. That conditions surrounding students in college communities today are more conducive to sobriety than they were previous to prohibition.

4. That on overwhelming majority of college presidents, professors and students feel that prohibition has justified itself.

President Hunt is quoted as saying: "It is clear to me that the attitude of the student body with which I am familiar, more and more discredits drink. Their representative attitude more and more is in behalf of the enforcement of law. It is ceasing to be a matter for joke and is crystallizing into more serious conviction."

Dr. Bartol, referring to his own student days, is quoted as follows: "Then, barrooms and drinking places were open everywhere to citizens and students alike. Drinking in the open at the places was common and was made inviting to our young people. No one lost social standing by drinking if he kept sober. Occasionally a drunken man would be seen on the street, sometimes literally on the street. . . . Now, in these days our students have changed their attitude toward drinking, very much. Our alumni are wont to visit their Alma Mater on home-coming or commencement day. Sometimes they of the old-time habit bring with them some of the old-time whiskey cheer. And they have at times taken it with them into their college fraternity houuses. The fraternity boys at home explained to the alumni brothers that they must not do this. It violated their present house rules. Furthermore these college boys sent out word to future alumni homecomers that they must 'cut out' the old time whiskey cheer."

President Hulley says: "The ideals and moral life of young people, including students, have been impaired by the back-flash of the war, by changing standards of the times due to the movies, automobiles, and other agencies that greatly effect social customs. The bootlegger thrives, certainly. He never had a business until the Volstead act put the legalness into the discard; but all your bootleggers put together don't begin to sell as much liquor as was sold before the act was passed."

Dr. R. M. West, '89

The Rev. R. M. West, '89, delivered the spring address at the beginning of Boys' Week, which was observed in Sunbury during the week of May 10-15, under the auspices of the Sunbury Rotary Club. The initial meeting was in the Strand Theatre.

Dr. West chose as the subject of his talk, "Two Classes of Government." He dealt with the honor and integrity of a nation, and said that government of one sort is always planning and preparing for war, whereas the other sort resorts to diplomatic measures to arrive at decisions when differences arise.

Cloyd N. Steininger, Esq., '03

Attorney Cloyd Nillis Steininger, '03, will deliver the Memorial Day address at the services to be held at the White Deer churches north of Lewisburg. The American Legion will have charge of the exercises. The school children and the P. O. S. of A. will decorate the graves in the two cemeteries.

The Senior class of Rutgers University has voted to take out life insurance policies to the amount of $200,-000. Upon maturity of the policies in 1946 a committee from the class will then designate a definite object for which the money is to be used. This is the fifth class to adopt the insurance plan of endowment. The aggregate sum now amounts to approximately $150,000.

GERMAN EMERGENCY MONEY NOW ON EXHIBITION IN B 23

An exhibition of German "Notgeld," emergency money, may now be seen in the German room, Biology 23. The exhibit consists of several hundred examples of the certificates issued by German municipalities for local use during the time of the depreciation of the mark in 1921-22.

The notes exhibited run in value from 25 pfennig (about six cents) to five marks. In size they resemble the "shinplasters" issued for small amounts during the American Civil War, but they are interesting in their variety of color and design.

Despite the hard times, the German sense of humor and art found expression in the "Notgeld." Some towns issued regular series of notes with scenes from local history; others with illustrated proverbs; still others with views of celebrated places. Very striking is one series with views of the former German colonies.

The entire collection gives an excellent idea of the skill of German color-printing. All who are interested are invited to visit the exhibition.

PRESIDENT OF DARTMOUTH DEFENDS THE COLLEGE MAN

The often criticised college student was defended by President Hopkins of Darthmouth before the annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges held recently in New York, as having "more desire to be of worth in the world than the student of any other generation." "College life," he said, "must necessarily be a reflection of the common life in the country, and the tendencies, both good or bad, which are prevalent in the rest of the world today will be found in a similar measure in the institutions of learning."

Tables are reversed once a year at Antioch College at Yellow Springs, Ohio, when the students are allowed to tell their candid opinions of the facty, and it is said that it has been the cause of several instructors losing their positions. Incidentally to this personal comment which each student makes, his name must be signed in full.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

RELIGION IS STRONGER AMONG U. S. STUDENTS

The National Students' Federation of America, organized at Princeton last December by representatives of 250 colleges made known today the results of a national survey of college opinion on the question of compulsory chapel for undergraduates.

Questionnaires on the problem of the advantages and disadvantages of compulsory chapel were mailed to the 600 college presidents and undergraduate newspaper editors of the country. There was response on the part of 315 college presidents, but only forty-two undergraduate editors. The report of Horace Rose, of Columbus, O., Princeton, '28, chairman of the Federation committee on Committee on Compulsory Chapel, however, embraces every State of the Union except two.

The most striking conclusion to be drawn from the tabulation of Mr. Rose and his committee is that the American undergraduate, instead of being more atheistic or insensible to religion today than he was twenty-five years ago, has advanced to a clearer perception of the relation of religion to life and social service.

"Only twenty-nine replies," continues the committee's summary, "expressed the thought that there had been a change for the worse in the religious interest of the students, including several which spoke of the confusion and unrest in which undergraduates find themselves.

"Two declare the convictions that 'the student is drifting toward Bolchevism.' Dean Waugh, of the University of South Carolina, says: 'Where there is a real religious interest, it is not different from that in 1900. But both institutions and parents are doing less and less to cultivate religious interest.

"Twenty-six replies on the other hand—distinct from those which noticed the ideal of service or the attitude of independence show a general change for the better. President Hibben, of Princeton, found 'a more widespread interest in mental problems and a more general recognition of moral responsibilities than in 1900.' ".

The principal trends of undergraduate religious interests as intrepreted by the college presidents are: Emphasis of social service, 72; independent questioning attitude, freer expression of beliefs, more impatience of creeds, 62; no change, 42; change for worse, 29; change for better, 26.

GIRL STUDENTS AT PEKING MAKE WAR ON UNIVERSITY

Peking's "women militant," emulating the example of war lords who rule their country, have settled a four-month dispute with the Minister of Education by forcibly seizing the building of the Women's Normal University, from which they had been ejected and triumphantly setting up their own school.

Last summer, Mr. Chang Shih-chen, then Minister of Education, imposed certain regulations in the girl students of the National Normal University for Women, which were distasteful to a large group. The girls refused to obey them. But Mr. Chang proved firm, and expelled the refractory group, hiring twenty strong peasant girls as "bouncers."

PRESIDENT OF CARNEGIE TECH DEFENDS HIS STUDENTS

Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, today commented on testimony given by Col. Samuel Harden Church, president of the board of trustees of the Carnegie Institute, before the senate prohibition committee and which concerned drinking among students. Dr. Baker declared there were no grounds at Carnegie Tech for concern on the subject.

"Col. Church as chairman of the board of trustees of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, is not in touch with the student body," said Dr. Baker, "and he has stated that his testimony in regard to drinking among young people should be regarded as a generalization which does not apply specifically to students at this institution."

Dr. Baker said he has made a thorough study of the situation before making a report to the committee of trustees of Carnegie Tech and before making today's comment.

AMERICAN STUDENTS WILL SEE EUROPE THIS SUMMER

One out of every ten American college students will go to Europe this summer. Forecasts made by the Paris offices of the United States, White Star, Cunard, French, United American and North German Lloyd Steamship lines fix the number of student travelers at over 60,000. The total college student population of the United States is approximately 600,-000.

Every steamship plying between these United States and those disunited ones of Europe plans to convert its third class section from something low and of the steerage to something high class, collegiate. The hardy college travelers will travel steerage,—but what a steerage!

The United States Line has provided in the S. S. Republic a special third class dance floor complete with special third class jazz orchestra straight from Princeton. For its various boats, and especially for their third class sections, the U. S. Line has hired six college orchestras, two from Princeton and one each from Harvard, Yale, New York University, and the University of Pennsylvania.

The National Student Federation tours conducted by the Open Road, Incorporated will account for about five hundred students. On the American Student Delegation to Soviet Russia will be another twenty-five students. Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. tours to various countries will take in several hundred more. The rest will go on every kind of expedition imaginable. Almost every college has a tour all its own. Led and chaperoned by some favorite professor these trips will be officially educational and in some cases will even count as an additional credit towards a degree. Travel has become collegiate.

JAPANESE EXCLUSION ACT PROTESTED BY AMERICANS

A gesture of friendship for Japan and of protest against the Exclusion Act, has been made by the American Friends Service Committee. If Japan were treated like other nations, the committee pointed out, yesterday, 100 Japanese immigrants could enter the United States this year. But the Exclusion Act bars them. So now the committee has started a drive for funds to bring to the United States from Japan 100 Japanese graduate students and to place them in the best graduate schools in the country.

These mature students will be available as speakers and writers to inform American listeners and readers regarding Japanese affairs. Also, when they go back to Japan, they will have the information and background, believes the committee, to interpret America to Japan.

The committee also will raise funds to send a group of American students to Japan for a year of study there.

SHAW LIKENS THE COLLEGE TO A SORT OF CAFETERIA

In his address to the Princeton chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of the "Review of Reviews," made the statement that colleges were becoming to much like cafeterias in which a student may help himself to whatever he desires, and that they lack even the ministrations of an experienced waiter, who could by perchance give some timely advice as to the bill of fare.

GIVES $50,000 AS TRUST FUND

Henry A. Bix, who retired three years ago and turned his business over to his employees has just contributed $50,000 as a trust fund for the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, according to an announcement made by the United Palestine Appeal.

"The Hebrew University is the most important phase of the rebuilding of Palestine as a Jewish homeland," Mr. Dix said, "because it stands as a symbol of the entire movement, typifying the great cultural movement that the Jews will again make to the world from Palestine."

BAPTIST PROFESSOR QUITS

A. L. Pickens, professor of biology at Furman University, has resigned as a result of a clash with trustees of the institution on views of evolution.

Pickens became the centre of a controversy when he was quoted as subscribing to the theory of evolution. Furman University is owned and controlled by the Baptists of South Carolina.

PI PHIS CELEBRATE THEIR FOUNDERS' DAY

Sixty-nine members of Pi Beta Phi attended a luncheon Saturday, May 15, in celebration of the fifty-ninth anniversary of the founding of the fraternity and the thirty-first anniversary of the founding of the Bucknell chapter.

This luncheon given to the active chapter by the local alumnae club was given at the home of Miss Carolyn Hunt, secretary of the Pi Beta Phi alumnae club, and was a very enjoyable occasion.

At the annual meeting of the alumnae club, Mrs. Lewis E. Theiss was re-elected president, Miss Helen E. Swartz of Milton was elected secretary, and Mrs. M. L. Drum vice president, and Mrs. Harry S. Bourne treasurer. Miss Elizabeth F. Spyker and Miss Helen K. Bartol were elected club representatives on the alumnae advisory committee. Committees reported that the alumnae club had contributed $69 to the support of the Pi Beta Phi settlement school along Little Pigeon river, in Gatlinburg, Tennessee, as well as $10 to the undergraduate loan fund of Pi Beta Phi and $10 to the endowment of a fraternity graduate fellowship.

The ten pledges of the Bucknell chapter presented a series of musical scenes representing fraternity life.

Among the out-of-town alumnae present were: Miss Mabel Allison of Spring Mills; Mrs. Ada Brooks Nancarrow and Miss Hartman of Williamsport; Mrs. Geraldine Schmucker Sheffer of Watsontown; Mrs. Blanche Stoner Wood of Muncy, and Mrs. Helen Buoy Burrowes, Miss Elizabeth Burrowes, Mrs. Ethel Hottenstein Cobbet, Mrs. Lillian Foust Reed, Mrs. Helen Beck Shimer, Miss Helen E. Swartz, of Milton.

SIGMA CHIS DANCE

The cool spring evenings enjoyed during the week of May 2 were used to good effect by Kappa Chapter of Sigma Chi at its annual Spring Dance held May 7 and 8.

A solid black and hite checker ceiling, and fringed draperies of the same colors on the walls constituted the interior decorations. The moderate weather permitted dancing on the porches which were encircled with bands of laurels, and decorated in black and white effects.

Omer Hicks and his orchestra of ten musicians made the party one not soon to be forgotten by any who were guests of the chapter.

PHI MU

Marie Helwig, '28, has been chosen, with Arlene Kimball, '27, to represent Phi Mu on the Pan-Hellenic board for the coming year.

Plans are being laid for the annual Symposium which will be held on Monday evening, June 7.

The American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Bucknell branch, elected the 1926-27 officers at a meeting at 10 A. M., Monday, May 17. The following officers were elected:

President, Aldus Fogelsanger, '27; Vice President, George Timm, '28; Secretary-Treasurer, J. D. Johnson, '27; Faculty Advicor, G. A. Irland; Cabinet members, C. P. Geist, '27; T. I. Young, '27. About twenty members were present.

BUCKNELL BAND HAS BIG DINNER

band would continue to play more and more Bucknell tunes.

The retiring manager, Clyde G. Learn, gave a resume of the band's activity the past year. Beginning with the formal Matriculation Convocation, the band played at the home football games, and also made the Washington trip to play at the Georgetown game in the Griffith stadium. Winter saw a lull in practices because of the low state of the treasury, but early in the spring practices were resumed in preparation for the Commencement concerts in June.

Professor L. E. Theiss traced the history of the band from the time of its inception under Dr. Elysee Aviragnet in 1892 to the band of the present day. The 1893 L'Agenda lists the band for the first time. Apparently there were 19 men in the first Bucknell band. The president of the organization was William C. Gretzinger, who became our first registrar. The secretary was E. A. Bush; the treasurer was G. H. Waid, and the sergeant was our own professor F. M. Simpson. Dr. Aviragnet, of course, was the leader.

The players were as follows: first cornet, F. M. Simpson, Warren Marts, F. W. Jackson, Charles W. Williams; second cornet, Ben Brick, E. A. Bush; alto, Mr. Anderson, G. H. Waid; baritone, R. H. Simpson, a brother of Prof. F. M. Simpson, and Edward M. Greene, now a Bucknell trustee; tenor, J. C. Carey; bass, John Cressinger, Otto Schub, and A. H. Wynkoop; drums, H. K. Bower, A. E. Finn, R. B. Davidson.

This first band always went with the Odd Fellows to Mifflinburg, Muncy, Williamsport, during the three years Prof. Simpson was a member. The organization was paid $50 and transportation for these engagements. The first concert was played, probably on April 26, 1892, and the University band also played on Memorial Day of that year.

This early band stole a march on the glee club, for the glee club made its first victrola record but a few months ago, while the band made its first phonograph record more than a quarter century ago. When the phonograph was first invented, a public demonstration was given in the Opera House, a structure on Third street where Hasting's shoe shop now is, and the band was called in to play. The record was made on a wax cylinder and the record was played immediately on the phonograph, much to the astonishment of the audience.

But the big adventure that happened to that early band was on the occasion of Grover Cleveland's election to the presidency. The folks at the news offices watched the returns until 2 A. M. when indications pointed conclusively to Cleveland's election. "Bob" Darlington, ex-'03, and "Cap" Walls, came to 18 East Wing on the third floor (old system of numbering) and wakened Professor Simpson. When asked for the band, Professor Simpson requested $5 for each member and to his surprise, got it. The band paraded through the streets of Lewisburg until daylight, much to the delight of the Democrats of the town.

Several of fthe early pieces played were the Montrose quicketep and the Punjab march. Sousa was just coming into his own as a march writer, and the band used some of his compositions.

"Eddie" Calhoun brought the diners back from the past and pushed forward to "Bands of the Future." Calhoun is one of the best band leaders in the state and Bucknell is extremely fortunate to have such a capable and likeable band director. "Cal" thanked the bandsmen or their past cooperation and predicted a better organization or 1926-27.

"Abe" Sheckells then closed the banquet and sent the boys home feeling fine because of his promise to see that the band makes three trips next fall with the football team. These journeys are scheduled for State College, Wilkes-Barre, and Harrisburg.

The guests were: President Emory W. Hunt, Professor William C. Bartol, and Professor L. E. Theiss.

Those present at the banquet were: R. H. Smith, F. B. Kemery, A. W. Sheckells, C. G. Learn, D. W. Anderson, O. E. Duemler, W. B. Scher, J. B. Laughner, Alex Horoschak, P. V. Arow, M. D. Buzweller, D. M. Wisehaupt, E. C. Cryder, Sherwood Githens, A. M. Shorts, Eugene L. Kingler, V. W. McHail, J. J. Young, F. G. Pastorius, G. B. Moyer, P. G. Schmidt, C. E. Bowen, J. B. Cook, A. L. Martin, M. C. Shuttlesworth, E. E. Halleran, E. S. Ramsdell, G. G. McCune, K. C. Albig, K. C. Gardner, A. F. Buffington.

reports and business, after which the editorial and business delegates separated, the former being led in their discussion by Dr. Rathbone, the latter by Mr. Kaufman of the Collegiate Specialty Advertising Co.

The meeting was again called to order and the election of officers took place. Mr. Gordon Ridsdale, editor of the Lehigh Brown and White, was elected as president for the coming year. Mr. George F. Kennedy thereby automatically became the secretary, since it was voted that the president and secretary be from the same paper. Of the bids for next year's conference the one of Mr. Ridsdale in behalf of the Lehigh chapter was chosen. The new officers were installed and a vote of thanks given to the Delta Upsilon Chapter for the use of its lodge, and to Swarthmore College for its hospitality. A handsome silver cup, which was a prize for the best editorial submitted, was delivered to the Targum.

SURVEY SHOWS HOW MUCH BRYN MAWR GIRLS STUDY

Bryn Mawr College girls study approximately thirty hours a week, according to the results of a survey made public yesterday at the college. The survey shows that students study from twenty-seven and one-half to thirty-four and three-quarters hours. The Curriculum Committee of the Undergraduate Association conducted the survey at the request of President Marion Edwards Clark for the information of the faculty.

A. C. LINSDAY TALKS TO BIG FOUR SOCIETY

principles is found in the Council Chamber of London, where each member has at his desk an individual air supply which he may regulate as he so desires.

The ejector system of drying materials in kilns has been developed by the same company, in which system the drying air is forced into the kiln near the top by ejectors, and instead of blowing directly on the materials to be dried, stirs up all the air in the kiln and makes a perfect equalization of drying temperatures.

Perhaps the greatest development under this system is the new refrigeration plant, utilizing Diolene, H2-C2C1-2, as the refrigerant. This obviates the hazards accompanying ammonia or carbon dioxide refrigeration plants, and is very simple in operation, its essentials being a compressor and condenser working together. This system finds much use in theaters, large stores, and some manufacturing plants.

Mr. Lindsay's interesting talk was illustrated by excellent slides showing in detail the application of the air systems he explained. The student engineers who attended the lecture were well repaid.

I'm the "big boy" college gink. I've the other fellow, keep your mouth shut teen everywhere and have seen everything. o one has had as many and as exciting experiences as I have. When any one talks of an experience they have had I always go them one better, I have to prevaricate. When I was in high school I was an honor student and never "cracked" a book. In football and oratory I simply could not be beaten. I enjoy telling my friends of my experiences and accomplishments in order that they may know that I'm quite the "stuff." Though I'm not proving myself to be a outstanding scholar or athlete in college, it's becauuse I'm not getting a square deal, and I don't care I can best content myself with talking of the days gone by.—Carson-Newman "Orange and Blue."

L'AGENDA STAFF HAS BIG BANQUET AT ROUND TOP INN

Professor Theiss, Toastmaster, Traced History of L'Agenda First Edited By '89

PUBLICATION PRAISED BY PROFESSOR BURPEE

The Printer Compliments Staff Upon Intensive Cooperation. Professor Drum Speaks

Thirty-three Bucknellians, including the 1927 L'Agenda staff and several guests, celebrated the successful publication of this year's annual by a most enjoyable diner on Tuesday evening, May 18, at the most beautiful Round Top Inn, which looks down upon the Susquehanna from the picturesque bluffs near Halls Station, twenty-five miles from Lewisburg.

The party left the Seminary at five-thirty, the run to Round Top being made in several private cars. There was abundant time, before dinner as served, for all to enjoy the magnificent views to be had from the Round Top lawns.

But the original purpose of the trip was not forgotten, and soon after the last cars had arrived the banquet itself began. The dinner of steak and mushrooms with "trimmings," cooked in Mrs. Grannis' very best style, was served in the double dining rooms, where two big tables had been placed end to end, for the three dozen diners. The tables were lighted by both electric lights and candles, and were attractively decorated with masses of lilacs.

Professor Theiss Gives Talk

Professor Lewis E. Thiess, '02, was toastmaster. As soon as the generous dinner had disappeared, he started the second part of the evening's program by tracing briefly the history volumes of this publication were passed about the tables, for the diners to examine. The very first L'Agenda, published by the Class of 1889, was edited by William C. Gretzinger, who later became the first Bucknell registrar, while the business manager was Raymond West, now our Baptist church pastor.

"The first class to publish a yearbook at Bucknell had only fourteen members," said the toastmaster, "whereas there are on the 1927 L'Agenda staff more than twice as many persons as there were in the entire class of 1889. This is some indication of how things have grown at Bucknell during these years."

Professor Burpee Introduced

Professor Frank E. Burpee, to whom the 1927 L'Agenda is dedicated, was introduced as the first speaker

J. R. Gilmour To Be Senior President

John R. Gilmour, '27, of Hawthorne, N. J., was elected president of the senior class for 1926-27 in a hotly contested election held in the Chemistry Building on Thursday afternoon, May 20. The count was very close and it wasn't till the last few ballots were counted that "Johnny" nosed out "Pud" Hollinger, '27, of Lansford, Pa., with a four-vote margin. The vote: 77-73.

Earl F. McClune, of Ligonier, won out over George W. Walker, of Stidham, Oklahoma, for the vice presidency: 82-70. Warren G. Knierlem, of Reading, received an eleven-vote majority over Lewis G. Hausser, of Jersey Shore, for the class treasurership. Florence E. Farmley, of Mahanoy City, was declared the new secretary in a close contest with Margaret U. Brick, of Marlton, N. J.

Donald F. Beidleman, of Nanticoke, and Douglas W. Anderson, of Little Falls, N. J., were elected senior representatives on the inter-class council.

The pledges of L. L. entertained the active members in the suite in Lower House recently, and presented the club with an appropriate gift for the suite.

Faculty Approves New Rushing Rules

Joint Committee To Be Formed To Judge Dishonesty Cases

New actions of interest to the student body was taken by the faculty at the meeting of May 12. Of particular interest to the undergraduates is the decision to hold the next Annual Commencement in the Quadrangle, weather permitting.

The following changes in rushing rules proposed by the Student Council were approved.

Section 2, Article 1 reading as follows: "No student shall be pledged until one month after the official opening of college." To read "No student shall be pledged until nineteen days after the opening of college."

Section 2, Article 2 which reads as follows: "There shall be a closed season of the rushing of new students from September 1 to that day which is one week after the official opening of college. This period shall be followed by ten days of intensive rushing and then two days of silence in which no rushing

Y.W.C.A. To Establish Old Book Exchange

The life of the Frosh gets easier every day! At least the Y. W. C. A. is doing all in its power to make it so. The latest project that the girls have undertaken is that of eliminating the difficulty that freshmen have every fall in securing books. Y. W. C. A. cabinet members plan to secure a list of books that will be used next semester from the professors. Books on this list that have been used by the upper classes before will be sold to the freshmen for three-quarters of the original price. This fee will be turned over to the owner of the book, minus a small commission to the "Y. W." for its services. Unsold books will be safely returned to their original owners. The execution of this plan is in the care of "Nan" Kennedy, chairman of the Finance Committee, and the girls of the committee.

"Y. W." DELEGATE CHOSEN

Final selection of the delegates to represent Bucknell at the joint "Y. W." and "Y. M." convention to be held at Eagles Mere from June 11 to June 21 have been made at the Women's College. Representatives sent from the girls' classes are: Helen Thompson, junior; Ruth Bray, sophomore; Jessie Fielding, freshman. The remaining five delegates of the quota of eight have been picked by the "Y. W." The girls are: Dorothy Gilbert, '27, Grace Milhous, '27, Ruth Heritage, '28, Grace Pheifer, '27, and Louise Westley, '28. These girls' expenses will be met in part by the "Y. W." which has raised the money by tag day and selling sandwiches. The girls have plans under way for stunts and songs that will make the Bucknell delegation the "peppiest" group at the convention.

PLAYWRITERS' CLUB FORMED AT BUCKNELL

The Playwriters of Bucknell was formally organized on Monday afternoon, May 24, 1926. Mr. Gilbert McCune, '27, was elected president, and Carol Dutton, '27, secretary.

The purpose of the club will be to encourage playwriting at Bucknell. The requirements will probably be a play written by the applicant for admission. This must be accepted by at least two of the faculty, and a majority of the members of the club.

There are eight charter members, four of whom are seniors, and four juniors. They are Florence Utt, '26, Mildred Marshall, '26, Edward Humphreys, '26, Kenneth Slifer, '26, Gilbert McCune, '27, Caryl Dutton, '27, Gordon Goodyear, '27, and H. Rae Young, '28.

"REBECCA" CHARMS BAPTIST AUDIENCE

Edward J. Humphreys is Author Of the Hebrew Exodus Story

Before an enthusiastic audience that filled the auditorium of the Baptist church, "Rebecca," a tragedy in three acts, by Edward Jackson Humphreys, '26, as presented in an admirable manner on Tuesday evening, May 18. The author's father was a proud member of the audience.

An attractive feature of the play was the background of music, played by Lewis Kesler, which carried out the emotions of the characters as they were portrayed. The play itself was written in blank verse.

Miss Florence Utt, as Rebecca, received hearty applause from the audience for her capable rendition of that part. She was presented with a box of roses during the performance. The author, who had remained in the background during the play, was forced to answer a curtain call after the last act. All parts were well carried out, the lines being repeated with force and dignity. Colored lights thrown on the actors during the play helped to portray the emotions of the plot. They made a pleasing picture, coloring blue, green, or red the white gowns of the characters.

The play has to do with the tragic events connected with the exodus of the Hebrews from Egypt, and is directly concerned with a triangular love affair, in which the Pharoah's son, Merneptah, and an Egyptian noble, Mernes, contend for the hand of a Hebrew maiden, Rebecca. Merneptah orders the death of Mernes, and is himself slain by the angel of the Lord, as the first born of Pharaoh. Rebecca, broken by the death of Mernes, whom she loved, also dies, completing the tragedy.

Much credit is due to the work of Carolyn Hunt, Rolland Dutton, and Robert Smith, who staged the play and made the costumes.

The play was laid in the time of the Exodus, and was presented by the following cast.

Rebecca ..... Florence Utt
Mernes ..... Gordon Goodyear
Merneptah ..... Barton Dakin
Jessa ..... Yolanda Frank
Sethmuth ..... Stewart Rankin
Zysos ..... Victor Meyer
Hoteth ..... Raymond Edwards
Hyphastos ..... Robert Dilworth
Hebrews ..... Victor Meyer
Raymond Edwards
Elizabeth Siegfried
Slave ..... Robert Ballentine

Epilogue read by Miss Siegfried

The music was arranged by Professor Paul G. Stolz, and the play was directed by Mr. C. Willard Smith. It is hoped that similar productions may be presented in the future, thus giving a start for a "Little Theatre" movement at Bucknell.

Bucknell Tennismen Capture Trophy Cup

Lehigh Second With 20 Points Rudisill Played Good Game

Bucknell, with a total of 21 points, took first place and the trophy cup at the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate tennis finals, held at Haverford, Friday and Saturday, May 21 and 22. Rudisill, '27, starred for Bucknell, winning his way to the final match. Sullivan, of Lehigh, was the individual star and high point scorer of the meet, amassing a total of 20 points.

At the preliminary district tournament in Selinsgrove, Saturday, May 15, Rudisill, McCaskey and Horter, of Bucknell, qualified for the finals, accounting for 12 points. The colleges represented at Haverford were New York University, Johns Hopkins, Swarthmore, Delaware, Lehigh, and Bucknell.

On Friday, May 21, Hebner, of Johns Hopkins, eliminated McCaskey, of Bucknell, 6-4, 6-4. Rudisill of Bucknell, eliminated Hebner, 1-6, 6-2, 6-1; adding 4 points to Bucknell's total. The following day Rudisill defeated Hodges, of Swarthmore, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4; thus accumulating 5 additional points.

In the final match, Rudisill put up a game fight, but was defeated by Sullivan, of Lehigh, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3. Sul-

FROSH GET PRIZES FOR BEST MAKE-UPS

Army of Tramps, Babies, Hoboes, Invade Our Beautiful Campus

On Saturday afternoon, May 15, at 2:30 the quadrangle was filled with comic, strange characters of all sorts and descriptions. The freshmen were celebrating their annual Poverty Day Parade.

Freshmen to the left of us, freshmen to the right of us, freshmen everywhere, but who could recognize them. They discarded their "dinks" and other standard freshmen marks, rings and spent the day acting like convicts just released from jail, dressing themselves as best they knew how. The costumes ranged from that of babies to that of old, prosperous looking(?) tramps. To any outsider it would seem that the "Loyal Order of Tramps," held a convention in Lewisburg Saturday, for scores upon scores of them appeared with flowing rags, cigar butts, bottles on the hip, bundles of clothes hanging over their shoulders, etc. Yet dotted here and there such make-ups as babies, school kids, overdressed women, cavemen, monkeys, cowboys, and beautiful young girls, appeared. What strange and yet noble group of characters the class of '29 turned out! What if mother could have seen her boy then!

"Fat" Jones, the heavy-weight of the class attracted attention by his make-up as a small school boy. He wore a checkered suit, a large tam-o-shanter, and carried a bundle of books. His hair was slicked down and, upon close observation, one could see that "Fat" had only a few teeth (thanks to the use of black wax). "Red" Dorsett as Happy Hooligan, contributed greatly to the success of his family, composed of "Art" Harris, dressed as an old woman in a loud purple dress, while "Bucky" Harris made a cute baby. "Kelly" Novicki as "Miss Lewisburg" had quite a time refusing dates. Jean Klingner and "Johnny" Bridegum, as the "Gold Dust Twins" were also especially good.

After the roll-call at 2:30 in the Quadrangle, the freshmen marched around town. When the parade reached the fountain on Market street the best twenty-three characters were picked out by four judges, who were merchants of Lewisburg. Then the freshmen marched to the stadium where the twenty-three winners drew for the prizes offered by the town merchants. The list of prize-winners was as follows: "Johnny" Bridegum, twenty tickets to the Orpheum; "Gene" Klingner, safety razor from Heiser; John Grazier, flashlight from Zearfoss; C. M. Huester, pair of gold hose from Donehower; D. M. Hammell, pipe from Stahl; A. B. Cleri, suit dry cleaned and pressed at Johnson's; "Art" Harris, pair of Keds from Where, O Where Did The Sophomores Go?

Frosh Try Hard To Catch Sophs, Hunting All Night For Them

The freshmen stole a march on the seniors, when they staged a pajama parade around the quadrangle at ten minutes of ten on "Senior Night," May 20. The freshmen who were all supposed to be tucked away snugly in bed with their shoes on, suddenly broke tradition and began the march.

When the Seniors arrived at ten o'clock the parade broke up and a general "rough house" began. As has been the custom, the freshmen were required to do all the different tricks the Seniors did when they were freshmen. Besides the tricks, there was the usual amount of door stealing, furniture breaking, and other petty fun.

After twelve o'cloc the freshmen were sent to hunt sophomores. Sophs were at a premium that night, for there was no glory in Lewisburg for that hated class.

A huge bon-fire was lighted beside the sundial on the quadrangle. The piano, victrola, and organ from the "Y" room furnished the music. Then the sophs were led in much as a lamb to execution and made to dance in

Eleanor Dakin, '26, Crowned May Queen

Crowning Was a Surprise To All At the Japanese Lawn Party

Eleanor Dakin, '26, was crowned queen of May at the Japanese lawn party held on the Women's College campus on Saturday, May 22, from 4:30 to 8 o'clock.

The ceremony of the crowning took place on a platform beside Limestone Run. Miss Dakin wearing a dress of white satin and a long veil which was carried by six small girls, and preceded by "Jimmie" Whyte, young son of Professor and Mrs. James P. Whyte, as page, advanced to the platform, where she knelt and received the crown and sceptre from Phoebe Reinhart, '25, last year's queen.

The crowning of the May Queen came as the surprise of the lawn party, for no one knew who she was to be. It was proceeded by an excellent program, opening with a concert by the Bucknell band, while the guests were assembling.

Supper, consisting of olives, pickles, chicken, rolls with butter, potato chips, strawberry parfait, iced tea, and rice cakes, was served by freshmen girls in Japanese costume.

This was followed by a play presented by Frill and Frown. Mary Foust and Frances Harris did a very pretty old fashioned dance which was followed by the Fairies' Revel, by a group

Shoe Night At "Sem" Rough On The Frosh

"When the cat's away the mice will play," says the old adage, and so, when the senior girls were away at President Hunt's reception on Thursday evening, May 20, the sophomores made life miserable for the freshmen at Woman's College. It was Shoe Night.

The freshmen were all instructed to go to bed with their shoes on, which naturally, they didn't do. At eight o'clock the fun began, when the sophomores started out on tours of investigation.

Soon the halls were echoing with the screams of luckless freshmen who were caught and ducked. Others barricaded themselves in their rooms and could not be caught.

Brady and Doubler Houses were the chief freshmen strongholds, as usual, and although the sophomores worked for several hours with all sorts of weapons, they made few conquests here. All electric light bulbs had disappeared from the halls, and door knobs and keys could not be found.

One group of freshmen ingeniously covered the door of their room with molasses and then locked themselves in. Needless to say the sophomores didn't spend much time trying to get in there.

LLOYD TRIMMER WILL LEAD JUNIOR CLASS IN 1926-1927

The Sophomore Class election for president as the closest in the history of '28. It was an East vs. West affair. The candidate from the East was William "Bill" Marley, from Johnstown, Pa. The representative from the West was Lloyd M. Trimmer, who hails from way out in Pauls Valley, Okla. The West won. Trimmer's majority over Marley was two votes.

Milton F. Frable, Latrobe, Pa., won the vice-presidency over I. William Winemiller, Red Lion, Pa. The candidates for secretary were: Pauline K. Belles, Montoursville, Pa.; Miriam R. Burns, Northumberland, Pa.; Alice E. Lambert, Johnstown, Pa.; the sophs elected Miss Burns secretary for next term. Richard "Dick" Peden, Philadelphia, was the class choice over Oliver E. Duemler, Cornwells Heights, Pa., for treasurer.

Four men were nominated for class councilman. No vote was taken for this office as only four members fill the class representation in Council. The men selected are John H. Hughes, Great Neck, N. Y.; Harold L. Jordan, Binghamton, N. Y.; Felix J. McCormick, Bloomfield, N. J.; and John C. Sheppard, Haddon Heights, N. J.

MERION HIGH WINS FIRST PLACE IN P. I. A. A. MEET

Norristown Gets Second Place, With 19½ Points; Erie Is Third, With 13¾ Points

THREE OF LAST YEAR'S RECORDS SHATTERED

One Hundred and Twenty Five Schoolboy Athletes Compete At Memorial Stadium

Bucknell, for the second consecutive year, was host to the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association state championship track tournament at Memorial Stadium on Saturday, May 22. Lower Merion High School was the high point winner with a total of 21½; Norristown followed closely behind with 19½; and Erie Academy High School barely nosed out Harrisburg Tech for third place, with 13¾ points against the latter's 12¾.

The shower in the morning when the trial heats were being run did not bother the contestants very much, and the rain packed the stadium track into as good condition as it has been in this year. Last year only the winner in each event in the district meets was eligible for the state championship meet, but this year runners-up were also allowed to compete, making a fairer and better championship contest.

One-hundred-twenty-five schoolboy athletes, representing the eight districts in Pennsylvania, were the guests of Bucknell University on Saturday. Three of last year's marks were shattered, the 440-yard, the 880-yard, and the pole vault marks being bettered this year. Two new events, the javelin and the discus throws, were added to the card.

The teams by district were: District 1: Norristown, Lower Merion, Bethlehem, Chester, Tamaqua, West Reading, Abington. District 2: Nanticoke, Scranton Tech, Scranton Central, West Pittston, Benton, Newport Township, Wilkes-Barre, Forty Fort. District 3: Harrisburg, Steelton. District 4: Lewisburg, Jersey Shore, Williamsport, Troy, Knoxville. District 5: Bedford, Meyersdale. District 6: State College, Lock Haven, Tyrone, Bellefonte, Altoona. District 7: Ford City. District 8: Erie Academy High School, Erie East, Bradford, Sharon, Warren.

The scores by districts were: District 1, 72; district 6, 27; district 4, 26; district 8, 22½.

The team scores were: Lower Merion, 21½; Norristown, 19½; Erie Academy, 13¾; Harrisburg Tech,

WITH THE FRATERNITIES

PHI GAMMA DELTA
C. E. Kimball Jr.

Brother Jack Davis of Williamsport, was a visitor at the house last week.

Cliff Mace, and Paul Buckley, of Nanticoke, were the guests of Bill Samuel for dinner on Saturday.

Brother Drake, Alleghany, made a short visit at the house. Drake is the track coach at Academy High School, at Erie, Pennsylvania.

Brother Demeree, Colgate, '03, who is assistant principal at Academy High School, Erie, Pennsylvania, was also a guest on Saturday. Brother Demeree was one of the officials at the track meet that was held in the Stadium, on Saturday.

Mr. Baum, of Perkasie, Pennsylvania was a visitor at the house over the week-end. During his stay he played with Noble's orchestra at two dances.

Mock Initiation was held on Saturday night, and the pledges made the acquaintance of His Highness, the King.

"On with the dance, let joy be unconfined." "Is this a dream?" These and similar exclamations could be heard amid the shuffle of feet and the din of the noise made by the gay dancers as they wound their way across the dance hall of the S. A. E. house. Never before had everyone looked so happy and gay. The most sanguine hopes had finally been realized. The best girl was there decked in her most gorgeous array. The house looked like a dance palace—the place actually "sizzled." Dancing was the main feature of the program, but this did not exclude romance and adventure, which were greatly in evidence. Dame Nature gave the worthy wooers a treat for she came out in all her silvery splendour on both nights.

The "Blue Band" outdid itself with its repertoire of waltzes which were very appropriate. The music in general was exceptionally fine and it aided greatly in keeping up the pep.

The dance on the first evening lasted from nine until one, the second evening from eight 'till twelve. On Saturday afternoon the fair ones were taken to the Interscholastic Track Meet or to the Lawn Fete, where the time was spent to good advantage.

Now that it's all over we feel like Montgomery did when he wrote, "Joys too exquisite to last, and yet more exquisite when passed."

KAPPA SIGMA

The following brothers returned to the house over the week-end: "Tom" Horan, '24; "Dick" Sheffer, '24; A. R. Lewis, '23; "Hank" Norman, '16; "Cy" Hoffa, '22; "Carl" Kivler, ex-'25; "Dave" Arnold, ex-'25; and "Red" MacAnulty, ex-'27.

Rev. J. Davis, of Blairsville, Pa., visited his son, "Jim," over the week-end.

DELTA SIGMA
H. H. Pierson

Gay lanterns glowed, and the Eight Collegians of Harrisburg blew their bluest at the Delta Sigma annual week-end party, which held forth Friday and Saturday, May 21 and 22. The house was appropriately decorated in black and red, the fraternity colors, a collection of scrub pine from the forest primeval covered the porch on all sides, and Japanese lanterns lighted the lawn and the house.

The formal dance held Friday evening from eight to one was attended by more than thirty couples. Favors were given out just before the dance. These consisted of small gold-embroidered silk-lined black vanity carriers for evening wear containing a compact and a pocket for handkerchief, comb, or any odds and ends milady wishes to carry.

The feature was the Punchboard dance. Before the ninth dance a large board covered with red squares was brought in. From each square dangled a red or black ribbon. At the appointed time the young ladies lined up and pulled the ribbon of their choosing, drawing out cards with the names of their partners for the next dance upon it. After the dance a member of the orchestra pulled the name from the large gold square at the bottom of the board, and the young lady dancing with Robert Dilworth, Miss "Betts" Williams, '27, won a pair of hammered silver candlesticks embossed with the fraternity crest. At intermission a light lunch was served on the lawn. The evening closed successfully at one o'clock.

The informal dance held on Saturday night, was also a decided success. Miss Mary Stanton of Hood College won a pair of bronze book-ends in the Lucky Number dance, which had to be run twice when the first couple holding the number failed to respond to the call.

The party was formally closed Sunday noon at dinner. Mrs. Eva K. Smink, Professor and Mrs. I. E. Theiss, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Warfel were guests for the dances, and Professor and Mrs. C. R. Johnston were guests at dinner Sunday.

Brothers Levi Hartman, ex-'24, Howard Crawley, ex-'27, Robert Smink, '25, and Freeman Tingley, '22, attended the week-end party.

Mr. G. E. Schilling and son, Howard, of Bradford, and Mr. Harry Francisco, of Great Notch, N. J., were also guests at the week-end party.

All of the members of the class of '28 at the house, except Paul Stolz, were the victims of the '29-ers on Senior night. Johnston, Frable, Bahr, Cooley, Humphreys, Haviland, and McDowell, received the traditional bath in the creek after a strenuous battle on the porch and in the hall of the house. Pierson and Williams, resorted to different methods, spent the night in the country. Returning at five o'clock, they were captured by a band of new sophs and danced in molasses for their benefit. A good time was had by all. Stolz, who was with Pierson and Williams, managed to escape in the excitement caused by the pursuit of the two unlucky ones.

P. S.—Tench has done it!

KAPPA DELTA RHO
S. Feaster

Iota Chapter of Kappa Delta Rho takes pleasure in announcing the initiation of Paul S. Beaver, '28, into active membership.

Brothers Moyer, Grove, Spangler, Hosler, Pollock, and Houch of Zeta Chapter, Penn State, were visitors during the week.

Three sophomores removed Brother Bean's week-old moustache on Senior Night.

Brother Daubert of Milton visited the house Sunday, May 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Dine and daughter Anne were guests Sunday, May 23.

The parents and friends of "Russ" Evans visited here Sunday.

The house entertained the Erie Academy track team over the week-end.

The house team defeated the Lewisburg Independents, Saturday, May 22, by a score of 10 to 8.

The house is proud of Paul Crago who was high score man on the Frosh track team. He has scored 54 points this season.

THETA UPSILON OMEGA
V. W. McHail

Several of the alumni returned during the past week to renew acquaintances at Bucknell: "Cap" Owens, '24, of Niagara Falls, N. Y.; "Bill" Thomas, '25, of Wiconisco; "Johnny" Lenox, of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia; and "Hap" Mussina, of Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J.

"Gene" Halleran was elected master and "Doug" Anderson, marshall, for the year 1926-27, at the Tuesday meeting of May 18.

PI DELTA EPSILON

The local chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity, is responsible for the green and silver ribbons to be found on several of our embryonic journalists. The following have been pledged to the fraternity: Glenn J. Doyle, '28, Albert Brenner, '28, Vincent W. McHail, '28, Harry Pierson, '28, Clyde Roller, '27, S. Cober Braucher, '28, and J. Alonzo Phillips, '28.

The fraternity will make public the winners of the Editorial contest next week. The prizes offered for the best essays were fifteen and ten dollars.

More Demand for Silk

The silk-weaving industry in France is largely concentrated in the region around Lyons and the departments of the Isere and the Loire. Weaving rooms total 50,000, of which slightly more than half are mechanically operated. This industry has shown a rapid increase in the department of Loire during the last 15 years, 34 new silk weaving establishments having been set up and the number of looms increased by 40 per cent.

Unique Etching

A curious parchment is to be found in the library of St. John's college, Oxford. This is a black-and-white etching of the head of Charles II, all the lines consisting of minutely-written characters. At a casual glance the picture seems ordinary enough, but on closer inspection it is discovered that the artist's pencilings not only contain the characters mentioned, but that these are arranged to represent the Lord's Prayer, the Apostles' Creed, and the entire Book of Psalms.

"Semites" To Select Rooms By New Plan

Senors May keep Present Rooms; Others Who Do not Retain Rooms Must Draw Lots

The assignment of rooms at the Women's College for next year began on Tuesday, May 18, after a delay of two weeks, which was caused by the general dissatisfaction with the proposed system of assigning the rooms.

At a meeting which lasted more than two hours, the Student Government Associaton drew up a petition, signed by practically all its members, asking Dean Amelia E. Clark not to go ahead with the new system, which provided that the girls draw numbers according to class, and then choose their rooms. The chief objection to this plan was that it did not allow the girl to keep the room that she had already occupied for two or three years.

The present junior class, which had already drawn lots and chosen rooms voted to declare their choices null and void because they were not in sympathy with the plan under which they had been made. The sophomore and freshman classes then voted to refuse to draw lots until the petition should be acted upon.

Dean Clark, in a meeting with the girls the following afternoon, heard their objections and promised to meet them halfway. Her dislike for the old system, she said was because it allowed a monopoly of certain desirable rooms and if the girls could suggest a plan which would do away with this, she would be more than willing to adopt it.

The committee appointed for this purpose drew up a plan which was approved by both Miss Clark and the girls, and has now been put into operation. This plan provides that seniors wishing to keep their present rooms may do so. Those seniors desiring to change draw lots and select rooms, having the choice off all rooms except those being kept by seniors. Then the juniors whose rooms have not yet been taken and who want to keep them, may do so, and those who want to change proceed as in the case of the senios. The sophomores proceed in the same way.

To remedy the matter of handing down rooms the plan provides that in cases where a senior and an underclassman room together, the room may not be kept by the underclassman after the senior has graduated, unless nobody else chooses it.

World's Rarest Stamp

The rarest stamp in the world is the 1 cent British Guiana of 1856. Only one specimen is known to exist in this year the postal authorities in British Guiana ran short of stamps and temporarily supplied the lack by having a crude design of a ship around which they placed the necessary lettering, printed in a local office. This stamp was sold recently for $40,000.

Drum Wins Victory In Oratorical Meet

T. Burns Drum, '26, has brought enviable oratorical honors to both Bucknell and himself with his placing as first man in the "National Constitutional Contest" sectional elimination held May 17, in Washington, D. C. The three other contestants, representing the states of New Jersey, Maryland, and the District of Columbia, were respectively from Princeton, University of Maryland, and Catholic University. The Princeton man secured second rating.

There were no awards connected with this contest, but the winner makes the trip to Los Angeles, California, where he will compete in the national finals against orators of six other sections of the United States. At that time, June 24, seven prizes will be given, ranging from $300 to $2000. So every man is to get a least enough money to offset the traveling expenses incurred.

The judges for the elimination were three prominent attorneys of the country, chosen by Randolph Leigh, the organizer and promoter of the National Contest.

CAMPUS CLUB LADIES ENTERTAIN SENIORS

The lawn of President Hunt's home presented a delightful scene on the afternoon of Tuesday, May 18, when the girls of the senior class were entertained at a tea by the members of the Campus Club.

The decorations consisted of white and purple violets and over the table which held the tea and coffee urns, there was suspended a huge Japanese parasol. Mrs. Thomas A. Edwards and Mrs. Jennie Phillips presided. A victrola furnished music for the company.

The club presented its president, Mrs. Emory W. Hunt, with a beautiful corsage as a token of appreciation for her work during the past year. Another corsage was given to Miss Mary Gettys, president of the senior girls.

Let Them Know That You Saw Their "Ad" in The Bucknellian

IRISH LUCK AND EASTERN WISDOM

BY HARRIET D. FERGUSON, '29

From the lips of a dying drunkard of Singapore it came--a tale of marvelous wealth, glittering jewels, priceless pearls, heaps of gold, all in the wreck of a Spanish ship somewhere in the dim, mysterious Pacific. It spread like wildfire through harbor towns, and Singapore went crazy with the news. Every seaworthy craft put out in the search for this Eldorado, and every man capable of service tried to get passage; it was indeed a veritable exodus.

Among the multitude of wanderers and adventurers in Singapore, there were two who knew the secret—Michael O'Connell and Tsao Maksu. It was they who found the drunkard lying in a filthy gutter, a victim of the lust for gold. He told them, between fits of coughing, how he had discovered the wreck.

The Drunkard's Story

"The wind was keen that day, but I fish every day whether the wind blows or not. But that day she seemed to hate me, and, before the day was half over, I found myself landed on the largest of the jagged coral reefs to the northwest of Tahiti. However, I can never sit around and do nothing, and not even that evil wind could keep me from looking around and exploring.

"I walked and looked for a long time, and, just as I as thinking, 'what's the use, there's nothing here,' I saw the top of a mast in a little inlet in the eastern part where the water is only about twenty feet deep. I dived, and, in less time than I can say it, I had found an iron chest, opened it and I was looking upon pure, yellow gold.

"But ah! Fate was teasing me that day, for, before I could reach the top, long black coils twisted themselves around me. But thanks to my knife I lived to tell the tale. I wondered about that atoll until some native Malays picked me up. Later I made several trips to the atoll, and then I came here to Singapore where at last Old Death is going to get what he wants from me." He paused in his tale, his lips covered with blood-flecked froth, and shook convulsively as he continued his story with a description of the location of the wreck.

Mike Saves Tsao's Life

"On the east of that atoll there is a bit of a hill, and on the west a great rock pushes"——But here his voice faltered and Mike and Tsao knew they were in the presence of the dead.

Now, Tsao Maksu was the son of a nobleman of the old regime, highly educated but imbued with the spirit of wanderlust; and Mike was a happy, rollicking Irishman—as true a son of Erin as ever loved a shamrock. Two years previously a half caste Hindu had run amuck in Calcutta, and had tried to cut short Tsao's life with an axe; but a fist, backed by a brawny Irishman, had interposed, and the Hindu's body landed in the sluggish Ganges. From that time on Mike and Tsao became inseparable friends. Now, hearing the drunkard's tale, they decide d to secure this vast wealth.

Mike had two outstanding faults: drinking and talking. Separated from Tsao for a few minutes, he had become the center of a motley crowd in Jake's saloon and had told them this wild tale of wealth. Tsao, returning had stopped the story quickly before Mike had betrayed the location.

"So, Michael O'Connell, you have not yet learned that silence shows wisdom. After that narrow escape we shall have to move very cautiously."

The Start for the Treasure

For six long months they drifted about the small islands, waiting for the excitement to blow over. One dark night they stole a small sailing boat from the little harbor of Tahiti, and sailed away into the night. And so, with Mike careful and happy because an adventure was in store, and Taso equally happy because of the adventure, but also because his dreams were soon to be realized, they headed for their treasure with all speed, for the boat was provisioned only for a month's cruise.

Two days northwest from Tahiti they sighted an atoll, and on the third day they saw a little hill rise out of the gently heaving waters. Westward, a great scarred black rock rose abruptly out of the shimmering sand of the beach, and the treasure seekers knew thy had reached their journey's end.

They Discover The Ship

Mike, carefully picking his way among the jagged coral reefs, suddenly cried out to Tsao. There, among patches of white sand and clumps of poisonous purple coral, lay a ship, barnacle and coral encrusted, but a sure-enough ship. Mike, who was nothing if not impetuous, stripped himself to the skin, buckled on a belt which held a diver's knife, and while Tsao lowered a rope t othe wreck, dived down through the cool, translucent waters.

Millions and millions of fish, large and small and every color of the rainbow swam about him, as he reached the deck. Parts of the ship were gone, and huge gaps appeared here and there. Quickly Mike made his way to the cabin. Above the ruined doorway, he saw the words Santa Brigida.

Through his mind flashed memories—memories of a night in Libson, of the music of guitars, the rose perfumed air, the whirling dancers, the talking sailors, the tales of lost ships, and particularly a tale of the lost treasure ship, Santa Brigida, that had tried to return to Spain by going west across the uncharted Pacific. His lungs clamored for air, and he swam to the surface.

As he left the cabin doorway, he did not see a dark mass slump back to the cabin floor and a pair of ghoulish eyes search the upper water. A few minutes in the fresh air sufficed him and he dived again diretly to the cabin. Within, on the warped and rotten floor, was an open, ironbound chest from which gold and jewels gleamed. He stepped toward it, and as he did so a slimy tentacle encircled his leg, and he looked into bhoulish eyes. He turned to flee, but other tentacles fastened thmslvs upon him. The terrible eyes came closer.

Mike drew his knife to fight for his life. Already his lungs were crying for air. His flesh burned like fire where the tentacles had fastened themselves. Grasping his knife in his free right hand, he desperately sliced at the coils about his left arm. The keen blade severed the tough rubbery flesh, but another tentacle took its place. Another thirty seconds would exhaust his breath.

Suddenly, a shadow passed above him and the little form of Tsao appeared at the doorway. Raising a huge fish spear, Tsao thrust it squarely between the bulging eyes. The octopus jerked convulsively; its hold on Mike loosened. The latter sank uneconscious to the floor.

Grasping Mike about the waist Tsao swam to the surface and in a trice was utilizing a Japanese method of artificial respiration. For half and hour he labored. Finally Mike flickered his eyes and sat up.

"Almost went to meet my grandmother that time, didn't I?" he muttered.

"Yes, Mike, and your impetuosity came near to transporting you beyond the joys of wealth. Why don't you use more thought, and consider before you jump into things? Now if you had—"

"Ah, you are right Tsao," interrupted Mike." But if I hadn't gone down there and baited that old sea horse for you to kill, we might both be in "glory" now and the chest still protected by that octopus."

They Get The Treasure

"Mike, Mike, your logic is about as backward as you are forward. However, let's not argue. I'll go down this time and put the rope on the chest."

"how got the chest to the deck of their boat. There, before their eyes, gleamed the treasure of the Santa Brigida—glittering jewels, gleaming heaps of gold, pearls of purest lustre—an untold fortune.

Three days later a certain Malay agent of Tahiti was agreeably surprised by a grinning Irishman and a smiling Jap, who explained that they wished to compensate him for the unpremeditated loan ofhi s boat. Later, in Honolulu, the firm of O'Connell and Maksu, dealers in jewelry, was established, and later still a happy cottage in Ireland, and a family in Tokio each rejoiced over the return of a long lost son. The thrill of adventure over, East and West settled down in harmony, the one satisfied with the thought that Irish luck can't be beaten and the other with the meditation on the greatness and sureness of eastern wishom and tact.

MORMONS TO DISCONTINUE BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY

Brigham Young University, of Utah, a college of the Mormons or "Latter Day Saints," is to be discontinued at the end of this college year. It was founded in 1877. Brigham Young himself was interested in the success of his namesake college and endowed it with 10,000 acres of fertile land. The reason given for the discontinuance of the university is that the Mormon church wishes to concentrate its energy and finances for the support of its fifty-nine theological seminaries.

—The New Student.

The committee to which the honor system at Harvard was referred has unanimously rejected it.

Just a Little Smile

TOOFUS

"Toofus," says Post Trader, "I hear you were a witness in the case of Chief Cut plug against Chief Asparagus Tip."

"Yes."

"What you know about the case?"

"Nothing."

"Then why were you on the stand three days?"

"Under the rules of law," say Toofus, "it took three days to bring that out."

Not Friends

Barbara had been away visiting a near-by city.

Soon after her return I met her on the street, and stopping, said to her:

"Well, honey, I suppose that you and your mamma had a lovely visit with your friends?"

"They wasn't our friends," promptly replied Barbara, "they was our relatives."—New York Sun.

Their Object

"What is the idea of that procession just going by?" asked a recently arrived guest.

"Aw, it is composed of twenty-year-old girls going to the office of the Plaindealer to persuade the editor to quit publishing his column of thirty-year-ago items," replied the landlord of the Petunia tavern.

The Reason

"Why did the boss fire you?"

"Well, you know the boss is one of these fellows who stand around and watch other people work.

"Well, people began to take me for the boss."

IN THE FIELD

Young Sport—Do you think I can become a good golfer?

Old Sport—Sure—if you aim to be.

Interference

The radio's erratic,
And yet it's not all wrong.
For life is full of "static"
That serves to spoil the song.

Equal

"Your cousin refused to recognize me in the grocer's last night. Thinks I'm not his equal, I suppose."

"Ridiculous! Of course you are. Why, he is nothing but a conceited idiot!"—Progressive Grocer.

Those Hopeful Friends

"My wife's friends all told her I would not make a good husband. But we have been married 20 years now without a cloud on our horizon."

"And what do they say to that?"

"Say it can't last."

No Mystery

Grocery Clerk—I wonder where all the bugs in this store go in winter?

Boy Helper—Search me.—The Progressive Grocer.

Due for a Stepmother

"Better keep away from that stage door, Freddie."

"But I am hoping to marry Dottie."

"So's your old man."

HE DROVE A CAR

She—Thirty days mean a month don't they?

He—Yes—when they don't mean a jail.

Typically American Is "Copy--1926"

By Theodora Rogers, '28

"Copy-1926" is a collection of short stories, poems, essays, and one act play that does genuine credit to the writers of America. It has been compiled from the work of the Writers' Club of Columbia University. Each piece has appeared in one of the well known magazines and the completed voluume is suited to all types of the reading public.

The themes and scenes presented in the fifteen stories are varied. All are alike, however, in that they contain the essence of pure tragedy--the kind of tragedy that is enacted all about us every day. For example, Helen Ormslee's "Something in View," is the story of an old actor's "attempt to play the game" without letting the world know that h eis a failure. The world is full of such "Pop Dunstanles," and most of us are so taken up with the rush of ife that we have no time in which to encourage others.

"Tropical Heat and White Men," by Isa Glenn, is the story of a white man's crash under the scorching rays of Manila's sun. It is almost identical with Miss Glenn's novel "Heat," both in setting and in theme.

The story most abounding in human interest is Margharite Fisher McLean's "West of Romance." It is the story of a bride's finding of romance in the minute Montana town to which her husband took her. It is the sort of situation in which the best of us find ourseves at various times during our lives. Sally, as the young wife is named, can teach us many things not only of romance but also of adaptability.

The essays range from the realm of the house hunter in New York to the majestic tranquility of Fugiyama. Especially noteworthy amongst them is the "Merchant of Dreams," by Abbie Graham. It is the grateful tribute of a girl whose desolate Texas ranch life had been brightened by the sympathy of Grace Dodge.

The group of poems gives ample proof of the fact that American verse is not becoming radical. "Dirt and Deity," by Louis Ginsburg, is typical of the collection in its form and material:

"If gutter-puddles after rain
Can always look on high;
And even with a floor of mud
San have a roof of sky;
I never wonder any more
How man, a pool of blue,
Can at the bottom gather mire
And mirror Heaven, too!

two plays, "Nightshade" and "White Hands" should be of special interest to our class in play writing. Both are one act plays and are the crystallizztion of ideas.

Having lived in Alabama, Emory Peebles Morrow knew the type of people with whom she was dealing in "White Hands." The illiterate coldness is well portrayed in the person of Steve Murry. Almost as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is said to have been the final thrust into the Civil War, so "White Hands" should give weight to the attempted legislation for the upbuilding of the educational system in the southern mountain area of the United States.

Taken as a whole, "Copy-1926" is thoroughly American in its point of view. Perhaps in this day writers should be developing a more international outlook. However, the compositions in the collection are deserving of double honors they have received in being published by one or another of the leading magazines and by being selected by so able a literary judge as Dr. Blanche Colton Williams.

The student public brings it to our attention tha a new editorial staff should be bursting with radical or semi-radical editorials which will arouse the student body to some drastic action. All this is partly true, and when the bustle of change is over and the new staff has time for other than routine work there will be results along the lines of criticism.

But there are many things about us that seem to be lacking in common sense, of which the following theme from one of our English courses brings to light a number. It is a fictitious but very plausible convrsation between two Bucknellians.

CRABBING

"Well, college is a great life if you don't weaken."

"Yes, but I guess I must be beginning to weaken. It's either that or the fact that I just love to crab."

"All right let'er ride; what's the matter with you now? Have you been up again before the Senior Council and been paddled or has the fraternity had another lluzing party?"

"No, it's neither. What gets under my skin is the fact that every time I go to chapel I am positively seized with a pain as soon as the speaker of the day starts to spout. It's not that I don't like the speaker, but I'll be darned if I can swallow the regular line of stuff that they continually try to put over. If they don't burst forth with it in the body of their speech, they always blossom forth with it at the finish as a kind of spiritual boomerang which always falls far short of reaching God, but which always returns to have a hack at you as you sit there in chapel. It usually goes something like this: 'Now let us unite in prayer. Dear God, please help us to appreciate fully all of our new liberties which we find in college. Help us to make all of the many decisions that we are daily called upon to make, wisely, Amen.' It's certainly a wonder they don't wind up with what they really mean, 'God keep us from Sunbury, Milton, or any other place where we may possibly spend a few pleasant hours!'"

"It's easy enough to see that you are crabbing. Just what is your point?"

"My point is this. If the Dean wants to speak about our liberties for Heaven's sake let him give us a few before he talks about them.

"The other night my roommate went to a private dance in the tabooed region of Sunbury. To do this he had to go without his dinner in order to catch the six-eleven. Why? Because the President of our beloved Alma Mater used his influence to have the eight o'clock train dropped because so many of the college boys went to the wilds of Sunbury upon it. He got back from the dance which broke up at eleven-thirty at six o'clock in the morning. Why? Because the President had it fixed so that the Buffalo express which used to stop at Montandon now makes no stop there. You would almost think that if he did not want the boys in Sunbury he would at least have left them a train upon which to gain egress from the bad city during the dark and dangerous hours of the night.

"Another example. I had my mind all made up. You see part of the prayer had worked. I had made up my mind. I had decided to take Public Speaking and when I went in to register the Dean said that he knew that I would much sooner take Greek. Of course I acquiesced and mentally gave myself a couple of kicks for being so easily imposed upon. But what else could a fellow do? Well so long, Jim, I'll probably be in a better humor tomorrow if I don't have a headache from lack of sleep."

of sixteen girls. "Foots, Parks and Piffle," written by Kenneth Slifer, '26, was presented by the class in Amateur Dramtics. Gilbert McCune, '27, very ably took the part of Hiram W. Bailey, the hardware king. Caryl Dutton, '27, was his daughter, and Gordon Goolyear, '27, was the poet, who wrote odes to the public park. At 7:45 came the crowning of the May queen. The program ended with a dance, "Moments Musical", by Sarah Meyers, '28, who was presented with a bauquet of roses.

The campus was lighted by Japanese lanterns swung between the trees. A rustic bridge across the Run added greatly to the beauty of the scene. Hand painted programs and Japanese letter openers, as favors, completed the effect.

The success of the lawn party was made possible through the splendid cooperation of members of the faculty and the various committees. The plays were directed by Professor William H. Coleman, the dances by Mrs. James P. Whyte, the music by Paul K. Stolz and Lewis Kesler, and the campus arrangement by Professor Frank E. Burpee. Especial credit is due Isabelle Smith, '26, who originated the idea and supervised all the work.

The committees were:

Chairman, Isabelle M. Smith.

Decoration: Louise Matthews, Martha Morrow, Blanche Thompson, Anne Outwater, Ethel Hurst, Mary Wagner, and Evelyn Pauling.

Hospitality: Anne Van Dine, Anne Stephens, Grace Pheifer, Marjorie Bell, Arlene Kimball, Margaret Rhodes, Edith Wonner, and Helen McElravy.

Supper Committee: Inez Robinson, Fern MacNeal, Kathryn Gaventa, Ruth Bray, and Jesse Fiebling

Entertainment: Ruth Marion, Eleanor Dakin, Miriam Burns, Doris Worrell, Anne Everitt, and Helen Steinhilper.

WOMEN'S COLLEGE OBSERVES SENIOR NIGHT IN VESPERS

Senior Night was observed last Sunday evening in the Vesper services at the "Sem."

In the morning each senior girl received a carnation with a small tag attached, on which were written her name and the inscription from "Y. W."

The seniors were in entire charge of the service. Katherine Frederick presided, Hannah Metcalf sang a solo, Mary Gettys gave an interesting talk on "How College Helps Develop Character," and Leha Bower gave a short prayer.

Frosh Beats Sophs In 12-Inning Battle

In an exciting twelve inning battle the freshmen defeated the sophomores in their annual baseball game on Monday, May 24, by the score of 6-7. The freshmen fought an uphill battle throughout the game, but a two-run rally in the ninth inning after two were out tied the score, and two additional counters in the twelfth gave them the decision.

The game was a free-hitting and loosely played affair. The frosh touched Beasor for twelve hits, while August and Halicki yielded nine blows between them. Nine bases on balls, issued by August during his five-inning stay on the mound, accounted for several of the sophomore tallies, but the six errors committed by the second year men evened the score of unearned runs. A single by Blazes, August's three-base drive, and an error gave the yearlings the deciding runs in the twelfth.

The game was featured by the home runs of Jones and Blazes, and the brilliant stops made by Marley and Buck. The score:

BUCKNELL SPORTING EVENTS

Ursinus Batsmen Fall Before Bisons

Pitcher "Mel" Derk, fresh from a victory over Penn at Philadelphia, brought his Ursinus team-mates to Lewisburg last Friday afternoon and received a merciless bombardment of hits from a Bison ball team, well possessed with the mood for slamming balls about Memorial Stadium. Bucknell won 13-0.

Coach "Walt" Blair and his men are still wondering what spell Derk cast upon Penn batters, for to them a Derk-pitched-ball looked as big as a basketball. Anyway, after six innings of ball-chasing Derk thought the showers a cooler propositon. By agreement, the game ended at the end of the next inning.

"Tom" Murphy himself had a great afternoon, striking out ten batters and holding the visitors to five hits. Only in the second inning was "Tom" in trouble. With the bags loaded and only one out, "Tom" settled down and with good support put out the side without a run.

Neal Blaisdell was the hitting star of the game. The Honolulu lad gathered a two-bagger in the third ad a home run in the fourth. Tuck's homer, also in the fourth, cleared the bases. His was one of the longest hits this season. First-baseman Moyer, was the only member of the Ursinus team to hit the ball consistently. His record was perfect, three hits out of three times at bat. Bucknell Shuts Out Juniata Netmen

Bucknell easily defeated Juniata in tennis on Friday, May 21, winning the match to the tune of 6-0. This win is much more impressive when we consider the fact that Bucknell played without the services of three of her best stars. Rudisill and McCaskey, first and second men respectively were absent as they were playing in an intercollegiate tennis tournament elsewhere, while Ballentine, third ranking man, was confined to his bed on account of illness.

The games were for the most part rather slow and uninteresting. Bucknell completely outplayed her rivals at every stage of the game, time and again catching Juniata men flat-footed with brilliant placements. Juniata play was reserved, to say the least. They declined to adopt the smashing tactics at times indulged in by Bucknell.

The scores of the match are as follows:

Singles

Horter, Bucknell, defeated Jones, Juniata, 6-4; 6-1.

Frost, Bucknell, defeated Ellis, Juniata, 6-0; 6-1.

Riesmeyer, Bucknell, defeated Henry, Juniata, 2-6; 6-2; 6-4.

R. Zortman, Bucknell, defeated Harley, Juniata, 6-2; 10-12; 6-2.

Doubles

Frost and Horter, Bucknell, defeated Jones and Henry, Juniata, 6-2; 7-5.

Riesmeyer and R. Zortman, Bucknell, defeated Ellis and Harley, Juniata, 6-3; 6-1.

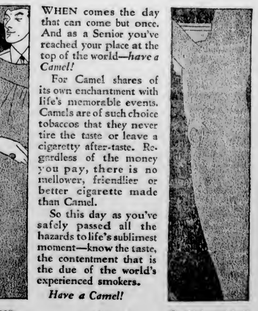
When comes that day of days—and suddenly you know you're a Senior, at the top of the world —have a Camel!

WHEN comes the day that can come but once. And as a Senior you've reached your place at the top of the world—have a Camel!

For Camel shares of its own enchantment with life's memorable events. Camels are of such choice tobaccos that they never tire the taste or leave a cigaretty after-taste. Regardless of the money you pay, there is no mellower, friendlier or better cigarette made than Camel.

So this day as you've safely passed all the hazards to life's sublimest moment—know the taste, the contentment that is the due of the world's experienced smokers.

Have a Camel!



No other cigarette in the world is like Camels. Camels contain the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos. The Camel blend is the triumph of expert blenders. Even the Camel cigarette paper is the finest—made especially in France. Into this one brand of cigarettes is concentrated the experience and skill of the largest tobacco organization in the world.

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

"Peg" Rhoades, '28, fainted in the Chemical Laboratory, Wednesday, May 19.

* * * *

Mrs. E. W. Fox, of Norristown, Pa., visited her daughter Mildred on May 15 and 16.

* * * *

A. W. Bihl, '27, and Anthony Wilbach, '26, spent the week-end of May 15 with the folks in Harrisburg.

* * * *

Mrs. W. W. Wilcox sang two very lovely selections in chapel in Commencement Hall Tuesday morning, May 18.

* * * *

J. D. Johnson, '27, and "High" Hulick, '27, made a business trip to Wilkes-Barre dduring the week-end of May 15.

* * * *

Miss Marion Hughes, of Williamstown, Pa., was the guest of her sister "Kitty" Hughes, '28, during the week-end of May 21.

* * * *

Among the out of town guests, that the Kappa Sigmas were expecting for the Lawn Party last week-end were Carl Kivler, Bernice Lewis, and A. R. Lewis.

* * * *

Members of the sociology classes were caught in the heavy downpour on the way back from their trip to the "Industrial Home for Women," at Muncy, Wednesday, May 19.

* * * *

"Jimmy" Hughes, '28, "Gil" Moyer, '29, and "Kim" Kimball, '29, attended the annual Minstrel Dance at Bellefonte Academy, on Friday night. Noble and his orchestra furnished the music for the dance.

* * * *

"Jo" Roberts, '29, was happy to have her mother visit her during the week-end of May 16. Mrs. Roberts came to the Alpha Chi Omega tea given in the fraternity suite in Wolfe house on Saturday afternoon.

* * * *

Vera Elster, '26, who is in the Mary M. Packer Hospital at Sunbury, is expecting to return to college for Commencement. Vera was operated upon for peritonitis of the right lung, and is progressing successfully.

* * * *

Memories of last year were brought to mind by the actions of "Red" MacAnulty, ex-'27, who was visiting his Kappa Sigma fraternity brothers, and Elmer Dietz, '27. These two comedians were reacting some of the stunts that made them so popular during their freshman and sophomore years.

* * * *

"Turn back, oh Time in thy flight, and make me a boy again just for tonight." Don Rigg, '26, and "Tiger" Sheddan, '26, made a trip to Williamsport in Tiger's univer. While they were there they satisfied their juvenile instincts by taking in Barnum and Bailey's World Renowned Circus.

Miss Martin tried to prove her worth as an animal trainer last week when she attempted to force "T Bone" out of the library. However the dog got the best of the argument. One of the sons of the west then came to the rescue and succeeded in dragging the offending animal out into the wide open spaces of the quadrangle.

* * * *

Albert Abbott, '29, was agreeably surprised by a visit of his father, Judge A. Abbott of Nanticoke, Pa., last Sunday, May 23.

Several of the fight fans of the school went up to see the pride of the coal country, "Pete" Latzo, defeat "Micky" Walker for the welterweight championship on Thursday evening, May 20.

* * * *

Harlan Downer, '29, and William L. Hawkins, '29, took their usually weekly hike on Sunday, May 16, when they hiked to Williamsport. Harlan holds the college record for hiking. He has hiked to Western Maryland college where his brother is a student and has made several trips to his home in Downer, N. J.. During his Christmas vacation Harlan hiked to Canada, visiting Ontario and Ottawa.

Anne Griffith, '29, spent the week-end of May 14 visiting in Harrisburg.

* * * *

Russel Mayer, '27, entertained his brother over the week-end of May 14.

* * * *

Barbara Reifsnyder, '28, returned May 19 to her home in Norristown to spend a few days.

* * * *

Blanche Thompson, '27, and Veta Davis, '27, spent a recent week-end in hightstown, N. J.

* * * *

The mother of "Jo" Roberts, '29, visited her daughter from Friday, May 14, to Tuesday, May 19.

* * * *

Thomas I. Young, '27, spent the week-end of May 15 at the home of Robert N. Tate, '29, at Allenwood, Pa.

* * * *

Mrs. Ross Jones, of Coudersport, Penna., visited her daughter, Marjorie Jones, '2, during the week-end of May 15-17.

* * * *

Virginia Zortman, '26, has secured a position as teacher of home economics in the high school at Cape May, New Jersey.

"Peg" Dye, '28, entertained at dinner, Edith Freed, '27; Kitty Hughes, '28; "Hoots" and Ethel Mathews, '29, and '28 respectively, on May 19.

WOMEN MEMBERS OF FACULTY ENJOY PICNIC AT RED ROCK

Several women members of the faculty enjoyed a picnic lunch at Red Rock, on the evening of Monday, May 17. Dean Clark and her mother, Mrs. Beatty, Miss Brakeman, Mrs. Phillips and Miss Clush. A regular steak dinner was prepared in real backwoods style over an open fire and entertainment was furnished by Miss Clush, who gave an exhibition of marksmanship with the olive bottles as targets.

Land Given Prince's Name

The name "Rupert's Land" formerly was applied somewhat loosely to the Canadian Northwest, and more especially to the land surrounding Hudson bay. This extensive region, the boundaries of which were not determined until the dominion was organized in 1867, was named in honor of Prince Rupert, the first governor of the Hudson's Bay company. This territory was granted to the company by Charles II of England and was only surrendered by the company in 1869, when the title was transferred to Great Britain. In 1870 title was formally transferred to the new Dominion of Canada. As a part of Canada the Northwest was originally called "Rupert's Land" and the Northwest territory.

Food Preservation

The Canning Trade says that the first canning in the state of Maryland was apparently done by Thomas Kensett some time between 1820 and 1830. There is definite evidence that he canned oysters in Baltimore city in 1841, which is possibly the earliest definite date. Previous to this William Underwood is supposed to have preserved foods in glass jars at Boston about 1820. These two men are credited with having brought the science of canning to America from France and England, and it does not seem possible to advise definitely the exact dates on which they first produced canned food. Probably canned oysters were the first things of the strictly canned food line, because preserving in bottles, jars and otherwise is not canning.—Washington Star.

Witch Doctors Honored

In East Africa the witch doctor is an honored personage. He does a thriving and lucrative business in charms, astrological readings and written incantations. The interesting point is that it is admitted that from such witch doctors as thrive there civilization in the past derived priceless information with regard to certain curative drugs and animal and vegetable poisons. Results of the ministerings of these witch doctors demonstrated poisons particularly.

Gold From Jewelry Dust

As a piece of jewelry is polished on a rapidly rotating buffer it throws off "dust" that becomes imbedded in the covering of the buffing wheels. These covers are washed from time to time and the gold dust salvaged by the use of acid. The dust surrounding the machines also is chemically treated. This reclaiming process by the various establishments over the country saves many thousands of dollars. One firm alone in a midwestern city is said to save more than $6,000 annually in this way.

Intuition Defined

Intuition is applied to direct or immediate knowing, whether mystical, perceptional, intellectual or moral, and is, in general, contrasted with speculative, reflective or mediate knowing.

"Matty" Tells How He Played The Game

Always Gave Particular Notice To Stance New Batter Took And How He Held Bat

The late "Christy" Mathewson, ex-'03, who, as a pitcher for the New York Giants, made a record that has never been excelled, explained in an issue of "Pearson's Magazine" how he outguessed the batter. In a recent issue the Bucknellian printed a part of Mathewson's story. In the following additional extract from that interesting article, "Christy" talks about the pitching qualities that make a pitcher great.

The greatest strength of a pitcher, aside from his control, is what the players call his "mixture." That means no more nor less than what the word implies—his variety of fast and slow balls, his serving of this or that curve. What we call the "change of pace," the delivering of a fast and then a slow ball with the same preliminary motions, and the mixing of a high fast ball and a slow curve, are the successful pitcher's best assets, but it must be remembered that all the time the bombardment is going on the pitcher is in a duel of wits with the man up there at the plate, and that there is as much mixture of brain flashes as there is of delivery. It isn't the easiest thing in the world to explain to the layman, but it amounts to about this: A pitcher can throw the same ball three times in a row to a nimble-witted batsman and still be "mixing 'em up," paradoxical as it may seem. To illustrate, Cy Seymour, when he was with Cincinnati, struck out three times in one game I pitched in 1905. Cy was a mighty batsman in those days, one of the best ever, and only the other day he told me that he would never forget striking out three times in one game. I fooled him by constantly giving him the same slow curve, knowing that he, would be expecting a fast ball for a change. The change never came. Had I literally "mixed 'em," Cy would have been in line for a mighty hit, perhaps, but while he was at the plate trying to outguess me, I was fortunate enough to outguess him as above indicated.

Watch a New Batter Closely

Lovers of baseball have often asked me how I deal with a batsman whom I have never faced and about whose batting ability I know nothing. Every seasoned pitcher has been called on often enough to meet batters he never saw before, and in such pinches he must rely largely on luck, though there is a way to get some line on new opponents. When I am facing a new batsman for the first time, I pay particular attention to two things—the position he assumes at the plate and the way he holds his bat. If, for instance, he holds his bat well up toward the middle, as Keeler always held his, there isn't much use of sending him speed. Batters of that type are always ready for speed and they can meet the fastest ball a man ever threw. A low curve on the inside will do for a starter, and if such a batter goes after it and fails to connect, you have his "number." Even if he does hit it he can't send it far. The batter who stands well back from the plate with a long bat and a grip near the end is the batter who can send a low curve into the southeast quarter of the adjoining section.

Wagner Could Hit Anything

Some batters, a few of the chosen, have no weakness that the most studious pitcher can detect. Men like Hans Wagner and Lajoie don't care much what the opposing pitcher has to offer. They are in the same class to-day, that Anson and Brouthers were gracing years ago. Big, rangy fellows, they wield large, long bats as easily as they wield a toothpick after the game is over. They stand well back from the plate, as a rule, and if you put the ball on the inside they are ready for it. If you keep it on the outside, they simply reach out and cuff it. I have pitched against Hans Wagner for many years, and though I have been fortunate enough to fool him many times I always charge those he can hit anything I can pitch to him, and hit it into the middle of next week. There is no such thing as outguessing a batter of the Wagner type, and I am glad there aren't many of them.

Base Runners Bother Pitchers

The real test of a pitcher's ability arrives when the opposing team gets men on bases. His responsibility is increased while his freedom of pitching motion is restricted. He must watch the base runner constantly and at the same time must deliver the ball to the batter with the least possible swing of the arm. In other words he can't "wind up." Some pitchers find it difficult to get as much speed, curve or accuracy with the short arm motion as they do with the usual swing. This affects some pitchers mentally, as the curtailment of physical effort prevents them from concentrating their minds on the man at the bat. At the same time the base runners, and frequently the coaches, are constantly trying to annoy them. To protect himself the pitcher must try and detect some action on the part of the base runner which will indicate when he is going to attempt to steal the next base. In this he is materially assisted by the catcher. Once the pitcher or the catcher discovers when the runner is going to start the remedy is simple. Frequent throws to the base will prevent the runner from getting too much of a lead, and when he does start, the ball is pitched out of reach of the batter so that the catcher can have a clear throw to second.

While the pitcher is watching the base runner he knows that the base runner is also watching him, in an effort to ascertain whether the ball is to be delivered to the plate or to the base. Therefore, no preliminary movement on the part of the pitcher must betray his intentions.

Some Pitchers Betray Themselves

George Van Haltren, the famous base runner of his day, once told me that he could tell to a certainty when certain pitchers were going to deliver the ball to the batter. This enabled him to get a running start and many times the poor catcher was blamed for allowing a stolen base, when in fact the pitcher was unconsciously at fault. John McGraw, manager of the Giants, spends several weeks each season in teaching his young pitchers to overcome that kind of a weakness. For instance, he once discovered that several of the star base runners were stealing on Louis Drucke because he had a peculiar lift to his heel just before he delivered the ball to the plate. It took some time to cure him of the habit, but he finally overcame it.

On the other hand, certain base runners also give advance notice of their intentions. Men like Bescher, of Cincinnati, Chance, of Chicago, and Murray of New York, never gave the pitcher any inkling as to when they are to start. They take the same lead off the base and cavort up and down the base line in the same manner, whether they are going to steal or wait. But there are others who disclose their thieving intentions through anxiety to get a lead. Such men are often caught napping at first.

Learn To Be A Gentleman

The tremendous popularity of the national game—its popularity is growing every year—means that in the years to come there will be hundreds of baseball stars where there are dozens now. Every healthy boy has it in him to become a good ball player, though he may never care to follow the pastime professionally. Being a professional player myself, I may be overfond of the game to which I owe so much, but I can think of many other callings and many other pastimes that a boy might better shun. Baseball is always played out in the sunshine, where the air is pure and the grass is green, and there is something about the game, or at least I have always found it so, which teaches one how to win or lose as a gentleman should, and that is a very fine thing to learn.

Sweden Birthplace of Early American Artist

Gustavus Hesselius has been called "the first painter of recognized merit known to have practiced his art in this country," but he was not an American by birth. He was born in Folkarna, Sweden, in the province of Delecarlia, in 1682. He came to America in 1711, to the Swedish colony on the Delaware river, landing at Christina—now Wilmington, Delaware. He soon went to Philadelphia, where he made his home and where he died May 25, 1755.

On September 5, 1721, Hesselius received the first public art commission known to have been given in this country, "to draw ye history of our Blessed Saviour and ye twelve apostles at ye last supper" for the altar of St. Barnabas' church in Queen Anne parish, Maryland. The contract was fulfilled, but the church was destroyed in 1778 and the painting with it. A number of portraits by him survive, however, and are said to be "of decided merit."

Hesselius' son John, born in Philadelphia in 1728, was also a portrait painter, and was the inventor of Charles Willson Peale, who painted the earliest original portrait of General Washington which exists.

Flavor of Food Not Affected by Years

Not many people have eaten, and enjoyed, a cake fifty years old, as was the case at a golden wedding banquet at Hollywood, but the record for ancient fare probably belongs to the Brussels nuttinary who a few years ago invited some of his colleagues to a remarkable feast.

The bread at the Brussels banquet was made from wheat found in one of the Pyramids, believed to have been there three thousand years, and it was buttered with butter made in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

Wine was served centuries old, recovered from a vault in Corinth, and included in the menu were apples 1,800 years old, discovered among the ruins of Pompeii.

A few years ago some members of the Zoological society of Ireland sampled eggs brought from China fifty years previously, which they declared to be quite good and of a delicate flavor—In parts.

High Tide at Panama

While it is contrary to the usual idea, there is really no difference in the main level of the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, yet the difference in the tides at Panama is about 18 feet. This is due to the shape of the Bay of Panama. As the tide sweeps from the Pacific into this bay it meets a funnel-shaped shore line, which gradually contracts as the tide travels landward. The result is that the tide rises higher and higher until it reaches a maximum of 10 feet above the average sea level. When it flows out of the bay it reaches a point ten feet below the average sea level, thus giving a tidal fluctuation of 20 feet. This same rise of an excessive tide may also be observed at the Bay of Fundy. On the Atlantic at the Zone the tidal fluctuation is only two feet. —Adventure Magazine.

Among Earliest Writings

Runes are the earliest written characters used by the Teutonic races of Europe. They are formed principally of straight lines, and are found in inscriptions on weapons, ornaments, implements and memorial stones in various parts of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, and to some extent in England. The origin of the runes, as well as the date of their invention, is unknown, but it is believed they were derived from the Latin alphabet and that they were used as early as the Third century. The Norsemen believed Odin, chief of the gods, first scratched them on his spear. Thus runes were identified with heathen worship. The runes were retained in Scandinavia far longer than in any other region.—Kansas City Star.

WHAT THE COLLEGES ARE DOING

Here's A New Way To Learn How To Do The Charleston

Advice to those desiring to learn the Charleston as reported by the "Temple University Weekly," is as follows:

Take two telegraph poles and construct a ladder with them. Walk to the top of the ladder with a monkey wrench in one hand and a victrola record in the other. Select a live wire and grasp it firmly with the other. What follows will be as good as the Charleston if not better.

STONE SAILS TO BE RESTORED

Preparations are being made by students of history and archaeogy to reconstruct the famous stone sails located on the hillside above the Church of the Virgin of Guadalupe near Mexico City. These sails were taken don some years ago and nothing has been done to restore them to their former place and condition.

The sails are supposed to have been erected by a sailor who promised them to the Virgin of Guadalupe in case he should ever be saved from a shipwreck.

COLLEGE HEAD TAKES PART IN SHIRT-TAIL PROMENADE

Oklahoma A. and M. College students recently celebrated with a monster shirt-tail parade through the streets of Stillwater. At the head of the procession, bareheaded and shirt-tail aflap in the breeze, marched President Knapp, jubilant as the most abandoned Freshman.

Professor Frank C. K. Kleebeyer, head of the department of Physical Education at University of California, says: "Men are generally well proportioned, graceful, erect and well-muscled. Far too often women are lopsided or round-shouldered. But for all their gaudy dress, artificial beauty aids, unnecessary attention to their personal appearance, college co-eds are not as attractive as the plainly dressed man."

Because a college is not able to draw into the profession of study the men it needs, and because it seems to lack any proper power of experimentation, Dr. Alexander Meikeljohn, in his article on "Remaking the College," distinctly explains that America needs a new liberal college where a group of men may be given a favorable opportunity for the study and practice of liberal teaching.

Active Student University To Be Held In Tobacco Barn

In the old tobacco barn at the farm of George Pratt Jr., in Bridgewater, Conn., a Student University will explore the possibilities of informal education this summer. Repudiating one popular ideal of mass education which has brought about factory standardization in our colleges and encouraged textbook teaching, the Student University will serve only the "overwhelming minority" of students who think, and who enjoy the frontiers of knowledge more than the worn paths of the text and lecture hall.

The Student University will open June 19. There will be a series of ten day conferences lasting until September 14. The first conference, on Journalism, from June 19 to 26, will be led by Douglas Haskell, editor of The New Student. Then a conference on Psychology and Religion, from June 26 to July 5, led by Dr. Goodwin B. Watson of Teachers College, Columbia University. Ralph P. Bridgman of Union Theological Seminary will lead a conference on Education, July 7 to 17. Dr. Scott Buchanan of City College, New York, and Peoples Institute, will lead a conference on the subject of Our Scientific Faiths. Then follows a conference based on Whitehead's "Science and the Modern World," to be held by Professor E. C. Lindeman of the New York School of Social Work. For the next three weeks, August 19 to September 3, we will hold a unique Symposium. It will be an experiment in group thinking. The last conference, on the Drama from September 4 to 14, will be led by Mrs. H. R. Mussey, of Wellesley.

The old tobacco barn which is to serve as the main academic building for the Student University has been remodelled and equipped not with lecture halls and laboratories, but with a great stone fire place, a hospitable living room with wide shelves for books, an upstairs dormitory for women, and a men's dormitory below. George Pratt's farm at Bridgewater is hidden among the foothills of the Berkshires, and offers a combination of seclusion and outdoor life most stimulating for clear thinking.

Each conference is limited to twenty-five students. For a few students who might not otherwise be able to come, scholarships are available, but the cost of each conference will be so moderate that almost any undergraduate can afford to attend. While there will be no entrance examination, the conference will seek only those likely to make a real contribution to the discussion.

Full information may be had from the secretary, F. L. Youtz, National Student Forum, 2929 Broadway, New York.

VERSATILE DEBATERS TRY SOMETHING NEW

Arizona University boasts of three unusual, as well as ambitious, debaters, who have started out on what is possibly the most ambitious tour yet attempted by college orators. On March 30, 31, they were to have debated the University of Porto Rico team in two debates,—one in Spanish, the other in English. On the way to and from Porto Rico the debaters were to have met twenty-four college teams in the middle West, South and East. They have prepared themselves to speak authoratatively on four topics: Prohibition, The League of Nations, Restriction of Liberty and the Child Labor Amendment.

Pickens became the centre of a controversy when he was quoted as subscribing to the theory of evolution. Furman University is owned and controlled by the Baptists of South Carolina.

The State Council of Education today extended to the Cedar Crest College for Women, Allentown, full collegiate status. Dr. William F. Miss Von Neida Improving Slowly

Martha Von Neida, '29, who was severely burned when her tarlan mock-initiation costume ignited from a lighted candle on Wednesday afternoon, May 12, is recovering at the Women's College Infirmary.

Miss Von Neida sustained severe burns about the back and arms. Her back is healing nicely, but the burns upon her arms, near the elbows, are deep and very painful. She also suffered greatly from shock. Fortunately her face and neck were unharmed. Throughout a trying period "Martie" has been remarkable for her patience and courage.

While she was assisting pledge sisters to blacken their faces for Phi Mu mock-initiation, Miss Von Neida's hair, hanging down in curls, caught fire. She extinguished the fire by crushing her curls between her hands, (but not before her flimsy dress had ignited). Wrapped in flames, Miss Von Neida dashed from New Building, despite efforts to stop her.

Kathryn Houtz, '27, who was at "Martie's" heels, tumbled down the steps and rolled with her on the ground, striving to extinguish the flames with her hands and heavy coat. With the aid of J. L. Cornely, '26, and Stewart Rankin, '26, who were playing tennis nearby, they succeeded in beating out the fire.

The injured girl was carried to the infirmary and placed under the care of Miss Ruhl. The interest of the entire university has been with the plucky freshman, and all extend to her wishes for a speedy recovery.

Genius Is Humanity

Great artists are said to reveal us to ourselves. But how could this be possible, unless there were identity of nature between their imagination and ours, and unless the difference were only one of quantity. It were better to change "poeta nascitur" into "homo nascitur poeta"; some men are born great poets, some small. The cult of the genius with all its attendant superstitions has arisen from this quantitative difference having been taken as a difference of quality. It has been forgotten that genius is not something that has fallen from heaven, but humanity itself.—Croce.

MISS OLIVE DOUGLASS DINES HOME EC GIRLS

The students of home economics were entertained at cards and dinner by Miss Olive Douglass, head of the department on Wednesday, May 19.

"Sis" Reed, '27, won first prize at bridge, and "Kitty" Zierdt, '26, won the booby prize.

At six o'clock the party adjourned to the home economics laboratory. The tables were beautifully decorated in pink and white, with a centerpiece of pink sweet peas, and a corsage of sweet peas and lillies of the valley at each place.

The menu consisted of fruit cocktail, chicken salad, creamed potatoes, tomatoes, new radiahes, rolls, strawberry shortcake, coffee, candy, and nuts.

Mrsr. George A. Irland was a guest.

Father—"Why is it that you are always at the bottom of your class?"

Student—"It doesn't make and difference, Wad, they teach the same thing at both ends."

L'AGENDA STAFF HAS BIG BANQUET

by a quotation from the dedicatory paragraph of the yearbook itself, and was asked to tell about L'Agenda from the point of view of a man to whom the book is dedicated. Professor Burpee spoke of the value of extra-curricular activities in developing students, and said that he considered work such as that done in the publication of L'Agenda as one of the most valuable of all these activities. He commended the 1927 yearbook in particular, saying, "In my opinion it is the finest piece of such work that I have ever seen published at Bucknell. It is neat, it is clean, the pictures are excellent and liberal, the writing is good, there are few mistakes, and all in all it is a highly commendable piece of work." Professor Burpee then thanked the class very warmly for the honor that had been conferred upon him through the dedication of the yearbook to him.

Professor Drum Speaks

Professor M. L. Drum, '02, who was described as "the man who keeps us on safe ground financially at Bucknell through his work as head of the Budget Committee, "spoke on "L'Agenda in the Days Before the Budget," and told how a number of issues had resulted disastrously before the budget system put the yearbook on firm footing. Professor Drum also expressed the thought that work on a college publication like L'Agenda was one of the finest activities a student could undertake. He emphasized the broadening effect of the close contact with other students that results from such activity.

Charles J. Kushell, Jr., in telling about L'Agenda from the viewpoint of the business manager, and C. I. Carpenter, in making some confessions as L'Agenda editor, both spoke of the excellent cooperation they had from the staff, and of the feeling of love for Bucknell that had been engendered by their vicarious service for the yearbook. "The work done was not all problems," said Carpenter "There was a great deal of pleasure in it as well. I hope we shall always look back with pleasure upon the fine times we have had together in getting out this volume of L'Agenda."

Printer Compliments Staff

Mr. G. Grant Painter, '17, of the Williamsport Printing and Binding Company, which printed the book, paid the staff a very high compliment. He said that in the past few years he had printed twenty college annuals, and that he considered the staff of the 1927 L'Agenda the best college editorial staff he had dealt with. "From the first time I talked with Carpenter and Kushell," he said, "I felt that I was dealing with men I could rely upon, and that proved to be absolutely the case. I found I could always depend upon them to do what said they would do it. As a result have a publication that is not only, in my opinion a very beautiful one, but we got it out a week ahead of schedule---which is a real achievement."

Songs enlivened things throughout the evening. At the close of the banquet the Alma Mater was sung. Then with all the diners clasping hands in a chain of friendship, the dinner ended with the singing of Auld Lang

A pleasant feature of the dinner was the fact that everybody present was or had been a student at Bucknell for all the guests including three professors and their wives, and the publisher of the book are graduates of Bucknell.

The list of those present is as follows: Professor and Mrs. F. E. Burpee, Professor and Mrs. M. L. Drum, Professor and Mrs. L. E. Theiss, Mr. G. Grant Painter, and the members of the class of 1927---Donald J. Barton, Florence W. Beckorth, Howard A. Bull, C. Irving Carpenter, Samuel V. Convery, Sarah M. DeArmond, William Devitt, Jr., Elmer W. Dietz, H. Willard Gardner, Dorothy Gilbert, Amy A. Hakleman, Lewis G. Hausser, Willard R. Hetler, Clayton D. Hollinger, Charles J. Kushell, Jr., Elizabeth K. Lawson, Dom B. Mare, Marguerite J. Mayers, Stanley A. McB. Vastine, Stearns E. Warner, Y. W. Wong, and P. H. Crago, as guests.

shall be done. This last closed period shall be followed by a common bid day."

Section 2, Article 6 was made to read: No fraternity shall entertain rushes in the fraternity houses after 7:30 in the evening or hold any smokers or dances in their honor.

The following recommendations, prepared by the Committee on Attendance and Standing after consultation with numerous groups of students and presented by professor Simpson, chairman of said committee, were adopted to become effective immediately upon publication in the Bucknellian.

I. That a Joint Committee consisting of four members of the faculty and three members of the junior and senior classes to be appointed by the President of the University to investigate cases of alleged dishonesty.

II. That this Joint Committee shall consider the following matters in their study.

a. Causes of dishonesty.

b. Codes of honor and their administration.

c. Methods of building up positive attitudes of honor.

2. Encourage the building up of an adequate code of honor at Bucknell.

3. Administer proposed plans and have charge of such matters as:

a. The hearing of evidence of alleged guilt.

b. The establishing of guilt or innocence.

c. The penalizing of person found guilty.

III. Penalties for dishonest conduct.

1. Any member of the faculty shall have power to drop any student from class.

2. If dropped for dishonesty, the student shall not be permitted to substitute other work in the same semester to take the place of the course from which he has been dropped.

3. When a student has been found guilty of dishonest conduct in any final examination, the Joint Committee shall impose the following penalties:

a. For a first offense the student shall receive a failure in the course.

b. For a second offense of any kind the student shall be dismissed from college without honor and all uncompleted courses shall be counted as failures.

molasses first with their shoes off and then with them on.

The excitement ran high all night, for it was never too late to catch a Soph who had been out, and was trying to get back to bed in order to get a couple of hours sleep before that eight o'clock class.

The Superintendent of Service reports that there was no property damaged that was not already fit for the scrap heap. He said, "I was tickled pink."

However the freshmen did not do a good enough job of stacking Bucknell Hall. Instead of really doing the job up right and making some work for the janitors, they merely fixed the chairs end for end over some others. The S. O. S. said that he just laughed when he saw it, for it only took him ten minutes to fix things up again.

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS HEAR MR. NOSS SPEAK ON JAPAN

At the regular meeting of the Student Volunteer group on Sunday afternoon, May 23, Theodore Noss, Princeton, '25, spoke to the band of his early life in Japan as the son of missionary parents. Mr. Noss, who is now teaching, at Gettysburg Academy, talked of personal incidents in his life and the influence of a missionary family. After his address, he answered questions put before him by the band in regards to the service in the Japanese field.

Mr. Noss, with Harry Gracey of Gettysburg College, who is president of the eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey Union Student Volunteer Group, and Miss Annie Jessup of Wilson College, former council member of the Union Student Volunteers, were Lewisburg visitors last week. Miss Jessup was the guest of Mary Harrar, '26, during the past week-end. While at Bucknell, Miss Jessup stayed at the Women's College, and Mr. Noss and Mr. Gracey were entertained at the Alpha Chi Mu house.

OF BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY, LEWISBURG, PENNSYLVANIA

VOL. 4. LEWISBURG, PA., JULY 13, 1926 No. 2

LAWRENCE LATE? SO WHYTE WAITS

Assembly All Assembled But Song Leader Stays at Home — Will Try Again

With Professor Whyte momentarily consulting his watch and Prof. Norris looking expectantly from the window, the summer session student body waited expectantly Thursday morning for the appearance of "Bob" Lawrence, noted song leader, at the daily assembly meeting. The song leader had been heralded as one of the big attractions of the session and everyone was on hand to hear him do his stuff but as the minutes lengthened it became apparent that "Bob" would not put in an appearance on that day at least.

When Prof. Whyte became convinced that the spenker would not put in an appearance, he arose and produced two letters from Lawrence's agency wherein it was stated that Lawrence would be here July 8. That let the Director out and proved to the good-natured students that the cause of the speaker's non-appearance was not at this end. Not wishing to see all those students fooled up three flights of stairs for nothing, the genial Director regaled his hearers with one of his racy accounts of school life in Scotland.

(Later information in the form of a telegram from "Bob" Lawrence to Professor Whyte indicates that the speaker had understood that he was to appear here on the 16th and not on the 8th. He said it was all the fault of his secretary and is now holding himself in readiness to come and deliver the scheduled talk at the call of the Director.)

FIVE ADDED TO SUMMER FACULTY

R. S. Atwood, O. W. Elsbree, W. A. Geesy, Mrs. Heim and G. L. Swank Giving Work Here For First Time

Five new faculty members are giving work for the present summer session. Rollin Salisbury Atwood, son of President Atwood, of Clarke's University, is giving three courses in geography. Mr. Atwood teaches geography in the junior high school at Trenton, N. J.

Oliver Wendell Elsbree who becomes a permanent member of the Bucknell faculty has taken over the courses that were to have been given by Dr. Henry T. Colestock. Prof. Elsbree has taught three years at Keystone academy and four years at

EXACT NUMBER IS 302

The officially compiled list of students attending the Summer Session was totaled this morning at the Registrar's office. The total was then 302 with registrations still filtering in. This is the largest number to attend a summer session so far. Last year's registration was 293. Next week we will publish the complete directory of the students attending the session.

DR. NELSON BENSON SPEAKS TO NORMAL STUDENTS AND LIONS

Dr. Nelson P. Benson, city superintendent of schools, Lock Haven, and a member of the Bucknell summer session faculty gave an address in Educational hall before the student body of the Muncy Normal school Friday morning at 11 o'clock.

Dr. Benson spoke to the students on the subject of interest in teacher training institutions.

Monday evening of this week Dr. Benson spoke to the Lions Club of Lewisburg at their weekly luncheon at the Cameron House, on the subject "What the Community Has A Right to Demand of the Public School System."

HOLD IMPRESSIVE SERVICE SUNDAY

Students Gather Under the Campus Trees for Sunday Evening Vesper Service — Prof. James Whyte Speaks

The first open air vesper service was held at 5:30 o'clock Sunday evening on the campus of the Women's College. The service was led by Miss Peters. Miss Ethel Davis led the group in prayer after which Kathryn Bosler and Lillian Arnold rendered a vocal duet. Prof. James P. Whyte gave a splendid inspirational talk. He said that no community can be really strong and successful unless the individuals in that community are strong and successful individuals who are well prepared to take their place in that community. In discussing the teacher's relation to his students, Prof. Whyte said: "I should consider myself a failure as a teacher unless some of the students who have come under my influence go farther than I can ever go, because they have built upon me."

TRIPLE CONCERT AT HAIRY JOHN'S

On Sunday, July 18, all roads will lead to Hairy John's Park in the Seven Mile Narrows, twenty-two miles west of Lewisburg. Three bands will render concerts: Moose, of Williamsport and Selinsgrove and the Citizens Band of Mifflinburg. No admission; everybody invited.

CAN'T KEEP 'EM OUT

Fired with the desire for learning and refusing to be kept out by a locked door which they could not break down, twenty-six ambitious students scaled the dizzy heights of the Biological building via the fire escape to get into the classroom where Dr. Nelson P. Benson was scheduled to meet them this morning.

A previous class had met in the room at eight o'clock and during the course of the hour the door had slammed shut and the lock jammed. At the end of the hour, the students took their departure through the window and down the fire escape after they found that the door was shut about as permanently as a Scotchman's pockethoook.

After the class had departed, Dr. Benson prepared to spend the next hour in reading one of his favorite books while the university locksmith had it out with the recalcitrant lock. But he under-estimated his hold over the hearts and minds of his students, for in a few minutes he was astonished to see his ambitious disciples pop in over the window ledge, and then the class continued as usual.

COMMITTEE NOW READY TO GO

Director Announces Committees Which Will Have Charge of Social Activities — Eagles Mere and Virgin Forest Objectives

Faculty committees for the social program have been announced by the summer session administration. Those in charge of receptions, dances and other intra-mural activities are: Miss Clark, Mrs. Heim, Supt. Benson, Supt. Swank, Mrs. Smith and Miss Gramm. Those in charge of hikes, picnics and other expeditions beyond the confines of the campus are Prof. Melchior, Dr. Stewart, Prof. Gold, Dr. Everett and Prof. Atwood.

The committees will get together this week at the call of their chairmen and announce their schedules. It has already been suggested that the entire student body go on automobile trips to Eagles Mere and the Virgin Forest.

Eagles Mere is located on top of a mountain range forty miles north-east of Lewisburg. The resort consists of a beautiful lake surrounded by cottages and hotels. There is a bathing beach and a small steamer plies the waters of the lake. The Virgin Forest is located about the same distance south-west of Lewisburg in Snyder county. This forest is in an inaccessible region and escaped the woodsman's axe from the earliest times. Many of the trees have attained a size said to be the state's largest.

STEWARTS FETE BIOLOGY STUDENTS

Campfire Frolic in Stewart Garden Goes Over Big With Session Students

Dr. and Mrs. Norman H. Stewart were pronounced the hosts supreme at the conclusion of an informal lawn party which they tendered the Biology students and their friends Friday night. About twenty students attended the affair which was held in the terraced rock garden at the rear of the Stewart residence on Brown street.

The frolic began with the building of a camp fire under the direction of Dr. Stewart. After the fire had been going well and the company had gathered around, Dr. Stewart produced various chemicals which he threw into the fire to produce different colored flames. A sudden surprise attack by a swarm of mosquitoes was routed by a counter attack with high-powered incense.

The entertainment continued with the playing of a selection of "trick" Victrola records after which Dr. Stewart delighted the guests with his inimitable rendition of a number of humorous stories (all new.) During the evening an inspection trip was made covering the Doctor's fish pool and turtle lot.

During the course of the evening wafers, punch and candy was served. At the end of what was admitted by all to be the most successful event of the kind that they had ever attended, the guests departed following the singing of all the popular song hits and old favorites that could be thought of.

Lecture in Bucknell Hall Arouses Interest of Students

Dr. Horace V. Pike of the State Hospital at Danville, gave the first of his course of lectures on Abnormal Psychology before the students of the Summer Session in Bucknell Hall on Thursday. These lectures began July 8 at 4:30 o'clock and will be given on each Thursday at the same time during the entire Summer Session. These lectures are of practical interest to all teachers and we have every reason to believe that the same remarkable interest shown in the course last year will be continued this summer.

Doctor Pike is now the Director of Clinical Psychiatry at the Danville State Hospital and has had more than twenty-five years of experience in the

PITY THE POOR VIC—LET'S HAVE AN ORCHESTRA

A Summer Session orchestra. Why not? Rumor hath it that that there are numerous talented musicians who can manipulate the saxaphone, violin, trumpet, trombone and solophone in our midst. All that is needed now is a pianist and an orchestra can be organized. Miller at the S. A. E. house and Smith at the Delta Sigma house are ready to help organize an orchestra. They say that the players could amuse themselves and amaze others. The proposal would, at least, be a great relief for the Victrola and the promoters assure the world that the organization would be strictly informal with no bosses, dictators, directors, conductors, ——— or paymasters.

LET'S GO BASEBALLERS

With two challenges from rival summer schools on file for baseball games, the question arises what we are going to do about it. Up to date there has been no apparent effort to get organized along athletic lines. We have heard that Sid Goodwin is preparing to hold a meeting at which time all baseball players will get together to organize a baseball team to meet the "foreign competion" which has challenged us. This is something that should receive the attention of all ball players instanter. As soon as an organization is effected the challenge of Susquehanna university and Bloomsburg normal should be immediately accepted.

WATCH YOUR PARKING

During the past week there have been numerous flagrant violations of parking regulations on the Quadrangle. Cars have been parked on both sides of the narrow driveway in front of "No Parking" signs with barely enough room for another car to pass through. Campus police power has threatened no penalty as yet other than the loss of one fender for the first offense and the removal of a wheel for the second violation.

ASSEMBLY PROGRAM

Wednesday

Dr. Nelson F. Davis will give an illustrated lecture entitled "Bucknell, Past and Present." The illustrations for this lecture have been mildly described as a scream. The costumes worn by students and co-eds of another day are a never failing source of interest to the student body. Don't miss it.

Thursday

Prof. Harry R. Warfel will be the speaker of the day and although he refuses to divulge what he will talk about, we are assured that it will be something very worthwhile.

Friday

Dr. Raymond M. West, pastor of the Baptist church will be the speaker. Dr. West is one of the most pleasing speakers that we know of. He has had a wide experience and never fails to enthuse his listeners.

Saturday

No assembly.

CLASS CHANGED

Dr. H. W. Robbins' class in Advanced Shakespeare will hereafter meet at 12:30 p. m., instead of 8:00 a. m.

STUDENTS SEE B. U. SESQUI PAINTINGS

Mural Panels by Miss Frankeberger Displayed Prior to Shipment to Exposition

A large number of students availed themselves of the opportunity of inspecting the mural paintings displayed by Miss Frankeberger on the second floor of the Annex at the Women's College Monday. Miss Frankeberger was commissioned by the university to paint the panels which will form the background for the Bucknell booth at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia.

On account of the restriction of the booth design, the artist's canvas was divided into three parts. The central canvas depicted Old Main as viewed from the lower campus with glimpses of the hill and trees. The prevailing color is a reddish pink derived from the weathered brickwork of the structure.

The one side panel is a view of the Memorial Stadium and the other is an adaption from the architect's conception of the Mathewson Memorial which is to be erected on the North Field. The stadium is shown from the side rather than a full view into the bowl. The background reveals the hills and countryside in which the college is situated. The prevailing pinkish red tone is carried out in the landscape. The view of the Mathewson Memorial also maintains the same color tone.

The paintings are suggestive rather than photographic with beauty as well as strength in their characteristics. The pictures were shipped to Philadelphia today where they will later be installed in the Bucknell booth by Prof. F. E. Burpee who has charge of the erection of the booth. The booth will contain some very beautiful photographic views of the campus and will be supplied with literature descriptive of the college. A register will be established where all Bucknellians at the Sesqui may register.

TO ADDRESS KIWANIANS AND NORMAL STUDENTS

Prof. James P. Whyte wil address the Kiwanis Club of Shamokin this Tuesday night and on next Monday evening will address the student body of the Muncy Normal school.

WORK SATURDAY

All classes will be held this Saturday to make up for the day lost when school opened on July 6 instead of July 5 which was the day set aside to celebrate Independence Day.

Come in and we'll trim you up.—Farley's.

A. R. C. WILL CONDUCT SWIMMING TESTS

A field representative of the National Red Cross Life Saving Corps will be in Lewisburg, Pa., from July 17th to 20th. Demonstrations in Life Saving and Resuscitation will be given. Now is the time to get in form and increase your endurance. Classes will be organized the week of the 11th, for all grades of swimmers from beginners to those ready to take the Senior Life Saving Tests. If you are interested notify Malcolm E. Musser or Elizabeth F. Spyker of Lewisburg, Pa.

KROWD KOLLECTS; KLAN KAN'T KOME

White Robed Knights Promise Excitement on Square Monday Night But Fool Public

Some scores of native and a few summer students waited expectantly for several hours at the corner of Third and Market streets with the hope of seeing and hearing a real honest to goodness Ku Klux Klan meeting. Early in the afternoon handbills had been passed around the town announcing the event in this wise: "Klan Meeting today, July 12, Lewisburg, Corner Third and Market. Come, hear the truth of this great organization. Free!"

The crowd waited from shortly before seven o'clock until the wee small hours but not a thing happened other than the slight kick a bunch of rounders got out of yelling "Raspberries," "Huckleberries," "Cherries" and other beguiling epithets at passing motorists. Inasmuch as this is the first time the klan has ever promised to visit Lewisburg it created quite a bit of stir downtown.

DEAN LEAVING

Dean Rivenburg will leave Friday for Chicago where he will attend an institute for administrative officers of institutions of higher education which will be held July 19-23.

field of mental diseases. He comes well prepared by personal experience to give his series of lectures on "Abnormal Psychology and Mental Hygiene." Although this same series was presented to the regular student body in its past session, many of the "winter students" find it profitable to reattend the lectures.

In the first lecture Doctor Pike reviewed the history of mental diseases, beginning at the stage when mysticism and demonism ruled, following it through Hippocratean times when the existence of demons was denied, through the age of witchcraft when the belief in demons was resumed, only to fade away with the advent of the eighteenth century.

In 1751 the Pennsylvania State Hospital was established for the care of "lunatics." Later training schools for nurses were formed and that at Danville was among the first, three of whose graduates are still on the staff. Simultaneously, the spirit of altruism spread so that now each state has several institutions for the care of its mentally deficient.

The point that Doctor Pike stresses most is the fact that mental disease (insanity) is NOT a disgrace. It is due to maladjustments in the nervous system, and that people are as susceptible to mental disorders as they are to physical disorders. As a result, institutions formerly called "Insane Asylums" are now termed "State Hospitals"—hospitals treating the mind.

Doctor Pike likewise points out that mental deficiences are not necessarily permanent but that, if perceived in their early stages, are generally curable. To substantiate his point he uses statistics showing that fifty per cent. of the patients at state hospitals return home, and only two per cent. of this fifty go back to the hospital.

To understand the mind, he says, you must become acquainted with the mechanism of the nervous system. To help make the acquaintance he presents for inspection a human brain and spinal cord—pointing out the significant parts, and how they work together. Knowing this, symptoms of mental disarrangement can be recognized early and the appropriate remedy applied.

RELIGIOUS SCHOOL MEETS ON HILL

Reformed School of Religion for Young People Now in Session

The School of Religion for Young People, conducted by the three adjoining Classes of the Reformed Church, began its second annual ten day session here last Tuesday, with an enrollment of about thirty students.

The students and faculty are quartered in East College, on the hill, take their meals at the College Inn, and all the recitations are conducted in the Engineering Building. This makes an ideal arrangement, far superior to last year, when the young women were quartered in the Doubler and Brady Apartments. Recitations are conducted in the morning, with the afternoons and evenings given over to study and recreations.

The faculty is made up as follows: Dean, Rev. Theo. F. Herman, D. D., of the Theological Seminary at Lancaster; subject, Old and New Testament. Rev. Chas. H. Rominger, Ph. D., Cedar Crest College, Allentown, whose subject is Pupil and Teacher. Rev. David D. Baker, Japan; mission subjects. Mrs. Margaret String, Superintendent of the Children's Division of the Reformed church, whose subject is "Child Study and Methods of Administration." Rev. Roland Rupp, B. D., "Life of Christ," and "Task of the Reformed Church." Rev. Fred D. Wentzel, of Reading, "Weekday Religious Education," and "Training the Devotional Life." Rev. A. F. Dietz, of Shamokin, is the Business Manager, and Rev. H. H. Rupp is the Registrar.

$20,000 TAKEN IN AT MATTY GAME

Twenty thousand dollars is believed to have been realized from the "Christy Mathewson" memorial benefit game staged at the Polo Grounds in New York City on last Wednesday by famous diamond figures of yester-year.

The occasion, Matty Day, drew 7000 fans to see former team mates of the great pitcher participate in a three-inning contest, followed by a full nine inning game between the New York Giants and Washington Senators. The receipts will be contributed to a fund for a Mathewson memorial at Bucknell University at Lewisburg, Matty's alma mater.

Once more the stands rang with cheers for such old favorites as Hooks Wiltse, Rube Marquard, Fred Tenney, Arthur Devlin, Roger Bresenahan, Joe McGinnity and other former comrades of "Big Six," who died at Saranac Lake last October. And as was altogether fitting "Matty's team" emerged victorious against a line-up which was termed the "opposition," by a score of 4 to 3.

After the old-timers had played, a nine-inning game was played between the New York Giants and the Washington Senators. The Giants defeated Washington 8-6, after Walter Johnson left the mound.

Among the notables attending the game were, Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, Mayor J. J. Walker, Col. Jacob Ruppert; John Heydler, president of the National League; Clark Griffith, president of the Senators; William F. Baker, president of the Phillies; Emil Fuchs, president of the Braves; and Steve McKeever, vice-president of the Robins.

A number of Lewisburg people autoed to New York to witness the game.

Twilight Concert

The Citizens' Band of Lewisburg will play another of the series of concerts to be given by this musical organization on Friday evening, July 16, beginning at 7 o'clock, on the Bucknell Univeralty Campus, Loomis Field. The public is invited to be present.

Peddie institute. He is a graduate of the Crozer Theological seminary and of the University of Pennsylvania. This spring he completed his work for his doctor's degree at Columbia university.

Walter A. Geesy, city superintendent of schools, of Sunbury, has been secured to give three courses in education and school methods. George L. Swank, county superintendent of schools of Northumberland county, has taken over the courses which were to have been given by Supt. Carl L. Millward, of Milton. Mr. Millward was unable to give his courses this year on account of his absence on a tour of Europe.

Mrs. Ella B. Helm, head of the Department of Psychology of the University of Utah has taken over the work that was to have been given by Miss Margaret Lawson and Supt. Fred A. Diehl. Mrs. Helm is a Bucknell graduate and took advanced work at the University of Chicago. Miss Lawson is not giving her courses on account of the fact that she has received a commission to make certain sociological studies in Spain. Supt. Diehl was unable to give his work on account of serious illness in his family.

COURSES

in Liberal Arts, Biology, Chemical Engineering, Civil Engeering, Electrical Engineering, Mechanical Engineering, and Music are open to graduates of first class high schools.

Eagles Mere, Virgin Forest, or What Have You?---Asks Whyte

"So's Your Old Man, Let's Go to Blue Hill"---says Johnny Gold

Threatened Heated Discussions Between Factions as to Scene of Annual Summer Session Picnic Quieted When Johnny Gold Becomes Czar of the Picnic Preparations —Sid Goodwin Heading Sports Program — Other Trips Also

A sanguinary civil conflict was narrowly averted this week when Prof. John S. Gold was appointed to take complete charge of the summer session picnic. The appointment assures a successful picnic because "Uncle Steiner" is a veteran at the game having run the summer session picnic for the past three years not to mention his wide experience with Sunday School and class picnics of every description.

Prior to the appointment of Gold there had been a terrific dicussion going on. Director James P. Whyte Prof. D. Montfort Melchoir and other "bloated plutocrats" and coupon clippers were holding out for an expensive all day picnic trip to Eagles Mere or the Virgin Forest which might have cost as much as $2.00 apiece!

This wild-eyed proposition met with united opposition of the dining room crew and other strap hangers who could not see the use in such extravagance. They would just as soon hold the picnic on the lawn back of Bucknell Hall, they said.

When the argument reached its height, "Johnny" Gold was hurriedly put in charge with autocratic powers just like Will Hays in the movie world of Judge Landis over the baseballers.

That was last night and after a hurried trip down the river this afternoon, "Johnny" returned to town after assuring himself that Blue Hill was still there. Upon his arrival here the picnic czar issued the following statement through his official spokesman:

"You may tell them that the picnic will be held at Blue Hill on Wednesday, July 28. We will leave about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. I have just got back from Blue Hill and have found the place practically intact after last night's thunder shower.

"We will serve the same eats that we had last year. That is the menu will be the same. The cost of the service will be 60 cents. Sid Goodwin is arranging the sports program including baseball, quoits, bag races, peanut races, etc."

Later on trips will be arnged to make trips to more distant points which numbers of the students wish to visit. Prof. Melchoir is arranging for a trip to the Gettysburg battlefield and Prof. Stewart is planning one to New York City. Dr. Everett is in charge of arrangements for a projected motor trip to the Virgin Forest.

INTEREST GROWS IN PIKE LECTURES

Increasing Numbers Attend Lectures Every Thursday Afternoon in Bucknell Hall

Dr. Horace V. Pike, of the state hospital, at Danville, gave the second of his series of lectures on Abnormal Psychology before about thirty-five students in Bucknell Hall at 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon. These lectures are proving very valuable and should be attended by record audiences from now on. Doctor Pike presents material in one hour which will profit his hearers for a life-time.

His second lectures was developed on the foundation laid in the first, and dealt largely in realms of psychology as practically applied. He pointed out how the mind of the race has developed as shown in the development of the individual mind. A child, he said, has no consciousness or no conscious desires.

As he grows, life becomes more complex, more desires manifest themselves, and he must begin to make adjustments to his environments. In doing this, some desires must be repressed—these repressed desires form

ALL SET FOR BIG DANCE FRIDAY NIGHT

All arrangements have been completed for a real dance to be held from 9 to 12 at the S. A. E. fraternity house Friday night.

The promoters of the dance have all along had their hearts set on billing the "Blue Band," the leading local dance orchestra, for this affair. After prolonged negotiations they were able to sign up the outfit for this date although two of the players had other arrangements for that evening.

Tickets for the dance are being sold at $1.25 per couple—women, 50 cents; men, 75 cents. Those selling the tickets are Bill Miller, Bill McNutt, Bob Smith, Herbie Helm, Howard Bull and Paul Schmidt.

LAWRENCE NOW TO BE HERE JULY 29

Whyte and Song Leader Arrange New Date After Previous Hide-and Seek "Appearance"

"Bob" Lawrence, nationally noted song leader will actually be here on Thursday, July 29, we are assured by Director James P. Whyte. Professor Whyte is absolutely certain that Lawrence will be here this time, he says, because he has corresponded with the song leader himself and has not let things get twisted via the secretary route. Prof. Whyte hopes to be able to arrange a luncheon meeting of the Lewisburg Rotary Club with the summer session students which will be addressed by Lawrence.

Reception Friday Night Hangs in Balance When the Brunswick Panatrope Back-fires on Bootleg Juice — Bull, Miller and "Chief" Rescue Party

A large and representative body of students turned out for the faculty reception tendered to the summer session students Friday night in the living rooms of the Women's College. In the receiving line headed by Dean Clark were Director James P. Whyte and Mrs. Whyte, Dr. and Mrs. N. H. Stewart, Dr. Nelson P. Benson, Prof. and Mrs. W. H. Coleman, and other members of the faculty and summer session administration.

After a "quorum" had arrived on the scene, Prof. Whyte cleared his throat and began to talk. He said that he would not announce that he had something to say because then no one would listen to him. Instead he said he would just begin to talk and then everybody would pay attention in order to find out what it was all about. After a few words of greeting he stated that there was "something for everybody to do this evening" and invited them to get busy at once.

As his words died away there was a concerted rush for the various means of amusement provided. The more active souls crowded around the Brunswick Panatrop which had been laboriously conveyed from its summer quarters at the home of Prof. Harry R. Warfel on Brown street. Others preferring the shaded glow of floor lamps raced to the Mason & Hamblin in the parlor where they began to make the welkin ring with an assortment of noises. The survivors settled about in little groups to play bridge, Mah Jong, tittle-de-winks and the other games mentioned by Prof. Whyte.

The group that had stormed the Demle music box soon found out that they had made a mistake when the Pantatrope refused to operate on the direct current which supplies electric light to the Women's College. While the majority were lamenting their hard luck, some said with the poet "on with the dance" and induced one of the girls to man the piano while the rest danced. After she refused to be victimized that way any longer, they turned to their old stand-by, the Phi Mu Vic. They put their new records on this machine and continued the dance keeping up a brave pretense that they could hear the music.

Here's a decisive stroke!

THERE'S something heartening about using a Swan Eternal Pen. It's so decisive. It doesn't hesitate — doesn't balk. Every stroke is clear, even, clean-cut. It's a pen for business men who know their own minds. That's because it's perfectly made. Come in and write with one. See how fine a pen it is. No need to buy!

ADDRESSES ODD FELLOWS

M. MacHenry Wagner, a summer session student and member of Exchange Lodge, No. 898 I. O. O. F., accepted an invitation to attend Lewisburg Lodge this week. Mr. Wagner spoke on "Odd Fellowship" which was heartily received by the members.

Secretary to the Dean

Miss Martha W. Henderson, of 801 Hepburn street, Williamsport, has accepted the position as secretary to Dean R. H. Rivenburg, of Bucknell.

Miss Henederson is experienced in secretarial work, having been secretary to the principal of the Williamsport High School for the past five years.

INTEREST GROWS IN PIKE LECTURES

the material out of which the unconcious is made. Beware, he said, of physcho-analysis and books on the same, as they have the same effect as patent medicine advertisements.

The object of mental functioning, he said, is the regulation and control of action to best suit the interests of the environment. For this, thought or the thinking process, is necessary.

It recognizes six stepping stones, as follows: sensation, perception, memory, ideation, reasoning, and judgment. Sensation includes the receiving and storing of impressions and is cared for by the sensory nervous system. Perception is the conscious recognition of the external causes of these sensations.

It involves consciousness which Dr Pike defined as reactive perceptive moment, closely associated with past experiences, susceptible to persent stimuli, and with a fore-knowledge of the future. If the perception is faulty the mind receives or interprets impressions inaccurately, resulting in illusions and hallucinations.

Thus, illusions, unrecognized by the subject, and hallucinations are indications of faulty perception; and with this one stepping stone in the thinking process either damaged or totally absent, the whole process is impaired.

The result is incomplete adjustment to environments which in turn leads to more serious troubles. As the hour was up, the rest of the thought process was left to serve as the subject of the next lecture.

The class in sanitary milk control visted the pasteurization plant of Bechtel Brothers and their supplying dairies last week. All except Jack Cregar are reported to be pleased with the trip.

DIRECT CURRENT THREATENS PARTY

Concluded from first page

While all this was going on, Howard Bull and Bill Miller, with the moral support of Dick Vastine had gone on a still hunt for "Chief" Hayes Aurand, trusty keeper of the night watch at the Sem. When they finally located the Chief, they induced him to show them the nearest alternating current tap which was located on a light pole on the campus. Bull and Miller then evaporated into thin air in the direction of the S. A. E. and T. U. O. houses. After a few minutes of rending and tearing sounds from these two houses, the heroes of the occasion emerged again from the shadows bearing long strands of freshly plucked light cord. A few minutes later one end of the cord was thrust through an open window of the living room and the Demie loud speaker got into action. The day was saved.

ALL PUPILS TO DO NEWSPAPER WORK

Junior Demonstrator Becomes Department of Bucknellian As Pupils' Own News Page

Last year the first volume of the Junior Demonstrator was typed and mimeographed by the pupils of the Demonstration School. The work was done by the staff who received contributions from the members of the school. This year a change in plans has occurred. The Junior Demonstrator will be a mass production. The news articles, editorials, social notes, personals, and themes will be prepared in class as part of its study of written composition. The paper will be for the most port, of the students, by the students, and for the students.

Instead of publishing the Junior Demonstrator as a separate paper it will now be a part of THE BUCKNELLIAN. The editor has arranged to give a page of his paper for the new activity of the Demonstration School. The cost of the paper, ten cents a copy, will remain the same.

We think that the mass publication of the paper is good. This way, all the pupils have a similar chance to write for the paper; the old way, only a selected number would write.

As the Junior Demonstrator has become a part of THE BUCKNELLIAN, a change in the form of the paper must take place. The Junior Demonstrator came out as a magazine in the first volume. As THE BUCKNELLIAN is a news sheet, the Demonstration School must make the change to fit the university paper. The change is good, as the pupils will have the opportunity to see the difference between the two kinds of papers. Also a greater number of people in outside life write for newspapers than for magazines. So. the change is practical.

Ninth Grade Notes

The class wishes to thank the Milton schools for their loan of The Lady of the Lake Pictures.

Herbert Robinson has provided a victrola record with Scottish selections for use in the study of literature. Other records with Scottish selections would be appreciated if anyone has any to lend.

The ninth grade took the Whipple High School reading test the past week. It was in three parts, and was given on three successive days.

A number of the ninth grade boys who play musical instruments will join with the eighth grade boys to form a summer school orchestra in the Demonstration School. They will be led by a member of the University Summer School. Practice will take place during the afternoons immediately after lunch.

E. D. Carstater and Brown Focht motored to Catawissa to visit friends over the week-end.

Eighth Grade Notes

The class elected Elmira Filbert, President, and Katharine Stannert, Secretary, of their Oral English class. The purpose of this plan is to give the pupils training in presiding at a meeting. Other pupils will be elected from time to time. Thus, each pupil will have an opportunity to conduct a meeting or to keep the minutes.

George English was elected chairman of the Home Making Committee in Room 2. He with is assistants, will see that the room has fresh flowers. New assistants will be selected by the chairman each Friday.

Several members of the Eighth grade will attend the Baptist Sunday School picnic on July 21.

DEMONSTRATORS TO LEAD ASSEMBLY

Demonstration School Pupils Will Have Charge of Assembly Program on Thursday Morning

The Demonstration School will present a program at the Assembly this Thursday morning. The purpose of the program is to make clear the work of the School and to give a few examples of the nature of the work. The following program will be given:

History of the Demonstration School—George English.

The Geography Department—Katharine Stannert.

The Mathematics Department—Winifred Lins.

The English Department—Tilden Paul.

The Art Department—Elmira Filbert, Harry WeWire, Robert Pawling, and Romlyn Rivenburg will give examples of Oral English work.

The program will be given at the usual morning hour in the Commencement Hall in Old Main. Parents and friends are invited to attend the exercises.

Most men are judged by their appearance.—Farley's.

SCHOOL WORK NOW WELL UNDER WAY

Pupils All Acquainted and Class Organized for Profitable Courses Under Able Instructors

The Demonstration School opened July 6 for the purpose of helping eighth and ninth grade students with the coming year's work. The first day, the pupils assembled in Rooms 1 and 2, Main Hall, registered, and then were dismissed.

They study the following subjects: English, Mathematics and Civics. Miss Gramin has charge of the English Department; Mrs. Smith, of the Mathematics, and Mr. Gettig, of the Civics. The pupils, also, have special instruction in Art and Geography. Mr. Keller, Head of the Art Department of Bloomsburg State Normal School, has already given the Eighth Grade several lessons in the Appreciation of Art, similar lessons will be given to the Ninth Grade later on. Mr. Atwood, teacher of Geography in one of the Junior High Schools at Trenton, will give lessons in Geography.

The play period extends from 10 to 10:20. During this time, the pupils play many interesting games; such as Chinese Tag, Blackie and Whittie, Tag the Bear, Baseball, Tug of War, etc.

During the first days of school, the pupils made an exploration of the University. In the Biology Building they found many things of interest to both boys and girls. They saw skeletons, stuffed birds and animals, and snake skins. Other buildings such as Bucknell Hall and the Library were alo of interest.

STEWART LEADS BIOLOGY TRIP

Classes on All-day Hike to Wilds of White Deer Mountains

The biological classes of Dr. N. H. Stewart went on an expedition to the White Deer mountains Saturday. Almost a score of students left by train and automobiles in the morning for White Deer. At White Deer they took the road for the White Deer Furnace and the White Deer Reservoir.

During the trip more than twenty species of birds were distinguished, a similar number of amphibians were captured and various other natural phenomena observed. One of the most interesting sights was that of a snake which had swallowed a toad almost as large as itself. The observers had the privilege of seeing the snake finally regurgitate the toad after deciding that the meal was too much for it.

A picnic lunch was eaten on the mountain just above the reservoir and after several more hours of observation, picture-taking and hiking, the party returned down the mountainside to entrain at White Deer.

GIRLS ORGANIZE AND ELECT HOUSE OFFICERS

On Monday, July 19, a meeting of the students at Women's College was called to order by Dean Clark for the purpose of organizing for the remainder of the session. Miss Emma Kahler acted as chairman. A committee, consisting of Evadne Ruggles, Effie Hepler, Anastasia Lyons, Henrietta Flack, and Hope Smith was appointed to draw up rules and regulation for the organization and to nominate two candidates for the office of house president. Miss Henrietta Flack, of Kingston, and Miss Ethel M. Davis, of West Chester, were the nominees. The election was held on Wednesday night immediately after dinner, at which Miss Davis was elected.

Miss Davis is a graduate of Bucknell University of the class of 1924 and is now teaching English in the high school, at Freehold, N. J.

The rules and regulations as adopted are as follows:

The duty of the House President shall be to enforce the regulations adopted by the students of the Summer Session.

1. New Building is to be closed at eleven o'clock except on Friday and Saturday when it will be locked at twelve o'clock. Special permission to be out after the stated hours must be obtained from the House President and the name of the student left in the office of the Dean of Women.

GOLD COMPLETES MENU AS TICKET SUPPLY VANISHES

Marathan Baseball Classic to Be Big Event of Picnic—Cars Leave at Two O'clock Wednesday.

With practically his entire stock of tickets for the annual Summer Session Picnic exhausted, Prof. John S. Gold was resting easier today after almost a week of feverish activity in gathering together sufficient barrels of foodstuff to satisfy the hungry throng expected at what will undoubtedly be the biggest summer session picnic yet staged.

The revelers will leave the front of the Women's College at 2 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. Those who have cars are asked to arrange to transport as many of their friends as possible so that the committee will not have to provide so many trucks.

By 3:30, all will have arrived at the scene of the picnic at Blue Hill on by Prof. Gold while the baseball players are resting up for the next onslaught. Prof. Gold declares that he has secured the consent of "Sheldy" Everett and Miss Clarke to indulge in a pie-eating contest. When questioned by a representative of the BUCKNELLIAN, the Dean of Women refused to comment on the matter although the Mathematics professor did not deny that he had said that he would enter the lists if huckleberry pies were used.

Johnny Gold stated this morning he has been able to think up several new surprise numbers for the menu. He was very enthusiastic over the prospects for the outing and declared, "If you won't spent fifty cents for when things will start happening at once and keep going as long as the picnicers can stand it. The opening event will be a Marathon indoor baseball game arranged by Sid Goodwin. This will continue as long as the players last or the spectators will permit. It is hoped that ere night falls the bodies of all the players will have been removed and the field decently cleared of blood and gore.

Sandwiched between the numerous innings of the baseball game, will be various feature numbers to be put such a big time, you're tighter than the Scotch golfer who quit playing after twenty years because he lost his ball."

Director Whyte has proclaimed his durnedest to help make it a Roman holiday, and furthermore at the baseball classic he will heave the first ball in the general direction of the plate—it is hoped—while Prof. Melchior has agreed to make a determined effort to catch it.

Sid Goodwin, Johnny Gold, Prof. Whyte and Prof. Melchior were get-

Director's Proclamation

By virtue of my office as Director of the Summer Session, I, James Primrose Whyte, do hereby proclaim Wednesday, July 28, to be Picnic Day at Bucknell University and ask that every student and faculty member to be on hand at the Women's College at 2 o'clock sharp to board the cars. I have arranged for perfect weather for the entire day and the success of the affair is thus assured.

The second big event of the week will be the joint luncheon of the Lewisburg Rotary Club and the Summer Session at the Women's College for a six o'clock luncheon Thursday evening. The entire faculty will be guests and "Bob" Lawrence, the community song leader will be the speaker. Done under my hand and seal this 24th day of July, A. D., 1926.

(Signed) JAMES P. WHYTE.
Director of the Summer Session.

Gold's Battle Cry

Now, folks, all together. We are going to have a large time and you are all going. No one is going to back out, not even the pie-eating contestants. This will be your best opportunity to see what a fine bunch you are associated with in this summer session, so grab off your ticket now and work up an appetite for the big feed. If you are not in favor of this project, let me know and we will arrange to have a doctor examine you.

(Signed) JOHN S. GOLD,
Picnic Administrator.

DAVIS HOST TO EDUCATION BOYS

Professor "Throws" Smoker for Men of Education Courses

The "Education" boys were delightfully entertained at a smoker Thursday evening at the home of Professor Frank G. Davis on South Front street. The guests arrived shortly after 7:30 and were soon engaged in animated discussion on topic understood to have been exclusively concerned with the cause of education.

In the middle of everything a tray bearing a varied assortment of bottles was conveyed into the room. There were big bottles, little bottles, short bottles, tall bottles, clear bottles and dark bottles. All were sealed with wax. On the tray was a bowl of cracked ice and an array of glasses. The assemblage began to register interest. Anticipation increased until Prof. Davis arose with a grave manner to pour the mysterious fluid. After every glass was filled the root beer was served with the inevitable pretzels by Prof. Davis's two charming little daughters.

SUMMER SESSION DANCE PROVES GREAT "WOW"

About thirty couples enjoyed the dance put on from nine to twelve at the S. A. E. house Friday night. The Blue Hand was present and everything went off according to the advance publicity put out by the promoters. They had been a little worried that the affair would flop at the last moment but their fears proved groundless when the large gang arrived on the scene. The event was chaperoned by Mrs. Beatty and Prof. and Mrs. John S. Gold. Plans are now in progress for another similar dance to be held August 6.

ting together Saturday night over a flagon of parsnip wine to settle the umpire question, and up to a late hour this morning were still battling over the question. It is safe to announce, however, that a nationally prominent second-story man will be selected for the dirty work.

Seriously, no advance dope is being issued on the personnel of the two baseball teams, but the men engaged by Sid Goodwin are costing so much money in salaries that they simply MUST be the berries. Manager Goodwin informs us that he has personally hand-picked the contesting teams. That the two teams are very well matched and that none of the players are the least bit green. Which isn't denying, of course, that one or two may be a trifle over-ripe.

EAGLES MERE TO BE SCENE OF BIBLE MEET

Popular Bible study combined with vacation recreation is the attractive scheme for the annual Bible Conference at Eagles Mere, Pa., August 28th to September 6th under the auspices of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

Two distinguished speakers from abroad will appear on the program. Dr. F. B. Meyer, of London, dean of English Bible teachers and religious writers, will be an outstanding feature of the conference. Dr. D. H. Dolman, of Wandsbek, Germany, a native of Holland and head of a special missionary enterprise of the Church of England, who was brought to America last year and again this year by the Moody Bible Institute because of his extraordinary helpfulness, will speak daily throughout the conference.

The conference is held under the general direction of Dr. James M. Gray, the President of the Moody Bible Institute, who will be present during the latter half of the period and give Bible studies and popular addresses on the First Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians. Charles L. Huston, prominent layman of Coatesville, Pa., will speak on "A Business Man's Use of the Bible in Personal Work."

Sessions of the conference will be held forenoons and evenings, the afternoons being left free for rest and the enjoyment of the rare bathing, boating and hiking afforded by beautiful Eagles Mere.

Special rates have been granted by the six fine hotels of Eagles Mere for the conference. E. B. Buckalow, of Harrisburg, the Regional Representative of the Moody Bible Institute has charge of the arrangements and has recently issued an attractive circular of information.

DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL ORCHESTRA HAS BEGUN WORK

The orchestra which was organized the past week has been practicing every day after lunch

Mr Schmidt, one of the practice teachers, is directing the orchestra. Miss Irwin, also a practice teacher, is the pianist.

The following is the personnel of the orchestra.

Violins—Stanley Ritter, Joseph Wertz, Starret Wagner, Oliver Wetten.

Cornets—Kenneth Savidge, Gerald Shamp.

Saxophone—Kenneth Botts.

Pianist—Miss Irwin.

The orchestra is busy practing overtures, marches and waltzes.

The activity is splendid for the school. It gives a group of boys and girls another interest in the school work, it helps them in learning to play in the orchestra, and to grow musical. The school also profits because the orchestra contributes much pleasure to the school program.

As there are two or three girls who have had violin lessons, but no orchestra experience the director requests that these pupils report for the regular orchestra practice.

DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL GIVES FIRST ASSEMBLY PROGRAM

The Demonstration School gave its first program last Thursday at the 10 o'clock Assembly in Main Hall. Elmira Filbert and Kathryn Stannert, the President and the Secretary of the Eighth Grade Oral English Class, led the speakers to the rostrum. After the President called the meeting to order, the following program was presented:

The Demonstration Echool, George English, VIII.

A Report of the Ninth Grade, Winifred Lynns.

The English Department, Tillman Paul, VIII.

The Art Department, Elmira Filbert, VIII.

The Geography Department, Kathryn Stannert, VIII.

George English gave a short history of the Demonstration School in which he explained its purpose. Winifred Lynn told of the many interesting subjects studied at the School, and also, extended an invitation to anyone who cared to do so, to visit the School located in Rooms 1 and 2, of Main Hall. Tillman Paul explained the aims of the English Department. Romlyn Rivenburg, Harry DeWire and Robert Pawling gave examples of written and oral composition done the past week. Elmira Filbert discussed the purpose and characteristics of Art, and Kathryn Stannert with the aid of a regional map made clear the aims in the study of geography. The Demonstration School orchestra opened and closed the program.

SCHOOL NOTES

Romlyn Rivenburg attended the Lewisburg Baptist Sunday School picnic the past week.

A number of the Ninth Grade girls who are studying Scott's Lady of the Laker were in Highland costumes at the School party.

Several of the Milton pupils attended the Methodist Sunday School picnic last Wednesday afternoon.

Annd Wright of the Eighth Grade has left school.

Gerald Shamp and Lloyd Burns were recently enrolled in the Summer School.

Miss Gramm of the faculty will leave for Nova Scotia at the close of the session where she will study the Evangeline district.

Mr. Lindig, Editor of the BUCKNELLIAN, has offered to place on the front page the best article written by a member of the School for the School paper.

Mr. Gettig, one of the practice teachers, will teach in the High School at Bellefonte the coming year.

Mr. Whyte, also one of the practice teachers, will be in the High School at Middletown, Pa.

DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL TO HAVE OWN ASSEMBLY

The Demonstration school, beginning with this week will have its own assembly, in Bucknell Hall, every Tuesday and Thursday from 10 to 10:30 a. m.

The Demonstration School faculty including the practice teachers will direct the programs. They plan to have several speakers, well known on the campus, to address the students. The various departments will take charge of the programs, from now on till the end of the six week summer session.

The Demonstration School orchestra will play at these assemblies. The following committees are in charge:

Fourth Week—Miss Lark, Mr. Gettig, Miss Collings, Miss Jones.

Fifth Week—Mr. White, Mr. McHall, Miss Mench, Miss Thomas.

Last Week—Miss Williams, Miss Zindel, Miss Van Dyke.

PROF. WHYTE SPEAKS AT DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL PARTY

The Demonstration School party took place on the grounds of the Women's College, Thursday afternoon at 2:20 o'clock. The faculty, practice teachers, and pupils of the Demonstration School held the party to become better acquainted. Professor Whyte gave an illustrated lecture in Bucknell Hall on the Burns and Scott districts. Pictures of Glasgow, Edinburgh, the Trossachs, Ayr, and Alloway were among those thrown on the screen.

Following the talk, the guests assembled on the Seminary lawn where refreshments were served from a Scottish table as well as an American table. Miss Jones assisted by Miss Zindel and Miss Irwin poured tea at the Scottish table. Slices of buttered bread and pastry were served. At the American table at which Miss Williams presided, ice cream, pretzels, cake and candy were provided. Miss Williams was assisted by Miss Van Dyke, Miss Thomas and Miss Collings.

Stanley Ritter, Ruth Haggy, and Winifred Lyons were members of the Ninth Grade Committee. George English, Harry DeWire and Romlyn Rivenburg were the Eighth Grade Committee members.

The school is very grateful to Professor Whyte for his interesting and profitable lecture.

"BOB" LAWRENCE DELIGHTS STUDENTS

Students and Rotarians Join in Raising Joyful Noises for Song Leader

"Bob" Lawrence, the song leader, proved worth waiting for when he appeared here last Thursday. His first appearance was at the morning assembly which is reported in the Junior Demonstrator department on page 4. At 6 o'clock the Lewisburg Rotary Club held its weekly luncheon meeting with the student body at the Women's College. After the luncheon, Prof. James P. Whyte welcomed his fellow Rotarians as the guests of the summer session. He stated that next year he expected that there would be at least 500 taking summer work here and that within a few years the summer session would be as big as the regular session.

Park B. Steininger, president of the Rotary Club responded for the club and assured the students that the business men of Lewisburg were their friends and that they were glad to have the students here to liven up the town. "Bob" Lawrence was then introduced and invited to teach the group to sing which he did in short order. At the close of, his short session he invited everybody over to Bucknell Hall where he promised to continue the performance.

Bucknell Hall was crowded for the event. The first part of the evening was devoted to lantern projections of community singing work in which Mr. Lawrence has spent so many years. Dr. N. H. Stewart operated the projector. The latter part of the evening was devoted to the "sing." "Bob" drew the crowd out and made the welkin ring with the old favorite and trick songs.

BIG ANNUAL PICNIC PLEASES EVERYBODY

"I Had Enough to Eat" Declares "Sheidy" Everett Lauding "Johnny" Gold

A crowd of 225 persons attended the annual summer session picnic held at Hihe Hill last Wednesday. The event was conducted from start to finish by Prof. John S. Gold to whom credit is due for staging the most successful picnic yet registered.

Two baseball games were played by the heavy summer session teams. The umpires were Schmidt and Campbell. After it was all over, Schmidt was a little sore when he heard that the umprise had previously been announced as a nationally notor-

TRIP TO NEW YORK ON SUNDAY

Dr. N. H. Stewart will direct a trip to New York City on Sunday. The students taking the trip will leave on the Reading railway shortly after midnight Saturday night and will return at midnight Sunday night. While in New York they will visit the Aquarium, the New York Museum, the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and Columbia University. All those who intend to take the trip should immediately register with Dr. Stewart.

Those who wish to attend the clinic should arrange to be at the hospital not later than ten o'clock Saturday morning. Those who desire to take the trip should register with Miss Lillian Arnold at the summer session office in the West Wing of Old Main.

WILL VISIT INSANE ON SATURDAY

Students who have been attending the series of lectures given by Dr. Horace V. Pike, of the Danville State Hospital will motor to Danville this Saturday to attend the mental clinic to be given there from ten to twelve in the morning. These clinics are of great interest and are of great value to the students coming as they do, as a sort of climax, to the series of lectures. At the clinic, the students will see illustrated concretely the material that has been given them in the lectures. Dr. Pike will present living subjects who react exactly as has been expressed in his several talks.

Miss Kathryn F. Walsh and Miss Mary Kilcullen spent the week-end at their home at Gilberton.

TO TRAVEL TO THE TALL TIMBERS

Virgin Forest in Snyder-Middleswarth State Park Objective for Wednesday

A picnic trip to the Virgin Forest in the Snyder-Middleswarth state park in Snyder county is the next big number scheduled for the summer session. The trip is being engineered by Dr. H. S. Everett with Prof. John S. Gold as his accomplice to take care of the culinary end. Cars will leave the front of the Women's College at 1:30 this Wednesday afternoon and tickets for the picnic lunch may be procured for 50 cents each up until a late hour this evening from Dr. Everett, Hope Smith of Bill Miller.

It was at first intended to have the picnic today but on account of the baseball game with Bloomsburg this afternoon it was deemed advisable to postpone the picnic until tomorrow. "Johnny" Gold indicated this morning that he would have a real picnic lunch for the occasion. His tentative menu was as follows: Ham and eggs, potato chips, sliced tomatoes, rolls, coffee, home-made devil's food cake with carmel icing (!) and ice cream. The lunch will be served at 5:30 at the park.

BIOLOGISTS CALL AT BEAVER HOME

Dr. Stewart's Class Braves Wlids to See Animals That Come When Called

Members of Dr. N. H. Stewart's classes in Biology left at 8 o'clock Saturday morning for the beaver dam located in the western end of Union county. About fourteen students took the trip. They found a large pond measuring about fifty feet across with a dam about five feet high. The dam had been constructed by the animals of logs about ten feet long and of stones as large as loaves of bread. Dr. Stewart and one of the students waded out into the pond and pounded on the beavers' house. After continued rapping, a mother beaver came out and swam about the house. In spite of all the efforts of the men, the animal refused to be chased from the vicinity indicating that she had a brood of young beavers in the house. Later on the trip, a game warden displayed several young beavers which he had tamed and which came when they were called.

Miss Caroline Elder spent the week-end at her home at Berwick.

WILL BROADCAST SUMMER CHORUS

Prof. Ralph F. Hartz's Proteges to Go on Air Through WJBU This Evening

Radio broadcasting station WJBU will be on the air this Tuesday night with a program of music to be presented by the summer session chorus of which Prof. Ralph Hartz is director. The broadcasting will be in charge of Assistant Professor George A. Icland.

The chorus consists of twenty-four voices, and although it has been organized for but a short time the blending and harmony secured is marked. Many of the members are people who are prominent musically in their own towns, and to them and to the direction of Professor Hartz is due the rapid progress of the organization. There are also several members of the regular session glee clubs taking part.

Last Tuesday night the first summer program was sent out from the local station.

The program presented last Tuesday evening consisted of four chorus numbers and several numbers by various members of the chorus. Among these were a mixed quartet, soprano and contralto solos, duet, instrumental solos on piano and violin. One of the violin selections was played by Herbert Helm.

At 8 o'clock Wednesday evening there will be an exhibition of Radio Motion Pictures in the auditorium of the Engineering building. Music for the occasion will be supplied by radio.

PENTZ AND KIRBY TO TELL TEACHERS

Veterans of Educational Field Have Important Message for Teachers

A thought-provoking and inspirational message will be delivered to the teachers by James G. Pentz, director of the credential board of the State Department of Public Instruction, at the Thursday morning session of assembly. Mr. Peatz has had a long and varied experience in secondary educational work and no teacher should miss his opportunity of hearing him.

On Friday, the assembly speaker will be C. Valentine Kirby, director of arts of the State Department of Public Instruction. He will speak in Bucknell Hall. Mr. Kirby has a message on the attraction of the schoolroom —how to make the school interesting to the pupil. His talk will be illustrated by drawings ious second story man.

The potato masher throwing contest was a close one with many of the fair sex taking a crack at the bullseye. The tug of war ended with little damage to the rope and with the day saved for "our" side by Mr. Shore who at the critical moment succeeding in snubbing the end of the rope around a tree.

At the mess call, all formed in line to crash the buffet lunch. The menu was unsurpassed being free from the ready-made taste. It was all homecooked and everybody blessed "Johnny" Gold for it. Speaking of the picnic Prof. Whyte said:

"The thing that impressed me was that everyone had a smile—especially after they had eaten. There is no use talking Johnny is sure good." Miss Hope Smith said: "The eats surpassed everything they had here before." Miss Helen Decker said, "I thought it was gr-r-reat."

Miss Kathryn F. Walsh said, "I thought the food was wonderful," while Miss Mary Kilcullen said, "I enjoyed it lots." Undoubtedly the greatest tribute accorded Gold came from "Sheidy" Everett who laconically announced, "I had enough!" However he added, "I certainly missed the picnic eating contest."

The following from the Summer Session attended a conference at Eagles Mere on Saturday evening: Helen Hower, Helen Decker, Adelaide Ross and William Miller.

PROF. FRANK DAVIS GIVES TALK TO DEMSTRATION SCHOOL

Professor Frank Davis, director of the Demonstration School at Bucknell University, gave a very inspiring talk to the pupils at their first assembly. His subject was "Curiosity." He said that curiosity showed interest. He next explained what things boys and girls should be curious about: such as, what they hope to be, what life work each will choose, what success each will have in his chosen field. He then explained how education helps boys and girls to decide what their future life work is to be. What boy or girl will be most successful in his life-work who finds difficult problems, wants to face them, and conquers them. He urged pupils to attend the school to its close. Although they gave up their vacation, the time and work at the Summer School was very worth-while for them.

TRACK AND FIELD CONTEST

(By Mary Katharine Moyer, Eighth Grade.)

A track and field contest was arranged in connection with the Demonstration School picnic:

1. Boys and girls separately.
2. Each grade separately.

Events for boys:
(1.) 100-yard dash.
(2.) Standing broad jump.
(3.) Baseball throws.

Events for girls:
(1.) 50-yard dash.
(2.) Baseball throw.
(3.) Hop-step and jump.

A novel method of scoring, which makes it possible for every contestant to "place" was used. Winner gets one point, the "runner-up" gets two, and so on. If there are seven boys entered from the ninth grade, the last boy to finish gets a score of 7 and so on.

Next each person's scores, in each event, are totalled. The contestant having the lowest score in his or her group is the winner in the group.

There was not time enough to finish the contest last week: so the results could not be published. In the eighth grade, Robert Pawling won the dash; Maynard Mertz, the baseball throw; and Meredith Eberhart, the broad jump. Winifred Lins and Kathryn Stannert tied in their dash. Romlyn Rivenburg won the hop-step and jump.

In the 9th grade events, Frances Leach won the 50-yard dash; in the baseball throw, Stanley Ritter threw the ball 225 feet to win. He also won the 100 yd. dash. The remaining events were not completed.

It is likely that the contest will be repeated some time during the last week of school.

Joseph Wertz and Oliver Wetten have left school.

SCHOOL NOTES

Sara Lins, is obliged to be out of school for a few days because of her mother's illness.

••••••••••

Romlyn Rivenburg, spent Thursday at Eagles Mere. She also attended the dinner to the Lewisburg Rotary Club, which was held in the dining room of the Seminary.

••••••••••

The college picnic held at Blue Hill Wednesday last was attended by the critic and practice teachers of the Demonstration School. Romlyn Rivenburg was the only pupil of the school present at the picnic.

••••••••••

A number of the pupils the past week attended the Sunday School picnics from Milton.

••••••••••

Maynard Mertz, was a pall-bearer at the funeral of his chum in Milton who was drowned last week.

••••••••••

The pupils expect Miss Grassmuck of the State Department to give them a lesson in Geography. The work will be given in the Assembly before the entire Summer Session.

THE DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL GIVES FIRST ASSEMBLY PROGRAM

(By Elmira Filbert, Eighth Grade.)

The Demonstration School opened their first assembly, July 27, in the Bucknell Hall by presenting the following program:

1. Orchestra—Our Boys and Girls in California.
2. Song—selected—Eighth and Ninth Grades.
3. Address—Professor F. G. Davis.
4. Orchestra—The Dream Waltz.
5. Comic Address—Kathryn Stannert, VIII.
6. Orchestra—selected.
7. Song—Sometime—Winifred Lins.
8. Song-selected—School.
9. Orchestra—New York Life.

Professor Davis welcomed the pupils to the Demonstration School, and congratulated them on their fine spirit in general. He urged them to get as much out of the school as possible, and also, promised them that the best results of their summer school work would be given them the following school term in their respective schools. He closed his talk with several lines from a poem in which was the thought that the man who wins is the man who wants a strong fight against odds and conquers the trouble.

Several principals and teachers in the Summer School were in attendance. The school extends an invitation to all interested summer school students to attend the exercises which will be regularly held every Tuesday and Thursday in Bucknell Hall.

BASEBALL CARNIVAL TO AID MATTY FUND

August 28 Set Aside for Games Throughout Country to Build Memorial

"Christy Mathewson Day" on Aug. 28, a Saturday, has been set aside for a national baseball carnival in honor of the memory of the great big Six at which all or part of the receipts will be set aside for the fund to raise two memorials to the hero of the national pastime.

More baseball will be seen on that day than on any other day in the history of the game, according to the headquarters of Christy Mathewson Memorial Foundation Campaign of New York City, because of the growing wave of sentiment in favor of a lasting tribute to the gallant ball player and courageous soldier who died from an illness contracted while serving in France. League teams, amateur clubs and semi-pro teams in every city where they exist have all signified their intention of joining in the big Matty day movement.

The arrangements for the event are going forward rapidly under the direction of James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor in President Coolidge's cabinet, who is chairman of the national committee. The committee has announced that the notification in the press of the designation of Aug. 28 is the only invitation required of clubs that wish to hold games, and all who wish to participate are asked to get in touch with the Foundation at 270 Madison Avenue, Suite 1404, New York City.

The funds that are obtained at the games on Matty Day or on any other date that may be more convenient under local conditions, will go toward two buildings: One, a rotunda gymnasium as part of the equipment of Bucknell University at Lewisburg, Pa., from which institution Mathewson was graduated; the other, a club house for disabled veterans at Saranac Lake, New York, where Mathewson died from illness contracted in service overseas.

Charles H. Sabin, Chairman of the board of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, is Treasurer.

It was Matty who, during his illness at Saranac Lake, New York, started the movement for a benefit fund and a club house there for the porpose of making less weary the hours of ex-service men who suffer as he did. Part of the funds raised in the present campaign will go to carry out this desire of his last days.

ARRANGING FOR SUMMER SESSION CONVOCATION

Prof. James P. Whyte stated this morning that prepartions are actively going forward to arrange for the summer session convocation at which time degrees will be awarded the students. The executive committee of the summer session will hold a meeting this week at which time arrangements for granting the degrees will be completed.

Miss Helen Durkin visited the campus over the week-end.

Miss Elizabeth King spent the week-end at Curwensville.

The program for Tuesday, August 3 was as follows:

1. Orchestra—Norma March.
2. Song—The Beautiful Bright Sunshine—School.
3. Poem—Sea Fever, Hester Tanner, VIII.
4. Orchestra—Moonlight Schottische.
5. Reading—The Gypsy Flower Girl—Winifred Lins, IX.
6. Solo—The World is Waiting for the Sunrise—Frances Leach, IX.
7. Song—Earth is Waking; Day is Breaking—School.
8. Duet—Barcarolle from Oberon—Kenneth Botts, IX, and Stanley Ritter, IX.
9. Orchestra—Boys' Brigade.

Harry DeWire, VIII, was the chairman of the program. The Demonstration School Committee was comprised of the following practice teachers: Mr. Alton White, Mr. Bruce McHall, Miss Catherine Mench, and Miss Ruth Thomas.

PUPILS ATTEND "BOB" LAWRENCE PROGRAM

The pupils of the Demonstration School were permitted to attend the program by "Bob" Lawrence in Bucknell Hall, Thursday last. They were given seats up front. They listened to Bob Lawrence's account of the good done by Community Sings. They then joined in singing the songs flashed on the screen. Among them were: The Star-Spangled Banner, The Battle Hymn of the Republic, Howdy, Three Blind Mice, Pussy Cat. If the Men Were All Transported, etc. They had much fun in singing the way Bob Lawrence directed the people to sing. In one song, Smiles, the omitted the word Smiles. The fun in the song was to catch the person who sang the word. In another song, If the Men Were All Transported, the girls and women sang one stanza, and the boys and men another. In the "Meow" song, the girls called the cat but the men and boys all yelled "skat." The "sing" was good to get people better acquainted with each other, and to put some fun into the work. The program was the best that the pupils had this Summer. Grade VIII discovered in their study of literature that just as Russell Conwell gave service to the world in giving his lecture on "Acres of Diamonds," for educating poor students, so "Bob" Lawrence in his way was giving great service to the people by putting joy in their lives through music.

MILK BOTTLE SHOW HELD DOWNTOWN

Students in Sanitary Milk Control Class Put on Exhibit of Interest to Householders

An exhibit prepared by Dr. J. W. Rice's class in sanitary milk control is creating much interest in the window of Herman & Leiser's store down town. The exhibit shows graphically the relation of the householder to the purity of the milk supply through the medium of returned milk bottles.

The exhibit shows milk bottles as they have been returned to the local dealers. Some of the bottles are washed with cold water, some with hot water and some with various soap solutions. The students have placed milk in these several bottles and then have made slides of the bacterial content of the milk after being subjected to this treatment.

Some of the bottles which were used for flower vases between the time they were deposited on the door step by the milkman and the time they were again returned to the dealer showed a very healthy condition—for the bacteria.

NEW YORK TRIP WAS BIG SUCCESS

Stewart's Biology Students Visit the Museums and Tour the Country's Metropolis

Twenty four hours is a long day when you use all twenty four. This is what the sturents did who left Lewisburg after midnight Saturday night with Professor N. H. Stewart to see just how the wonders of natural science are displayed in the larger collections in New York City. The party comprised seventeen persons every one of who declared that the day, though long, was filled with new experiences that enlarge one's vision of life and human attainment.

To cross the Hudson early in the morning and see our great metropolis spread out before one as on a canvass, to see the Statue of Liberty which rises 306 ft. above the water of the bay, and to watch the shipping

LIBRARY NOTICE

The Library desires that all books be returned not later than Wednesday. The final library check-up will make it difficult to circulate books after that day.

Professor Melchior states that the trip taken by a party of students to Gettysburg was very fine and enjoyed by all.

DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL TO VISIT OBSERVATORY

Before the term closes, the Demonstration School will visit the Observatory located near the library. The invitation has been extended by Dr. Everett of the Mathematics Department. The pupils will have the opportunity to view the sun spots now in evidence and of great interest to scientists.

Sun spots are, in theory, huge volumes of gas thrown out of the sun. They effect weather and climate conditions. The gas forms a blanket between the sun and the earth so that all the sunlight does not reach the earth. For this reason, many people think that summers for the past few years have been cool. There is a prediction that the 1927 season will be summerless due to these sunspots.

The Demonstration School wishes to express its thanks for the opportunity to view these interesting sunspots.

TALL TIMBER TRIP MAKES DECIDED HIT

Prof. and Mrs. Gold Acclaimed When Picnic Lunch Is Revealed

Fifty students motored to the Virgin Forest in the Snyder-Middleswarth state park near Troxelville, Snyder county, late Wednesday afternoon. The cars left the Women's College at 2 o'clock and arrived at the the park without incident other than Butler's and experience with flat tires. As soon as the various cars arrived on the scene, the occupants were goaded on by "Sheldy" Everett, to walk back through the woods about a mile and then climb straight up in the air a distance of one-fourth mile (according to the sign) to the fire tower.

Those who negotiated the climb up the vertical mountainside were rewarded with a wonderful view of the surrounding forests, mountains and valleys from the top of the 75-foot steel fire tower. The trees of the virgin forest, too, excited the admiration of the party. Many of the specimens towered 150 feet in the air and were as straight as a die.

When the hikers returned to the cars, they found a picnic lunch ready to serve in charge of Prof. Everett and Mrs. Gold. The menu consisted of ham and eggs, potato chips, sliced tomatoes, rolls, coffee, ice cream and real cake baked by Mrs.Gold. In this connection it might be well to state that much of the success of the cuisine was due to Mrs. Gold who deserves at least, a rising vote of thanks. All together now. Thanks, that will do.

FIFTY TAKEN TO DANVILLE ASYLUM

Students Attend Clinic Saturday to Study Mental Diseases at State Hospital

Fifty students from the Bucknell Summer Session motored to Danville Saturday morning where they attended a clinic at the state hospital from 10 to 12. Large groups from Penn State and Susquehanna were also present in the auditorium which housed an audience of about 500 persons.

The students first witnessed a display of statistical information provided by Dr. Free, assistant superintendent of the institution. At the close of his talk, Dr. Pike demonstrated the several forms of insanity with living subjects. This demnstration clinched the material which he had previously present in six lectures given in Bucknell Hall.

After the demonstration the party was divided and the female members were taken through the female wards and the male members through the male wards. A particularly interesting sight was the methods of hydrotherapy applied to the correction of mental disorders. After the clinic, the Bucknell party ate a picnic lunch on the grounds of the hospital and returned to the campus at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Robert Smith spent the week-end at his home at Knoxville, Pa.

Miss Evadne Ruggles visited Penn's Cave and the Woodward Cave on Sunday.

Professors Robbins and Warfel Place Commendable Work on Sale

"Bucknell Verse," an anthology of poems written by members of the English classes of the University was published recently, and is now sale at the University Book Store.

Few are the coleges that are able to publish a volume of verse, and fewer are those who can compile an excellent one from the work of one year. The only other colleges who have published this year to our knowledge, are Amherst College, University of Washington and the Albany State Teachers' College. Bucknell, therefore, is taking its place with the few, and indeed unique colleges which have successfully developed among a large portion of its students an interest in the writing of verse.

The present handsomely printed volume has been prepared at the instigation of Professor Robbins and Warfel. Professor Robbins set the type for the whole book, and the beauty and high quality of craftsmanship therein demonstrates his high artistry.

The poems included range from the conventional and the ultra-modern and no poem, it is easily seen, was excluded merely because its thoughts failed to please, or even jangled with the editors. Indeed, the most interesting general features of the book is its catholicity of taste.

Nearly every common form of verse is represented, and these have been handled surprisingly well. It will not seem to the reader, we are sure, that our judgment is too laudatory when we say that this little book will stand the test of any comparison made with the volumes published by other colleges.

Several of the practice teachers took part in the Summer School music concert given in Bucknell Hall last evening.

DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL HEARS PROF. MELCHIOR

Professor Melchior, one of the Summer School faculty of Bucknell University, addressed the pupils at their assembly on Tuesday of last week. Prof. Melchior spoke on character. He told of the great differences between said that the pioneers did those things what people of today must face. He said that the pioneers did those things that made character. Large fields called them to come to cultivate them. Huge forests called them to cut down their growths. High mountains called them to dig into their depths for coal and iron, silver and gold. They obeyed the calls. They blazed their own trails built rude homes, reared large families, and, thus, developed courage that made for character. But people of today face those conditions that test character. They must be careful to meet the test that civilization can go on. The greatest training that a boy or girl can obtain these days is character training. They must be strong, moral people so that when the test comes, they are prepared to meet the test.

Professor Melchior's talk held the interest of the school. His clear, strong voice brought them a fine message which they hope always to remember.

DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL EXHIBIT

The Demonstration School has an exhibit of the work done in the summer session in Rooms 1 and 2 in the Main Hall. The exhibit includes work in both English, Mathematics and Social Science. In Room 1, are drawings, graphs, etc. Miss Collings, one of the practice teachers, directed a diagram as an example in co-operation, on that state in which people work together. An automobile firm supplied material for this particular exhibit. There are also several graphs of work done in the Mathematics Department. One of particular interest is that relating to the diagonal of a cube. Several pieces of composition work relating to Social Science, likewise hang in Room 2. One of the most interesting parts of the exhibit is the graph showing pupils' scores in the various achievement tests in these subjects as well as their intelligent scores. In the 9th grade, Herbert Robertson took first place and Winifred Lins, second place in this type of test.

In Room 2, there is an exhibit of what is considered a fine example of a class-room in English. Pictures of the following subjects hang on the wall: Stratford upon Avon, The Angelus, and the Cathedral at Milan. Busts of famous men such as Shakespere stand on the window ledges. Baskets and vases of flowers are attractively placed about the room. Several tables serve different purposes. One has an exhibit of magazines and newspapers. Another is the dictionary table, and others are used by

LETTER FROM MISS SORELLE

The pupils of the Demonstration School received a letter from Miss Sorrelle containing information concerning the world of music.

The following is the letter:—

"Hillside," Marietta, Pa.
July 28, 1926.

Master Tilman Paul,
Bucknell University,
Lewisburg, Pa.

Dear Master Paul:—

Although delayed by being out of town, it is with pleasure that I respond to your request for a message from the music world. And well might one say a message, for multudinous as its tones, so its message. However, the point which perhaps concerns us most, generally speaking is the relation of music to life. This relation is not only intimate but VITAL. The necessity of music to life cannot, in truth, be over estimated. To conceive a world devoid of music would be impossible as to imagine the existence of a person without the function of a heart. For is not music everywhere? In the myriad songs of the birds and insects, the sighing wind, the rustling trees, the surging ocean, and the soft hushed song of the rain, we have Music, Music!

In the history of the human race, whether barbarous or civilized, warrins or peaceful music was an essential element. Today through civilization and culture its standards have been elevated accordingly, though we find music to fill the needs of various types of people, i. e., people with various degrees of intelligence, culture, and appreciation. To the average person music is a recreation—a relief from the stress and obstacles of everyday life, making them less irksome. To others it is a great joy and comfort; an inspiration to higher things, stirring them to the supreme effort of the BEST that is within them. To still others, music is the greatest medium of expression, beginning where all the other mediums of expression end. It speaks a language that needs no interpreter, for it transmits from soul to soul messages, emotions and impressions that words could not express. In its spiritual sense music raises us above the earthly things—transports us on its wings to a plane where man made barriers fade to nothingness, where the limitations of the body are forgotten, and the soul hears, feels, enjoys, expresses.

In short, may I say that good music is one of the greatest factors in the advancement, refinement and culture of the human race. Through its impetus, inspiration, or comfort, it has aided in the achievements of some of the world's greatest men.

Let us go to the realm of tone as to a fountain, and drink into our souls its sparkling beauties.

Truly yours in music,
ELISE SORELLE.

Recently many pupils from the Demonstration School visited Island Park and had a splendid time.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION

The School wishes to express its appreciation for the permission to use space in the BUCKNELLIAN. The work has brought the pupils in contact with how to report, how to interview and how to write news articles. At the last meeting of the Eighth grade in its study of news writing, an observer would have found one boy acting as a reporter to interview Mrs. Smith, a girl interviewing Dr. Everett; another, Professor Davis; another pupil reporting the assembly program; others writing up the exhibits; and still others gathering news from the other pupils and also the teachers. Miss Van Dyke who has charge of the class taught the remainder of the pupils critising the news articles and selecting for the BUCKNELLIAN the best piece of work on the lesson assigned. Hester Tanner's work was chosen for this issue. The reporters include Katharine Stinnert, Tilman Paul, Mary Catherine Moyer, Ralph Burns and Elmira Philbert. The work becomes of practical value to the pupils both in the outside world and in the school work the coming year.

Annette Landis gave a party, Saturday, August 7th. Several pupils from the Demonstration School attended.

Tilman Paul and Maynard Mertz attended the races, Wednesday August 4th at Montgomery.

Sara Payne was absent Wednesday, August 4th, on account of illness.

John Hoch was a visitor at the Demonstration School last Thursday.

THE DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL GIVES SECOND PROGRAM

The Demonstration School held their second program on August 3d, 1926, with Mr. Whyte in charge. The program was as follows:

1. Selection by Orchestra, Norma March.
2. Song, The Beautiful Bright Sunshine—School.
3. Poem, Sea Fever—Hester Tanner, VIII.
4. Selection by Orchestra, Moonlight Schottische.
5. Reading, The Gypsy Flower Girl—Winifred Lins, VIII.
6. Solo, The World is Waiting for Sunrise—Frances Leach, IX.
7. Song, Earth is Waking, Day is Breaking—School.
8. Duet, Barcarolle From Oberone—Kenneth Potts IX, and Stanley Ritter, IX.
9. Selection by Orchestra, Boy's Brigade.

The chairman was Harry Dewire, XIII. The Practice teachers present were: Mr. Whyte, Mr. Gettig, Mr. McHail, Miss Munch, Miss Thomas, Miss Williams, Miss Lark and Miss Van Dyke. The program as a whole was very much enjoyed. Several members of the Summer Session, both faculty and students, were present.

and the sea birds is stimulating to one's imagination—and to one's appetite for breakfast. One is ready to sit down at the cafetaria of the great Pennsylvania station and find the griddle cakes and syrup and coffee. The group took the subway to Battery Park where they surveyed the shipping on the bay, the crowds of all nationalities out to enjoy the ocean breeze and turned to enter the Aquarium. Here were seen all those curious things that can't be induced to live out of salt water; skates, sea lions, lobsters, penguins, sea horses, rainbow fish, angel fish and many more of every form and hue. The dry lectures of the zoologist are here made to live for the student—it is the place to study what Nature has made, the little known creatures of the deep.

Aboard the "elevated" the happy seventeen watched the sky scrapers, the narrow streets, the tenements and the traffic while saving their strength for the later events of the day. Dining at the Automat is quite different from dining at the Sem. In the former you put a nickel in a slot for each dish and thus open a little glass door so you can get it out. The choice is mystifying to the novice for it is not as simple as choosing between "Ham, ram, lamb, sheep or mutton."

A guide was secured to take the party through the City Library. What a huge place it is. Ten thousand enter its halls each day and the system with which one secures a book is itself most interesting. There are over a million and a half volumes in the stacks so that the shelves which end to end would reach sixty one miles. There was not time to look at all the books!

To reach the famous Metropolitan Museum of Art one rides up Fifth Avenue on top of a bus for over a mile. The traffic itself is a study, and the people and the homes of the millionaires. But one steps fast in New York and on entering the vast cool museum he steps back 4000 years to pay tribute to the dry remains of the Egyptian kings lying in state in mammoth monolithic sarcophagi, to see the armored knights of the middle ages, and to enjoy the art and architecture of many lands and many times. This sort of thing is educational, it takes one out of the Goshen of his own thinking, it helps us "To be at home in all lands and ages."

At the American Museum of Natural History were seen the wonders of palenotolgy, the history of man and of the great quadrupeds, birds in natural settings, whales, precious stones, collections from all countries and the islands of the sea, meterites, corals, implements, works of art of savage man, records of Arctic explorations and so on without end.

The party found a quiet half hour in the Cathedral of St. John the Devine most restful and uplifting, and all were impressed with the proportions, the alegory, and the diversity of the great edifice and its many chapels. A guide explained much of the history and progress in the building of this great institution which is to be the largest house of worship in the English-speaking world.

After a walk across the grounds of Columbia University and a visit to Grant's Tomb the party was soon again on the ferry homeward-bound in the light of the setting sun.

CLASS BOOKLETS MADE IN LITERATURE CLASSES

Each class has made a booklet in connection with its study of literature. The Eighth Grade has made its booklet on contemporary poetry. The covers are bound in dark blue chambray. The booklet contains clippings of verse by Worth, while contemporary poets; such as Dr. Van Dyke, John Masefield, Alfred Noyes, Sara Teasdale, etc. Several pupils copied in handwriting their favorite contemporary poems, and have added such to the booklet. Others have contributed pictures of the authors, biographical sketches, and pictures of their homes.

The Ninth Grade booklet is based on Scott's Lady of the Lake. It is bound in Scotch plaid gingham. It contains many interesting articles clipped from magazines, steamship companies' advertisements, and book companies' advertisements. The Eighth grade booklet was in charge of Mary Katharine Boyer, and the Ninth Grade booklet in charge of Ruth Haggy. The booklets will be given to the Milton public schools as reference books for their library.

DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL EXHIBIT

small groups of pupils in their school work. A large literary map hangs on the wall. A book case with reference books occupies one section of the wall. Pictures and clippings of the classics being studied, better speech posters together with many booklets from the steamship Companies' offices all help in the study of literature. Graphs, exhibits of written and oral compositions, newspaper exhibits, letters written by pupils and the replies, and messages "from the teacher to the pupils take up much of the blackboard space. The students of the Summer Session are cordially invited to inspect the exhibit which will be open daily until Friday.

The school takes this opportunity to thank the Milton superintendent for the loan of books and pictures; the Lewisburg superintendent for similar loans; the State Department of Education for the slides of the Burns and Scott country, and Professor Davis for the loan of a victrola. Without these aids the Demonstration School would not have had the ideal classrooms in which to do their schoolwork.

The work during the last week of school is chiefly in charge of the practice teachers.
